NO MORTGAGE ON THE FARM. BY JOHN II. YATES.

Mary, let's kill the fatted calf and celebrate this day,
For the last dreadful mortgage on the farm is have got the papers with me, they are right Let us laugh and sing together, for the dear old farm is free.

Don't all we Yankees celebrate the fourth day ecause 'twas then that freedom's sun lit up our nation's sky;
Why shouldn't we then celebrate, and this day Where is there any freedom like being out of san, And night has overtaken me before the task was done; When weary with my labor 'twas this thought that nerved my arm, Each day of toil will help to pay the mortgage

And, Mury, you have done your part in rowin' to the shore, By takein' eggs and butter to the little village You did not spend the money in dressin' up for show, But sang from morning till evening in your faded calico.

And Bessie, our sweet daughter-God bless her loving heart,
The lad that gets her for a wife must be by nater smart—
She's gone without piano, her lovely hours to To have a hand in payin' off the mortgage on

I'll build a little cottage, soon, to make your heart rejoice; I'll buy a good piano to go with Bessie's voice; You shall not make your butter with that up and down concern; For I'll go this very day and buy the finest

Lay by your faded calico, and go with me to And get yourself and Bessie a new and shining Low prices for our produce need not give us now slarm; Spruce up a little, Mary! there's no mortgage on the farm.

While our hearts are now so joyful, let us, Mary, not forget
To think the God of Heaven for being out of For He gave the rain and sunshine, and put strength into my arm,
And lengthened out the days to see no mortgage

CHARITY'S REWARD.

In the first cabin of the steamer bound to Quebec, they dined sumptuously, and lived a happy, luxurious In the steerage—heaven have mercy!-how they suffered! Millicent May shivered to her very soul when she thought of it, and won-dered often why such things should be, and why some were so rich, and some so poor, some loved and comforted, and cared for, and some so utterly alone, unloved and neglected. Had she been able to act as she chose, there would have been a grand trans-formation seen in that dirty steerage very soon, and tables covered with choice dainties would have risen through the floor, and snow white linen, and fresh, soft couches would have taken the place of the rags, and hard berths, and general shabbiness and squalor. But one girl, though she was a rich one, had little power in that desolate waste of waters. Still, that little Millicent did. She had in her possession biscuits, and conserves, and delicate dainties, prepared for her own comfort on the voyage; and thinking that at the cabin table she had all she needed, she played the Lady Bountiful with these small stores; chosing for her principal proteges an Italian woman and her gaunt children, who seemed to her to be the most wretched of them all, and to whom, speaking the language well, she could make herself understood.

In vain her friends remonstrated: in vain the captain declared that he should forbid such dangerous work among the emigrants. Millicent had her own way. . Once a day, at least, she penetrated into the Inferno below the comparative Paradise of her own domain, and fed those poor parched lips with her dainties, and comforted the mother, when her youngest lay at death's door, with her innocent sympathy. And the woman grew to love her, and the wan, but classical features of the boys lit up as she approached. And when, with land in sight, the little heiress emptied her purse into the dark hand of the penniless steerage passenger, and made her, for the moment, rich and full of hope, she turn, ed with severe earnestness toward her eldest boy.

"Never forget to pray to the Madonna for this beautiful 'signorina!" she cried. "Remember" it is all that you can do, and my dying curse upon you if you forget it!"

And with this fierce adjuration to her children, and a prayer that fell like liquid silver from her lips for "the signorina," she parted from Millicent, who went to her beautiful Canadian Eating House and Ice home and her friends, saddened and softened by the scenes that she had witnessed, and who remembered them a long, long while.

She had given the woman her address, but the poor creature did not come to her. What fate befel her, Millicent did not know; and, in time, the memory of those well-cut, classical faces, gaunt and meagre from starvation, but with a strange wild beauty about them nevertheless, ceased to haunt her-perhaps because one face had taken possession of her fancy; as one face will, isooner or later, of

John Blair, a young engineer and architect, had met her, had looked into her eyes, had touched her hand, had uttered those subtle compliments that win a woman's heart, so easily, and though he was neither rich nor would have been hard to find. They yielded mutually to each other's wish-She was old, and gaunt, and bent es, and consequently grew to have the same desires, so that at last no vielding was necessary. Only in one thing did Millicent prove herself obstinate—nothing could tempt her on an ocean voyage. A visit to his native England, and a tour in Europe, was John's anticipated pleasure; but her experience in crossing the ocean had made her averse to its repetition. "Whether I saw them or not the faces of the steerage passengers would haunt me," she said, "and I cannot endure the idea of setting foot upon an ocean steamer again.'

So John, who had no wish to go alone, left the matter to the cure of time, who brought them few sorrows and much joy, and now and then laid upon Millicent's breast a little token of his flight; so that at last a boy, almost as tall as berself, called Millicent mother, and the nursery was musical with little voices. Then, braver and older, and more willing than ever to do anything to make John happy, Millicent agreed to the European trip; and, leaving their little ones in the tender care of grandmamma and grandpapa, the married lovers took their places in a great ocean palace, and left land beaind them, for a while at least.

"It might be," Millicent thought. as she remembered her darling babes with tears in her eyes-"might be for ever if the sea were cruel."

But the sea was kind. No storms arose. They crossed the Atlantic in safety, and traversed Europe with none but pleasurable events, until at last they found themselves in Naples, and ready, one bright morning to do what all visitors to Naples most desire to do-namely, ascend Vesuvius.

They mounted their horses, and, led by a guide, ascended the mountain to a certain resting place, where it is customary to dismount, and leaving their steeds behind, trust to one's feet and the guide for further advancement. It is somewhat perilous, and an extremely adventurous ascent, but the result repays the effort; and Millicent forgot her unpleasant sensations when, standing near the crater, her husband's arm about her waist, she turned and looked upon the beauliful country below-Naples lying along the shore; the charming vale of Sorrento; the Bay of Naples, bluer and more beautiful than any other water in the world; the Isle of Capri; groves of orage trees, and the romantic palm and cypress clustering together in most perfect and graceful

"Is heaven lovelier than this?" asked Millicont, clinging to her hus-band, and bursting, she hardly knew why, into a flood of tears. But the guide did not leave them to their feast of beauty undisturbed. He made them do Vesuvius properly; peep into the crater, possess themselves of a piece of lava, witness the process of cooking an egg in the hot sand, and go through with the rest of the formula. Then it seemed time to return; and John, glancing at his watch, counted the time that lay between them and their inn at Naples, and they began their descent. Suddenly, at a spot where some large trees enlivened the desolation of the rough road, the guide paused and uttered a cry. Before them, risen as it seemed from the very ground, stood a group of menrough, savage looking fellows, armed with guns, and wearing broad slouched hats-who, without further parley, surrounded them, and seizing the bridles of their horses, and tying the hands of the trembling guide behind him, led them away over the rough mountain roads in silence.

John Blair was no coward; but to endeavor to resist such a force would have been sheer folly in a single man. Booty, as he reflected, was probably their object, and his wife's safety was his first thought. Holding her hand in his, he comforted her as well as possible; and finally, with a sinking heart, he obeyed the orders of one who seemed to be the captain, and dismounted at the entrance of an old ruin, into which they were forced, but not over roughly, to enter. It was an ancient and dilapidated hall, with a fire burning at one end; and here their conductors left them for a while alone, fastening the door behind them. Then, and then only, the poor guide fell to wringing his hands and weeping, and imploring the lady and gentleman-to pay whatever ransom was

"It is always a heavy one for Englishmen," he cried; and if you refuse, your ears will be cut off and your noses slit, or you will be murdered outright. As for me, I expect death. Some of these men are my enemies. I shot one of the band once, in a quarrel." And he began to pray to all the saints in the calendar.

Meanwhile, Millicent, overcome with terror, wept upon her husband's breast, and he found it impossible to comfort her. Indeed, the savage aspect of had heard of banditti outrages, left him little hope. Alone, he could have been brave enough; but his heart sank as he looked at his beautiful wife, and remembered the little ones at home. So, in a silence only broken by the prayers and complaints of the poor guide, they remained until the last rays of the setting sun faded from the narrow window, and dark | men have no sympathy and forbearance. : ness fell upon the room.

Then it was that they heard the sound of returning feet without, and presently the unfastening of a door. A figure entered, and going to the fire, which had nearly smoldered out. flung upon at some dry wood, which

May were married, and a happier pair | seemed to have brought some food for them, upon a sort of wooden tray.

> but her features had a strange beauty about them, nevertheless, and awakened in Millicent's mind a memory too vague and indefinite for words. She had seen the face before; it might be in some of those old pictures at Rome -that brown skin, those classical outlines, that gaunt meagerness that seemed to blight what once had been beautiful. Yes, somewhere she remembered it. In another moment the truth flashed upon her, as the woman knelt down to deposit the tray upon the floor. She uttered a little cry; a shriller one responded to it, and the gaunt creature lay prostrated before her, kissing her garments. "It is the signorina!" she cried. And Millicent knew the Italian woman of the steerage, whom she had succored so many years before.

"Then it is thus that Giacomo returns a benefit!" cried the woman. "My malediction upon him! But he did not know you—he did not remember as I do. Wait! Have no fear! You are safe!"

Then another memory dawned upon Millicent; and, in the captain of these bandits, she knew the boy whose eyes had been fixed upon her face when his mother bade him pray for her eternally.

In another moment he was there and Millicent knew that they were safe. Bad as he must have been, a bandit and an outlaw, this Italian had retained his gratitude.

The kindness of the young heiress to the wretched emigrants had not been forgotten, and the man who had returned to his own land to lead a lawless life, had cherished her memory fondly in his breast. He fed them with the best he had to give, and prayed for them to the saints and the Ma donna; and his own hand, red with many a man's blood, led them safely from his forest fastnesses to a spot where the lights from the city of Naples seemed to smile a welcome to them. There he bade them adieu; and the guide, overwhelmed with astonishment, conducted them back to their inn, where their tale was told to a little group of English and Italian listeners, who marveled at it greatly, as well they might.

From Pole to Pole. A merchant going home elevated, stag-gered against a telegraph pole. "Beg your pardon," said he, "I hope no offense. It's rather dark, and the street is so narrow, you see," In a few moments he came in contact with another pole. "Couldn't help it, sir," said he, lifting his hat; "I never saw such crooked lanes as we have in this city!" Again he ran against a pole, this to the ground. "Look here neighbor, you needn't push a fellow down because he happens to touch you; the road is as much mine as yours, and I have as much right to be here as you have, you old stick inthe mud!" He picked himself up, and made another effort to reach home, but he soon came plump against another pole. "I shan't make any more apologies," said he; "if you get into the middle of the street and stand in my way, that's your lookout, not mine." Proceeding on his journey agam, and becoming dizzy, he seemed to be entangled in an inextricable labyrinth of telegraph poles, which led him to make a general speech. "Gentlemen, you are not doing the fair thing. You do not give a man a chance You run from one side of the street to the other, right in my way." Just then he met a friend, and taking him by the hand, he said: "There is a procession going along the street, and every man is drunk; they have been running against me all the way. I knocked one of the fellows down, and one of the fellows knocked me down, and then a lot of them got around me, and I

He had been a whaler for twenty years and when he gave up the sea and settled upon his earnings, all his friends said they hoped Johnathan Weeks would marry some nice woman and enjoy the comforts of a happy home. He himself seemed to think it would be a nice thing to do, and he made an effort in that direction. But they all said that the reason why he did not win the heart and hand of widow Burrist was this: It seems that Mr. Weeks used to go round there courting and so on in the evenings, and while the widow sat patching the trowsers of her son and waiting for manifestations of Week's love, old Weeks would sit over on the settee, getting sleepier and sleepier, and quieter every minute. And every now and then he would nod in the land of dreams, and get to wandering off and imagining himself away on a whaling voyage, wake up sud-denly all bewildered, and would seize his cane and jab into the widow before he could collect his senses sufficiently to realize that it was not a harpoon and she a whale. They do say that Mrs. Burritt indulged these eccentricities for a time with a firm conviction that she would reconstruct that whaler when she married him. But this was never to be; for one evening Mr. Weeks sat dozing on that settee with a kind of dim, dreamy consciousness of things, in which the room and settee were confused and mixed with the raging main and whaling boat. The widow had a coldthe men, and the accounts that he in her head, and she was just in the act of making a vigorous use of her handkerchief, when a dream of Weeks reached a crisis, and he yelled out "Ther rashe blows!" and he heaved his harpoon at her with such a force that he broke her back-comb into vulgar fractions, and knocked her off the chair. Love's young dream was entirely dissipated, and Mr. Weeks left with two handfuls of hair missing. He is single yet, because he says wo-

Miscellaneous. BUILDING ON THE SAND.

For so the world has done Since myrtles grew and roses blew And morning brought the sun But have a care, ye young and fair; Be sure ye pledge with truth; Be certain that your love will wear

'Tis well to woo, 'tis good to wed,

Beyond the days of youth; For, if ye give not heart for heart As well as hand for hand, You'll find you've play'd the "unwise" part And "built upon the sand."

Tis well to save; 'tis well to have A goodly store of gold,
And hold enough of shining stuff,
For charity is cold.

But place not all your hopes and trust In what the deep mine brings; We cannot live on yellow dust Unmix'd with purer things. And he who piles up wealth alone Will often have to stand

Beside his coffer-chest and own 'Tis "built upon the sand." 'Tis good to speak in kindly guise And soothe where'er we can; Fair speech should bind the human mind

And love link man to man.

But stay not at the gentle words; Let DEEDS with language dwell; The one who pities starving birds Should scatter crumbs as well.

The mercy that is warm and true Must lend a helping hand; For those who talk, yet fail to do, But "build upon the sand."

From the Delaware (Ohio) Gazette, July 28. Statement of the Doctor who Witnessed the Death of the Double Children -A Remarkable Event.

Knowing that your numerous readers will be anxious to hear something in regard to the wonderful double child's death, send you the following hasty and imperfect statement: Their death presented a strange appearance, and excited the curiosity and pity of all present. They were nine months and six days old, and died at Temple House. No. 6 Bowdoin Street, Boston, Mass. July 18, 1871. They had always enjoyed excellent health from their birth, until July 4, when on exhibition at New Jersey, Minnie showed symptoms of illness and had a severe attack of cholera infantum, and came near death to all appearances, and remained so for about three days, when she commenced recovering very rapidly. This sickness seemed to affect Minnie but very little at the time, but about the 11th inst. Minnie was attacked with continual vomiting, which was very difficult to manage, and this tendency of sickness at the stomach continued more or less until about So'clock in the morning of the 18th, when she had several light convulsions, after which she sank gradually until 4:35 in the evening, when she breathed her last, and the heart belonging to her stopped beating. She was dead, to all appearance, without a struggle, and looked as if sleeping pleasantly, in which condition she remained for one hour and forty-five minutes, when she commenced grasping for breath, and artificial means was resorted to to restore respiration. This grasping continued at short intervals until I5, when she gave the last gasp. After this, Mina, who had been perfectly well, to all appearance until Minnie stopped breathing, showed signs of uneasiness and continued sinking very rapidly, and died at 8:15, just one hour from the time that Minnie gave the last gasp for breath. They both died very easy, and looked as if going into a pleasant sleep, and never gave a struggle, and now they are quiet and lovely to look upon in death, as they always were in life. The two souls have passed from the one body to the God that gave them this truly wonderful and curious body.

They apparently escaped the ordinary suffering incident to death, for the countenances had the expression of sweet repose. Through the influence of myself and several of the leading physicians of Boston, we had a fine plaster cast taken of the child, which I can have duplicated at any time for the benefit of science. After this, we had a post mortem examination which revealed many wonderful curiesities, both in anatomy and physiology, a full account of which will be shortly given in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal

. The exciting cause of their death was a cystic abdomnal tumor, weighing three pounds six cunces. I may, at some future time, give you a more detailed account of this wonderful being's life as well as its death. Yours, very respectfully,

H. Besse, M. D.

The Deleware Gazette says editorially: Dr. Besse reached his home in this place on Saturday evening last. The post mortem examination, at which he assisted, developed the fact that the connection of the viscera in the two bodies-if we may so speak of the two opposite sections or ends of the child-takes place by interjunction of the intestines just above the colon, which organ is not duplicated but is common for both infants. There was also but one womb and one bladder, the latter being the receptacle of two different ureters. Above the colon all the organs were duplicated and perfect as in any well-developed human being.

The body of the child or children was carefully embalmed and put into a casket containg alcohol, and having glass facings, which afford a good view of the body, which is well preserved. In the casket the child looks natural and appears as if in repose. It has been brought by the parents to their home, near Ashley, where it yet remains. The Boston Medical Society offered six thousand dollars for it, but the offer has been declined. Probably not less than ten thousand dollars would induce the parents to part with the treas-

We received a call from Mr. Keating, yesterday, the 27th inst., the young man who narrowly escaped death from being buried in a well at Grattan, on Monday. He informs that he was in the well a little over seven hours and a half, during which time his sufferings were of the most intense description. He attributes his escape to the lodging of three large stones just over his head, which prevented a large amount of dirt and stones, probably fifty tons, from falling upon and suffercat-ing him. He experienced no difficulty in breathing, although the atmosphere was very cold, causing him great bodily suffering. His legs were wedged in with stone, and he found himself unable to move his body. He heard plainly persons at work above, and their conversation; how the news should be forwarded to his friends, and even what arrangements it was proposed to make for his funeral, the crying of women and children, and the fears expressed that his body would not be recognized when found, were distinctly heard, yet he was unable to attract the attention of his rescuers. He suffered the keenest mental tortures, fearing that when the workman should approach him, the earth and stones would be loosened and precipitated upon him with instant death. Finally, he succeeded in making himself heard, and directed the progress of the excavators, who redoubled their efforts, and finally sucheeded in rescuing from a living tomb. Mr. Keating was buried some thirty feet from the surface of the earth, and when rescued found that his injuries were but slight. His "resurrection" comparatively uninjured, caused the ut-most joy in the neighborhood and in this city, where he is well known and respected.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

There is a popular belief that stove-pipe hats are becoming. The women of America have had a great deal of nonsense charged to them on the score of lashionable follies; but in their wildest flights they have never achieved anything half so ridiculous, so stupid, or so silly as the stove pipe hat. Nine men out of ten, little and big, fat and lean, wear the stove-pipe hat. It marks the passage from youth to manhood. Every small boy looks forward with eager impatience to the time when he shall appear in his first stovepipe, not only as showing to the other small boys that he has acquired the fullblown dignity and importance of manhood, but also as indicating that the proper time has arrived for him to sever the maternal apron string, hoist his sails, and ever after navigate without the maternal tug. A stove-pipe hat has no business upon a Christian head, and there should be a law upon every statute-book giving people the right to stave them in whenever found, and to sit down on every hat box at sight Will some one point out to me the beauty of one of these round, rigid funnels, towering aloft from the masculine head? The soft hat and the cap are capable of being fashioned into a thousand forms. They conform to the head of the wearer; they grow to be a part of him, become invested with his characteristics, and help to express his individuality. The stove-pipe hat, on the other hand, expresses nothing. It is always the same. As long as it preserves its integrity it is the silliestlooking thing in the world. As soon as it loses its integrity it is the meanest looking thing in the world. And when, at last, it finds its proper place in the gutter every boy kicks it about with the utmost felicity, and every stray cow will toss it about as it she had a perfect contempt for it. That it is an adjunct of barbarism is clearly shown by the fact that every dirty, greasy old squaw becomes. instantly happy the moment, she can find a stove-pipe hat and mount it on her filthy head .- Percgrine Pickle in Chicago Trib une.

Advantages of Politeness. Some years ago, a dry goods salesman in a London shop had acquired such a reputation for courtesy and exhaustless patience that it was said to be impossible to provoke from him any expression of irritability, or the smallest symptom of vexation. A lady of rank, hearing of his equanimity, determined to put it to the test by all the annoyances with which a veteran shop vietor knows how to lease a shop dan. She falled in the attempt and thereupon set him up in business. He rose to an invoce in the haderdushery trade, and the mainspring of his later, as of his early ly accountable for all accidents resulting in death or injury to passen gers over their respective lines. As long as railroad companies are not held responsible, in every case, for accidents to human life, they will not exercise that care in the selection of employees necessary to secure safety to the traveling public. Once let every railroad corporation, in all our country, know of a certainty that for every person killed, while passing over their respective roads, in consequence of any accident to the train, from whatever cause, a sum of $5,000 should be paid to the relatives of the person so killed. And in case of there being no relatives, then the amount to be paid to the State through which the road passes. With such an arrangement we imagine every railroad. company would use the strictest care in the selection of trusty and careful employees. They would redouble their diligence to prevent any accident. Companies would not do as they now seem to do, only strive to vie with each other in making quick time, irrespective of the increased danger to passengers, if any human life was lost, they were required to pay such a sum as has been indicated. We imagine every effort would then be directed to the securing of safety. The roads would be more rigidly inspected and kept in better order, bridges would not be permitted to become dangerous for trains to pass over, employees would be such as would attend to their duty, and not such as might be secured for little pay. Once let railroad corporations understand that there will be no way of escape from the payment of heavy damages, in case of injury to life or limb, and those whose business calls them much upon these great thoroughfares, will feel comparatively safe while engaged in railroad trav-

The safety of the traveling public calls loudly for something to be done. The late steam Ferry boat disaster at New York, in which ninety-six persons lost their lives, is an illustration of the danger of employing persons are wholly ignorant of the philosophy of the power placed under their control. Such cases call loudly for the most rigid regulations for their preventions. It is a settled fact that, with proper care boiler explosions can be avoided: Whenever such disasters occur they are almost always traceable to gross carelessness or ignorance on the part of those having supervision thereof.

It is high time that the press should cry aloud and spare not, till some plan is adopted and rigidly enforced looking to the preservation of human life from the oft repeated railroad and steamboat disasters. The interest of the public demands this, and the journal that fails to exert its power and influence to the bringing about of the desired result, fails to discharge its obligations to its patrons and the public generally.

THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

It takes the closest scrutiny to discover what kind of a government France has. It is generally supposed that it is a republic. This is true as to the name assumed, but can hardly be said with reference to its practical operations. Government affairs are so much mixed up in that unhappy country as to make it extremely difficult to eliminate a republic therefrom. We cannot see where the republican freedom is any greater than under the imperial rule. It is true the people have no Emperor, but they have a Chief Executive, whose powers are about as great or greater than were those of Napoleon. Thiers derives his power, not from the people, but from the vote of the Assembly, which is about on the same plan as the Legislative corps under Napoleon. In fact, the republic retains about all the machinery of the Empire, and is fully as severe on the people and press, that oppose it, as was the imperial administration. Newspapers are suppressed with as little mercy as under Napoleon, and the taxes and expenses of the Administration are fully as great. Where, then, is the benefit of a republic in name only?

The power of Thiers will doubtless be continued, by vote of the Assembly, for three years, and the official title changed from "Chief Executive" to President. A Vice President is also to be chosen, whose duty it is to preside over the Council. This Vice President is, however, not to be chosen either by the people or Conneil, but appointed by the President. Such are a few of the prominent features of the new French Republic. It will puzzle the accutest observer to see any great improvement over the old imperial regime.

We do not, however, regard the question of the future government of France as settled. There must be some kind of union between the different factions, the Republicans, Imperialists and Bourbons, in order to get their soil freed from German occupation, and to pay the demands of cupation, and to pay the demands of of the Sunday agitation. THE KENTUCKY ELECTION

Kentucky, on Monday, Leslie, Democrat, Governor by some 20,000 to 25,000 majority. This is a great falling off in the Democratic majority of that State, and argues the increase of Republicanism in the South, where it has any chance at all. In the Presidential election of 1868. Seymour's majority over Grant, in Kentucky, was 76,320. Thus it will be observed, that even in the strong hold of the old line Democracy, the Republicans gain strength. The time is not far distant when even in Kentucky the influence of Republican principles will be sensibly felt in the political administration of affairs. Even to-day it will not do to set at defiance all respect for the great principles of the Republican party in the great Democratic State. If the Republicans of Kentucky will only be true to themselves and to the principles of the party, their day of triumph will yet come as surely as that truth ought to triumph over error.

THE INFLATION OF THE MONEY MARKET.

Our readers will be glad to learn that money matters wear a more flattering aspect than they have for years. Money is plentier east, and the rate of per cent. very low. This ease is felt in the west to a great extent, as is evidenced by the fact that money cannot be loaned at the exorbitant rates of interest heretofore asked and easily obtained. The following dispatch from New York, on Monday, shows the condition of affairs in that

New York, Aug. 7.—The market is so glutted with money that the banks cannot use their surplus at 2 per cent.; call loans range from 2 to 3 per cent.; time loans for four months are offered to-day at 4 I-2 per annum. Prime business ranges from 5 to 7 per cent. The chief features in Wall street are the extraordinary abundance of money, the buoyancy and advancing tendency of the stock market, and the active investment demand for railway bonds that command public confidence and pay higher interest than government securities. A large portion of the surplus foreign capital is destined to find its resting place in this country, which offers greater inducements than elsewhere. This month about one hundred thousand German soldiers will be disbanded and many of them will come here to settle permanently, bringing with them additional labor, money, and connections, which contribute to our national wealth. The influx of European capital is a permanent inflation of our money market. The ocean telegraph having placed European market within two hours of New York: the surplus in one market can be used to supply, the deficiency in the other. A short time ago a silver mine in Utah was bought for $1,100,000 in gold by London capitalists, and money paid within 48 hours. The buoyancy and strength of stocks are the legitimate results of this pouring in of European capital. It operates like new issues of Greenbacks, but is more permavested, the work commencing the first week in June, and much of it ending in June, that of the more northern sections terminating the first or second week in July. The ripening was fully a week earlier than usual. The condition of the plant in early spring was remarkably promising, and while rust on the blades was quite general in its prevalence, and insects were abundant, particularly the chinch-bug, the returns for the 1st of July indicate a condition somewhat above an average. The States showing a comparatively low condition are as follows: New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Virginia, and all other South-ern States except Texas. All the Western States except Texas. All the Western States present comparatively high averages, except Kentucky, (35 per cent. below.) and Indiana, (7 per cent.) The California average is 17 per cent. below. Among the States presenting higher average are Ohio, 4 per cent. above; Michigan, 8; Illinois, 7; Missouri, 8; Kansas, 7; Nebraska, 10; Oregon, 1 per cent. The winter wheat of Oregon and Wisternian is in equally high condition, but in consin is in equally high condition, but in area it bears an insignificant proportion to the spring variety. The returns concerning spring wheat are more unfavorable than for many previous years. Only Maine, New Hamp-shire, Connecticut and Oregon exceed an average, while the percentages below an average are as follows: Missouri, 36; Illinois, 30; Indiana, 2; Ohio, 7; Michigan, 4; Wisconsin, 20; Minnesota, 30; Iowa, 18; Kansas, 15; Nebraska, 11; California, 5. The chinch-bug has been more destructive to the spring wheat than in any season since the inauguration of these reports. The extent of the mischief from insects, rust and drought, cannot be determined until the spring wheat has matured, and the yield and quality of the berry are indicated by the thresher.

The Sunday Ordinance.

The City Council voted last evening 26 to 16, to repeal the Sunday ordinance, which has so long been the bone of contention in this city. The ordinance is in the following words: "It is hereby declared unlawful for any keeper of any tavern, coffee-house, restaurant, confectionery or drug store, except for medicinal purposes, to sell, barter, or give away, upon Sunday, any ale, beer, porter or other fermented or spirituous liquors, or suffer the same to be drank upon, in, or about, his or her premises."

The question of repeal will soon come before the Board of Aldermen, without whose concurrence the action of the Council will be of no effect. It is doubtful whether a majority on that side will be found among the Aldermen, when a question comes to a final vote. Be that as it may, the law still stands, and the Mayor has been expected to go forward and endorse it. The execution of this law was really the practical question at the bottom But the friends of the Sabbath desire to have a thorough enforcement of the city ordinance tried, by shutting up drinking saloons on Sunday, and the recent meetings at Pike's 'Opera-House and Greenwood Hall have given Mayor Davis the assurance of a most substantial support in this undertaking .- Times and Chronicle,

BAZAAR, July 30, 1871. EDITORS RECORD :- Yesterday, met a man from Berrien County, Michigan. Though a stranger, it did not take long to become acquainted, as he knew many of my acquaintances, and one especial friend, THE BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD. One can never so well prize a home paper, with its little items and incidents, which seem to the casual reader of little importance, as when removed to a far-off land, when after an absence of some considerable time his correspondents become meagre in their detail of daily news, then is an estimate placed upon the news columns of the paper never before realized. Although, after residing in this State almost two years, I have concluded to make Kansas my permanent home, there are many pleasant recollections of Michigan.

Progress is written on everything in Kansas. When I came here, could only get to Burlingame by railroad, sixty miles distant, and not even stage coach conveyance beyond Emporia, twenty-five miles distant. Now, we hear the shrill whistle and rumbling wheels of the railroad train at our own home, and see a surveying party passing within a few rods from our home establishing the location of the third railroad through our county. Then, it was difficult to get a piece of pine board large enough to make shavings to kindle a fire. Now, some as elegant buildings as can be found anywhere are made of pine. Two meeting houses in the county are being built that compare favorably with any in Buchanan.

Land that was bought then for five dollars an acre, is worth from twentyfive to thirty dollars now. Homesteads that were taken then, are worth one and two thousand dollars now.

The tide of *emigration continues to pour in. Every day brings more or less new comers. Cowley County, that has been organized within two years, is now thickly settled, has several lively towns and supports two county papers. Sumner County had not an inhabitant, a little over a year ago; now, its population is 3,000, and it supports one county paper. The anniversary of American Independence was celebrated by them in a grove, where one year ago the buffalo came to drink. The change from a new to an apparently old country is very rapid in this prairie State. Where one year ago the land was wild and uncultivated, now there are farm houses, fields of corn and a fenced road.

The season has been a very productive one for grain and vegetables of every kind. Wheat, in some localities, was injured by the Chintz aw equalled in growth in any State. Eldorado, thirty miles from here, suffered severely from a tornado that passed through there, a few weeks ago. A number of houses were demolished, and two persons killed. We felt none of the effects of the storm here, though the cloud was plain to be seen. There is no appearance that indicates any-thing of the kind before. Though Kansas is subject to high winds that are almost a gale sometimes, it is not subject to tornadoes. I have not seen a tree blown down in the State.

Yours, &c., O. G. MANLEY.

NEW CHICAGO.—We paid Diamond Station a visit on Tuesday for the sole purpose of getting an item or two for the columns of the Democrat. When we got there we were considerably disappointed bug; in others, it was heavy. Oats to learn that M. Sargent had left on the are universally good, and corn I never | accommodation for Chicago, some hours | efore. But we made son those at work about the building, and among other things learned that the house and ground belong to Messrs. Sargent, Smith and Corwith, whose families now occupy the premises We learned from Gurden Corwith, a young man about seventeen years of age, that the three families comprise the following: Mr. and Mrs. Sargent, and two small boys; Mr. and Mrs. Corwith, and two daughters, one nineteen and the other younger, and two sons, Gurden, and a lad of eight years; Mr. and Mrs. Smith and two daughters, aged about eighteen and fourteen. There are three male and three female servants, and domestics two of which are colored male

In the house are sixty-six rooms exclusive of halls and the upper or third story, all of which are furnished in the latest style. They have two nice little boats upon the lake, and expect three more, and a sail boat in a few days. There will be a gravelled drive around the entire piece of ground, and as soon as the drive is completed, horses and carriages without number will be transported there. The mechanics are now erecting a barn thirty-five feet wide, and seventy-five feet long, with posts eight feet high. We should judge from the appearance of the musical instruments, croquet sets, rocking horses, and other implements of amusement, that all the inmates of the house anticipate a good time at their country residence from the oldest to the youngest. Gurden informs us that his father is a dealer in pig lead at Obicago, Mr. Smith an ice dealer, and we all know Mr. Sargent's business. He also informs us that he starts for Europe the last of this week, to be absent eight months or a year. May they all have a good time.—Cassoplis Democrat.

of the most remarkable cases that ever occurred of stone in the kidneys and age, the son of James Smith, of this kind nursing could suggest had failed. Dr. G. H. McLin, the physician in at-

when a stone 3 of an inch in length from the kidneys. The examination was witnessed by a large number of our citizens. The curious may see Burlington.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. & Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the before. BURLINGTON ROUTE.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Brauch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also. Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns 'high-gleaming from afar"—its tree fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries its corn-oceans stretching over the prairies further than the eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand homesteaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln land office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

Anything will do that can be doubled and trebled until it gets to be "awful." -Last week the Sabbath Schools of Laketon and California united, and under the Marshalship of John O. Conroy, proceeded to the district known as sixteen, being met there by that Sabbath School, and conducted y them to the pleasant grove of Mr. Myers, where they held a very pleasant picnic. While the tables were being spread, Rev. J. W. Carlisle, in his usual happy manner, addressed the children, after which the wants of the inner man were carefully attended to. Then there was some fine singing by the different schools. Nothing oc-curred to mar the festivities except a "brush" by a young Californian and a Sixteener, which drew the "claret" from the boys and the applause from the multitude.—Mr. M. C. Thursday, and notwithstanding it was a busy time with farmers, there was a very good attendance, and a regular good time was enjoyed. The people were called together by martial music about nine o'clock A. M., and after marching through the streets, led by the music, they went to the grove, about eighty rods south of the village, where the ground was well fitted, and a stand nicely arranged for the occasion. After the audience were well seated in a beautiful shady place. the exercises were opened by reading the Scriptures, by Rev. Mr. Patterson, and prayer by the Chaplain of the Lodge, Dr. W. W. Davis, after which Rev. Wm. M. Coplin, of Buchanan, delivered a very appropriate Oration, giving a brief outline of the temperance movement for the last sixty years, and then very clearly showed the importance of not only signing the temperance pledge, but being workers in the cause, and that Good Templars had a work to do that no one could do for them, and that they must be in earnest. A more attentive audience was never addressed. After the oration some very appropriate remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Kellogg, of Iowa, and a temperance piece was sung by a number of singers, led by G. H. Newell, of Dayton, and then all were led to a long table well laden with the very best of provisions, which showed that the ladies of Galien know how to act their part well on such an occasion. And after returning thanks to the giver of all blessings, about three hundred ate dinner, and had there been twice that number, there would have been an abundance. After dinner the congregation reassembled at the stand, and volunteer speeches were called for by the W. C. of the Lodge, Dr. E. C. Davis. After listening to some very appropriate speaking and singing by volunteers, the audience was dismissed by benediction, and I have no doubt went away resolved to do more for the cause of temperance than ever

Chief" have ceased their quarreling; the former being busy, tying the knot matrimonial for happy couples, with greenbacks instead of walnuts for pay, and looking after the interests of a large farm, has buried the hatchet for the ploughshare, while the latter is only too glad to be at peace to harbor ill will towards any of the deni-zens of Chikaming. I therefore take the liberty of offering my services as correspondent once in six months, should you desire it. [We hope to hear often from "Progress."—EDS.] First, I must tell you that Chikaming township is satisfied and at peace with herself and all the world, and in consequence is devoting all her energies to internal improvements. The smoke of the camp fire has given place to that of the clearing. The only battle fought was that of the bug, in which the man power of Chikaming met the bug power, and defeated it by destroying millions of the little "var-mints" by Paris Green, ending by grand anto da fe's at the clearing fires. "Eternal vigilance is the price of potatoes," has been the watchword, and well has it been heeded; as the promise of an abundant crop proves. cannot state the exact number of bushels of wheat and oats to the acre throughout the township, but the yield has been a large one, far exceeding the expectations of the most sanguine. While the corn fields give promise of an abundant supply of that useful grain, and all kinds of vegetables repay the laborer a hundred fold. The wild fruits, such as buckleberries and blackberries, yield plenteously, while those planted by man promise a return for the care bestowed upon them .- A new culvert is to be put in the road from Three Oaks to the Lake, south of where it crosses the Galien river. Ravine bridges are to be built, and things fixed up generally. Then, with the new school law in force, our children all in school, school houses and surroundings in good order, as they will be, (for Chikaming loves her schools,) we shall be a community contented and happy, and at peace with all mankind and western Berrien in particular.

In the midst of all the show and noise of our Christian activity, is there not danger of overlooking the great object we should ever have in view—the saving of souls. May we not become so intent upon building up the churches or organizations that we fail in the singleness of aim to bring men to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ? To seek and to save the lost was the purpose of the Messiah. This is the mission of Chris-

It were to be desired that there were a fuller realization of this idea in our Christian consciousness and life. Let the idea of soul-saving so seize hold upon Christians as to create within them a passion like that which inspired Jesus, and what wonders would they accomplish! How persistently would they besiege heaven for blessings! How eloquently would they announce the threatenings of the law, and the precious and assuring

The Great Necessity. The Gospel of Christ, in its simple but great truths, is as important in good training, as it is in the formation has been the wreck of many a young character—it was formed of all things else but Christ; and wanting that, which the Spirit gives, it fell to pieces as soon as it was placed under trial of temptation. Paint truly the beauty of virtue, and let vice stand forth in hideous ugliness; but the child will never truly love the one or hate the other, until he has stood by the Cross and looked upon them. It is not enough that he knows sin by its results; he must know it as against whom it is committed, and the character of Him against whom it is committed.
This training must present to the mind and heart the existence of a present God, and a God of love, seen and known in Jesus Christ, the babe of Bethlehem. Let the young heart know that God speaks directly to him, that his eye looks upon him; let the yoice of the Savior be heard, and the boy will become a moral hero. How many good and ingenious boys, fresh from their home training, falter and ganism. How often does the son of the minister of the Gospel break down under the jeer and jibe, which are cer-tain to meet him in a peculiarly direct manner; when he had all that teaching could give, except this realizing sense of God's presence. Under this training, which brings him at once to know Christ as a Savior and great exemplar, and under no other kind, the parent can throw himself directly Let Christ be in every family, as one at the hearthstone—and there, in every scene, whether of gladness or pany; brothers and sisters, friends and lovers, neighbors and comrades are with us; there is circle within circle, and each one of us is at the charming center where the heart's affections are aglow, whence they radiate outward upon society. Youth is exuberant with joy and hope, the earth looks fair, for it sparkles with May dews yet, and no shadow hath fallen upon it. We are all here and we could live forever. The home center is on the other side of the viver and why not continue long. Our circle grows less and less. It is broken, and then closes up again; but every brake and close makes it narrower and smaller. Perhaps before the sun is at its meridian the majority are on the other side; the circle there is as large as the one ed over; the balance settles down on the spiritual side, and the home cen-At length you see nothing but an aged pilgrim standing alone on the river's brink, and looking earnestly towards the country on the other side.
