THE DEACON'S STORY. The solemn old bells in the steple Are ringin'. I guess you know why! No? Well, then, I'll tell you, though most! It's whispered about on the sly.

Some six weeks ago, a church meetin'
Was called—for—nobody knew what;
But we went, and the parson was present,
And I don't know who, or who not. Some twenty-odd members, I calc'late, Which mostly was women, of course; Phough I don't mean to say aught ag'in 'em, I've seen many gatherin's worse. There in the front row, sat the deacons,

A man countin' four score and seven, And gin'rally full of his ire. Beside him, his wife, countin' fourscore, A kind-hearted, motherly soul; And, next to her, young Deacon Hartley, A good Christian man on the whole, Miss Parsons, a spinster of fifty,
And long ago laid on the shelf,
Had wedged herself next; and, beside her,
Was Deacon Munroe—that's myself.

The eldest was old Deacon Pryor,

The meetin' was soon called to order; The parson looked glum as a text; We gazed at each other in silence,
_And silently wondered "What next?" Then slowly uprose Dencon Harrley;
His voice seemed to tremble with fear,
As he said: "Boy and man you have known m My good friends, for nigh forty year.

"And you scarce may expect a confession Of error from me; but—you know, My dearly loved wife died last Christmas, It's now nearly ten months ago. The winter went by long and lonely, The spring hurried forward apace; The farm-work came on, and I needed A woman about the old place.

'The children were wilder than rabbits, And still growing worse every day; No help to be found in the village, Although I was willin' to pay.

In fact, I was nigh 'bout discouraged,
For everything looked so forlorn;
When good little Patience McAlpine
Skipped into our kitchen one morn.

She had only run in of an errand, But she laughed at our mis'rable plight; And set to work, just like a woman, A-puttin the whole place to right. And though her own folks were so busy, And illy her helpin' could spare, She'd flit in and out like a sparrow, And most every day she was there.

'So the summer went by sort o' cheerful And one night my baby, my Joe, Seemed feverish, and fretful, and woke me, By crying, at midnight, you know. was tired with my day's work, and sleepy, And couldn't, no way, keep him still; So, at last, I grew angry, and spatiked him, And then he screamed out with a will.

'Just about then I heard a soft rapping Away at the half open door; And then little Patience McAlpine Walked shyly across the white floor. Says she: 'I thought Josey was cryin', I guess I'd best take him away. I knew you'd be gettin' up early, To go to the marshes for hay; So I staved here to-night to get breakfast I guess he'll be quiet with me .-

Jone, Josey, kiss papa, and tell him
What a rice little man you will be! She was stooping low over the pillow, And saw the big tears on his cheek; Her face was so close to my whiskers. I dar's'nt move, scarcely, or speak; Her hands were both holdin' the baby, Her eye by his shoulder was hid; But her mouth was so near, and so rosy I-kissed her. That's just what I did."

Then down sat the trembling sinner,
The sisters they murmured of "shame,"
And "she shouldn't oughter a let him.
No doubt she was mostly to blame."
When straightway uprose Dengon Pryor,
"Now bretherin and sisters," he said, (We knowed then that suthin' was comin And all sot as still as the dead), "You've heard brother Hartley's confession, And I speak for myself when I say, That if my wife was dead, and my children Were all growin' worse every day; And if my house needed attention, And Patience McAlpine had come,

And tidied the cluttered-up kitchen, And made the place seem more like at home And if I was worn out and sleepy, And my baby wouldn't lie still But frested and woke me at midnight As babies, we know, sometimes will, And if Patience came in to hush him, And 'twas all as our good brother sezthink, friends-I think I should kiss her,

Then down sat the elderly deacon, The younger one lifted his face, and a smile rippled over the meetin' Like light in a shadowy place. Perhaps, then, the matronly sisters Remembered their far away youth, Or the daughters at home by their firesides, Shrined each in her shy, modest truth; For their judgements grew gentle and kindly, And—well—as I started to say, The solemn old bells in the steeple Are ringin' a bridal to-day.

MARGARET VANCE.

The Renounced Inheritance.

BY ETHELIN BRANDE.

"Margaret Vance, are you in your right mind?" "I think so, Cousin Eleanore.

feel no premonitions of insanity." Miss Eleanore Hastings, of Hasting Hall, lenned back in her velvet cushioned arm-chair, and applied her vinaigrette to her nose. It was more than she could comprehend—this unheard-of conduct in her cousin and ward. The fashionable woman of the world could have no understanding of

"It is incredible, Margaret! I always thought you were a girl of good sense.' "Thank you, Cousin Eleanore, I claim to be."

"But you have no right to the claim! Such an absurd thing! You will not persist in doing it, will you, dear?" coaxingly.

head with an air of quiet pride. Her this she refused to do; and likewise cheeks glowed, and her black eyes did she decline the yearly annuity he shone with a calm and steady light. There was determination, like iron, in the curve of the scarlet lins. "I shall do it. It is my duty!

Heaven helping me, I will never shrink from that! And I should be doubly a coward, if I refused to walk in the "How foolish! How rediculous!

sane when passion swavs him utterly. You know the circumstances as well as I do. He had set his heart on his son's marriage with Miss Marshalla lady of wealth and social position, and that son refused to obey him, choosing rather to follow the dictates of his own inclination. He married a poor curate's daughter; and from that day to the day of his death, his father never saw his face. He disowned him-nay, more, he cursed him and his innocent children; and when Robbie Peck died, his own father turned from his door the messenger who came to bring the melancholy tidings. You know how it has been since. The widow of his son has supported his two children by her own industry, and brought them up rightly; a son and a daughter, so I have it required all her strength to extribeen told, that any mother might be proud of. The property of Jobson Peck belongs not to me, but to those cate her feet from the power which held them. A voice from the rocks, ringing clear through the distance, children.' "Margaret, you are over-conscientious. Mr. Peck gave it to you of his own free will. You saved his life. and he loved you better than he loved any other person."

"I was fortunate enough to render him a service." "A service? You speak lightly. The dog would have killed him but for you! "Cousin Eleanore, no credit is due to me. Fido knew me, and desisted from his attack on the helpless old man, because I called to him. There was no sacrifice on my part. But for this Mr. Peck felt grateful; and during the time that I visited the Sunday School near his house, I frequently went in to read to him, or tell him the news of the day. I never dreamed of being rewarded for it. He was a hard, stern old man; but I enjoyed his society, and I have been happiest, always, while doing right."

"And you are resolved?" "Yes, I am resolved, Cousin Elea-

A bitter smile wreathed the handsome, aristocratic face of Miss Eleanore Hastings. "Very well, Margaret. I hope you will not repent your decision. I have tried hard to do by you as I should, during the few months you have been with me. You know that I do not to swallow you," he said, gaily. "I approve of voluntary poverty. I was greatly opposed to your mother's marriage with Romney Braithe. Not I must hurry you to your abode. You that I have anything to bring against | will take cold; the air is getting chilvour father's character—but he was poor. Well, he is dead, and so is Mary; I will let them rest. But I | hoped to have made their child understand what was for her good. I have failed, it seems. I hope you know that you can have no expectations from me." Margaret's face flushed-a scornful blaze in her magnificent eyes. "I have four hundred dollars a year of my own, and would live on it easily without help from any one. I did so for two years, after my mother's death, before I came to stay with you. Therefore I think you need be under no apprehensions." Then, her face softening a little, she added: "Truc. I have no expectations, save for your love! You are my only living relation, and you surely will not deny me that!" "I shall remember you are my cousin. But what of Percy Russell Have you thought of his wishes in this matter?"

Margaret's eyes drooped; a soft flush stole up to her forehead. "He will desire me to do what is right, I think. If not, then we shall be better apart."

about your absurd decision?" "I have written him."

"Will you let me see the reply?" "If you wish it. But, of course, right-minded man could have but me, utter stranger as I am, of whom one opinion on the matter." "You think so? Well, as I said,

The long reach of sand tempted Margaret to prolong her walk, and loitering along, she reached the extremity of the beach. Just beyond, across the rocks, there was a patch of sand even more beautiful than that she had just crossed; and with a light step, she bounded over the rocks and set foot upon the treacherous waste. At the first few steps her light weight hardly made an impression on the sand, but as she went onward, she sunk ankle deep, and with a slow horror stealing over her, she found that cried out: "Not another step forward! Remain where you are! You are in the Sagamore quicksands!"

She turned toward the voice, and saw, dimly defined through the gloom, a tall man hurrying toward her. A boat, wrecked and bleached by the storms, was lying at a little distance. He tore out a piece of plank, and made a bridge for himself. It brought him within a few yards of where she stood, slowly sinking. The cold treacherous sand was up to her waist now. He stepped fearlessly upon it, and succeeded in drawing her out, and in safety to the plank. He did not speak until they were standing together upon the shore. Then he said. looking down at her pale face,

"You are not acquainted with Sagamore beach, I suppose?" For the first time she looked at him fairly. He had a strong, reliable face—not a handsome one. The forehead was broad and full, the features tolerably good, the hair chestnut, and inclined to curl, and the eyes gray, deep, and of that kind which keeps their owner's secrets.

NUMBER 26.

Miscellaneous OUR FOREFATHERS' DAYS.

BY B. C. SOULE. Let us write of the days when our townships Lay exposed to the wolf and the bear;
When our roads were made upon the hillsides,
And dwellings, not many, were there.
As rivers our brooks were then flowing.
Forest shades where the broad sunlight plays, O, let us remember our fathers, And sing of our forefather's days.

'Gainst Britian, or Indian, in fight; And Liberty gave them her blessing, For they trusted in God and "the right." Though a handful, the colonies boasted, Yet the "lion" by "eagles" was torn, Till, howling, it fled from our wild-woods, The morning that Freedom was born. They felled down the trees in the forest, Till a garden the wilderness grew;

They handled the sword and the musket

They turned up the soil with the ploughshare And cottages sprang up anew. Woman's hands were at work in the farm-house There was humming of wheels and of looms, Their music—the songs of the daughters, Busy working in unfinished rooms.

Oh! there was no time to be idle,
For life's busy work must be done;
No time for display and for fashion,
No time to sit down in the sun. On! it was by most earnest endeavor,
They transmitted our freedom unstained; Oh, then, let us always remember And bless them by whom it was gained.

We're the children of children of labor,-They were sovereigns, too, of the soil; Though we may wield the pen for the plough

And in broad fields of science may toil. Then, for aye, we'll remember our mothers, And write in our grandmothers' praise; The while we remember our fathers, And sing of our forefathers' days.

The Pennsylvania Wild Man-The Ter ror of the Conestoga Valley. The following sensation is from the Reading Eagle: Never in the history of the southern part of Berks has there been such an excitement as has gone through within the last two weeks, caused by the subject of this article. About two weeks ago, a man, presenting the appearance of a huge, overgrown bear, made his appearance on the Welsh mountain, directly op posite the village of Morgantown, and made the night hideous with his beast-like howling. The citizens, becoming alarmed, concluded to catch him if possible, and, with this object m view, a number of the neighbors assembled, armed with guns, clubs, &c., and started for the mountain The men were deployed in squads, and at times the yells from this half man and half beast were so close to them that they thought it utterly impossible for him to escape, yet when morning dawned the object of their search was nowhere to be found. Night after night the same doleful howlings re-echoed through the valley bordering on the mountain. A. few days since he was seen in a field back of the village, and a number of the citizens started in pursuit and overtook him. He was captured and brought to the hotel of Mr. D. K. Plank. When caught, he was very nearly in a nude state, having but a few rags hanging to his body. The hair on his head hangs down his back; his face is very nearly covered with long bushy hair, giving him the appearance of a gorilla more than of a human being. To questions put to him he said he was a native of Ireland, and had lived in the State of Connecticut for a long time. He gave his with a "saint:"

name as Thomas Foley, and says he has been roaming in the woods for two years. A good suit of clothes was put upon him. and he immediately started for the mountains, tearing his clothes in strips as he moved along. The horses and cattle belonging to farmers along the mountain run and gallop through the fields continually, as it frightened from some unknown cause the dogs howl and cry as soon as night approaches; in fact, the community is in a terrible state of excitement. Crowds have gone out night after night to capture him, but up to this time have not succeeded. At times he was seen on his hands and feet, moving along with the fleetness of a wild tiger. A most singular circumstance connected with this affair is that since he has made his appearance, and near the residence of Mr. Robert Youm, a farmer, his horses and cattle refuse to eat, and are constantly running over the fields as if some demon was after them. He runs through the bushes with the swiftness of a deer, and persons cannot get near him. On Satur day night, about forty men from the village and vicinity repaired to the mountain, and near the residence of Mr. Yocum, and kept watch during the night, and at times he would appear in close proximity to them, but when they would start for him he was off like a race-horse. A few nights since, this "What Is It?"

made his appearance in the village on his hands and feet. In a few minutes, the villagers were up in arms, ready to annihilate this curious specimen of humanity. He made at the crowd on all fours, when there was a general scattering and stampede. What will become of this animal it is difficult to tell. All other topics are lost in the discussion of this strange affair. If caught, the citizens have promised to bring him to Reading.

Curious Effect of Imagination. It has been rather loosely said that "feelings are the only facts." Certainly to feel happy or miserable, or well or sick, amounts to about the same as being so; for to produce the natural effect of anything upon us, it is generally sufficient to have an impression of its reality, whether it is real or not. The following statement by the English writer, Babbage, shows how a cold was caught without any cause; and in another case how a cold was prevented without any protection:

"Once, at a large dinner party, Rogers was speaking of an inconvenience arising from the custom, then commencing of having windows formed of a large sheet of plate glass. He said that a short time ago he sat at dinner with his back to one of these single panes of plate glass; it appeared to him that the window was wide open; and such was the force of imagination, that he actually caught cold. "It so happened that I was sitting just opposite the poet. Hearing this remark, immediately said: "Dear me, how odd it is, Mr. Rogers, that you and I should make such a very different use of the faculty of imagination ! When I go to the house of a friend in the country, and unexpectedly remain for the ally catch cold. But by tying a bit of pack thread tightly around my head, I go to sleep, imagining that I have a night-cap; consequently I catch no cold at all!"

"This sally produced much amusement

Yankee Perseverance.

A few years since, a gentleman engage ed in the lumber business in Maine, hav ing an appreciative eye for a fine diamond and being convinced that a real gem would, if properly bought, be a safe investment, accordingly commissioned Mr. Charles W. Kennard, the well-known jeweller on Tremont street, to purchase for him a stone, about a thousand dollars in value, which returned to his Massachusetts kome.

The September following, six months after the loss, the river being then at its lowest point for the season, the undaunted lumber man started for his diamond. The riverful of logs, covering the place, had been sawed and shipped, and now only a few inches of water trickled over the spot where the stud fell. He took with him a large tin colander, the holes of which were of a size to hold the prize if found. He had determined to work a fortnight, before giving up the gem as lost, and to have all the river bottom to go through his handy kitchen strainer. He made his first dip of water and gravel as nearly as he could calculate, eighteen inches down the current from where it struck the surface of the stream, seven feet above. And a lucky dip it was! for at the bottom of the pan lay the lost gem, bright and sparkling as when it came from the jeweller. The above incident is a good illustration of Yankee patience and tact, as well as a warning to those who wear diamond shirt-studs .- Boston Transcript.

ANOTHER WAR CLOUD.

Rumors from the old world are rife with the gathering of another war cloud in Europe. This time the parties of interest are Russia and France on the one side and Germany and Austria on the other. It is asserted that an alliance has been formed between Russia and France against Germany and Austria. This, of course, would be what would suit France, whose people will never be satisfied till they have another conflict with Germany. With Russia to aid them the French would feel more equal to the contest. But again, with Germany and Austria allied, the contest, if it shall come, will be a most fearful one. One thing is beyond question, and that is. Russia is vigorously pushing forward her military organization on the Prussian system of compulsory service. She is establishing military provincial depots throughout her borders, and in every way possible is making the most extensive war preparations.

It will be remembered that the Emperor of Germany and the Czar of Russia recently had quite a protracted interview. It was quite a general impression then that there was an alliance of some kind to be formed between Russia and Germany, but if the present reports are reliable no such compact was entered into by these sovereigns. Perhaps neither could gain his desired end, and so an alliance failed of accomplishment. In such an event, it would not be strange if strength was sought elsewhere and if the present rumors should prove true. France, at least, would readily desire an arrangement whereby the great power of Russia might be placed on her side, and especially so, as against her late foe, Germany, by whom she has been so greatly humiliated. Of course the Emperor of Germany, with the shrewd Bismark as counsellor, would not stand idle and see so threatening an alliance consumated without an attempt to thwart its ultimate object.

The Emperors of Austria and Germany had a conference a day or two ago, at Gastein, at which Bismark was to be present. The results of this meeting have not yet certainly transpired. The probabilities, however, are, that the Franco-Russian alliance was one of the subjects discussed, while the advantages of an Austro-German compact was not left without investigation. Such a compact would be well for Austria, much better than an alliance between Russia and Germany would have been. In fact the safety of Austria will be subserved by such an arrangement, while her integrity would have been threatened in case that William of Germany and Alexander of Russia had entered into an understanding.
With the present out-look upon the war cloud rising in the East, great interest will be awakened throughout the civilized world, and future developments watched with most sagacious eyes. If reports are true, and these national combinations can be credited, a fearful and bloody contest will yet dawn upon the East, such an one as history has failed to record, both as to its bitterness and extent. We await with interest the future, and watch with bated breath the rising of this war cloud in the old world so soon after peace seemed seated on her throne across the waters.

PROVIDENT SUICIDES.

The question whether a person is to be held morally accountable for the taking of his own life under any circumstances, is one that has not yet been fully settled to the satisfaction at least of many of our greatest and ablest metaphysicians. The rules of law which determine the responsibility of parties in other cases have been long established, though found difficult in their application in the majority of cases.

So far, the courts have invariably held Life Insurance companies liable in case of death by suicide, regarding the act itself as evidence of insanity, and an accident against which the Insurance policy is intended to guard.

Life Insurance has been so thoroughly tested that it can be no longer regarded as an experiment. The aim of the law has been to encourage this enterprise, and to extend and enlarge its usefulness.

While this is, perhaps, as it should be, the legislatures of several States have suggested the propriety of exempting by law, Life Insurance companies from responsibility in cases where life is terminated by the parties themselves. From cases that have recently occurred, it seems that this restriction is necessary to prevent these institutions so useful and so beneficial in their results from becoming an encouragement to self-slaughter. One of these cases occurred at Memphis. A man named Spear, a shop-keeper, who, by industry and frugality, managed to accumulate property to the amount of $5,000. In an unfortunate hour he took to gambling, after first insuring his life for $5,000, for the benefit of his wife. He played sometime with unusual success, but at last the coil was tightened upon him and he was penniless. On his road home he stopped at a tavern and wrote a letter addressed to "My good and true wife, and my brave boy, Bennie." He further says, "Now I see what a loving and true wife is. I was a villain; can I answer before God? But, dear wife, it is better for you. If I die, then you receive $5,-000; but, should I have lived our whole capital would have only been $300." With this strange letter in voting population. his pocket he went home, and in the morning was so unusually gay as to excite and surprise his family. He had swallowed poison, and was so excited with the prospects of his journey that he died apparently without regret. This case goes beyond the one that happened not long since of a boatman who was rescued from a watery grave, after he was so far gone that consciousness was restored only after great difficulty. He was asked what his last neuity. He was asked what his last thoughts were as he sank down, and he said. 'I thought it was a good jobs' near Fort Wayne, Ind., on Tuesday, unhe said, "I thought it was a good joke earthed part of the skeleton of a masto-on the Insurance company." State Items.

as to make the thoughtful pause and Something should be done by all law-criminals, and aid in the suppress-is making its appearance in the East-ern World, and is surely marching westward. Many of the cities of the

The cities and every foul and unwhole-some place is being cleaned up pre-paratory to the advent of the dreaded scourge. Even in New York, the authorities are waking up and begin-that city the present season, and per-

At least, in view of its approach, every city, town and village in the

It is also of the utmost importance that great attention be paid to the diet. Let all green and unhealthy substances go, and not be eaten. If

THE BEST YET .- David Weaver raised 298 bushels of wheat, (machine measure.) from a piece of land on his farm, in the northwest part of this Township, that measured 6 acres and. 16 rods. Mr. Weaver is quite sure that the yield, by actual weight, will average 50 bushels per acre. This beats the "Bend of the River."

ZINC COLLAR PAD Co .- From Geo.

H. Richards, Esq., Superintendent of the Zinc Collar Pad Co. of our yillage, we learn the following facts concerning the business done at their factory during the month of July: Twelve to fifteen hands have been employed at the factory, and 31,383 lbs. of zinc have been worked up during the month, which cost $3,000. The sales, during the same period, amounted to $8,652.10. If the Company had experienced no difficulty in procuring material, the sales undoubtedly would have amounted to over $10,000 We doubt whether a like showing can be made by any other Collar Pad factory in the United States. At least for an establishment that has been running less than a year it is a showing that will be hard to beat-if is decidedly a "big thing." It does us good to congratulate the proprictors in having "struck ile," in the Zinc Collar Pad business, and trust their success will continue increasing for the us all a farm." future, as it has done in the past. Of this there seems no doubt; for whereever the Zinc Collar Pad is introduced it supercedes all other kinds, and the Company own the territory of the whole United States, and intend supplying the demand from their factory n Buchanan, enlarging its capacity as the demand increases.

EDS. RECORD .- During the storm Thursday, evening about 12 o'clock, Balm of Gilead tree standing about 8 feet from the house of K. Koontz, was struck by lightning while Mrs. Koontz was hanging a blanket to keep the light from the window, and slivers from 1 in. to 10 ft. long were sent from ground to roof, in stoop, cellar and room, through windows and doors. 12 lights of glass broke, stoop filled with limbs, bark, and slivers. No other damage done but Mrs. Koontz and daughter (who were alone) were badly scared. An apple tree 20 feet from the other was struck, and on the opposite side a slip about an inch wide and 3 or 4 ft. long was taken from the apple tree.

IF WE WOULD. If we would but check the speaker,
When he spoils a neighbor's name,
If we would but help the erring,
Ere we utter words of blame;
If we would, how many might we Turn from paths of sin and shame?

Ah! the wrongs that might be righted,
If we would but see the way!
Ah! the pains that might be lightened
Every hour and every day,
If we would but hear the pleadings
Of the hearts that go astray!

Let us step outside the stronghold Of our selfishness and pride; Let us lift our fainting brothers, Let us strengthen ere we chide; Let us, ere we blame the fallen, Hold a light to cheer and guide.

Ah! how blessed—ah! how blessed Earth would be, if we but try Thus to aid and right the weaker, Thus to check each brother's sigh; Thus to walk in duty's pathway To a better life on high!

In each life, however lowly,
There are seeds of mighty good;
Still, we shrink from souls appealing,
With a timid "If we could;"
But God who judgeth all things, Knows the truth is—"If we would."

Religion Inseparable from the Life. Many seem to entertain the notion that religion does not enter into all the acts of life; but that it is something which exists distinct from them. In this they are guilty of a gross and pernicious error. The design of Christianity is not to withdraw men from the honorable walks and avocacations of life; but to reach and benefit them under all circumstances. It does not necessarily change men's outward relations. It gives new views concerning them, and makes every inconcerning them, and makes every in-cumbent duty, although primarily of a worldly character, in a sense, a re-ligious one, as much as prayer, praise and attending upon the services of the sanctuary. Religion becomes so blended with the Christian's worldly pursuits, that by faithfully attending to them he discharges a part of his obligations to God. He is allowed to undertake nothing upon which he can obligations to God. He is allowed to undertake nothing upon which he can not consistently invoke the divine blessings; and there is, in fact, no time nor place in which he can lay aside his religion. Christianity is not thus accommodating.

In accordance with this principle, shat Christianity is inseparable from life, it imparts a higher tone and an increased earnestness and activity to all its duties. Nothing scarcely can be more foreign to the spirit of true godliness, than sloth and inactivity. The injunction of the wise man many centuries ago, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," is in perfect accordance with the teachings of the Gospel. Who ever carried out the spirit of this injunction better than Paul, Luther, Howard, or our Savior himself, whose life was one of almost ceaseless activity? one of almost ceaseless activity

Doing Good in Secret.

There are enumerable ways in which we may realize this ideal of Christian benificence. All that we can do for others in the way of secret intercessions on their behalf is of this nature. The matter of literal alms-giving is most Christ-like and winning, when it puts on this soft and silvery veil of retiring delicacy. We send to a vacant larder a bag of flour, or to a cold hearthstone a load of wood, or to a ragged group of children a piece-of cloth—we find out when a poor man's rent is due and satisfy his land-lord, and none but God and ourselves know whose hand has conveyed such relief. We link some pleasant companion to our arm and make a quiet call upon some family of our fellow-ship feeling cold, and shy, and neglected, or upon some stranger newly arrived, isolated and solitary, or upon some scene of sickness and suffering, where sympathy is so precious and strengthening, or upon some wanderer from his covenant, whose erring steps our visit arrests and leads back to God, and duty, and Christian communion; and all this so silently and unobtrusively, without announcing or reporting our errand, that it is never suspected that we proposed to our-selves any definite mission and girded ourselves to accomplish it. In our homes we may study the special moods of each inmate, his temperament and his trials, and, without attracting attention, supply just the element that is needed to enliven, cheer, and sus-

And this method of Christian working deepens and sweetens our own humility, for we are not seeking the praise of men; strengthens our faith, for it brings us into more familiar in-timacy with God, to whom alone we tell our secret; and makes our heart overflow with comfort, peace, and joy, for we have in our happy secret a fountain of glad consciousness.—Rev. A. L. Stone, D. D., in Pacific.

Prayer.

He that has never prayed can never conceive, and he who has prayed aright can never forget how much is to be gained by prayer. He walks as in the presence of God, that converses with him in frequent prayer and frequent communion, that runs to him in all his necessities, that asks counsel of him in all his doubtings, that opens all his wants to him. that weeps before Him for his sins, that asks remedy and support for his weakness, that fears Him as a Judge, reverences Him as a Lord, obeys Him as a Father, and loves Him as a patron. "Family prayer," says Cecil, "may be made a vast engine of power to the whole domestic circle. It says there is a God, and inspires a reverence for his character. It proclaims a life to come, and points to the spirit land. It fixes the idea of responsibility in the mind, while it diffuses sympathy through the soul. It furnishes a judicious parent with an opportunity of glancing at faults where direct admonition might be expedient. It great ly conduces to the maintenance of family government and order, while its spiritual advantages are invalua-

Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roofs and Horbe of Collegaria from drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to direc-tions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by willeral poison or other mass. are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair. They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FENALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of wo-manhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have manhood or at the turn of file, these come sitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Biltous, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Diseaseign Openius. Digestive Organs.

ache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad taste in the Mouth, Billous Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled officacy in cleaning the blood of all, impubliced and efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities; and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erisipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect. curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eraptions or Sores, cleanse it when you find it obstructed and shiggish in the veins: cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE, and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four, lunguages—English, German, French and Spanish.

There is a story of a self-willed deacon, who was always on the wrong side and indecorously stubborn. When the temperance reform was in full feather, and the question was discussed in the church of which he was an officer, he, as a matter of course, op-posed it. He would not sign the pledge; he would not consent to its presentation in the Sunday School; bution of tracts. One day, in the presence of a full house, one of the members of the church made the case of the deacon a subject of prayer. He said: "O Lord! if thy servant, our brother, continues his opposition to us, wilt Thou, in Thy tender mercies, remove him from the church militant below to the church triumphant above?" "I won't go!" thundered the indignant and obstinate deacon.
