THE FACES IN THE TUNNEL.

When a young man I was frequently called to London on business, and my place of abode being at a considerable distance from town, the greater part of the day was occupied by the journey.

People who were not in the habit of journeying much by railway, have often a dislike to tunnels, I am aware; but, being a constant traveler, I had no such feeling, and I could not, therefore, account for an unpleasant sensation which I experienced on entering the tunnel on this occasion.

I did not feel lonely, for the light of our lamp fell brightly on the faces of my fellow-passengers. I could see two of them were still sleeping. My friend opposite had, for the first time during the journey, put down his newspaper; and two ladies in the carriage with us, one was stroking the head of a little girl, who appeared to be the only person at all uneasy except myself.

Mechanically, I fell to looking at the reflection of my face upon the window, which the outer darkness had changed into a mirror, giving back the whole interior of the carriage. The uneasy feeling increased, and I suddenly became impressed with the idea that the reflection was not that of my face, but of some one else's. As I looked, the conviction strengthened. It was not my face. It was the face of a man of about my own age; but the hair was light, and the features were totally different from my own. I can see the face now; it was looking intently at me; the thin lips were pressed tightly together; and around the mouth there played a peculiarly sinister smile.

The reflection of the whole inside of the carriage was plain enough; but besides this figure, there was only one more occupant. I saw the reflection of none of my fellow-travelers sitting by me. The other figure was that of a woman, who was standing up behind the first figure. The light from above seemed to fall full upon her face, which was one of great beauty, but disfigured by a look of intense hatred and scorn, which she started out of her dark eyes upon her companion. "My only sensation now, I recollect, was curiosity; all fear had vanished; I saw them as plainly as I now see my hand, and noticed that the woman was magnificently dressed, wearing, in particular, a blaze of jewelry, that sparkled strangely in harmony with the lurid light of her dark and terrible eyes."

"She seemed for one moment to hesitate in some purpose; the next her hands were flung up, and I saw a red cord wind itself round her companion's throat. It was clutched with fearful fury. I saw two rows of cruel gleaming teeth glittering in concert with those eyes. 'But the victim!' I shall never forget the ghastly grin of agony upon the face of the man who had been sitting by me. The light from the face that fell upon the face of a dead man. I saw for a moment the woman's cruel eyes fasten their look of fiendish triumph, her cruel hand snatched together, her mouth moulded into a cruel laugh. Then we whirled out into daylight, and I saw my friend opposite quietly taking up his newspaper again."

"My emotions, while witnessing the terrible spectacle I have just described, gave place to a lethargy which lasted while I remained in the train. My recollections all seemed imperfect. My business, my destination, the place I had started from, the time of day, I seemed confused on all these points; and it was only when I stepped into the street, and felt the cool breeze on my face, that I recovered self possession. These disagreeable effects, however, passed off, as my thoughts were diverted into fresh channels. The real and tangible world in which I was moving soon got the better of the terrible vision in my mind; and being naturally impatient of morbid and superstitious notions, I soon persuaded myself that I must have been sleeping in the railway carriage, and that I must have been very much frightened with a dream, due probably to indigestion. Practical man as I profess to be, I was not going to expose myself to the ridicule of other practical individuals by taking them into my confidence. Time went on; I distasteful myself a little; I traveled home by another route, saw no more visions; and, in the course of a month, I only recollect the incident of the tunnel as I should any other peculiar dream, the impression of which the circumstances of a busy working life had not obliterated.

A few months after my journey to London, I had occasion to make another journey of some length, in a different direction. I got into the train, passed the tunnels unscathed, and found myself at nightfall in a country town, to which I was a perfect stranger. I took lodging for the night at a large, old-fashioned inn, which in the coaching days, must have been a place of some importance. How often one meets with acquaintances in the most unlikely places! I recognized in the host a man whom I had known many years before. In fact, he was a mere boy. He had been brought up in a lawyer's office, in the town where I was born; but having no fancy for a sedentary life, by help of a small sum of money left him by a relative, he had gone out to the Cape, where he was reported to be doing well. He was evidently much gratified at seeing me, and told me that he had had a great many experiences, and living in comfortable circumstances, and enjoying a quiet life, which suited him best after the roughing which he had gone through. He conducted me into a well-furnished apartment—a private sitting room communicating with the bar—where, all unconscious of what was to follow, I prepared myself for passing an agreeable evening.

I don't believe in presentiments, for surely if one should put any faith in them, now was the time for a very different sensation from that which I experienced, as, after partaking of substantial refreshment in my friend's sanctum, I accepted the tender of an excellent cigar, and drew my chair to the fire, very much at ease, and congratulating myself on the good fortune which had led me to seek the shelter of so hospitable a roof. My friend apologized for the absence of "the wife," as he called her, but said that I should make her acquaintance in a few minutes, as she would be that time have finished some domestic task that she was then engaged in. I remember I was speculating as to what kind of lady "the wife" would prove to be, when a side-door opened and I saw what gave me a thrill of horror. Wearing the same dress, loaded with the same jewelry, regarding me with the same dark and terrible eyes, stood the woman of the tunnel! With appalling distinctness, the whole of that horrible circumstance recurred to me—and there she was!

I cannot tell the expression which my countenance wore, but I know my friend looked disconcerted; he must noted the change that came over me, and wondered what should cause it. But here I must note another peculiarity in this terrible meeting. If I recognized this woman as identical with the apparition which I had seen in the tunnel, she too recognized me as identical with some one or something which she had seen. I could see depicted on her countenance, first horror and then fear, and then the same look of hate that the apparition had darted on the other figure which I saw in the tunnel. I don't know what our greeting was like. I gasped out something as I took her hand, and she did the same, and then abruptly retired. I apologized to my friend, but told him I had never seen the lady before, as indeed I had not, adding that I had a nervous affection, which must account for my extraordinary conduct. Still, as may be supposed, he seemed far from satisfied; and for my part, any one may imagine the state of my feelings. The lady remained in the bar, and as I glanced at her furtively, I could see that she was regarding me with a steady gaze of intense fear and aversion. How I wished I had never visited the house—the town. What was to be done? What would come of it all?

One thing I felt—I could not sit there longer; I could not decently resume my conversation with the landlord. I could do one thing—I could go to bed. I accordingly told my friend that I felt unwell, and he, after fetching a candlestick, and motioned me to follow him.

The chamber to which the landlord conducted me did not wear a reassuring aspect in spite of its bright fire, which was burning in a grate. It might have been a haunted room, the antique bed furniture, the huge lumbering chairs, the quaint pattern of the paper on the walls—all spoke of those who had passed away.

My host having bade me good night, I threw myself into a chair, and began to reflect. After all I had seen, it is not to be wondered at if I was in an uneasy state of mind. This woman, for some reason, evidently regarded me with fear and hatred, and was I safe? Could I trust myself to slumber? Might she not visit me, and while I slept repeat the terrible incident? For, as I had not the least doubt of her identity with the apparition I had seen, I had come to believe that she had really committed a murder.

Colorado Journalism. A remarkable and touching story is being told in the Colorado Herald. The editor of the Herald had occasion to leave town for a few days, and intrusted his valuable organ to the care of an ambitious youth who was a novice in journalism. His instructions on leaving were modeled after those of the Editor of the Herald. The assistant editor was to keep in mind the fact that the objects of his paper is to extend its circulation; he said, "and whenever you have a chance to insert a puff of the Herald in any notice you make, pile it on as thick as you can. Keep the people up all the time, you understand, so that they will believe in the Herald as the greatest sheet in the United States." He then said, "and the following night his wife died very suddenly. This is how the assistant editor mentioned the circumstance:—"GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN."—We are compelled, this morning, to perform a duty which is peculiarly painful to the able assistant editor who has been engaged on this paper at an enormous expense, in accordance with our determination to make the Herald a first class journal. Last night death unexpectedly snatched away from our domestic hearth, (the best we have ever had), the wife of our friend, a lady of noble birth, and a woman of noble mind. Her name was Mrs. Agatha B. Burns, wife of Rufus P. Burns, the gentlemanly editor of the Herald. (Her name does not appear in the Herald.) A kind mother and an exemplary wife. (Office over Coleman's grocery, up two flights of stairs. Kuckhard here.) We shall miss this mother, we shall miss this wife. Her husband was a man of noble birth, and a woman of noble mind. Her name was Mrs. Agatha B. Burns, wife of Rufus P. Burns, the gentlemanly editor of the Herald. (Her name does not appear in the Herald.) A kind mother and an exemplary wife. (Office over Coleman's grocery, up two flights of stairs. Kuckhard here.) We shall miss this mother, we shall miss this wife.

The story has this unhappy ending. The editor arrived home that day at noon. Slowly and sadly he was observed to arm himself with a double-barreled fowling-piece, into which he inserted about two pounds and a half of bullets. He marched over to the office, followed by a few stragglers. The assistant editor was busy in painting a big placard to be tacked on the hearth. It bore the legend, "Bury your coffin of Sinners, over the Herald office." The assistant editor cast his eye around and perceived his Chief. Care sat upon that wretched cheek, and thunder clothed his brow. He leveled his gun. The assistant editor was not a man of a wild and awful yell he jumped from the second story window, and struck out for the golden shores of the Pacific. It is believed he eventually swam over to China.

The Newspaper of To-day. One man in a hundred reads a book; ninety-nine in a hundred read a newspaper. Nearly a century ago, when the American press, which is now a spreading oak, was in its green twigs, Thomas Jefferson said his great rival, James Madison, was to be found without a country with newspapers and without newspapers. The press, instead of being the fourth, is the first estate of the realm.—Golden Age.

der. Could I, wearied as I was, keep awake? The moon was shining into the room; I tried to imagine the aspect of her face by that light, and the idea of meeting her alone was too much for me. It was true I had locked my door, but then she might possess a key, or, if not, I doubted if a rickety lock would present an insuperable obstacle to an enemy of so determined a character.

As things did not look very promising inside, I pulled up my blind and looked out. Below me was the inn-yard, down into which the full moon was shining so brightly that I could have counted every paving-stone. Two heavy lumbering gates, unclosed, were in front of me, leading into the street; and right under my window stood a cart with a load of straw. The height was not great, and in half a minute I was out of my window, and plump down upon the straw, without any body being the wiser. I slid down from the load, and out of the yard I walked, and across the street. A little public house chanced to be still open, for it was not late, and the parlor company I found much more numerous than select. However, I was fain to make one of the party, and though it may not enhance my reputation for courage, yet I am bound to say that, despite certain turbulent proceedings, I never more heartily relished the society of my fellow-creatures in my life.

The first thing I heard the next morning was the startling intelligence that but a few minutes after the landlord had conducted me to the room which I had made my escape, his wife had suddenly expired. A medical man was called in, and stated that the cause of death was heart-disease—an opinion which a subsequent post-mortem examination of the body showed to be correct. I, however, thought it necessary, as briefly as possible, to narrate to the landlord the whole of the occurrences of which I had been a witness, and as may be expected, the recital affected him considerably, though whether he believed that what I described had actually happened, or was the fruit of an overwrought imagination, I cannot say. The woman was, however, dead, and none could tell the cause of her strange conduct on encountering me; whether her feelings were similar to my own, or whether, whatever they might be, they were caused by the cold touch of approaching death. The woman being deceased, I did not think it necessary to make the particulars of this business further known. The husband told me voluntarily that he had married his wife at the Cape, whether she had arrived only a few months previously from England. He confessed that he knew but little of her previous history. Here, then, the matter was left, and I took leave of my host the following day, and have never met him since.

One thing remains to be told. Quite by accident, I subsequently learned that, shortly before my memorable journey to London, the body of a man, fearfully mangled by passing trains, had been taken up at the mouth of the tunnel.

A Touching Story. In the cemetery at Nashville, Tenn., a stranger was seen planting a flower over a soldier's grave. When asked: "Was your son buried there?" "No," was the answer. "Your son-in-law?" "No."

After a moment's pause the stranger laid down a small book which he held in his hand, and said: "Well, I will tell you. When the war broke out I was a farmer in Illinois. I wanted to enlist, but I was poor. I had a wife and seven children. I was drafted. I had no money to hire a substitute, so I made up my mind that I must leave my poor, sickly wife and little children and go and fight the enemy. After I got all ready to go, a young man whom I knew came to me and said, 'You have a big family which your wife cannot take care of. I will go for you.' He did go in my place, and in the battle of Chokkamauga he was wounded and taken to the Nashville hospital. But after a long sickness he died, and was buried here, and ever since I have wished to come to Nashville and see his grave; so I have saved up all the spare money I could, and yesterday I came on, and to-day I found my friend's grave."

With tears of gratitude running down his cheeks he took up the small book and pressed it down into the ground in place of a tomb-stone. Under the soldier's name were written only these words: "He died for me."

How to Keep off Flies. The New York Tribune says: "A little very simple knowledge would go a great way in warm weather. Here at a party of amateur sportsmen coming home in disgust on account of mosquitoes, and thousands of stay-at-homes who find life at home unendurable on any terms, for flies. If either party knew it, carbolic acid is the sovereign remedy for all their troubles. A few drops evaporated in a room, or poured upon the clothes, will keep the winged pests at a safe distance; and if the pure crystallized acid is used no great annoyance will result to human beings. Restaurant keepers ought to know this, and keep the swarms of flies away from their windows where they settle and buzz to the torment of the passers by."

Insinuations. Anybody can soil the reputation of any individual, however pure and chaste, by uttering a suspicion that his enemies will believe and his friends never hear of. A puff of the idle wind can take a million of the seeds of a tittle and do the work of mischief which the husbandman must labor long to undo, the floating particles being too fine to be seen and too light to be stopped. Such are the seeds of slander, so easily sown, so difficult to be gathered up, and yet so powerful in their fruits. The slanderer knows that many a mind will catch up the plague and become poisoned by his insinuations, without ever seeking the antidote. No reputation can refute a sneer, nor any human skill prevent mischief.

Potato Soup. Here is a receipt which has the merit of being very economical, very palatable, and very quickly made: Boil in a quart of water a small slice of salt pork, one or two onions, according to size. Take from six to eight good sized potatoes, boil in salt water, and put them in with the potato and onions. Boil half an hour, then add milk enough to make it the right consistency—about as thick as pea soup. Pepper and salt to taste, and first, before taking up, add a small piece of butter, strain through a colander, and serve.—Cor. Health and Home.

Persons troubled with corns will find great relief, and sometimes absolute cure, by the application of a slice of lemon to the affected parts, secured by a strip

CALIFORNIA REPUBLICAN. The heading of this article will strike the reader as strange, yet it indicates the truth, as demonstrated at the late election in that State.

The heading of this article will strike the reader as strange, yet it indicates the truth, as demonstrated at the late election in that State. The complete triumph of the Republican ticket, of some 5,500 majority, was greater than the most sanguine Republican could have hoped.

The result of the election in California may well alarm the Democracy; for it shows most conclusively that Republican principles are constantly gaining ground. It demonstrates beyond a peradventure the fact, that the people's faith in the Republican party is not in the least growing less, but increasing.

REFORM NEEDED.

The state of trade between the United States and Europe shows that the American people should begin a reform. According to the official showing the balance of trade against this country and in favor of Europe, for the last fiscal year has been over $91,000,000 besides $62,000,000 of specie which has been exported to meet balances.

WHEN TO SELL PRODUCTS.

As a general rule it pays to sell products as soon as they are ready for the market. There are exceptions to this rule, as there are to any general rule, but take the experience of any one hundred farmers, and it will convince any one that the loss sustained by holding on to products for the market to get better, will exceed three times the aggregate gain derived from such a course.

HON. MARSH GIDDINGS.

The Santa Fe Daily Post, of Sept. 2d, gives an extended account of the reception and serenade given Hon. Marsh Giddings, late of Kalamazoo, recently appointed Governor of the Territory of New Mexico.

One of the largest demonstrations ever witnessed in Santa Fe took place last evening, welcoming His Excellency Governor Giddings. At about half past seven o'clock the band of the U. S. Infantry entered the plaza at the plaza and soon the people of all classes, occupations, parties and nationalities were represented and had assembled in hundreds.

Tennessee Correspondence. McMinnville, Sept. 9, 1871. Editors Record:—Having received several communications from your county relative to my opinion about coming to Tennessee, I thought I would drop you a few lines, and if you think them worthy of publication you may do so, and if not lay them aside.

—We learn that the barn of Mr. D. Dunn, at Silver Lake, in this township, was burned on Tuesday night. At the time we go to press we have not been able to learn anything definite as to the amount of loss. Fortunately for Mr. Dunn, the barn and contents were insured by Fuller, in the Home, only a few hours before the fire, for $400. The loss, however, must be considerable above this amount.

We take Austin's Aque Drops for Ague.

CHEAP READING.—The subscriber having on hand a large number of back volumes of magazines of all descriptions, Literary, Scientific, Agricultural and Juvenile, will sell them almost at your own price. They contain a vast amount of the best, most valuable and entertaining reading. Call at RECORD office.

PENNY READINGS.—At the meeting of the Penny Reading Association on Monday evening, there was a good attendance, and much interest manifested in the exercises. The receipts of the evening were $3.50. The work of the Association is a laudable one, as the proceeds are to be used for the alleviation of the needy and destitute.

Barr's Aque Medicine is a safe, speedy and sure cure.

FOR SALE OR TRADE.—Good village property for sale or exchange for good Kansas lands. Enquire at, or address, the RECORD Office, Buchanan, Mich.

NOTICE.—All persons indebted to the undersigned can find her, for the settlement of their notes, at the Clothing store of S. L. Estes, on Monday next week, Sept. 18th, 1871.

Thanking my customers for their liberal patronage, I wish to say that hereafter I will have sufficient help Saturday evenings to wait upon all who favor me with a call.

COUNTY FAIR.—After we had gone to press last week we received a complimentary to the Fair to be held in Niles, commencing to-day and closing Saturday.

CORN.—Mr. J. G. Leggett brought into our sanctum the other day an ear of the common dent corn that measures 1 1/2 inches in length. This will do very well for this season.

MAMMOTH Grocery Store, Smith & Sons, where you can buy Groceries cheaper than at any other place in Buchanan.

You can attend to business while taking Barr's Aque Medicine.

GRAPES.—Thanks to C. H. Rea for that box of Concord and Delaware grapes.

NOTICE.—Williams & Burditt, 2 1/2 miles northeast of this village, have made extensive preparations for manufacturing of Sorghum Syrup during the coming season. Having had three years experience in the business they guarantee satisfaction.

THE SAME OLD PRIZE.—Kinyon says that he has succeeded in buying so that he can sell best standard sugar just as he has for the last six months, at 14 cents per pound.

ADVERTISERS.—Now is the time for merchants and those in trade to advertise their business. A hint to the wise is sufficient, but the foolish will not fill their lamps with oil.

APPLES.—Apples are so plenty this fall that they do not find a ready sale at 25 cents per bushel. If winter apples will only be as cheap in proportion none need be without this luxurious fruit the coming winter.

OTHERS do the blowing, but Eaton & Simmons sell the groceries.

FOR SALE.—A pleasant house and lot for sale. Enquire at the RECORD office.

Austin's Aque Drops warranted to cure Ague.

The Buchanan, (Mich.) RECORD says that Jacob Weaver (that's our uncle) raised 298 bushels of wheat from 6 acres of ground. Uncle Jake raises most excellent peaches and maple sugar, and about nineteen of our cousins call him father, while there is no end to the little ones who call him gran'pa.—Rochester, (Ind.) Sentinel.

God Fish at Smith & Sons', the finest in the market.

Emery & Co. are selling Good Coffee for 18 cents, at Galien, Michigan.

To RENT.—Store room to rent—one of the best in Buchanan, suitable for Dry Goods, Hardware, &c. Inquire of J. M. ROE. [231c]

SUGAR.—Go to Smith & Sons' for your sugar. They have lots of it, and more is coming. It is cheap. Go and see it.

ANOTHER APPLE.—Mr. Joseph Sparks brought into our office, the other day, a large red apple (variety unknown) that measured 1 1/2 inches in circumference. This is the largest apple that has been placed on our table this season.

A VALUABLE INVENTION.—The Messrs. Blacks have, upon the boiler at their factory, a new invention, for regulating the supply of water to the boiler, and also an alarm for indicating low water combined. The inventor is Mr. Albert Morrell, who resides near Niles. This water regulator and low water alarm, is the only one yet that has been manufactured, and as Mr. C. S. Black is interested in its manufacture, he desired to have it thoroughly tested before going any further. After a thorough examination of this invention, and being somewhat acquainted with the running of steam engines, we have not the least hesitation in giving it as our candid opinion that it is an entire success, and will be of great importance, both as regards the safety of steam power and the lessening of the labors of the engineer. With this attachment, if it works as we believe it will, and as it now does, there is not the least danger of the water in a boiler getting below a certain designated and arranged line, while its height is also surely regulated. Believing the invention to be one of great merit and practical utility, and one which, if applied to steam boilers generally, will be the means of preventing many fearful accidents, we heartily wish all interested in the invention that success which its merits deserve.

Willott's Anti-Periodic or Fever and Ague Tonic. This Great Remedy possesses all the properties that are claimed for it by its discoverer and its manufacturers. It is not a Laxative or a Cathartic, it does not "loosen the bowels," but it will cure Chills and Fever, Erysipelas and Splentitis, attended with hypertrophy of that organ, Scurvy, Congestive Chills and all Fevers of miasmatic origin. Read the testimonials of grateful hundreds who have enjoyed its blessings and see what they say.

$500 reward is offered for the man who will take the Tonic faithfully according to directions and who will pronounce himself not cured! Bring up the man and get your money, if he can be found! The Tonic is safe, sure and speedy. It is cheap, because you do not require it in long drawn out doses.

Burlington. Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best line is acknowledged to be the C. & O., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the BURLINGTON ROUTE.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha connects with the Great Pacific Road, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging from Omaha, runs to Kansas City, via the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-lying" from a start, its "high-lying" streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-fields stretching over the prairies—farther than the eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand who are steady and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln land office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us a farm."

A CONTENTMENT MEMORY.—Our organs have uniformly received the highest recompense, as the best instruments, at industrial exhibitions in America. So say Mason & Hamlin, while the trade knows that at the great five weeks' test, at a late Fair of the American Institute, New York City—the only test where the instruments of the great leading makers have been brought together—the organ of G. Pelouzet, now (Pelouzet, Pelon & Co.) took the first prize, a gold medal, for their superiority, variety and volume of tone, and for their number of combinations, while Mason & Hamlin received a silver medal for the second best. This triumph shows the more prominently what is known that the judges were selected from the best organists, critics, and the oldest organ builders of Boston and New York, and fully accounts for the fact stated by them. Their instruments are now withdrawn from competition.

This triumph in the east, the Standard Organ have been equally so in the west, where all instruments here, excepting numerous first prizes at State and County Fairs. B. Ing celebrated for their pure pipelike, powerful tone and variety of combinations, as well as for their beauty of styles and excellence of workmanship. These good qualities have made them a household word in the west, and given them the lead over all others. Our friends, Messrs. Whitney & Currier, at Toledo, are general agents for all this region, and keep a full supply of them; a stock worth looking at and especially worth hearing. We advise all wanting a good organ to send their orders direct to their Palace of Music, 111 Summit Street, Toledo, Ohio.

THE PRAIRIE FARMER came to us last week in a new dress, looking as neat and handsome as newspapers dare look. The record of this journal has been a proud one, and it has done much toward building up the industrial interests of the Northwest. In its columns is found a grand fund of original matter on Agriculture, Horticulture, and such other matters as pertain to a first class family journal. Farmers will find the Prairie Farmer a paper worthy of support. The publishers propose to send it the balance of the year, on trial, for fifty cents. Address the Prairie Farmer Co., Chicago, Illinois.

REV. COPPIN and the M. E. Church. BERTON RECORD.—On last Sabbath morning, the Rev. Wm. M. Copplin, Pastor of the M. E. Church of Buchanan, preached the closing sermon of this Conference year, at the M. E. Church in this village. His subject was, the preaching of the Gospel by God's chosen ministers, its power and its influence. The responsibility of the Church and Christian ministry, and also the members of the Church to hold up, by their presence, influence, and support of the Pastors in charge. It was very evident that the Pastor to whom devoted much time, study and thought, upon this important subject, for in listening to the sermon, his audience was carried back, not only to the Cross, to the garden of Gethsemane, where Christ passed the fearful ordeal for the salvation of man, but also found ourselves reveling among the Milesian philosophers, the ancient orators and poets, and then, sweeping over time and space, our memories were directed to eternity; and that upon the cross Jesus Christ, in his suffering death, connected heaven and earth; that justice and mercy were blended together and centered upon the cross, and that by the cross, and that alone, that access to God and heaven, and that the preaching of the Gospel, through the agency manifested by the authority of Christ to his disciples, and those who may be called to preach his Gospel, was and is the ordinance of God, and his ordained plan of reaching the hearts and consciences of men. Although the sermon was twice the usual length of the Pastor's regular sermons, every eye was on the speaker, and every ear anxiously waited to catch every word and sentence that fell from the speaker's lips.

It was a most interesting and profitable service, and the good people were all in the best of feeling, and we are pleased to know from Bro. Copplin that he has spent a pleasant year among our villagers. His labors too, have been blessed in a revival and the addition of more than a score of persons to the church during the year.

BALLOU'S MONTHLY for October is already at hand, and contains an immense amount of choice reading. One hundred pages of reading matter, twenty or thirty engravings, choice stories are among the items to be found in the October number of Ballou's. Terms $1.50 per annum. Thomas & Talbot, publishers, 63 Congress Street, Boston.
