THE LOST GALLEON.

Great was the fame of the Spanish galleons which, sailing from Sansalvador and other ports, attracted the avarice of Morgan and the buccaneering adventurers of his time. The stimulous imparted to maritime adventure by the feats and achievements of those old sea rovers caused the West India ports to swarm with seekers for fame and fortune, from every clime; and to this day their descendents may be recognized in the swarthy and dissolute faces who lounge about the streets and quays of Havana and Panama. warm; but in spite of the burning way of a ship, and, although greatly ure. There, dimly revealed by the the public square of the former city, to witness the execution of the noted brigand, Ignacio Morales, whose ferocious exploits had long filled the city with terror. He had slain a holy priest on his way to administer shrift to a dying penitent, and had cut off the fingers of a bride, to get at her jewels. The gray habit of age and the golden locks of youth were equally impotent to melt his heart when inflamed by the fires of cupidity. A rich treat was therefore in store for the Habaneros, who had come to the scene of execution as to a festival. Several prisoners had been brought out upon the scaffold, which had been erected upon the plaza, amid excited cheering—for, justly as his life had been forfeited, to the majority Morales was a hero, and all expected to see him die like a man. The sentence of each was read, the drums rolled, the file of soldiers detailed for the purpose were being brought to the front, where the prise oners stood bandaged, awaiting the fatal shot, when Ignacio Morales, shouting at the top of his shrill voice, "Liberty and vengeance—death to tyrants!" tore the bandage from his eyes with hands which the assistants had in all likelihood unloosed, and leaping into the crowd amid the fumes created by an explosive compound, was at once lost to sight.

Many among the throng remembered that Ignacio had been driven to his evil courses by the hand of despotism, and could not repress a favoring shout, which the opposing faction answered by yells of fury. A scuffle ensued, occasioned by efforts of Ignacio's friends to obstruct pursuit, and the turmoil was only increased by the soldiers, who fired immediately into the multitude, and charged upon it headlong; only a few remaining to guard the remainder of the prisoners. Meanwhile Ignacio emulated the mole, and by dividing and dodging between the legs of the crowd, gained a small headway. He was rapidly nearing the harbor when a small side door in a back wall attached to a rich mansion, opened; a lady, whose head was wrapped in a robosa, beckoned; and in a second Ignacio was close shut in a place of safety, with the sounds of pursuit and vengeance surging past him. It was a small dark chamber, used occasionally as a porter's lodge, to which he had been introduced; and save the unknown lady and himself, there was no others occupants. The fair incognicia; to whom on bended knee he poured forth his utmost thanks refused to lift her veil, but the hand she extended to him was of the aristocratic pallor, indicative of Castilian blood, and sparkled with brilliants, while one light tress of hair fell way ing to her beautiful rounded shoulders. Her eves he could not see; but he could feel that they were beautiful and ics part with their usually serene and tranquil aspect, and the sky, the earth, the very waters seem infested with malignant demons, intent upon seeing how much mischief they can wreak. They were now reeling under bare poles amid the hissing surges off the coast of Darien. At times, the vivid lightning playing about the track of the little cruiser revealed the white sides of a monster shark, which, as if prescient of a coming catastrophe, slipped through the darkening billows, keeping pace with the laboring vessel. Posted as the look-out at its prow, with one foot upon the taffrail, glancing defiance at the angry skies, Morales seemed the personification of a demon incarnate. While fully aware of the peril, he appeared to revel in the increasing confusion of the elements. At last a blinding bolt, followed by a terrific crash, struck a mast of the ill fated brigatine, and the rush of waters which followed told too plainly the nature of the accident that had befallen. In a few moments the waves were closing over the Donna Isabella; and Morales, with the remainder of the crew, was struggling with the angry billows. How they seethed and hissed around him, as if but toying with their prey!

Yet even in that hour he felt no fear. A floating spar sustained him, and, hurried by the wind and waves toward a rock bound coast, he did not abate a jot of confidence in his des-

Morning had broken in golden flashes over the coral strand. Bruised and exhausted. Morales found himwith the breakers off the entrance to a small land-locked cave into which he had been drifted: As Ignacio crawled painfully up the snowy strand beyond reach of the waves, he found himself resting before the fragment of galleon, of a style older than anything he could remember. In the sands he discovered large sums of gold and silver coin, with vases, jewels, and a crucifix in solid silver. Already Ignacio found himself the possessor of boundless riches, but he was in no better plight than before. He was, in fact, desperately in love. The lady was a daughter of Don Hermoso, and had the repute of being as chaste as she was beautiful. But although she was all kindness and courtesy, she exhibited to his chagrin, not the least warmth of interest after repeated interviews, and the knowledge her, gave the required promise, and that a poor young captain of dra-goons had won her heart, and was betrothed to her, did not tend to assuage the bitterness of his disappointment. Among his other freaks, Don Luis had purchased a yacht, in which he made frequent excursions, attended by chosen parties of his friends, and occasionally would go forth unaccompanied, save by a crew of swarthy fellows, whom he kept about his villa in the capacity of assistants, being sometimes absent a week on these trips of mystery, after which he was observed to be more than usually pro fuse in money. He resolved that Inez should be invited to a pleasure excursion, which he would sieze as an opportunity to declare his passion; and, should she refuse, there would be other lands to fly to, and she, being totally in his power, could not choose

Croll on Ocean Circulation. Mr. Croll, in further discussion o the subject upon which he and Dr. William P. Carpenter are at variance -namely, that of "ocean currents"remarks, in Nature, that the true way of considering the matter is to regard the currents as merely one grand sys-tem of circulation, produced, not by the trade winds alone, but by the combined action of all the winds capable of producing this action; and the effect upon the currents depends upon two circumstances—namely, the direction of the prevailing winds and the conformation of the sea and land. From this it results that the general system of winds may sometimes produce a current directly opposite to the prevailing wind blowing over the current. Taking into the account the result of the conformation of the sea and land, Mr. Croll thinks, and he expects to show, that all the principal currents of the globe, the Gibraltar current not excepted, are moving in the exact direction in which they ought to move, assuming the winds to be the sole impelling cause. The influence of the actation of the earth he considers greatly overestimated, such rotation exercising no influence in generating motion on the earth's surface but if the body be already in motion, the rotation will deflect it to the right in the northern hemisphere, and to the left in the southern. Difference of specific gravity, as resulting from difference of temperature between the equatorial and polar regions, might, if sufficiently great, produce some such interchange of equatorial and polar water as Dr. Carpenter supposes; but this difference of temperature, in Mr. Croll's opinion, could not produce currents like tween the waters at the equator and at the poles, and also his estimate of the rate at which the temperature of the equatorial water decreases from for he had not been a day anoat when steman of the distribution of the letter the surface downward, he thinks he vessel from Cardenas, which conveyed which Morales had found by the side has proved, in a paper published in him and his treasures to the port of of the skeleton.

Valley of Death—Description of a Remarkble Valley.

A gentleman connected with Gen-Palmer's engineer corps of the Kansas Pacific railroad, writing from Camp Cody, on the Mohave river, California, gives the following description of a remarkable valley in that re-

Eighty miles northwest of this camp is the well known and much dreaded "Death Valley." It is said to be lower than the level of the sea, and wholly destitute of water. Mr. Spears, our intelligent guide, who visited this remarkable valley several times, gave me the following account of it, with the reason for the terrible name: The valley is some fifty miles long by thirty in breadth, and save at two points, it is wholly encircled by mountains, up whose steep sides it is impossible for any but expert climers to ascend. It is devoid of vegetation, and shadow of bird or wild beast never darkened its white, glaring sand.

In the early days trains of emigrants bound for California passed, under the direction of guides, to the south of Death Valley, by what is known as the "old Mormon road." In the year 1850 a large train, with some 300 emigrants, mostly from Illinois and Missouri came south from Salt Lake guided by a Mormon. When near Death Valley a dissent broke out in a part of the train, and twenty-one families came to the conclusion that the Mormons knew nothing about the country, so they appointed one of their number a leader and broke off from the main party. The leader determined to turn due west; so with the people and wagons and flocks he traveled for three days, and then descended into the broad valley, whose treacherous mirage promised water. They reached the centre, but only the white, glaring sand, bounded by the scorched peaks, met Vast treasures were discovered on their gaze on every hand. Around the spot where the old galleon had the valley they wandered and one by one the men died, and the panting flocks stretched themselves in death under the hot sun. Then the children, crying for water, died at their mother's breasts, and with swollen tounges, and burning vitals the abandoned, and strong men tottered, and raved and died. After a week's wandering, a dozen survivors found some water in the hollow of a rock in the mountains. It lasted but a short time, when all perished but two, who, through some miraculous means, got out of the val-ley, and followed the trail of their former companions. Eighty-seven persons, with hundreds of animals, perished in this fearful place, and since then the name of Death Valley has been applied to it. Mr. Spears says when he visited it last winter. after the lapse of eighteen years, he found the wagons still complete, the iron works and tires bright, and the shriveled skeletons lying in many places side by side.

> Helmbold's Fall. It is evident that Helmbold's failure was due to great vanity. It is about four years since he was making his greatest dash, and then his career certainly was a remarkable one. He had only been three years in trade in New York, and during that time had made his remedies famous and had become rich. His income was $50,000 a year. and all that was required was a continued attention to the business which he had established. Instead of this, however, he became ambitious of political distinction. When Grant was nominated for the Presidency A. T. Stewart advanced $30,000 toward an electioneering fund. Helmbold, who had the folly to believe in Seymour's chances, determined to outdo Stewart, and consequently advanced $40,000 to his party. Forty thousand dollars is a large sum of money. It has generally been considered a capital sufficient for many kinds of business. That any man should deliberately throw such a sum away can only be explained by the proud desire to outrival Stewart. Helmbold, it is true, expected to make money rapidly, but pride was continually in the way of enduring success. Having outbid Stewart in the political fund, he determined to distance the Belmonts and Commodore Vanderbilt in equestrian style, and hence his equipage at Long Branch was the grandest ever seen there, with the single exception of that displayed by Jim Fisk. There was an incessant rivalry between this brace of fools; but in the long run Fisk came out ahead, which might have been expected from his unbridled ambition and vast resources. Helmbold changed his team every day in the week, but still Fisk excelled him. They have both reaped the reward of their folly, the one lying in a dishonored grave, while the other is a

THE BALTIMORE MOVE.

ic journals it leaks out that an effort will be made at the Convention in Baltimore to select Adams or some other man, and place him upon the Cincinnati Platform. The reason for this will be, that there is no hopes of electing a Democrat, and hence a Republican must be selected. The great opposition to Greeley developed in the Democratic ranks makes some new move necessary. If the Baltimore Convention shall conclude to yield to the pressure, repudiate Greeley, retain Brown and take Adams, the leaders hope thereby to unite the Democracy and also to unite the opposition element in the Republican party. They argue that, if Greeley cannot unite the opposing element in the Republican party and there being so much opposition to him in Democratic ranks, it becomes the imperitive business of the Baltimore Convention to select some men on whom all the opposition to Grant can and will unite. This plan is merely hinted at by some of the shrewder Democratic journals, and will undoubtedly have many advocates at Baltimore.

Liberal Republicans that a mistake was made in taking up Greeley at Cincinnati, and some of them secretly desire that the mistake may be recified at Baltimore by the selections of Adams, thus compelling Greeley to retire from the field. There are very few who oppose Grant, but would willingly yield up Greeley for Adams if by doing so the vote of the Democratic party could be united thereby. With all this data before us, it need not be thought strange if a new move is inaugurated at Baltimore.

EDITORS RECORD:—I learn from a reliable source that I am quoted in other parts of the county, as a Greelevite. It is of little consequence, certainly, what position I may take in the coming campaign, yet every man is supposed to have some influence; and be that influence ever so little it is his privilege, and perhaps duty, to have it exerted in the direction he believes to be right. No man has a shadow of authority for quoting me as favorable to the election of Horace Greeley to the Presidency. I go for the Philadelphia nominee generally, and for General Grant particularly, especially since the sore-head exhibition at Cincinnati. I used to admire H. G. long ago, when he was simply "an editor of a newspaper published in New York City," as Lew. Campbell would say. But he has gone after strange gods, and since he did what he could against Mr. Lintwenty-two votes out of the twenty-seven to convict. No, sir! Excepting a few sore-heads and their small influence I believe true Republicans will go for Grant to a man, and the Rumor has it that there is an nternal commotion at the Tribune office; that the espoused of the Horace Greeley cause, whereby a heavy loss of subscribers has been suffered, and corresponding increase secured by the Evening Post and Inter-Ocean, has given the business department a fit of the ague, and caused the other stockholders to be badly shaken up. Each of these valleys have a stream of water running from the Northwest in a Southeast direction into the Platt river. The valleys average three miles in width. The first one on the East side of the County is called Beaver. The second, Plum, running through the center of the county. The other in the Western part of the county, is called the Cedar. The length of the Cedar is seventy-five miles; the length of the Beaver is about fifty miles, while that of the Plum is much shorter. Between these valleys are the table lands, many of which for whole sections are level, with just enough descent to allow the water to pass off readily. There are some portions of the country that are quite rolling, adapted to grazing, and upon which, for many years, the herdsman can herd his flock without molestation. This is the State for a young man to lay a foundation for an independent life and this is the season in which the choice of the best lands await his coming. All who are settled here welcome and assist the new comer. Bring energy and perseverance and you will receive a rich reward. Truly Yours .

-A couple from Indiana, whose Ma's "didn't know they were out," came to this village last week to get married. The Good Templars who have an eye to business as well as to the liquor-sellers, saw a chance for a financial hit, and very properly availed themselves of it. They offered the young couple the free use of their Hall for the marriage ceremony, but levied a tax of 15 cents on all who were anxious to witness the making of the twain one. The 15 cents admitted to the Hall and entitled the person so admitted to a plate of ice-cream. Cheap enough for the ecstatic felicity of gazing on youth and beauty, and cooling off with an ice. It is now believed by no small number in Berrien County that certain slates are being made up for County offices, looking to the interests of certain rings and parties. It will be wise for the Republican party to look well to this matter, at the coming Convention. The day has gone by for the party to take up any kind of a man who may be in the interests of certain objectionable persons, and expect to elect him to office. The party must look out its best men-men of sound, unwavering principles, if it would retain the confidence of the people. It will not do to take up men of doubtful integrity and unsound morality, and expect the people to stand by such nominations, as against the best men the opposition affords. It is well to understand these things, and he is a friend to the party and to its principles, who points out the dangers to which it is exposed—the rock upon which it may be wrecked-and shows the way of preservation and

THE AMNESTY BILL. Strange indeed are the workings of politics. The Democrats have long been crying for complete amnesty to all rebels. The Liberal Republicans took up the same wail and made it a plank in the Cincinnati platform. When the measure therefore came before Congress it was expected that Democrats and Liberal Republicans would vote en mass for the bill, but such was not the case. Greeleyites, whether in the Democratic ranks or among the bolters, were the opponents to the bill. They voted against it principally or dodged the questions. Amnesty now is an accomplished fact, or at least, all told, of the vast host that aided the rebellion or took up arms to destroy the Government of two hundred who have not been granted amnesty. It is certain to supersede Pills, Castor Oil, Narcotic Syrups, and all other purgative and exciting medicines. The Castoria contains neither Minerals, Morphine, nor Alcohol. The Cause of Temperance finds some of its most insiduous and dangerous fees in the many so-called "tonics" and "appetizers," made of cheap whisky and refuse liquors, finished up to suit deprayed appetites, under the name of medicines. Ds. Walkers's California Yingoar Birters are none of these. They are not a beverage, but a genuine medicine, purely vegetable, prepared from Californis herbs by a regular physician. For all diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys, bladder, skin and blood, they are an infallible and unrivalled remedy.

ABOUT one o'clock yesteday morning the fire bells gave the alarm and drew a crowd to Second street, corner of Cass, where the residence of Wm. Evans was burning. How the fire originated we know not, but before the engines could get to work the house was so enveloped in flames that it could not be saved. The house was insured for $1,000 and the furniture for $300, probably all they were worth. Nothing but a bedstead was saved.—

May 22, 1872. EDITORS RECORD :- I visited school a short time ago, where a friend of mine is teaching, and I should like through the columns of your paper to tell to the reading public, especially the school officers of districts that are situated in like manner, what I saw there: Just across the way is a large white church, enclosed by a good substantial fence, where people assemble once a week. That is all perfectly right, there should be a fence there. But how is it at the school house where thirty or forty children assemble every day, is there a fence there? "nary" a fence, the yard and play-ground is perfectly accessible to all the hogs, cows and sheep in that part of the country. Their rendezvous at night, and pasturage by daytime. During the short time I remained there, the teacher, about every ten minutes, would send, a little boy to drive the hogs away. from the door, or the cows with bells on from under the window. This is not the only school that is troubled in this way, there are many. Now in my opinion every district should have a good board fence at least, around their school house; it not only looks better, but is better in which is, it is then no longer a public barnyard, it can be kept clean and decent for the children to play upon. The teacher has a better chance to keep them within bounds of the schoolhouse and under his supervision : during play hours. May the time soon come when every district in our State will have a good house, good black-board, good globe and outline maps, and a good fence. ... Respectfully Yours:

Multitude of Mercles.

If the ungrateful man were asked to count up his great mercies, he would mention two or three things, and fancy that he had completed the catalogue. The most of us, in our ordinary moods, would not require a ream of letter pa per to write out what we carelessly conceive to be a comprehensive and extended list, and when the eye is cleared with a few briny tears, straightway it sees a hundred objects which it observed not before. To the soul, chastened by divine correction, mercies swarm and teem where aforetime there seemed but few.

Take note of this, reader. I jot it down while I am newly escaped from the chamber of affliction, and the impression is fresh on me; it is a great mercy to be able to change sides when lying in bed. Did I see you smile? I meant no pleasantry, but intended to write a sober, serious sentence. Did you ever lie a week on one side? Did you ever try to turn, and find your-self quite helpless? Did others lift you, and by their kindness reveal to you the miserable fact that they must lift you back again at once into the old position; for, bad as it was, it was preferable to any other? Do not smile again, but listen while I add—it is a great mercy to get one hour's sleep at night. You go to bed, and never reckon upon opening your eyes again till your seven or eight hours are over, but some know hat it is, night after night, to long for slumber and find it not. Oh, how sweet an hour's sleep when it has interposed between long stretches of pain, like a span of heaven's blue between the masses of thunder-cloud! We bless God more for those dear moments of repose than for whole weeks of prosperity.

What folly it is, however, to put down a few of these benefits selected from so many more! it is as though we would catalogue the cattle on a thousand hills, or enumerate the waves of the ocean. The tender love which chastises us, the gentle kindness which bruises us, the fond affection which crushes us to the ground—these we do not so readily recount; yet is there as much devine love in a smart as in a sweet, as great a depth of tenderness in buffeting as in consoling. We must count our crosses, diseases and pains, if we would number up our blessings. -Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

"I Can't do it."

What a volume of human misery is unfolded in this short sentence? What mighty efforts of undeveloped genius are chained by this conclusion of despondency when a barrier chances to interrupt the inward progress of the will. What domestic unhappiness, what downward marches toward the gloomy and solitary abodes of poverty-what anxious solicitude that fills the breasts of the dependent wife—what ardent wrestlings with the demon of despair—what social wretchedness —what deep painful anxiety—what unheard of evils are depicted in the spirit of that expression! It is the language only of the self-wretched-the determination of the weak and imbe-

It is the voice of the moral coward, who, standing on the shore of some desolate island, in the stormy ocean of life, and looking out upon the billows, strewn with the wrecks of earthly grandeur and human happiness, is so blinded by fear, that he cannot see through the surrounding gloom. It is the articulated feeling of the traveler of the desert, who having gained an eminence, sees nothing but a barren plain before him; thirst parching his tongue, and weariness subduing his strength. But shall he lay down without hope? Nay, let him press forward, make but one effort, a green oasis will meet his vision-a cool stream will bubble up from some unforeseen fountain, and he will reach his journey's end, crowned with the rich rewards of his perseverance.

Something Fresh. "Give us something fresh and stir-ring," was the demand not long since, upon a missionary, for the Monthly Concert. "Give us a battle a day," was the demand of a leading political journal upon our Government, at the Fredricksburg, taught the people a deeper sentiment. The missionary, quietly laying foundations for a strucover some brilliant exploit; nor is it a sensation meeting over something new and strange; it is a season of prayer for divine help in hard work, blessing of the Holy Spirit, that brings the increase. The mission of the missionary that has nothing "fresh, and stirring" to report, may be just the one—"Sowing much and reaping none"-most in need of the prayers of the church.—Missionary Herald.

It is not a Quack Medicine, but the scientific prescription of Jos. P. Fitler, M. D., Professor of Toxicology and Chemistry, graduate of the celebrated University of Pennsylvania, A. D. 1833, whose entire professional life has been devoted specially to this disease. This preparation under solemn eath is consciontiously believed to be the only positive, reliable, infallible specific ever discovered. The proof that no other specific exists is found in every community in persons afflicted for many years, past and still suffering. If physicians could cure it, if a specific did crist, this would not be so,—a fact that must be universally admitted. The off deceived sufferer may wisely ask, what security or evidence has he that Dr. Fitler's Rheumatic Syrup will cure his case. Such we are now conabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than oure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "Cune" expels the miasmatic poison of Fever And Ague from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of everybody;@and in bilious districts, where Fever And Ague prevails, everybody should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuragia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "Cune" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants and persons travelling or temporar from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic since been visible to the naked eye.

Nor WELL POSTED Miss Anna ckinson was about to deliver her celèbrated lecture on Joan d'Arc in a small Western town, and of course it was considered necessary, that she should be introduced to the audience. The task fell upon the Chairman of the Lecture Committee, a worthy in-dividual, but not very well versed in the history or the language of the la-mented La Pucelle. "Ladies and gentlemen," said he, advancing to the front of the platform, "Miss Dickinson will address you to-night on the life and adventures of John Eark, one of the greatest heroes of antiquity. We are not as familiar with the heroes of antiquity as we ought to be, owing to the long time since antiquity; but one thing is certain, and that is that Miss Dickinson can tell us all about that most remarkable man of them all, John Dark." It is needless to say that many of the audience were left

A Broadway dandy, whose clothes were as fragrant of musk, cotracts, was exhibiting himself on the steps of one of the hotels, when a Yankee from the country came out and stood beside him to his great annoyance. He showed his disgust in many ways; and finally tried to raise a laugh at the Yankee's expense. The Yankee took no offense, but said to him, "I say, you, shall I tell you how to take the smell out of them 'ere clothes? There's no use of carrying that 'ere small round. You jist bury them 'ere clothes about a foot in the sand, and in a week they'll smell as sweet as mine." Our dandy has not
