"Eternal Vigitance is the Price of Liberty!"

Poetry. MOTHERHOOD. DY C. S. CAYERLY.

She laid it where the sunbeams fall Unscanned upon the broken wall, Without a tear, without a groan, Which some rude swain had haply cast Thither in sport long ages past.
And time with mosses had o'erlaid, And fenced with many a tall grass-blade, And all about bade roses bloom, And violets shed their sweet perfume. There, in its cool and quiet bed, She set her burden down and fled; Nor flung, all eager to escape, One glance upon the perfect shape That lay, still warm and fresh and fair, But motionless and soundless there.

No human eye had marked her pass Across the linden-shadowed grass Ere yet the minster clock chimed seven; Only the innocent birds of heaven— The mag-pie, and the rook, whose nest Swings as the elm-tree waves his crest-And the live cricket and the hoar And huge limbed hound that guards the door Looked on, when, as a summer wind That, passing, leaves no trace behind, All unappareled, barefoot all, She ran to that old ruined wall, To leave upon the chill, dank earth (For ah ! she never knew its worth), 'Mid hemlock rank, and fern, and ling, And dews of night, that precious thing.

And there it might have lain forlorn, From morn till eve, from eve till morn, But that, by some wild impulse led, The mother, ere she turned and fled, One moment stood erect and high; Then poured into the silent sky A cry so jubilant and strange, That Alice— as she strove to range Her rebel ringlets at her glass— Sprang up and gazed across the grass; Shook back those curls so fair to see, Clapped her soft hands in childish glee; And shricked—her sweet face all aglow Her very limbs with rapture shaking-"My hen has laid an egg, I know; And only hear the noise she's making!"

From Chambers' Journal. A MIDDLE-AGED LOVE STORY.

They had come, a little group of friendly faces, to watch me off, with waving handkerchiefs and kindly goodbys, and I stood on the stern nodding and waving back till the steamer swent down the river out of their sight. I knew I should have their prayers that the great sea might be gentle with me: I knew they would watch the weather and look for the telegram of the arrival of our ship; yet I knew I was taking nothing from their lives, and that they would each go home hardly missing me; so it was with no great wrench of heart that I saw the pilot put off from us, and took the

D. 1870, in Liber Na. 2 of Mortgage, on page 106; and no proceedings at law or otherwise having been instituted to fraceloss sid Mortgage or collect the same: Now therefore, notice is haveby given it it in pursuance of a pwer of sale contained in said Mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the equal undivided one-half of the premises described in said dwortgage, towit: All that certain piece or parect of land, lying and being in the County of Berrien and State of Michigan, known and described as a form thence southerly to the southwesterly cipit (8) rods, on a line parallel with the first line mentioned, and extensing to the cash rly line of Mechanic street; and from thence During most of the passage I was iust comfortably sea-sick, so I sat all the day long in a reclining chair on deck, watching the white caps on the purple and green and blue waves that mounted and fell down and up, up and down, away out to the far horizon. I saw the shining nautiluses float by, now and then a whale, or a shoal of porpoises, or a sail, speeding white and full across the water.

I saw also a good many other things nearer by, for I didn't put my eyes in my pocket, along with my shortsighted glasses, and nobody was much likely to mind a middle aged woman in hood and water-proof.

The first thing I saw was a young girl with dark eyes and brown hair that rippled itself in a tangle of rough curls whenever she took off her net. She was not so very pretty nor so very brilliant; but there was a piquant charm about her that attracted half WE the undersigned, having been appointed by the Y Judge of Probate of the County of Herrien, Commissioners with full power and authority to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of Geo.L. Green, late of said County, deceased, hereby give notice that they will meet at the office of Dauiel Terriere, in the village of Buchaman in said County, on Thursday, the 26th day of December, 1872, and on Thursday the 27th day of February, 1873, and on Thursday the 27th day of March, 1873, from ten o'clock A. M. to four o'clock P. M., of said days, and at such other times and places as they shall from time to time adjourn thereafter. Six months from and after the 30th day of September, A. D. 1872, Leiug allowed for creditors to present their claims for examination and the passengers before the first day was over. By the end of the second day everybody, from the captain to the ship's surgeon, and from the surgeon to the cabin boy, was eager to show her attention, and everybody was met with the same genial smile and lively

She won her way at once into my heart by the kindly thought that led her to bring little relishes from the table to tempt my sickly appetite, and to soothe my forehead with bay water and gentle touches of her shapely hands, where a great emerald glittered, encircled by diamonds. Very soon she got in the habit of drawing her rug beside my chair, and sitting on the deck leaning against me, so that I might "pet her," as she said. This was how it happened that my quiet, out-of-the-way corner came to be the center of the life and gavety and romance of the whole shipboard. It seemed that this young girl, Rosa Armour, was an only child, and an orphan, going to an uncle in Germany, her nearest kin. "Dear heart! I hope her uncle will be wise as well as loving," said I to on through life alone.

this all the way from Honolulu to San Francisco," said he, looking out upon.

Pacific-peaceful; it was rightly named. We have never such gales on that | left us, along with a young lawyer, to as sweep the Atlantic, but only the drop oranges and lemons among the gentlest westerly breezes." The New Zealander shivered as he spoke, and drew his wrap close over his knees. "We have the most charming climate most a pain—in his eyes. He had in New Zealand," he went on; "we are never too hot and never too cold In fact, we never think of the weather. And the soil is the most fertile in the world."

"Pity it is in such an out-of-the-way part of the earth that nobody can live there," said Miss Armour.

"Beg your pardon, Miss; there are several English towns of 30,000 inhabitants each; and we never think of ourselves as being out of the way, but rather feel sorry for those who live so far off." returned the former, bending his tall figure carnestly forward.

Rose leaned her pretty head toward him in a confiding attitude of interest, and laughed: "Oh, so you are the people, and wisdom is going to die with you," said she. "But what do you do out there in the heart of the universe?''

"We dig gold for one thing, and raise sheep for another-millions and millions of them; from thirty to forty vessels are constantly plying to England with the tallow and pressed wool. "What do you do with all that mutton?" asked Rosa, looking idly at the light in her ring, and then as idly at the light in the speaker's eyes. "We use what we can," was the reply, "and sometimes, I am sorry to say, we bury the flesh—not usually; but sometimes an order will come to one farmer for a thousand sheep, if you please, and all he can do is to clip off the wool, get out the fat and bury the carcasses. "What a pity the meat can't be sent to the hungry poor at home. Why don't somebody condense it as they do the beef in Texas?" I said in my practical way.

"In good time, I dare say, somebody will; but we can't do everything at once," replied the New Zealander looking with sudden interest at the game of shuffleboard being played beside us.

Just then along came the ship's surgeon, a blonde youth in uniform, with his hair parted in the middle.

ome and see it done?" Miss Armour started up at once, turning the same half confiding glance and ready smile upon him she had my life.' been giving us.

"I am going to leave my rug with you; I shall come back," said she, beaming over her shoulder upon me as she took the surgeon's arm and went

The New Zealander looked after her, tried to console himself by drawing his wrap in another fold across his knees, did not succeed, and finally got up and went away. Of course it was not worth his while to make himself agreeable to a middle-aged woman in hood and waterproof. So I sat, and looked at the likeness of a lake among the sunset clouds, wondering the while, half unconsciously, about the old chord in my memory that was always being struck by a certain musical ring in the New Zealander's voice. After an hour or so the gun was fired, and presently Miss Armour came back, with the disorder of the strong sea-wind in her hair, and its freshness in her pretty pink cheeks. "I've come as I said," she murmured. dropping at my feet again, and smiling up, as though she had got where she best loved to be-just such a smile as she would have given to the stokers down in the engine room, or to the ship's cat. But it was lovely to look upon while it lasted; and we middle-aged people have learned to warm ourselves in any chance ray of sunlight, without stopping to consider whether it is likely to be perpetual.

This time the bit of sunshine did not stay long, for there came up an artist with his sketch book; and when Miss Armour had sufficiently admired his graphic pencilings of the captain and the quartermaster, and the seasick occupants of an upper berth, it was time to throw the dog, and so he bore her off, to find out by her own eyes whether we were actually going at the rate of thirteen knots, or only twelve and a half. That was how the days went. The passengers read, and paced the deck.

"Oh! but not as compared to the of grave regret in his face. On this last morning, Miss Armour had just steerage passengers, when I noticed the New Zealander looking after her with a sadder regret than usual-al-> such handsome dark eyes. "Now," said I to myself, "I hope he isn't going to get soft—a sensible, gentlemanly, agreeable man like him, and quite old enough to be her father !" And so I looked at him to see if he was, when suddenly he turned upon

"At least you might have written, Agatha Wells!" said he, sharply.

I started, as you may think, to hear my own name spoken so familiarly by a stranger; when looking again, behold! I saw beneath the bronze and under the wrinkles and behind the beard a face that twenty years before was the dearest in the world to methe face of Duncan Ashley. We parted one day expecting to meet on the next; but that evening he was called away, and wrote instead of coming. In the letter he wrote what he had said before, with his eyes-yes, those same beautiful eyes—that I was the choice of his heart and the desire of his life.

"Answer me," he said, "I cannot wait till I see you." So I answered—a long, foolish letter, though there was no need of writing; for he had read all I could his; then I watched and waited for him, but never saw him or heard one word more. If you are young, you can imagine the slow dying out of hope and expectation; and if you are old, you know how such things can be lived over, and hidden in secret graves.

But now, as though the graves had been opened, and the judgment set, came this sudden reproachful question up from the buried past. I fairly caught my breath, as I turned back my eyes, and looked him in the face again.

"Forgive me," said he directly, in a gentier tone. "I did not mean to speak. You brought it out with your eyes; that questioning turn was so familiar. Of course you were quite right, and I never blamed you. I never meant you should see me again ; "Miss Armour," said he, "the gun | but the temptation to feel myself beis to be fired at the bow; will you side you, only to be in the the disease never has been, and never can soothing charm of your presence was too great. It has been a blessing I shall carry with me all the days of

He was rising to go away, but I put out my hand. "I did write, Duncan Ashley," said I, "the letter must have gone wrong."
"You did! You wrote!" he cried, sinking back to his chair again, and looking at me eagerly. "What did you say?"

"There was only one thing I could say, and I said that," I answered, blushing as though I had just written the letter.

A middle-aged woman in hood and water-proof. But, dear me, it was only my face that was middle aged, after all: my heart was as young and and time, fell off, leaving in it only the eternal youth of love.

It was the old story of a lost letter, and the older story of a proud man believing himself rejected and humiliated, and fleeing to the ends of the earth with his pain.

But, bless your heart! I might as well have tried to wipe up the Atlanwas so grieved, and so impatient, and so resolute, (and, indeed, when one comes to think of it, twenty years is long enough for an engagement) that I finally dropped off my waterproof and sea sickness, and stood up behind the binnacle, and was married before eight bells that very morning, ring and all. Duncan produced it from a small casket where he had carried it in his waistcoat pocket for the whole twenty years.

"I could never bear to put the little thing away," said he, looking at it "Twenty precious years were wasted!" said my New Zealander. "We will not be separated another day while we both live. There is a clergyman among our passengers, and we will be married this very hour!" That was so like his headlong decisions! Certainly he did need a ober, second thought like me for ballast. "That cannot be!" I cried. "The ceremony wouldn't be legal without a license or something. And Pulmonary Consumption.—By Dr. Price. Can Consumption be Cured.

This is truly a question of great importance. When we consider the lungs as a vital organ, and their close proximity to the heart, their delicate structure, the important office they have to perform-in a state of disease and ulcers forming upon them—that the very atmosphere we inhale contributes most essentially to increase diseased action upon them, it could not be surprising that this disease should be considered absolutely incurable.

It is a well established fact that cases are now on record in which Consumption has positively been cured in the confirmed and last stages, as proved by dissection of individuals who have died of some other malady.—These cases are not two or say long before, with those eyes of lour, but many; and we refer to every physician for the truth of this statement. This being the case, does it not prove, beyoud the mere shadow of a doubt, that there may be-nay there is a cure for the disease. If one has been cured, why not another? It two, why not four? and if four, why not many? The man that says it is incurable takes a heavy responsibility upon himself; before he can make this assertion free from folly, interest or ignorance, it is necessary that he become acquainted with every medical substance on the face of the globe, and their various eflects upon the human system, when administered; that he understands 'minutely every method by which disease is engendered, as also the restorative process to remove such disease; that he knows the chemical character of the uris producing and supporting the disease, and that it has not in the universe of matter its counteracting agent, that he knows the composi tion and effects of every medicine offered as a remedy and knows, not from theory or prejudice, but from positive facts, that be cured.

Had there never been a cure recorded in which the consumptive patient had been restored to health, then we might with some degree of reason say it has been invariably mortal; but one single cure breaks the fatal link, and not only shows the pos sibility of restoration, but proves that the disease can be cured. Cures are also on record where persons have lived with but one lung, the other having been destroyed by the disease, which was prevented from further mischief by proper remedies; in fact, we can point out such cases in different parts of the country, wherein the functions of respiration are performed by one lung, the other having become dried or

Pulmonary Consumption is a disease of the lungs; and the question arises how and why they are effected, and the nature of the affection. We distinguish two dissilly as ever. And as for Duncan's | tinct characters of disease upon the lungs, face, the marks of care, and thought, one producing what are termed tubercles, the other open ulcers. Tubercles are small round substances which are formed in the air cells of the lungs, and are composed of lime, phosporic acid, and carbonic acid; glued together by mucus. When they become sufficiently large they irritate the lungs, produce inflammation which termi nates in small ulcers, frequently covering a large portion of the mucus membrane of the lungs. Sometimes their accumulation tic with my pocket handkerchief. He | go on for years, and the lungs become in a measure filled with them, the patients at the same time enjoying tolerable health; but eventually gradually sinks under it. The lungs may become diseased and ulcerated without any formation of tubercles in them whatever, and is the most general way in which lungs become diseased. When from any cause the blood, becomes impure and of an inflammatory character, that organ of the human body which is the weakest will he first attacked by the morbid matter with which the blood is charg ed. This not unfrequently happens to be the lungs, in consequence of the arduous office alloted to them to perform in the animal economy, and their constant exposare to an atmosphere upon their surface o: so variable a character as ours differing at least 100 degrees in temperature between summer and winter. The venous blood at every pulsation of the heart is thrown to the lungs, where it comes in contact with the atmospheric air inhaled into the lungs. The oxygen of the atmosphere there united with the carbon in the blood, forming carbonic acid gas, which is constantly inhaled from the lungs; the blood in the lungs is then changed from venous to arterial blood. After this change of blood in the lungs, it is returned from the lungs back again to the heart. The above illustration is sufficient to give the reader an idea of the office of the lungs. If, then, the lungs, from any cause whatever, become weak, what must neces-sarily be the effect upon them? would not their debility render them incapable of returning the blood from them back again to the heart as fast as the heart threw it to them? This conclusion is inevitable: consequently blood would accumulate in the blood vessels of the lungs, distending them to a larger size, so that the lungs become partially gorged with blood. The distenirritate them and produce cough; this irri-Much difficulty of breathing would like wise arise from the enlargement of the lungs. Col. Montgomery was shot in a duel about a dog; Col. Ramsey in one about a servant; Mr. Featherstone in one about a recruit; Sterne's father in one about a goose; and another gentleman in one about an acre of anchovies; one officer was challenged for merely asking his opponent to enjoy a second goblet; another was compelled to fight about a pinch of snuff; Gen. Barry was challenged by Capt. Smith for declining wine at a dinner on a steamboat, although the General had pleaded as an excuse that wine invarriably made him sick, and Lieut. Cowther lost his life in a duel, because he was refused admittance to a club of pigeon shooters. In 1777, a duel occurred in New York City, between Lieut. Featherstone, of the 76th, and Capt. McPherson, of the 42nd British Regiment, in regard to the manner of eating corn, one contending that the best eating was from the cob, and the other that the grain should be cut from the cob before eating. Lieut. Featherstone lost his right arm, the ball shattering the limb dreadfully, so much so that it had to be amputated. Graham, Major Nozh's assistant Editor on the National Advocate, lost his life in 1827, at the dueling ground in Hoboken, with Barton, the son-in-law of Edward Livingstone, in a simple dispute about "what was trumps" in a game of cards.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Night Watchman of the Caledonia Paper Mills Boiled alive.

One of those accidents so horrible

in their details as to sicken the sensibilities of the reader, occurred at the Caledonia Paper Mills, at the foot of Market street, late Saturday afternoon. At about 3 o'clock Joshua Cummins, night watchman of the works, came to the building in an intoxicated condition, and the employees, fearful he would meet with a mishap of some kind if he remained in that state, put him out and started him toward home, corner of Blackford and North streets. Nothing more was seen of him until about 4:20 o'clock, when the workmen in the tub house, four or five negroes, were startled by a cry that almost froze the blood in their veins. Well they knew what it meant-some unfortunate had fallen into one of the vats used for steaming the straw before reducing it to pulp. Proceeding in the direction of the cry, they discovered Cummins in vat 4, striving to obtain a hold upon the edge of the staves and pull himself out. The vat is ten feet deep, and at that time contained two feet of "mash' and two feet of water, the whole mass being boiling hot. One of the work-men grasped the hand extended by Cummins, but the cuticle peeled off in his hand and poor Cummins fell into the seething hell again, this time flat on his back. The poor man struggled to his feet again, and again succeeded by almost miraculous means in getting held of the stave edges with his hands. This time the workmen pulled him out by his coat sleeves. He was at once removed to his residence, and Dr. Prunk called in to attend him. The flesh was literally boiled upon his bones, he having been in the vat as much as four minutes, and when his clothing was removed almost the entire cuticle came with it. Evervthing was done to alleviate his sufferings that science and skill could suggest, but nothing seemed able to quiet him. He lay writhing in the greatest agony for ten hours, throwing his arms about his head in the delirium of his pain, scattering shreds of flesh and skin over the room-a sight to horrible to witness-when, at 1:30

It is supposed that after Cummins left the mill the first time, he went across the canal and went to sleep on the bank. Becoming chilled he awoke, and returned to the mill for the purpose of warming himself, but remembering his expulsion from the front door, he went to the north and rear end of the building, where are situated the vats, four in number. Mounting the step leading to them he reached the board walk alongside of and connecting them, upon which the ten-ders stand while engaged at work. The workmen at the time being engaged at the other end of the room, were unable to see him, owing to the dense steam arising from the vats, and were ignorant of his presence, until made aware of it in the terrible manner stated.

We do not say this to perpetuate cumity and strife between the North and the South, or that we would withheld, for one moment, the rights and privileges secured by our government to any man who was in the rebel army, if he accepts the situation and deciares his intention of obeying its laws. We are in favor of promoting a good feeling between the people of different sections of our country, by every means effectual and honorable Lat do not believe in doing that which is not desired by the Southern people, and which would be distasteful and obnoxious to nearly every citizen living in the North.

It is well enough for Mr. Summer to show the people of the South the enormity of their past crimes against the government, to teach them wherein they erred, and to induce them to come with contrite hearts and ask, in sincerity, for forgiveness, and to pledge anew their loyalty to our Republic. He can then appeal to the people of the North to deal mercifully with them, and to restore them to their confidence and fellowship in common with every other American citizen. In doing this, however, we need not forget or be unmindful of the hardships, privations and sufferings endured by our boys in blue, or depreciate the blessings secured to us and our pesterity by their bravery and patriotism. The feelings of hostility and prejudice that were created by the bloody struggle, will die out when the suspicions and distrustfulness which they create are no longer necessary, if not agitated unwisely or made the subjects for legislative dis-

There are yet too many things that constantly remind us of the terrible conflict. The "empty sleeve" still proclaims the sad casualities of war; the scarred brow tells of the passing shot or the blending saber cut; the still pale and emaciated form declares the horrors of an Andersonville or a Salisbury; the thousands of widowed mothers and orphan children; the mourning at the hearth-stone of nearly every family in the North; all these are yet too plainly visible to permit the people to do an act that will obliterate any of the glory and honor that should justly attach to those who procured for us the peace and happiness we now enjoy as a nation, at such a fearful sacrifice. It is a satisfaction to know that in this instance the Senate of the United States rejected, by a decided vote, the proposition of Mr. Sumner, and that resolutions of censure were offered in the Legislature of his own State, declaring that the Senator does not truly represent the feelings of that great Commonwealth on this subject. We may forgive but we can never forget. We may forgive the South for her attempt to dissolve this Union, but we can never forget the valor, the bravery, the patriotism of those who tore themselves away from the embraces of their families, slighted the smile of beauty, despised the allurements to fortune, and exposed themselves to the miseries of a bloody, cruel war for the preservation of the life of our nation.

THE CREDIT MOBILIER SCANDAR. The accumulating gossips and testi-mony reported in reference to the investigation of the Credit Mobilier will convince the people that all examina-tions of this kind should be public and not conducted in secrecy. Eager reporters who feel it their duty, and as evidences of their shrewdness, to send to their respective papers for publica-tion reports of these proceedings, which are in fact often the merest presumption, creatures of their own invention, serve to create wrong impressions in regard to those really guilty and deserving of censure, and injuring those who are entirely blameless and innocent. In the present case the people were so well satisfied of the invention of the abovers against centary justice of the charges against certain of our public men, that it was thought that the proposed investigation would be only a formal proceeding to acquit these gentlemen officially. The moment, however, it was decided to conduct the inquiry in secret, suspicion was aroused, and the bits of testimony which have been stolen, have given the affair a worse look than when the investigation first began, although nothing absolutely has been exposed.

Justice to the innocent members of Congress, and to the American people demand that the facts in relation to demand that the facts in relation to this matter should be fully exposed. What reason can there be for conducting an inquiry of such an important nature within closed doors?

An investigation into this matter will not damage members of Congress not connected with this alleged fraud, and the people have a right to know the ground of desertion.

OSAGE MISSION, Dec. 14, 1872. EDS. RECORD :- On the 26th ult. I started for Chicago; from there I went to Cairo, and then took a boat for Columbus, Ky., and thence by railroad to Memphis, Tenn. The train for Little Rock starts from Memphis, crossing the river on a hoat. For the first forty miles the country is low, flat and swampy. The first town on the Little Rock road is Madison forty miles from Memphis. There is not much good country between Memphis and Little Rock. From Little Rock I went to Rt. Smith, but saw no country that suited me as well as northern land. Corn yields about twenty bushels to the acre, and wheat Cotton is the leading crop. I traveled through Pope County, where fifteen men have recently been killed. Nearly all the men in Arkansas carry revolvers. The election of State officers is not settled yet, both parties claiming the majority, I also traveled 160 miles through Indian Territory, which has the appearance of Southern Kansas.

Yours truly, J. C. COVENEY.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS. The following vote on the several Constitutional Amendments is not fuly correct, as some counties had not made returns up to the 14th inst. The vote as returned we give below:

Legalizing Railroad Aid Bonds Yes 41,684 Legalizing Railroad Aid

The total vote in Michigan, this year, was about 4,500 less than in 1868, Mr. Greeley receiving 19,000 fewer votes than did Mr. Seymour, while General Grant's vote increased-went into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency Appropriation cill and passed it A Sad Scene: It was on a pleasant morning in November that the melancholy event, of which I am about to give a brief account, transpired; an event which will long be remembered. The sun arose in his splendor shedding beams. of light over the earth, and bringing joy and gladness to all, save one sad group. The birds were warbling their sweetest notes. The leaves, tinged by the frosts of autumn, gave a brilliancy to the scene. All nature looked beautiful. One could hardly realfize as he gazed upon the beautiful prospect before him, that a sight so solemn was soon to occur. But as the hour approached the scene was changed. The sun which had arisen so clear and beautiful now refused to shine, and voiled his face behind the clouds. Not a breeze stirred the air. The leaves hung motionless as if in sorrow. The clouds expressed their grief in rainy tears. All nature seemed to sympathize with the young man in his approaching doom, with the friends in their sad bereavement. After all was over the sun again unveiled his face, and all looked bright and joyous as before, save the few friends who were made desolate by the untimely fall of one of their number. That one so gifted and once, happy, (and still might have been, had he not forsaken the path of rectitude) should meet with such a fate is enough to touch a heart though hard as adamant. Oh, that he had heeded the advice and admonition of kind and loving friends! But no! A father's advice, a mother's counsel, a brother's admonitions, a sister's pleadings and a friend's entreaties were all unheeded. At last the fated morn arrived. The condemned partook sparingly of the frugal meal which had been prepared for him. The time was fast approaching when he must bid farewell to old friends and companions, and change his present state for another. Oh, how he dreaded that awful moment! . Yet he longed to have it over, all over at last. The hours rolled around, and the poor victim was taken to the place appointed. The moment came, and he was told to prepare for the last sad act. Fond friends gathered around to say the sad adieu; the pastor performed the last sad rites; the fatal knot was tied, and he was launched into-matrimony! Now, all ye bachelors, take warning from the sad fate of this young man. His name is withheld out of regard for the feelings of his friends.) Hadhe heeded the counsel given, he might still be enjoying all the pleasures of bachelorhood. But he has launched his bark on, that tempestuous sen, called matrimony, noted for its squalls and shipwrecks. And others will meet the same fate unless they stop in their mad career. Their actions show plainly whither they are tending. Alas! how many who in their youth started out with high hopes and aspirations, waters, found a returnless shore! How often has a talented youth, who was his father's pride and his mother's joy, fallen into this gulf of dark despair!

Do not, I beseech you, leave the peaceful shores of bachelordom for the troubled waters, where all your hopes will be dashed upon the breakers. Those who sail upon this sea never return. Its waves overwhelm them, and they are lost forever. They never again see the peaceful shores of bachelorhood. The bachelor has pleasures others know not of. Do not for-COELEBS,

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE, DEC. 18 .- Bills introduced

Dayton, Mich., Dec. 1872.

By Frelinghuysen, that all official con-racts, etc., of any Indian superintendent, agent, or sub-agent shall be open to public inspection, and that the distribution of Indian supplies shall be publicly made, and that no vouchers shall be signed in blank; by Harlan, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate with the Creek Indians for the cession of their reservation. The death of Senator Garrett Davis, of Kentucky, was formally announced, and, eulogies delivered by a number of Sena-tors. Bill passed authorizing the East Chester National Bank, Mount Vernon, Tod., to change its location and name.

HOUSE, DEC. 18.—A bill was passed authorizing the Comptroller to investigate the condition of the savings banks of the District of Columbia. The death of Senator Garrett Davis was announced, and the customary resolutions were passed. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency Bill, the main item of controversy being the appropriation of $1,241,920 for the improvement of Government property in the District of Columbia. The House resumed the bill concerning a settlement with the States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois of the two per cent. land claim under the act of March 3, SENATE, DEC. 19.—The Judiciary Committee reported adversely on the bill allowing women in the Territories to vote and hold office. The Committee on Postal Affairs reported the Postal Telegraph bill, known as the Hibbard bill, with some modifications. It provides for the establishment of telegraph post offices at all offices on the present telegraph routes; and at all other offices where the postmaster's salary amounts to $300, and at other places where the wants of business require The Postmaster General is authorized to contract with the Postal Telegraph. Company for the postal telegraph service for a term of ten years, and may take posses-sion of the lines in case of failure of the company to perform the contract, and shall have the right to provide new lines, etc. The capital stock of the company shall consist of $20,000,000, to be increased. ed to an amount equal to the cost of lines hereafter purchased or constructed. The telegraph companies in operation will be allowed to sell to the company at a valua-tion to be fixed by five appraisers appoint-ed, two by the Postmaster General, two by the seller and the fifth by the four. The Company is also authorized to establish offices independent of those established by the Postmaster General. Mr. Sherman called up the bill authorizing an exchange of registered coupon bonds.

HOUSE, DEC. 19 .- Holman's amendment to the District of Columbia. Appro. home, s. frightful corpse.—Hartford priation Bill, prohibiting the incurring of Day Spring. Such a gigastic swindle.

-Andrew J. Templeton, convicted in the Saginaw Circuit Court of murder in the second degree in the poisoning of a Mr. Sterrater, and sentenced yesterday by Judge Moore to confinement at hard labor for life, arrived last night in charge of the Sheriff of that county. Templeton presists in his innocence of the charge, and says he has means to carry his case to the Supreme Court.—Jackson Citizen.

-Burr Jennings, of Paw Paw township, has just received a patent for a new Washer said to be just the thing. -True Northerner.

-Mr. Valentine Smith of Porter, a brakeman on the M. C. R. R. was killed near Homer, on Wednesday night. The cars started suddenly, which caused him to lose his balance, and he fell between the cars.-Lawton Tribune, 20th.

-A countryman called at one of our stores the other day, and purchased a pack of cards, a Bible and a pint of whisky and went on his way rejoicing. He evidently had an eye single to his spiritual interests.—Albion Recorder.

The Jackson Citizen says that Mr. Samuel B. Robinson, a drayman, was crossing the railroad, a freight train unobserved by him came swiftly down, and the horses becoming frightened wheeled half round, when the train struck one of the horses and killed it, and badly injured the other.

Mr. R. was also hurt slightly. The draw was also burt slightly. dray was damaged to the extent of $45 or $50 and the loss of his team, which though somewhat wild were serviceable, and valuable, will be a sad blow to Mr. Robinson, who is one of the most prompt and efficient of our city draymen.

There was a man killed near the Iron Works, on Friday, by the caving of an embankment under which he was at work. We are unable to ascertain his name. Frankfort Express.

-Mrs. Robert Irish, whose son was mrs. Robert Irish, whose son was killed by the boiler explosion on Thursday morning, dreamed the night before, that the accident would happen and requested her son, that morning, not to go near the mill. The young man laughed at the delusion of his mother, and started for the ill-fated mill. His mother followed him out upon the stoop, and again requested him to stay away, as she was mysteriously impressed that the calamity would happen that morning. In 20 minutes after her boy was brought

-The steamer Reynolds, of the Bay City & Pine River route, was burned last night at one o'clock; while laying at her dock. Preparations were being made to lay her up. The fire is supposed to have originated in the engine room. She is a total loss. Insurance not known .- Saginaw Enter-

-"Did the fire bell ring ?"-Such was the question put to his mother this forenoon by Fritz Simon's little four-year-old boy, after he had accidentally fallen into a pail of boiling water. Fortunately Mrs. Simons was close at hand, and hastened to his rescue. The poor little fellow was quite badly scalded on the lower part of his back, yet upon being taken out of the pail, had the courage as well as the precocity to ask his mother, "Did the fire-bell ring?" Pretty cute for a youngster. He is doing well.—Saginaw Republican.

-The clothes lines of George Jackson and Mrs. Harding, a widow woman, at White Pigeon, were stripped on Monday evening last. All the clothes hanging were taken. On the same evening the clothes line of Mr. Simon Cotherman in Constantine was stripped by a clothes thief .- Constantine Mercury, 3d.

-The homeliest man in town is to have a large German chromo, elegantly framed, given him at the Fair next Thursday evening. Who that man is it is not yet decided, but anybody who has an opinion about it, can express that opinion as often as he chooses, at ten cents a time. Three Rivers Reporter.

-We are pained to learn that Geo: W. Barber, of the township of Marshall, was dangerously gored by a bull, this morning, whilst leading him to water, and that his injuries will probably prove fatal.—Marshall Expounder.

RUNAWAY.—Quite an exciting runaway occurred in town on Wednesday of last week. The horse of Mr. A. Sherwood ran away hitched to a cutter. The horse came down Front St. on double quick, having ran around two squares, and when at the post office turned in and took the sidewalk for one block, leaving the cutter, and was headed off at the livery stable of Proud & Pease. It was one of those fortunate runaways, no damage being done except breaking the thills on the COLD .- The thermometer stood at 23° below zero last Sunday morning at half past five o'clock, and continued so till half past six, when it began to rise gradually. At ten o'clock it was still 10° below zero. This is the coldest weather that we have had for many winters. The storm last Saturday, Sunday and Monday, for severity has seldom been equaled in this country. On Tuesday the morning was clear and cold. The thermometer marked, at six o'clock, 16° below zero; at 6:30, 18°; at 7 o'clock, 20°, and at 7:25, 24° below zero. This was still 1° colder, by the same thermometer in the same location, than on Sunday morning.

INSURANCE.—To all parties interested in sound Insurance Companies, we would say, that the Ætna, of Hartfort, the Old North America, of Philadelphia, The Underwriters' Agency of New York and the Imperial of London, have all come out of the Boston fire triumphant, and fully able and willing to pay the last dollar of their losses, as they did in the Chicago fire. These Companies offer reliable indemnity to all who desire to insure their property. D. A. WAGNER, Agt., Buchanan.

THE JUBILEE of the New York Observer is to be celebrated by the issue of a valuable illustrated Jubilee Year-Book, which the publishers propose to send free to every subscriber. The Observer has completed its 50th year, and bids fair, judging from the great success attending its publication, to lead the Religious Press for another fifty years. We can safely say a good word for the New York Observer as a family newspaper of the first class, and one that, while in it will be found entertainment and instruction for every member of the household, will always tend to promote those principles that make valuable neighbors and good citizens. We advise our friends to subscribe for it, and secure the Jubilee Year-Book, gratis. $3 a year. Sidney E. Morse & Co., 37 Park Row, triumphantly justifies the claims of that periodical to hold rank as the foremost of the Mothlies. It contains nearly one hundred engravings, and is rich with every variety of entertaining, instructive, and seasonable reading matter. There is the usual variety of miscellaneous illustrated articles, poems, and stories. Besides three memorable serials by Charles Reade, Wilkie Collins, and Miss Thackeray, this Number contains two excellent short stories—"No. 289: A. vision, by Mrs. Frank M'Carthy, and "The Walking Boy," by Clara F. Guernsey. The Old Stager continues his Recol lections in a series of anecdotes of dueling in Washington-Congressional and otherwise. But it is useless for us to attempt to give a description of Harper's Monthly, of even one number; for in doing so we should occupy a full column. We can only say this that Harper's Monthly is one of the best if not the best Monthly in America. Subscribe for it and you will have a valuable periodical for 1873. Terms, $4 per year. A LARGE NUMBER of our delinquent subscribers have responded to our call for money and we trust many yet will do so before the year closes. There is one fact we wish to have clearly stated and distinctly understood. Before the close of another year we do not want a single subscriber on our list owing us for more than one year's subscription. We are going to make special effort during the coming year to collect all that is our due for the paper, and we want every subscriber o make provision for settling at least his back subscription. We need the money and must have it. It is far easier and better to pay for the paper every year than to wait two, three or five years, for it then amounts to a sum not so easily or willingly spared. During the past year we were to the expense and trouble of calling personally upon those living in the county who were more than one year in arrears on our subscription list. A large majority of them we found to be responsible, active business men who promised to pay what they owe and as far in advance, by the 22d of the present month. They have failed to do as they agreed. You cannot ask us to be more lenient with you than we have been. If you do, we cannot consistently with other obligations we are under. Let every man make up his mind that his paper will be paid

I lave to think that what seems to be the mystery of the silence of death, the invelopes so many that we lov-in a carch, is not really a mystery. Our friends are separated from us be-cause they are higher than our facul-tics can go. Our child dies. It is the last we see of him or her. He is lifted so far -above us that we cannot in low him - He was our child. He was cradled in our arms; but instantly, in the twinkling of an eye, God took him up in his own sphere. And we see him not. But it is because we ere not yet developed enough. We can see no spiritual things with carnal vith us here, who have gone beyond us, and whom we cannot see, are still ours. They are more ours than they ever were before. We cannot comtruno with them as we once could. legause they are infinitely lifted above those conditions in which we are able to commune. We remain here, and are subjects to the laws of this realm. They are gone where they speak higher Inguage, and live in a higher sphere. But this silence is not the silence of vacuity, and the mystery is not the mystery of darkness and death. Theirs is the glory; ours is the waiting for it. Theirs is the realization; ours is the immaturity striving to be given. And when the day ing to be ripe. And when the day comes that we shall disappear from these earthly scenes, we shall be joined to them again; not as we are—for we shall not be then as we were but as they are with God. Reeping the Sabbath.

The Synod of Baltimore, at its late meeting, adopted the following minute in relation to the sanctification of the Lord's Day, which is applicable to other cities:

"The Synod of Baltimore, observing with deep solicitude the increasing inroads upon the sacredness of the Sabbath now being made by those who would willingly reject its divine authority, desires earnestly and tenderly to remind every Christian professor in the churches under its care of his privileged and perpetual obligation to stand firm against every such inroad, open or concealed, and to maintain the sacredness of the day of holy rest, in his individual acts, in his household, and in the community where his lot is cast. Especially does the Synod enjoin upon all under its care to refrain from participation in parades, processions, and unnecessary appointments for funerals, and from traveling on the Sabbath, and from the reception and use within our households of Sunday newspapers, so called, unfittuary and descerating the day. Se shall keep my Sabbaths, saith the Lord. ting them for the worship of the sanc-

Evening.

There are two periods in the life of man in which the evening hour is peculiarly interesting—In youth and old age. In youth we love it for its mellow moonlight, its millions of Stars, its thin, rich, and shooting shades, its still serenity; amid those who can commune with their loves, or twine the wreaths of friendship, while there is none to bear us witness but the heavens and the spirits that hold their endless Sabbath there-or look into the deep bosom of creation, spread abroad like a canopy above us, and look and listen till we can see and hear the waving and melting songs of other worlds. To youth, evening is delightful; it accords with the flow of is high spirits, the fervor of his fancy, nd the softness, of his heart. Eveling is also the delight of virtuous ye; it seems an emblem of the tran-Jose of busy life. The reputation Dr. Price has acquired by candid, honest dealing, and years of successfel practice has induced unprincipled persons to copy and imitate him as far as they dare, in order to deceive. Let it be remembered that no person in he west is treating. Chronic Diseases similar to Dr. Price—that his practice is not one of experiments, but founded, on they laws of Nature with years of experience and evidence to sustain it. That it does, not tear down to build, up—make sick to make well—no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed no guess work; but knowledge gained by years of experience, in the treatment of these diseases exclusively; ino-encouragement without a prospect. Candid, in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know, everything; or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call; investigate before they abandon hope! make interrogations, and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits will be made repularly.
