Poetry.

I promised to tell all their fortunes,
As they gathered around me in glee—
My half dozen fun-loving maidens, Grouped prettily under the tree.

"O will you, you dearest old Gipsey?"
The children all cried in a breath; Do give us something so splendid— Long life and—translation, not death."

Tell Helen's the last," said dear Lily, "For the best, you know, never comes first."
Tell mine, then, at once," rippled Minnie,
"And let us have done with the worst!

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of four hundred and fifty dollars, ($450), and interest on the same, at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, from the 28th day of May, 1870, to the date of this notice, which sum is claimed at this time to be due and unpaid, on a certain Mortgage and two notes accompanying the same, bearing date the 28th day of May, A. D. 1870, executed by Cyrus Swank to Henry A. Stough, both of the County of Berrien and State of Michigan, which Mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in the County of Berrien and State of Michigan, on the 28th day of May, A. D. 1870, in Liber Z. of Mortgages, on page 495, which said Mortgage and notes accompanying the same, were duly assigned by the said Henry A. Stough on the 18th day of September, A. And to Lily, so thoughtful for others, Give gold like a torrent of rain. "Give May a strange lamp, like Aladdin, And to Helen—why give what you will, For with her, 'tis according to proverb—

'All's grist that comes to her mill.'" 'I don't want a Baron," quoth Josie, "An artist is more to my mind."
"And a castle in Spain," pouted Emma "Is something that no one can find."

If I had the gold," echoed Lily, "I might be a miser, you know."
"While Aladdin's old lamp," chimed the May-"Might land me in far Jericho."

"And always to be at my grinding,
Though the grist were all of the best,
Is something not quite to my fancy,"
Said Helen, "if truth be confessed."

"See now," said gay Minnie, "this wonder—
People never like what they get;
And they never can get what they like either,
And so they just worry and fret."

A peal of the merriest laughter
At this rung out through the trees,
And echoing down through the wood's green aisle Was borne away on the breeze.

I gazed at the glowing young faces, In a silence half-born of my fears, As I wondered what each would inherit, In the vailed and far-away years.

Then giving the word to my wishes, That beautiful morning in June, I set all their life's happy poem,
To a perfect and rhythmical tune.

Some for that a mortal might covet.

Lay fair in the future of each, While some magic should give them the wisdom, That experience only can teach.

But my very own darling, was Helen, And while I asked gifts for the rest, My heart whispered earnestly always, "Dear Father, give her of Thy best." None of earth's glorious prizes, But that did she choose to possess, Lay clear in the range of my vision,

Through all the struggle and stress. The artist's ideals of beauty. The poet's possession of song,

The dreams of the sculptor embodied,

Or the joys that to science belong. Whatever of grace or of glory, Her effort might strive to attain, I fondly and foolishly fancied

Judge of Probate. The struggle could not be in vaiu. And now as I noted the shadows That played over each eager face, Fell over my darling's place. Then I smiled in my heart when I saw it, And turning aside from the rest, I said, "Thus, dear Lord, would I have it—

I knew not what I was asking, Or I surely, surely had known, That no life has only broad sunlight, Save life within sight of God's throne. But the sweet day passed, and the night came, And He put my love to the test, And somewhere up there 'mid the lilies, She lies like a bud on His breast.

"And what," do you ask of the others—
"Lily and May, and the rest?"
Ah well, they all have their treasures, But none, like my Helen, God's best !

MY WIFE LUCY.

To begin with, she was pretty-I don't know where to show you another just like her. She was well rounded in figure, with a fair face, golden hair, and soft, white hands. She had brown eyes, regular features, and mobile, red lips. On a rainy day, certain fine tresses of her shining hair would escape from the remainder, and curl about her temples in little gold tendril rings. Her voice was quiet and melodious, and she wore violet dresses. This is as well as I can describe her.

And I am afraid; this is about all I knew of her when we were married. We met first in Devonshire. Lwas alone in a strange place. She was an orphan, and teaching in a boarding school. She was gentle and sad. I made her acquaintance -I loved her. I promised to make her happy and we were married.

My south-western tour being ended we came and settled in Kensington. We had been married just a year when my story commences. I was young, just starting in life, and very much engrossed in my mercantile business. Neither was I a particularly demonstrative man, and as Lucy was very quiet and composed in mein, I think we hardly appeared like newly married

I had all confidence in my wife. It was her neatness, frugality and good judgment that won me, as well as herbeauty. All home affairs—the hiring of the servants, the domestic arrangements, household bills—I left entirely to her management. It was a great rest to leave my counting house and turn homeward, for I was sure of finding everything right. If Lucy had uny annoyances she never confessed them to me, and I never took home. my business troubles. As I said; we had been mairied a year, when one evening I came home, as usual. It had been a fine day, but splashed on my nose. I had ten min- low. utes' walk before me, and I commend | Slowly she gained strength. the drawer. When she had looked the drawer through she overlooked the table, and finally went to the escritoire. "What are you hunting for, Lucy?"

"Never mind," she said carelessly, "dinner is ready, Will." We went to the dining room. She chatted of the garden, and the incidents of the day. She had planted mignonette under the windows that its fragrance might come to her while she was working, she said. The Misses Grangers had called, and the man had been to graft the pear trees. Pleasant, ordinary talk, that suggested nothing of the mystery to come. The rain continued all night, but the morning was clear. I felt myself a very happy man as I stepped from the door into the balmy spring air: The tulips were in blossom, and the crocuses filled the whole garden with their fragrance. I walked leisurely down the path, unlatched the gate and went out. A few steps distant from the garden wall lay a sheet of paper. It looked like something that should not have been there, and I went and picked it up.

It was a single, square sheet of unruled paper, and the handwriting upon it was my wife's. As I looked at it a word here and there caught my eye. With arrested attention I commenced a careful examination of the sheet, and with some difficulty I read as follows:

"MY DEAREST PERCY:-Your entreaties, and my own heart, will not allow me to remain silent. My beloved, I am so miserable! These clandestine letters of yours which I receive are the only comfort in the world. I feed on them-live on them. They are the only brightness which illuminates my dark path. My life is almost insupportable. You know that I do not love my husband—that I der which I married him. Well, he is my husband now, and I try to be a good wife; but this existence is like some dreadful nightmare dream, Percy. It does not seem as if it could be me who lives and breathes, and answers to my name. I am so desolate mind in this dull, void living. when your letters come I am alive. feel that you love me; and I live and feel, and am exquisitely happy and miserable, both together. "My husband, as long as I perform my daily duties, is contented. He knows nothing of my feelings. He considers me a machine for his comfort. Sometimes I loathe him. Usually I am indifferent to him. But tonight it seems almost as if I dared escape to you. Freedom, love, happiness, oh, may it still be mine! Before long I will grant you an interview. I will promise you nothing more than that now. Percy, my only love, heaven bless and keep you until we meet. One word more. Percy, be cautious. If my husband should discover this correspondence, I cannot answer for the consequences. Though he has never ill-treated me I know him to be a hard man. But let me hear from you soon. Yours."

The name was illegible, for the sheet was much discolored and blotted by the rain. But it was Lucy's fine, delicate chirography; I felt as if a thunderbolt had broken around me.

After a moment's blank bewilderment, and a strange, bewildering pain, I put the sheet in my pocket and quietly continued my way. Such a flood of emotion was stirred up within me that I summoned a superficial calmness from an instinct of self-preserva-

I was conscious of a predominant feeling as I went to the city—hatred against my wife for her duplicity. I must have looked wretched when I reached the office but my partner was too excited to notice it.

"Knowles," he exclaimed, "there was a terrible fire in Birmingham last night, and our branch house is burned to the ground. Here is a dispatch from White. He wants you to run 'down immediately.''

In two hours I was on my way to Birmingham. There was much to do to restore our interests, and I lent myself to the work with all my energies. It was the best thing that could have happened to me. It gave me no time to think of Lucy. I wrote her once, telling her, very oriefly, that I should not be home for a month. It was six weeks before I again arrived in Kensington. "How is Mrs. Knowles?" I said to "Very comfortable. I think she is sleeping now, sir." Somewhat bewildered by this reply I went to the sitting-room. No sign of Lucy or her work. I mounted to her chamber and nietly opened the door. The room was darkened. Lucy was sitting up in the white bed, nursing an infant. Sweetly and calmly she extended her hand to me. I went to her-I put my arms about her-I kissed her. I could not help it, for I felt that the child upon her bosom was my own. The nurse came in, took the infant from her, and bade her lie down to rest.

She was very weak. I cannot express my contending feelings as I

"Where did you find this, Will? I lost it months ago.' "Under the garden wall. What does it mean, Lucy?" "Well," with a slight blush, "you have found me out. It's a leaf from the story I was writing."

"And Percy—" I said, bewildered.

"Was the hero. The sheet must have blown out of the window that rainy night, last spring. You see, dear, I didn't like to tell you, because I thought you would not fancy having a literary wife; but I had been accus tomed to writing little stories some times, and when I knew baby was coming I thought I would earn the money myself for her cambric dresses. I knew you needed every shilling in your business. I had to re-write this letter for my romance," she continued, "and I didn't get it quite the same," examining the sheet. I looked at her sweet face for a moment, and then fell down on my knees beside her. I confessed all. Slow amazement dawned in her countenance. At length her soft eyes filled with tears. She drew my face down to the bosom where the little babe was slumbering.

"Another lover?" she murmured. 'Why, Will, nobody but you ever loved me in all my life."

Then, I knew that she was once more My Wife Lucy!

Unuatural Conduct of a Daughter who Steals the Bed from under her sick Fa-ther and Deserts Him for her Seducer. —A Horrible Tale of Suffering. About 1 o'clock yesterday morning as officer Conant was patroling his beat on Michigan avenue, his attention was attracted by screams, as if from some person in distress, proceeding from a rickety tenement house, No. 211 Second street, on the alley benever loved him. You, only, know | tween Michigan avenue and Lewis the whole array of circumstances un- street. Upon reaching the house the officer found the outer door unlocked; and, groping his way up stairs in the dark, he struck a match and by its feeble light succeeded in finding a fragment of a tallow candle. Lying upon a bundle of rags in the corner was the emaciated form of a man and depressed—so despairing! I have about 40 years of age. He had no the feeling, sometimes, that I am uncovering but a ragged quilt, and was der a spell; that my faculties are par-. in the last stages of a severe illness, alyzing; and that I shall lose my | brought on by inflammation of the

Although very feeble, the man, who said his name was Johnson, managed to tell the officer the outlines of a most horrible tale of suffering. He said that he was a widower, his wife having died about a year ago, and that he had been living in the house with his only child, a girl of about sixteen years, as his housekeeper. About a month ago he was taken sick and the scanty hoard of money which he had put by in case of need was soon exhausted for medicine and doctor's bill. The daughter, it seems, had become infatuated with a worthless fellow whom she had met at a ball a few weeks before, and the result was that they were soon on terms of criminal intimacy. The father suspected this and forbade the visits of the scoundrel, but being confined to his bed he was, of course, powerless to prevent the girl from meeting her seducer clandestinely.

Things went on in this way until last Saturday evening when the girl and her "friend" administered ether to Johnson, and when he was insensible transferred him from the bed where he was dying to the pile of rags in the corner. They then took every article of furniture, including the bedstead, stove, chairs-absolutely everything in the house—and loading it upon an old one horse sleigh, which they had at the door, transferred it to a dive somewhere on the "Potomac" quarter, where it is said they are living together. The unnatural daughter placed a jug of water and a loaf of bread on the floor within her father's reach and then left him to die or to recover as fate should decide. When the invalid regained his consciousness, and realized that he had been robbed and deserted by his only child the shock was too much for him, and he became delirious, in which condition he remained he scarcely knows how long. Johnson told the officer that he had often cried for help, but his voice was so feeble that nobody heard him and no help came. The officer's warmest sympathies were aroused by the unfortunate man's terrible appearance and condition, which spoke even louder than the recital of his sufferings, and, notwithstanding the lateness of the hour, he went to the house of Poormaster Willard, who gave an order for Johnson's admission to one of the hospitals. Upon returning to the house he was found too weak and exhausted to be his wife wants one; or the children are moved at that late hour, and the officer procured two old women to sit up with Johnson and take care of him until morning, when he was taken to St. Mary's Hospital. The unfortunate man lies in a very critical condition, and it is feared that he will die. The case is a horrible one in all its circumstances, and shows a depravity on the part of the daughter which seems almost incredible.

SMILE WHENEVER YOU CAN. When things don't go to suit you, And the world seems upside down, Don't waste your time in fretting, But drive away that frown; Since life is oft perplexing, 'Tis much the wisest plan To bear all trials bravely, And smile whenever you can.

Why should you dread to-morrow And thus despoil to-day? For when you borrow trouble You always have to pay.

It is a good old maxim,

Which should be often preached:

Don't cross the bridge before you,]

Until the bridge is reached.

You might be spared much sighing If you would keep in mind The thought that good and evil Are always here combined. There must be something wanting, And though you roll in wealth, You may miss from your casket, That precious jewel—health.

And though you're strong and sturdy, You may have an empty purse, And earth has many trials Which I consider worse! But whether joy or sorrow Fill up your mortal span, 'Twill make your pathway brighter To smile whene'er you can.

Newspaper Subscribers.

The following classification of newspaper subscribers we take from the Prairie Farmer :

UPRIGHTS.—These are men who take newspapers, pay for them, and read them. Observe the order in which these things are done: the pay comes first—the reading next. These men consider they get the worth of their money in the bargain. It seems as fair and just to them that the newspaper should be paid for, as a barrel of sugar or a new coat. They never entertain any other opinion. When the year runs out, or a little before, they are on hand with the pay. There is no more difficulty with them in remembering this period than Sunday or the first of January. If one of them wishes to stop his newspaper he either calls or writes a letter in due season, like a man. This class is dear to the heart of the editor. Their image isembalmed in his warm affections. May they live a thousand years, and see their sons' son to the fourth generation. The second class now in mind

Do Wells.—This class is nearly elated to the other—so near that it is hard to tell where one begins and the other ends. These men always pay in advance in the beginning, and intend to do so continually. But memory fails a little, or some mishap intervenes, and the time runs by-sometimes a little-sometimes for quite a period. But their recollection, though nodding a little, never gets sound asleep. It pronounces the words in due time, "The printer is not paid," and forthwith their will to do well kindles into activity. Now comes the paying up-"Meant to do so beforedon't mean to let such things pass by. A publisher can live with such men. They have a warm place in his memory-only a little back on the uprights. If such a man dies in arrears, his wife or son remembers that he may not have paid up for his newspaper and forthwith institutes inquiries. They remember that part of the benefit was theirs, and estate or no estate, see that printer's bills are not among their father's unsettled accounts. Next comes the Easy Doers.—These men believe in newspapers. They have fully settled it in their own minds that a newspaper is a good thing. They take them, too. Sometimes at first they pay up for the first year-at any rate they mean to, pretty soon. If they have done so, they sit down with the comforting conviction that their paper is now settled for; and this idea having once got into their heads, refuses obstinately to be dislodged, but keeps its hold from year to year-a truth once-now an illusion, grey and rheumatic with years. The editor, marking the elongated and elongating space in the account current of their dollars, begins to ask if they are dead or have gone to California. Now he begins to poke bills at them. They suddenly start up to the reality that they are in arrears; and like men as they are at the bottom pay up. They never dispute his bill—they know books tell better stories than moss covered memories. If the publisher has faith enough, or a long purse, and. can live a hibernating boar, he may survive this class. But if he is mortal only, woe be to him. The next class is that of the Down HILLERS .- Here we begin to slide over to the other side. The picture suddenly gets somber. We shall dispatch the down-hillers suddenly. One of these may take a paper because zealous to read it, or a neighbor persuades him. When it begins to come he dismisses all thought about it further. If the editor sends a man directly to him at the end of two or three years, he may get some pay for his paper, but with growls and surly looks. He never pays any debt if he can get rid of it, and a newspaper last of all. Still, he hates lawsuits, constables; and all that. A dun has the same effect on him that a bullet does on a hippopotamus—glancing from his | spring of the year, before the coat is hide, or sinking into the blubber harmless. He is always sliding down hill, and soon merges into another class

The Head After Severation. No one will envy the task which two French surgeons lately set themselves experimenting upon the severed head of a guillotined criminal, in order to test the truth of certain stories, lately revived, about dismembered faces showing signs of life. Yet it was well the work should be done, and the results obtained are valuable, as confirming former opinions upon the entire untruthfulness of the reported manifestations. The head examined was received from the executioner within five minutes after its severation, and the tests for symptoms of sensation were made immediately. The face was bloodless, the features were rigid, eyes open, mouth gaping, and the expression was one of stupor, not of pain. To ascertain if sense existed, the ear was cleansed and the name of the criminal was shouted into it; but no feature moved. Next ammonia was placed under the nose; there was no contraction of the nasal muscles.

Then a candle was held close to the eyes; but neither this nor subsequent cauterizations by nitrate of silver caused the pupil to alter its condition. Evidently the brain was not susceptible of receiving and conveying impressions. All was dead. Electricity was applied, and it moved the facial muscles, but only on the side sub. jected to it; and it was quite evident that the brain had no connection with these actions, for afterward the skull was sawn through and the brain removed, and yet the galvanic current excited the muscles to motion as before. The experimenters assert that the brain becomes insensible at the instant of execution, in consequence of the sudden arrest of circulation and the resulting syncope.

Don't Depend on Father.

Stand up here, young man, and let us talk to you. You have been trusted alone the contents of your father's purse, or his fair fame, for your influence or success in business. Think you that father has attained eminence in his profession by unwearied industry? or that he has amassed a fortune honestly without activity? You should know that the faculty requisite for the acquiring of fame or fortune is essential to, nay, inseparable from the attainment of either of these. Suppose father has "rocks" in abundance, if you have never earned anything for him, you have no more business with the "rocks" than a gosling has with a tortoise. And if he allows you to meddle with them before you have gained them by your own industry, he perpetrates untold mis-chief. And if the old gentleman is lavish of his cash toward you, while he is allowing you to while away your time, you had better leave him; yes, run away, sooner than be an imbecile, or something worse, through so corrupt an influence. Sooner or later you must learn to rely on your own resources, or you will not be anybody. Begin now, lest Father Time, in his rapid flight, should pause and seal the stigma of failure on your brow.

CREDIT MOBILIER.

We are often asked the question, "What is this Credit Mobilier, any way?" We generally reply that, "It is a ring within a ring." For the benefit of our readers we propose to give a brief sketch of the "Credit Mobilier of America," so far as we have been able to ascertain its peculiar characteristics. Then our readers will be able to understand whether our definition, "a ring within a ring," is correct.

In 1859 an organization was incorporated, known as the "Pennsylvania Fiscal Agency." This Incorporation numbered among its first members a number of leading Democrats, who were active politicians, among whom were Duff Green and Asa Packer. The privileges of this "Fiscal Agency" were to buy and sell railroad bonds, advance money to railroads, and such like business. Its stockholders were not individually liable under the charter. The capital stock was fixed at $5,-000,000, but business could be commenced as soon as $500,000 of the capital was subscribed, and $25,000 actually paid in.

The company accomplished little at this early period, the breaking out of the war preventing, as the South was company's operations.

in 1864 a majority of the stock was purchased by Thomas C. Durant, George Francis Train and other parties. The name was changed from the "Pennsylvania Fiscal Agency" to the "Credit Mobilier of America." In 1865 Oakes Ames and John B. Alley, wealthy men, and Congressmen from Massachusetts, secured the principal part of the stock. Congressmen were large stockholders in the Union Pacific R. R. Co.

At this point began the work of a "ring within a ring." This Credit Mobilier took hold to build the Union Pacific R. R. Its contracts covered 914 miles of that road. . This of course was all right, but when it is understood that the officers of the Credit Mobilier and the officers of the Union Pacific Railroad Company were the same, then it appears how the Union Pacific R. R. was swindled by the Credit Mobilier. The Railroad company through its officers contracted with the Credit Mobilier to build the road. This contract was made with themselves (the officers in both cases being the same) at ex-horbitant prices. This explains how the Credit Mobilier was enabled to declare such dividends, their stock at this time was $3,750,000, and a dividend was declared for seven months following Dec. 12, 1867, of $3,375,-125 in money and $6,253,000 in bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad The stock, indeed, in the Credit Mobilier was very profitable, and, in point of making money, was a decidedly good investment. Undoubtedly Oakes Ames desired to get as many Congressmen into the "ring" as possible, for the very purpose of influencing future legislation. We have no doubt but that several Congressmen became interested in Credit Mobilier stock under the solicitation of Ames, in good. faith, without considering the character, or perhaps even thinking that its plan of operations was any thing other than legitimate and honorable. Some members no doubt fully understood the nature of the "ring" and lience kept entirely aloof therefrom, while some may have understood and still invested. This latter class should be made to feel the just indignation of the people: Thus it may be seen how a Congressman might in good faith have invested in Credit Mobilier stock, with out the least thought of such investment in any way having aught to do in influencing his future votes. And on the other hand it is easy to see how Credit Mobilier stock could have been accepted as a bribe in the interest of the officers of that Corporation. To our minds, the way to have proceeded with the Congressional investigation, as to the guilt or innocence of holding Mobilier stock, would have been, to look up the Congressional record, and see who had, and who had not, voted in the interests of the said. corporation. This, to our mind, would have shown who really held such stock as an influence on his vote, and who had not. But the simple fact of being the owner, at some time, of Credit Mobilier proves the holder thereof no more corrupt than the investing in any other kind of a speculation, from which a good interest was expected in return, proves corruption. The owners of this stock; who were members of Congress, and who had procured it in good faith, and afterwards learning its true character, still continued to hold the same and retain the dividends, over a reason-

SENATE, Jan. 28 .- The bill to incororate the Arkansas Valley and Cimarron Railroad Company, was reported. Bills were introduced amendatory of the act of April 1, 1872, authorizing the construction of a bridge at Clinton, Towa, and other bridges across the Mississippi; to pay Dr. Mary E. Walker for her services in the army. The Secretary of the Senate was directed to cause a statement to be prepared showing the action of the Senate and House of Representatives in examining and counting the electoral votes for President and Vice-President from 1789 down. A motion was agreed to striking out the appropriation of $22,500 for additional clerks and compensation in the Treasury Department. The death of Hon. Julius S. Strong, late Representative of Connecticut was announced. A motion to appoint a committee to investigate the charges circulated against the Vice President in connection with the Credit, Mobilier, which was offered at his request, was lost, only one Senator, the mover, voting in the affirmative. The House amendment to the oill providing for representation of the United States at the Vienua Exposition was concurred in. The bill to pay Japan for grounds in that country occupied by our Government for hospital purposes, was passed. The amendment to the Legislative Appropriation bill, providing that no udgment of the Court of Claims shall be paid except to persons whose loyalty proved, was agreed to. Sherman's amendment raising the salaries of Assistant Secretary, Solicitor, Register and Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, the Commissioners of Patents, of Indian Affairs, of Commerce, of Agriculture, of Pensions, and of the General Land Office, Auditor of the Treasury and Assistant Post-master General, and of the Superintendent of the Money Order Department and For-

SENATE, Jan. 29 .- A bill was report ed to provide for the preservation and care of the United States military cemetery near the City of Mexico. The Secretary of War was directed to inquire into the expediency of enlisting a company of Indian scouts to move against the Modocs. It was agreed that Mr. Cameron should move to take up the French Spoliation Bill as soon as the Legislative Appropriation Bill was disposed of. A motion to reconsider Sherman's amendment to the Legislative Appropriation Bill, increasing the salaries of assistant secretaries, etc., was lost. A motion to strike out of the bill $10,000 appropriated for extra postoffice clerks was agreed to. An amendment for reducing the force in the postoffice was agreed to.

HOUSE, Jan. 29.—The bill for the adnission of Colorado was laid on the table by a vote of 107 to 61. In the Florida contested election case the committee reported that Niblack was entitled to the seat. The report was agreed to. 'A report was received from the Credit Mobilier Committee that J. B. Stewart, of Washington, refused to answer questions put, on the ground that the answers would call out confidential communications; be-tween coursel and client, which were privileged. The committee moved for an order that the Sergeant at Arms, take Stewart into custody, subject to further order ol the House. An amendment to have Stewart brought forthwith before the House to show cause why he should not be commit ted to answer for contempt was agreed to, and the resolution as amended adopted.

That has given such Universal Satisfaction to Thousands that have used them since, their intreduction in April, 1870.

Having, in overy instance, produced a perfect cure is the worse cases of sore neck. The medicinal and cooling properties, with the advantage of always having a perfect, smooth surface, is a guarantee against chafing, and wik in all cases cure the most cirritated sore necks, as hundreds will restify that have given them a trial. All was ask of the most scrupulous is to give our Zinc Collar Pad a fair trial, as we feel confident in warranting them to deall we claim, and give satisfaction.

WHAT WE CLAIM.

First. Is the chemical action of the Zinc, with the seid and satine constituents of moist sores, resulting is an astringent, acting speedily on the edges of the wound, and by its smooth surface and cooling tendency, quickly produces a cure.

Skoon. It prevents, in all cases, the hame straps coming in contact with the neck or the hame strom contracting the top of the collar, and thereby pinching the cords of the neck, and is the culty Pad made that will not wear the hair on the neck.

Third. With the use of them you can work a rawnecked horse every day, and cure the worst cases in from six to ten days, as has been done in many cases furing the last season.

Fouris. It is the most durable Pad ever made.

We deem it unnecessary to udd other advantages, or even to add the numerous testimonials we have received during the short use of our Zinc Pad, and only ask that it may have a fair firial, feeling full confidence in the success of the goods.

THE CHRISTIAN UNION IS unquestionably the most popular religious journal published in America. It is however, unnecessary for us to say a word in its favor, as it is too well known to need a single word of praise. Under the editorial charge of Henry Ward Beecher, it has attained unprecedented popularity. The splendid Oleograph, which is furnished to each subscriber is really worth more than the subscription price. The "Little Runaway and her Pets," is the name of this superb picture. Each subscriber can have this beautiful picture or that exquisite pair, of Chromos, "Wide Awake" and "Fast Asleep, as he may choose. Last year there was great delay in receiving the pictures, after the subscribers had paid their subscription. Arrangements are made this year whereby the agent will deliver the pictures at the time the subscriptions are collected. Our townsman, Mr. R. H. Rogers, has the agency for Buchanan and Niles, and is now engaged in canvassing for the "Union" and is exhibiting the pictures.

BREEDSVILLE wants a paper publisher in that village. So does Watervliet. The people of Berrien Springs are also holding out inducements to have a paper started there. Every village of two or three hundred inhabitants, must have a paper. A good paper is of incalculable benefit to a place, but unless well patronized is not very profitable to those who own readers to give them in 1873 two volumes wind own it. Some one will yet start a paper in one of the above places. Its history, we imagine, will be as follows: Some two or three hundred subscribers will be obtained who expect to pay for the first year in wood, apples, potatoes, &c. Some advertisements will be inserted for the first year at half price just to give the paper at half price just to give the paper at that the end of the second or third year the editor will begin to remind those who proposed to bring wood, &c., to pay for their paper, and very soon he will receive word from many that they never subscribed for many that they never subscribed for the paper, and numerous notices the many that they never subscribed for the paper, and numerous notices the paper, and numerous notices in one of the above places. Its his tory, we imagine, will be as follows:

only thing of interest that developed itself was the manifest and determined opposition of a large portion of the old workers in the Republican ranks, against the ticket put in 'nomination on Friday. This feeling was not so much against the candidate as against the principle involved. The dea was repugnant to the sense of justice to kick out an old citizen who had done much for the village, and nominate a new man, and that too, one who had been a citizen of the county but a short time, his nomination being manifestly the result of his church connections. It is a fact we have noticed in our political experience, that so soon as members of any church abandon the just claims of others, and enter the political field and go simply for a man because he belongs to "my church," just that soon the public, the community, will, big bargains in both boots and shoes, in common parlance, "go for that church and their nominee." We say these things in all kindness and not > good of the entire community. One thing we trust our readers will bear in mind, that occupying the position we do, with an eye constantly looking to the good of the community, we shall only suggest and advocate the nomination and election of the best men for the respective positions, whether in Village, Township, County, State or National Government. This we shall try to do fearlesely, and shall not stop to inquire whether the man belongs to this church, or that church, or whether he is a member of any church, but, "under the circumstances that surrounds the peculiar case, is he the best man for the position?" If every Republican will do this, and spend as much time and money for the interest of Buchanan, and for peace and harmony as we have done, then will our caucus nominations be made in the interest of the whole, and of a few.

You want the RECORD to be a bold advocate of the right, and yet, if our views happen to cross your own, you would kick us out if you could. We rejoice that there are hosts of the citizens of Buchanan, that appreciate our labors and sacrifice to give to the Village and County a reliable Republican paper, one that will advocate only such men and measures as are honestly considered for the public good. We are well satisfied, if our suggestion as well as the suggestion of other old and reliable Republicans had been heeded, the result of the election on Saturday would have been very different. One lesson, we trust however, has been learned by the Republicans of the illage, i. e. those headstrong ones, who think all that is necessary is, by hook or crook, to secure a nomination, son is, that the Republican party is unrebuked any undue wire-pulling to position to the great majority of the voters of the party. We feel that we would not be doing the community justice nor the Republicans who re-

HOPE'S SONG.

I hear it singing, singing sweetly, Softly in an undertone; Singing as if God had taught it, "It is better further on !"

Nicht and day it sings the since song ; Sings it white I sit alone, Sings so that the heart may hear it, "It is netter further on!"

Size upon the grave and sings it. Sings it when the heart would groun, Sings it when the shadows darken, "It is better further on !"

"Further on ?" But how much further?".
Count the milestones, one by one;
No! no counting—only trusting,
"It is better further on!"

Have You a Safety-Lamp?

and labor amid the darkness of the rine, it is indispensable to their comfort and protection that they carry with them a light. But the lamp that is to afford them light, while it sends out its rays upon the dismal scene, must be so constructed as not to explode amid the damps and gasses-that abound, and thus prove more fatal than the darkness. Such is the famed safety-lamp. Let it be our teacher.

If it be necessary, as it doubtless is, that the Christian should go down from the light and wholesome atmosphere of direct religious devotion, and move about amid the darkness and damps of worldly affairs, he must carry a light there. But it is very far from a matter of difference how his lamp is constructed. No ordinary one, even though it were a model of earth-ly workmanship, will answer his purpose. The taper-light of nature, the rush-light of reason, the more pretending light of worldly wisdom, and even the blazing torch-light of a fer-vid imagination, are all equally at fault here. Even if they could sufficiently illuminate the place, none of them are protected from dangerous contact with those elements of moral death that reign in the world. We want a lamp that will not explode and jeopard our spiritual life when surrounded by such elements; one that shall give sure and steady light, and yet he a "safety-lamp." Where shall we find it? Inspiration tells us, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Then shalt thou walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble: When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid; yes, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet." "And thou shalt be secure, because there is hope; yes, thou shalt dig, and thou shalt take thy rest in safety."

Men of business, Christians, full of worldly cares, when you mingle with the dangerous elements, and are surrounded by the explosive air of earthliness, do you take this safety-lamp with you? Verily, there is no "safewithout it. How affecting are the proofs of this, as seen in dead, "twice dead," professors of religion, scattered, like wrecks upon the shore after a tempest, all along the thronged ways of busy life. Oh, if Christians, instead of descending from the mount of light and safety into the dim mines of darkness and danger without the heavenly lamp, would ever carry it with them when they must go down, and while there hold on to it and heed its directions, what a different picture would both the church and the world present. When will they learn how to unite industry, enterprise, patriotism, with a steadfast and consistent Christian fidelity? When will they learn that nothing can ever take the place of that "lamp" which Heaven, in infinite wisdom and kindness, has ordained to be their guide and their preservative amid the cares and distractions of worldly pursuits? Have you a safety-lamp?

A Beautiul Extract.

One fountain there is, says Miss Bremer, whose deepening vein has only just begun to throw up its silver drops among mankind—a fountain which will allay the thirst of millions, and will give to those who drink from it peace and joy. It is knowledge the fountain of intellectual cultivation which gives health to mankind; makes clear the vision; brings joy to his life, and breathes over his soul's destiny sweet repose. Go and drink there from, thou whom fortune has favored and thou wilt find thyself rich. Thou mayest go forth into the world and find thyself anywhere at home; thou canst enjoy thyself in thine little chamber; thy friends are everywhere around thee; nature, antiquity and Heaven are accessible to thee.

Eternity.

Eternity is a solemn word and a solemn world. The soul of man shrinks back with dismay and dread from entering that mysterious abode of spirits. And yet all are on their way to oternity and must soon enter it, and enter it alone. But how little think the gay and pleasure-loving who tread so near its dark shores, how soon they must launch away on that untried ocean !

We must consult the gentlest manners and softest seasons of address our advice must not fall like a violent storm, bearing down and making those to droop whom it meant to cherish and refresh. It must descend as the dew upon the tender herb, or like melting flakes of snow; the softer it falls, the longer it dwells upon and the deeper it sinks into the mine. If there are few who have the humility. to receive advice as they ought, it is often because there are few who have the discretion to convey it in a proper had humorous young man was driving a horse which was in the habit of stopping at every house on the road-side. Passing a country tavern, where were collected together some dozen countrymen, the beast, as usual, ran opposite the door, and then stopped, in spite of the young man, who applied the whip with all his might to drive the horse on. The men on the porch commenced a hearty laugh, and some inquired if hel-would sell the horse. 'Yes," replied the young man, "but I cannot recommend him, as he once belonged to a butcher, and he stops whenever he hears, the calves bleat." The crowd retired to the bar in silence.

-Josh Billings.

A German settler in Ohio, found guilty of selling liquor contrary to law, and sentenced to be imprisoned in the county juil for thirty days, protested as follows: "Chail! Go to chail! Me go to chail! But. I can't go! Dere's my pizness my bakery. Who bakes my bread when I bee's gone?" Then, casting his eyes about the court appealingly, they fell upon the good natured face of jolly- Chris Ellwaner, a fellow-countryman, who had no "pizness," and fortwith a brilliant idea struck him. Turning to the judge he said, in sober earnest; "Dere's Chris Ellwaner! He's got nothing to do; send him!"

CLUBS FOR EDITORS .- "Tommy, my son, what are you going to do with that club?" "Send it to the editor of course." 'But what are you going to send it to the editor for?" "Cause he says if anybody will send him a club, he will send them a copy of his paper." The mother came pretty near fainting, but retained consciousness enough to ask: "But Tommy; dear, what do you suppose he wants with a club?" "Well, I don't know," replied the hopeful urchin, "unless it is to knock down subscribers as don't pay for their paper."

A rusty-looking agriculturist entered a newspaper office recently, and after looking around earnestly enough to elicit an inquiry as to his business, said "it wasn't nothin' much; but he had left a big-cucumber here in the fall for a notice, and thought, as how he was in town, he might run in and get it, if he was through with

Now, my young friends, suppose twelve men buy twenty-four bushels of wheat to be equally divided, hw many bushels is that for each?" Boldest of the boys-"Please, sir, we've not gone that far." "How is that? Your teacher told me you had learned all the first four rules!" Boy -"Yes, sir; but we have always done our sums in potatoes or turnips—we never had wheat."

The Danbury News says: The remarks relatives and friends who attend a funeral make upon the merits of the deceased, are frequently instructive. At the funeral of an aged resident of Slawsons, Saturday, a neighbor feelingly observed that the departed wouldn't rafe and cuss about taxes any more;

We can remember poetry firstrate; but we can't always fasten the right poet to the right verse. It is Montgomery who says: "Leaves have their time to fall An' likéwise so've I;

The reason, too, 's the same—
It comes o gettin' dry.
But here's th' difference 'twixt th' leaves an' me:

Jones and Brown were talking lately of a young clergyman , whose preaching they had heard that day. preaching they had heard that which what do you think of him?" asked Brown. "I think?' said Jones, "the last two years ago." "Why, did better two years ago." "Why he didn't preach then ?" "True," said Jones, "that is what I mean."

'In London, no man eyer thinks of blacking his own boots,' said a haughty, Briton once to the late Mr. Lincoln whom he found blacking his calf-skin gaiters: "Whose boots does he black?" quietly responded Uncle Abe, as he spit on the brush.
