Poetry. and a second graph program of program program and the comment of t IUDGE NOT .- (AREPLY.)

BY W. H. BARNES, P. G. M. [The following lines are from the Heart and Hand, and were written in reply to Nev. Joseph Travis' "No Jesus There."]

And was that all the holy man Saw as he looked around? And how came he immaculate, . On such polluted ground? Did he not see Christian and Jew, And men of every creed, Upon a common platform meet, To succor those in need.

Did he not see in harmony Leaders in Church and State. With minor differences laid aside, In friendly tele-a-tele? Did he not mark the absence there Of all that petty strife That in the world so often mars A man's uncertain life?

Did he not hear the truth declared, "No sect or church are we, But a frienly band linked heart and hand, Bound in fraternity ?" Did he not see the Baptist there, Episcopalian true, The Presbyterian, Octhodox, Yes, and the Methodist, too ?

Does he not know, within a Lodge, Each brother's heart's his own; And no one dares to write the pravers For others to the Throne? A great, all-wise Omnipotence Is recognized by all;
Beyond this each one for himself
Must either stand or fall.

Odd Fellowship is of the earth, Claims not to be devine In either origin or works, But benefits mankind. A band of brothers laboring for The welfare of each other, Relieving sorrow, watching o'er The orphan and its mother.

To learn our secret art, Who said, "No, no, I'll not go in, For Jesus has no part."
We're told, too, of the traveler worn
Unaided, turned away,
Because he'd not the grip or sign, We'd not his grief allay. And then this holy (?) man exults

Ue says a Christian man was asked

That in the last great day, Thousands of mystic brethren shall, Rebuked, be sent away.
No Christian love marks his last yerse, His pen is dipped in gall, His soul seems watching for the day That shall engulf us all. He's not the first, nor will be last,

To tangle up his brain, In comprehending charity With its attendant train Some souls can never understand Beyond a one idea, But come with us and you will find No interference here. Cf every faith you here will meet Brothers to suit your mind; And others too, differing with you,

Will greet you, true and kind. They'll ask you not what is your creed, Or what ticket you vote, Or whether you till the soil for bread, Or wear a Judge's coat. You'll find divines who for long years,

Their lives to God have given, Who pilgrims through this vale of tears Are on the road to heaven. Men in whose heart a Christian's love Who serve with zeal and trusting faith, The Life, the Truth, the Way. Let vain presumptuous men forbear,

To judge fraternal ties; But ere our motes, remove the beam Obscuring their own eyes# Or else they may the error make The beloved one did of old. Who forbade a work, because the man Was not known in his fold.+

Bread to the hungry, drink to them That thirsteth here below; Is a command imperative, Sent to this field of woe; And when life's troubled waves are passed God judgeth every heart,
'Tis His blessed voice, and not a man's,

That says "Come" or "Depart."1 *Matt. vil., 1-5 †Matt. xxv., 34-16.

Story.

THE SIN OF SLANDER. The sin of slander is one of the most frequent, and at the same time one of the most heinous offences against mankind; and it is to be regretted that the means of its punishment are not more adequate and severe. The constitution of modern society is such that the observance of few precepts are more important to its well-being than that which admonishes us to say nothing of oneanother when we can say nothing good; yet the prevailing custom seems to have reversed this benevolent maxim in saying nothing unless we can say evil. And many carry this propensity so far that they will speak evil in preference to good, though they have to stain their own souls with sin, and their lips with falsehood, in order to do it. Byron, in his usual satirical strain says:

"Society is now one polished horde, Formed of two mighty tribes, the Bores and Bored."

Few had better reason than he to know that it is one huge "School for Scandal," an immense gossipping club, whose members are occupied in stabbing characters in the back, and whispering away reputations. habit of gossipping about other people, though it is often in a thoughtless manner, and with no criminal intention, is one which cannot be too earnestly deprecated. It is so universally prevalent, especially among women, that it would be a miracle for any social gathering, or meeting of a "Sewing Society" to occur in which some unbridled or venomous tongue did not blast some good name, and from which some wounded character was not borne poisoned by the breath of slander. Perhaps "Twas but a breath-And yet a woman's fair name wilted, And friends once warm were cold and stilted; One venomed word.

That struck its coward, poisoned blow In craven whispers, hushed and low; And yet the wide world heard. 'Twas but one whispered—one— That muttered low for very shame, The thing the slanderer dare not name ; And yet its work was done.

And yet so mighty, in its power,

A human soul in one short hour

A hint so slight

Lies crushed beneath its blight." Does the vile calumniator of another's fair fame ever pause to reflect against God and man? No commandment was thundered from Sinai with more awful and solemn meaning than the ninth: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." And yet no law of the Decalogue is violated with more frequent and open impunity, or leads to more serious results, heart burnings and revenge. For it is an injury for which the means of legitimate redress are so insufficient, that not unfrequently the injured party seizes the sword of justice in his own hand, and the report of a shocking murder stuns the or an Association of any kind, there ears of the community. Trembling society in startled fear arraigns the criminal and loudly demands the expiation of his offense; but does it ever pause in its virtuous haste to compare the magnitude of the crime of the murdered with that of the murderer? Is it morally any more criminal to break the sixth commandment than the ninth? Is it worse to murder than to bear false witness? It is true the "powers that be" are appointed to take cognizance of the violation of laws enacted for the wellbeing of society, and in their hands alone rest the dread issues of life and death; and no man is justified in usurping their prerogatives by taking the law into his own hands. But are not those powers sadly derelict in duty in throwing the invulnerable agis of the law about human life and property, while they leave that which is more valuable still, private character, reputation, and all that is most sacred to the sense of honor, exposed to the lowlest depredations of every evil and malevolent spirit? Truly, God has said: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood. by man shall his blood be shed:" but has not the same God said: "Whoso privily slandereth his neighbor, him will I cut off?" The one kills the body only, while the other destroys the soul. According to a modern poet, even the savage Cannibal can

"Never hold a candle To those prim, pale-faced people of propriety
Who gloat o'er gossip, and get fat on scandal—
The cannibals of civilized society—
They drink the blood of sisters with their rations And crunch the bones of living reputations They kill the soul; he only claims the dwelling, They take the sharpened scalpel of surmises, And cleave the sinews where the heart is swelling, And slaughter, Fame and Honor for their

The glanderer combines in his cha acter the nature of three of the worst species of criminals—the thief, murdercr, and bearer of false witnessand thus violates three of the ten commandments at once. He is of infamous and unenviable descent, for he is a "son of Belial," whom the Scriptures informeth us is the "father of liars." What better could be expected of one so closely allied to this accursed family? Pause, gossiper, when you are about to inflict your secret sting, and reflect upon the enormity of the crime you are about to commit. That you do it with a smiling face, or a good-natured sneer makes it none the less dark and infamous. The moment you slander your neighbor, that moment heaven brands your soul: "Murderer, Thief, Liar." The damning marks may not be imprinted in fiery characters upon your smooth brow or fair face; but Divine justice has burned them upon your secret soul, and you should henceforth walk apart from all good men as one accursed and possessed of

The slanderer may not possess the physical courage to, or may be deterred by a wholesome fear of the law from, waylaying his victim and murdering and robbing him of his money and jewelry. But he does something infinitely worse; like a cowardly assassin he secretly assails reputation. which is dearer than life; murders character as Macbeth did sleep; and steals that which, while it does not enrich himself, leaves his victim "poor indeed." for he is robbed of something to be more highly prized than gold and silver, whose price is far above rubies, a jewel more precious than all the gems of Golconda—that "jewel of the soul,"—a good name! The slanderer is a moral Unas whose shadow blights whatever that is generous, noble and good that it falls upon; only the thorns and thistles of envy, malice and suspicion flourish within his deadly influencea social outlaw, whose secret crimes are more damning than the open felonies of many a wretch imprisoned for life, like a wild beast whom it is not safe to turn loose upon the world; and though the law of the land, which does not recognize the finer subtleties which deal with the consciences of men, lavs no greater punishment upon him than to touch his purse, if his black and shrinking soul could be exposed to the gaze of the world, and arraigned before the high court of Public Opinion, from which there is no appeal, outraged Society would rise in its might, burn "Murderer, Thief, and Liar" upon his brow, blazon it upon his back, and hoot and hound him from the haunts of civilized man.

Of all low, vile and ignominious callings, that of the slanderer, backbiter, and calumniator is the lowest, vilest, and most ignominious. If we sought his prototype in the animal kingdom, we would not find it in the bold and courageous lion, the fierce Hircan tiger, the spotted leopard, nor the horned rhinoceros: nor vet among the less powerful of the ravenous carnivora, which, though they bite and prey, do so only in self-defence, or in obedience to the inexorable demands of hunger: but rather in that of the "snake in the grass," the cunning serpent that does his deadly work in secret and darkness-a slimy, scaly reptile, lurking among the flowers of grace and beauty, lending a sense of horror to pleasant places, "biting like an adder and stinging like an asp," a foul creature abhorred of every living. 14: upon the enormity of his offense thing, fastening his venomous fangs in unfrequently her clothes.

the quivering nerves of sensitive minds, curdling the milk of human kindness and palsying the heart with the virus of his viper-like tongue! Like the fabled reptilian vampire of the German poet, his cold-blooded soul subsists upon the hearts'-blood of his fellow creatures while he lulls their suspicions to sleep with his false but insidious friendship. He insinuates his chamelion-like form even into churches, in order to steal the sacred "livery of heaven to serve the devil in;" and wherever there is a Society his sinuous form steals in, and once admitted, his small and mean ambition rises no higher than to become "chiefest among them;" or failing in this, like the archiend described by Milton, his next endeavor is to create war and discord, and draw around him those restless and fallen spirits like himself over whom he may rule.

But wherever he is, he perches with his vulture-like beak prying into the affairs of others, ready to devour any scandalous carrion whose rank odor may offend the pure air of heaven. Solomon in all his wisdom never uttered a truer proverb than: "A wicked doer giveth heed to false lips, and a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue;" for no one is so ready to listen to and believe evil of others as one who habitually speaks evil of them himself. And woe to whoever offends him, for he is of necessity a hypocrite, "hiding hatred with lying lips;" and woe to whoever, in the exercise of a noble ambition, rises above him, for he thereby stirs up the bitterest gall of his malicious nature. It was not without reason that the wise man said: "He that uttereth a slander is a fool;" for nature had always been a niggard of mental gifts to the slanderer, who is generally as dogmatical and self-conceited as he is narrowminded and ignorant. But he is not without an instinctive consciousness of his weakness and inability to cope fairly with those who leave him behind in the race for wealth and fame, and takes unmanly refuge behind a fawning, but false respectability, and basely strive ---"to gain renown, By climbing up and pulling others down." The slanderer, like the traitor, is held in just abhorence by all well disposed persons, and trusted and respected by none. No one who has There was only a quart of hot water, the instincts of a true lady or gentleman—no one who has in his breast a spark of that genuine charity, which is the distinctive characteristic of a true Christian-will play the character of Iago in the drama of life; for the noble mind stoops not to calumny and falsehood. But let him who doeth this thing take heed! for he walketh in dangerous places, beset by unknown perils. And let him not forget that in the present development of society, human character, like human life, is a thing too sacred to be trifled with. The foul stain of calumny has been washed out with blood many times in the history of civilization, and will be many more.

Such is the sin of slander; let be who esteems it a virtue, practice it. Such is the character of the slanderer: let he who deems it worthy of emulation, strive to attain it. But the objects of contumacious slander may find a crumb of comfort in the reflection that the calumniator, like death, loves a shining mark at which to aim his envenomed arrows. It is not the low, the humble and obscure to whom "Viperous Slander,-

A Romantic Young Man. There is a story told of a young man in Baltimore who got into trouble through his persistent folly in reading the newspapers! It seems that he saw an account of how lovers in Se ville, when they are forbidden to visit their heart's delight, stand under the young ladies' window at night, and converse with them through a hollow tin tube made in sections, so that it can be shut together like a spy-glass and used as a cane. This youth in Baltimore loved a damsel whose father regarded his love's young dream as an inferior kind of nightmare which had to be shaken off at all hazards. So he refused to permit the dreamer to come to his house. Well, this infatnated one went right down to a tinner and procured about forty feet of tubing, which closed up into the smallest possible space. Then he used to go around in the evenings, unreef his speaking trumpet, and run it up to the second story back window, where his angel was, and roost out on the fence, whispering all kinds of sweet things along the forty feet of pipe. This was all very nice as far as it went. But one evening the eagleeyed old man came to the room door with a pitcher of water in his hand and sent his daughter off suddenly on an errand. Then the despicable old scoundrel called down the pipe in a falsettto voice until the youth placed his ear against it, and then--! but it was sufficient to make one side of the young lover's face resemble an undone tenderloin steak. When his friends ask him what is the matter, he

He is so cast down that he never comes home except with a latch key, and then he pounds his poor lone hands on the gate for an hour before he can get in, and his voice is so lost in the gloom that all his words run together and nobody can understand what he says this time o'night; and then, too, he goes down to the lake with a lady in a buggy, to console him for the absence of his wife and he don't get back-it takes so long to modify a lone husband you know until the soda water shops are all shut. Then too, he comes home with three or four married men, whose wives have gone a summering, and he turns on the gas in his house to make it look cheerful and they all put their legs over the front of the gallery just to cure their terrible loneliness, and then they sing -oh, such songs-if I did not know that their wives were gone and that they were really trying to kill melancholy, I should think that they had drank a drop too much; but that can't be so, for their wives don't like it, and they wouldn't do anything when their wives were gone that they scorned to do when they were here.

Order vs. Taste. Will people never find out that tidiness is not a synonym for stiffness, and that a neat room need not be an awkward, and ungraceful one? The six straight backed chairs ranged against the wall in our grandmother's time, was not much worse than the modern arrangement of some of our most elegant homes. I have taken a chair in some rooms when I knew from the involuntary sign of anxiety that started up all over my hostess, that I had removed it from its proper angle; and that the demon of order which held undisputed possession of her regulating faculties, was tingling the ends of her fingers to replace it. In my uninitiated days I have been venturesome enough to take up a book or touch a picture in such a house, but the instantaneous re-adjustment of them, and the hasty brush where my rash hands had rested was not lost to me, and in these days, when I am tapped in such sorroundings, I have learned to hold my ropes about me, and let my fingers lock in a Quaker's meeting position, while I silently cry: "Give me liberty or give me death !" In restful contrast to such a picture comes forward another. Here are parlors, just as immaculate from the dust enemy that hides everything, but the very atmosphere breathes home and pleasure, and you feel conscious of nothing but a desire to be alone, and to enjoy it; and you are let alone, which is just the charm of it all.

Wifely Privileges.

It is a glorious destiny to a rightminded woman to be the wife of a really great man. To soothe him in grief, and comfort him in sorrow; to hide the petty cares of life from him: to rejoice in his happiness, and exult in his successes; to share his secret thoughts and hopes; to listen to his schemes, and discuss his projects, and by loving care and thoughtfulness smooth out those little peculiarities and eccentricities which so frequently cling to genius, as creases rest on the finest fabric. To know that the moments he does not give the world he gives to her: to know above all. that she influences the life of the man who really loves her-and genius and greatness are not niggardly in their affection-for what better lot can she hope? Or even to be loved truly, and purely, and unselfishly-though that be the ending, though she never hears the word "wife" from his lips-it is sufficient to compensate for a whole world of sorrow, a whole life of care. To go down from generation to generation, as Beatrice's name has gone down—the loved of Dante! Or even to be remembered from the last generation, as we remember Southley's young bride, watching her husband from the shore through her blinding tears, with her wedding ring tied round her neck! To what happier destiny can she aspire? The history of such women must have interest for the coldest, the gravest, and most mutter of-fact of all.

CONGRESSIONAL INCREASE OF SALARIES.

The prevailing sentiment throughout the country, on the question of the increase of Congressional and other salaries, seems to be one of condemnation. This is not so much the case because the people believe that the salaries as now fixed are too high, as the manner of the passage of the bill, i. e., the retroactive clause. There would have been but comparatively little said about the matter, if it did not appear so much like a steal by voting $5,000 extra pay for Congressmen for the last two years. It earries upon its face the marks of temptation greater even than Credit Mobilier stock.

If the Forty-Second Congress had felt disposed to deal justly by the next Congress and other servants of the people, and had increased salaries to take effect with the XLIII Congress, there would have been but little fault found. The idea however, of a member of Congress, on his retiring, voting himself four or five thousand dollars extra pay is repugnant to every sense of honor. It is gratifying to know that only two out of Michigan's delegation voted for the measure, viz: Stoughton and Sutherland, one a Democrat and the other a Republican. We do not wish to be understood as thinking the salaries as increased are too much, but as opposing the manner and means used to effect such increase. That the people desire their public servants to serve them at a loss personally, we do not believe. They are willing that members of Congress should have adequate compensation, enough to live and maintain themselves respectably at the National Capital. All the people want to understand, is how much is necessary and they are willing to grant it. The reason there is so much opposition to an increase of salaries is the lack of a general knowledge of the expenses of a residence in Washington. This ignorance is brought about and fostered by two motives. One a political consideration, by which the opposition press endeavor to make it appear that all the expenses of the Government are outrageous. This is done in order to gain increased political influence, and to damage the party in power. The other is by men of wealth who do not care for the salary. They are fully able to serve the people if they received no compensation at all. This class usually make no effort to undeceive the people as to the expenses attending the sessions of Congress.

To our mind, from all the data before us, it is the best policy to pay our public servants a sufficient salary, so that a poor, but qualified man can become a member of Congress or serve in any other public capacity to which his neighbors may call him, and not be debarred therefrom on account of the inadequacy of the pay. Low and niggardly salaries for positions of publichonor and trust discriminate against the common masses of the people and in favor of the wealthy few. Whenever the people see this point, and see that they as a class are sufferers, then will the hue and cry against adequate pay for public services be quieted.

The late Congressional increase of salaries by which the pay of the President, the Supreme Judges, Senators and Representatives in Congress and other officers and employees of the Government was increased was in no sense a political question. Members of all parties voted for and against the measure. Democrats and Liberals voted for and against it, and Republicans voted on both sides of the question. So that it was no more a Republican movement than a Democratic or a Liberal one. Any attempts therefore, to make political capital out of this action of Congress is a gross perversion of all the facts connected with the case, and in the eyes of all thinking persons must prove a

THE LEGISLATURE.

There is an immense amount of business before the Legislature, much of which must, necessarily remain unattended, except an adjournment [is had to some future time. In view of this fact there is much talk of an adjournment early in April till January next. Such a course appears to us as the only one that can be adopted by which the Legislative business necessary for the growing interests of the State can be attended to properly. In the presnet | officers of the Government are requested state of affairs if the Legislature should to issue bonds, patents, &c. attempt to finish up the business before that body by the midale of April. there will be an immense amount of imperfect work, which will lead to much difficulty hereafter. This has been the case every session of the Legislature for the past number of years. Their work has been imperfect for wart of proper accommon to one outs and matters disposed of by the Legislature, in a great measure, grows out of the defective provisions of the Constitution.

That instrument provides only for the biennial sessions of the Legislature, and the elections of Senators and Repbefore they become schooled in the credentials of Senator Boutwell were pre-business, one-half or two-thirds of the sented and he was sworn in. to take hold of legislation and work effectively till they have spent one session of a hundred days. It is evident therefore, that the present members of the Legislature would accomplish more needed and perfect legislation for the interests of the State, at an adjourned session next winter, of say even forty days, than they have or will do during the entire present session. We then regard it for the best interests of the State that the Legislature, when it adjourns, adjourn to January next. This done and the State will have the benefit of somewhat experienced Legislators for the work necessary to be done next winter.

THE RAILROADS. There is unquestionably a strong eeling arising throughout the entire country against the extortion of Railway corporations. The unjust discrimination in freights and the exhorbitant passenger tariff, on many of the roads, are leading to the creation of an opposition that will not be easily quelled. The course pursued by some roads of setting the laws at defiance, will soon or late result in such determined efforts against such roads as will bring great disaster. The people will not always slumber, though they are slow to move, when once fairly in motion nothing will impede their prog-

the masses to acts of retaliation. Soon or late, if the present course is pursued, the people will rise en masse and demand even more than justice. Now they are disposed to grant to the Railroads all, and even more, than to them seems just and equitable. The time will come, however, when Railroads must succumb to public demands, and when the public too will not be as ready as at present, to grant all that justice requires on behalf of the Railroads. It is an old saying that, "Whom the gods desire to destroy they first make mad." It seems that the immense Railroad monopolies of the country feel secure in their strength. and manifest no disposition to meet the people on equitable terms. Soon or late the disposition will be reversed. One extreme will follow another, and instead of the people asking justice at the hands of the Railway companies, these very companies that now seem so secure in their might, will be humbly begging the people to do them justice: Why then, in view of the inevitable, will not these corporations see their interest, and deal justly by all parts and portions of the country Time will solve the problem to the infinite discomfiture of these gigantic corporations. Wait and see.

Everything that money and influential friends could do, has been done in the case of William Foster, the murderer of Avery D. Putnam, to influence Governor Dix to commute his sentence. After a careful examination of the case the Governor has declared his intention not to interfere with the due course of law. Foster will therefore have to suffer the extreme penalty, which is death. This case, which has wended its way along the winding course of the courts for the last two years, will at last be a warning to the forty or more murderers, now confined in New York prisons. They will at once perceive that the Executive will not interfere to the benefit of the guilty, and that after due trial by law the penalties thereof will surely be inflicted. While the Foster case is a warning to the guilty, it also serves to inspire the country with hope that even the murderers in New York City will be brought to justice.

Governor Dix will receive tho hearty endorsement of the entire country, all lovers of good order, for the firmness with which he met the avalanche brought to bear for the commutation of the sentence of the Car-Hook murderer. Michigan Progress.

The State census which will be taken in the spring of 1874 will show what progress the State has made in population since the United States census in 1870. Counties which were unorganized in that year, or which, though unorganized, were returned as without population will next year add thousands to the grand total of the State. A marked increase will be shown in the population of the Upper Peninsula, that section having already been given an impetus by the construction of one railroad, and the new road or roads which will be under way before 1874 will go still further toward swelling the total. There is lit-tle doubt that Detroit will show a population of one hundred thousand when the census is taken; that the County of Wayne will have one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants, and the aggregate population of the State be not less than a million and a half.

By the census of 1870 Michigan was the thirteenth State in the Union in point of population. There were, lom for the Railroad corporations to however, six States in each of which the population was less than three hundred thousand in excess of that of of the people, instead of provoking Michigan. With possibly a single exception all these will be outstripped before the next United States census is taken. Some of them, Michigan has passed already, and if a census were taken in all the States in 1874 there would not be more than nine States with a greater population than our own.

Michigan is destined to be one of the great States of the Union. In no other are there so many and varied important industries. She is richly stored with minerals; her great forests | can. of pine will last for many years to come; her salt industry is in its infancy; her fruit belt is more extensive than that of any other State in the Union, with the exception of distant California. Her agricultural resources are unsurpassed. The finest wheat is raised in Michigan. As a wool-growng State she already ranks high. Her situation is most favorable for manufacturing, in which she is every year more extensively engaging. Her material progress is much more rapid than even her advance in population. When we take into consideration all the circumstances which tend to her development, it does not seem possible that she can have other than a bright future before her .-- Detroit Free

A Historic Sketch of a Berrien Co.

From advance publication of a forthcoming history of Chautauqua County N. Y., we publish an extract from what the historian says of a wellknown citizen of Berrien, who was reared in Chautauqua County, and spent most of his life there-as fol-

WORTHY PUTNAM, the youngest son of the family, was born Oct. 22ad, 1811. Very little need be written of a name so well and favorably known, by the great mass of the people of this county. In his boyhood, he was remarkably fond of books, and the mechanic arts. His penmanship, the wonder and admiration of scholars, originated with himself, and resulted from his constant use of chalk and pencil, during his boyhood, on every available board, stone or log in his pathway. As a letter writer, he has few equals, always showing that his attachment to his friends is unbounded. His success as a teacher of the young, let the thousands who have been under his instruction testify. From 1844 to 1848, he was Superintendent of schools for Chautauqua Co., and to this day, a few of his proverbs and wise sayings are visible tive mind. After having completed a thorough course of reading medicine, under an eminent physician, he took up the Law and was admitted to practice in all of the Courts of the State, at the General Term, held at Buffalo N. Y., May 1859.

In the spring of 1860, he sold out his pleasant home at Sinclairville and removed with his family to Valparaiso, Ind., where he successfully continued the practice of Law. The Male and Female college of this place soon tendered, and he accepted the Professorship of Elecution. This was his favorite theme, and I hear of him this winter delivering a course of lectures at one of the high institutions of learning, in Mich. at the urgent request of the Faculty. Not enjoying good health at Valparaiso, in the fall of 1864, he removed with his family to Berrien Springs, Mich., where he now resides, and where he has fitted up a neat and tidy home, with open doors for all who are worthy to be his friends. His health, though infirm, permits him to practice the law all that he desires, and to answer the letters of his numerous friends, and write very much for the local papers. It is cheering to know, that he has a competence and in his leisure hours he is wont to stroll on a pleasant summer evening, to the Indian fields on the banks of the beautiful St. Joseph, or ride into the country, and call upon some of his friends for an hour of pastime and recreation. Though much attached to the people with whom he now resides, like our President submitted papers signed by daughter, both endowed with sterling rascals skedaddled.

 Record THE OLD BOARD. The Told Village Board finished their labors for the year on Wednesday evening of last week. The Board have labored under peculiar embarrassment in many respects, feeling often that the proper authority was not given through the defects in the old charter to enable them to enforce their orders and proceedings. This has been especially so in the collection of side walk tax, licenses, and assessing damages in the opening and laying out of streets. With a direct tax assessed at only $2,500, the Board have been reductant about appropriating money in some cases where it would have been a real benefit to the town. Taking all these things into consideration our Village Counsel deserve great credit for their management of the affairs of the village during the past year. Among the principal improvements may be mentioned the building and repairing of side-walks. We cannot name the amount of new side-walk that has been built, but our side-walks, where needed most, are built, and with a few exceptions are in a good condition throughout the entire village. The cemetery has also much improved in appearance, although not all has been done in this direction that would have been done had the village finances warranted it. A new Engine House and Calaboose has been built for the village. No one will deny but that this is a needed and very desirable improvement to our village, and that our Village Fathers acted wisely in order ing its construction. A Fire Compayear, buckets and other improvements added to our Eire Department. Altogether the Board has performed their duties to the best interests of the village and to the general satisfaction of all concerned. Their meetings have also been pleasant, and the utmost harmony and good feeling have always prevailed during their sessions .--

Logs were hauled to our mills just as long as the snow lasted and to the road as long as there was sleighing in the woods. There is a nice lot on hand, and the mills will be kept busy this summer.

ELDER A. M. COLLINS.—The following item we take from a Covington, Ky., correspondence of the Cincinnat Enquirer, and signed "An Outsider." the item will be read with interest by many of our readers:

"Dr. A. M. Collins, long known as the Boy Preacher of Michigan-now in Cincinnati attending the lectures at one of the Medical Colleges—has been holding a series of meetings in the Christian Chuch in this city, and perhaps at no time in the history of the church has there been so much interest felt. Dr. Collins, though comparatively young, is one of the most able, eloquent and earnest speakers it has ever been our pleasure to hear; and we have heard many of our most gifted men. His preaching is instructive, and pointed; his logic fine; his eloquence rarely equaled, save by such men as Clay, Webster, or the Marshalls. In fact, it is grand to be lifted high his by sweet eloquence—so high you fear the fall; but so easily does he bring one down they long to be raised again. And with all his eloquence, his reasoning, illustrations and applications are most beautiful and applicable, and one feels good af-ter having heard him—yes, go away filled full of the thoughts and full of something worth thinking about, and things the more one thinks about the better they are. And this is certain-ly not the case when we hear many others who are going up and down in the world claiming to be preachers and teachers, when they themselves should first be taught. Dr. Collins, ny has also been organized during the lawe understand, has been solicited and will preach again for the congregation at 11 o'clock this morning and 71 o'clock this evening, and we hope all desiring a rich feast will turn out and

FROM STEVENSVILLE. March, 9th, 1873. EDITORS RECORD. The C. & M. L. S. R. R., has done much towards developing the resources of Western Michigan. The land and forest products along the line of this road are probably worth at least one-third more now than they were before the road was commenced. Even here in the western part of Berrien County, the road was built most of the distance through an unbroken forest. The fruit interest has developed a portion of the light lands in the vicinity of the mouth of the St. Joseph river. A few clearings had been made near the piers. The Lake Shore R. R., is of vast importance to the lumbering interest of Western Michigan. A large number of the saw-mills ship all their lumber by this road. The first step towards improving a country covered with magnificent forests of hard wood, is to find a market for the lumber. The R. R., has done this. Many kinds of timber, as basswood, sycamore and elm, which was formerly considered worse than useless, now find a ready, market. The lumber removed, the land will soon be cleared and no better soil can be found than the soil beneath the hard wood forests of this latitude. Ever since the completion of the great through line of railroad to the west the tide of emigration has been; rushing around the head of the lake, until an immense area of territory is dotted with the homes of the acttler. But few of the passing millions thought of making their home in Michigan, but the wave of emigration is turning back. The prairie settler has learned that more corn can be grown than the world can consume. So he burns it and turns chards. But I am wandering from my subject. The Townships of New Buffalo, Chickaming, Lake, Lincoln and St. Joseph, owe some persons the sum of ninety-five thousands dollars, at least the above Townships issued their bonds for that amount, and these bonds were certified to, and recorded by the Governor and Auditor of the State, and the bonds were delivered to the C. & M. L. S. R. R. company and sold by them to persons who supposed there would be no question regarding their paymont, as they were ssued in accordance with a law of the State, and endorsed by the Governor. Perhaps the people committed a very unwise act when they voted the required aid. It is certain that the Legislature did what may prove a grievous wrong, when it passed a law enabling the townships to borrow money, the payment of which was so soon to be repudiated by the decisions of the State Courts, declaring the law unconstitutional. The State having in view, apparently, the making of the repudiation stronger, has twice submitted the question of payment of these bonds to the people of the State. The people influenced, doubt-less, by the decision of the Supreme Court of the State, voted by a large majority against the payment of the bonds. But it seems that the decision of the United States District Court comes in conflict with the Courts of Michigan, and the holders of bonds are now preparing to press their claim in the U.S. Courts. A. H. Morrison has presented a memorial to the Legislature, asking them that the taxes which may be due the State from the C. & M. L. S. R. R., may be commuted by the liquidation of the bonds actually delivered to the R. R. company. It is hoped that the State will do this. The State should at least provide means for the Township meet the issues before the U.S. Courts. It would be the ruin of the Townships to be obliged to combat the bond-holders for a long time in the U. S. Courts and finally be obliged to pay the bonds with the large amounts of interest that would accrue, together with the cost of the collection by U. S. officers. Some of the newspapers located on the north part of the road, assert that these Townships should not ask the State to help pay their bonds, as the Townships have received the benefits and should pay the bonds themselves. This declaration comes with bad grace from Townships that had voted aid, but were prevented from delivering their bonds by the decision of the State Courts. If the 25 miles between New Buffalo and St. Joseph were benefited the amount of $95,000, the 150 miles north of St. Joseph received a benefit of about $600,000. Probably the road would not have been built, if there had been no aid promised. The north part of the road would not have been built if the south parthad not been completed to St. Joseph. If the road is of any value now to the State or to the people of Northern Michigan, they may thank A. H. Morrison. Were it not for the untiring energy displayed by Mr. Morrison the road never would have been built. WILL WARD.

DEAR RECORD:—A rather unusual fatality occurred among the stock of one of the citizens of Bortrand Township. From the evidence brought before the cornoers inquest, held over the dead bodies of stock, it was decided that the disease which had caused the death of eight head, three of which were new milch cows, was located in the stomach, which on being examined had the appearance of great emptiness. This was decided to be the cause of their untimely death. Remedy prescribed by said coroners, to check the further spread of this fatal disease, was plenty of good tame hay, and, we would also add, the warm side of a good stable.

Those who are anticipating this year a profitable season in cheese making will do well to have a plenty of this remedy at hand until grass shall grow, as it is a sure preven-tative and without which this disease will surely spread and death will inevitably follow.

THE OUTCAST.

"Go stone her to death!" said a maiden proud, As an outcast fled from the gaping crowd; And she turned her steps to the Church and Bowed low as the minister knelt in prayer; And he prayed that the Lord of Hosts wou

And for all the powers that be he prayed, And a stress on the sins of man he laid. But where shall the outcast hide her shame? Must she turn to the sinks of vice a again?
"Go stone her to death!" was the matron's cry, As she passed the suffering outcast by;
And she hastened home where her daughters

"She's not fit to cumber the earth's green sod!"
And he grouned for the sins of Adam's race,
And fergot his own, in his prayers for grace. "Go stone her to death!" is the popular cry,

From the heart that's with sin and sorrow torn? What's a Priestly robe, if its folds enclose A heart that scoffs at the outcast's woes? Does the maiden proud, with her heart so cold, Remember the Magdalene of old? Has she weighed what the lowly Jesus said, As the doomed of o'd was before him led? And the haughty dame, who blushed as she

The stone at her suffering sister there, And at night bowed her head in sinless prayer? O mid the canting priest with his holy tone Cast, with sinless heart or hand, the stone? Oh! when will the spirit of Christ as of yore, Raise the fallen up? bid them sin no more?

"If any of you lack wisdom." (James 1, 5.) "Well," says one, "I am quite out of all catalogues: I am one myself." Well, but you are surely contained in this "any of you." "Ah !" says one, "but I have a private fault, a sin, an offense which I believe has damned me forever." Yet the text says, 'If any of you.' If I saw a door open, and it said, "If any of you be hungry, let him come in here," I should not stop outside because I feared that I was not quite the person intended; I should say, "It is their business who mean to keep me out, to be more specific in their invitation. Consumption, the mantism, Cateria, bronchitis, Dyspeysia, &c.

The reputation Dr. Price has acquired by capdid, honest deading, and years of successf-1 practice, has induced insprincipled persons to copy and imitate him as hir as they dare, in order to deceive. Let it he remembered that no person in the west is treating Chronic Discuses similar to Dr. Price—that his practice is not one of experiments, but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experiments, but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experiments, but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experience and evidence to sustain it. That it does not tear down to build up—make sick to make well—no harsh treatment, no trifling, no intering. We know the cause and the remedy needed no guess work, but knowlodge gained by years of experience in the treatment of these diseases exclusively; in a encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their alment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits will be made republify. Dr. V. Charence Price can be consulted at Niles, Reading House, Saturday and Sunday, the let and 2d of March.

shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases. Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitobstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Allerative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aportent and mild Laxative properties of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers. Their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fances. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Their Counter-Irritant influence extends throughout the system. Their Anti-Bilious properties stimulate the liver, in the secretion of bile, and its discharges through the biliary ducts, and are superior to all remedial agents, for the cure of Bilious Fever, Fever and Ague, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with vinegar Bitters. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed. The liver, the stomach, the bowels, the kidneys, and the nerves are rendered disease-proof by this great invigorant.

The medicinal and cooling properties, with the advantage of always having a perfect, smooth surface, is a guarantee against chafing, and will publicases cure the most irritated sore necks, as hundreds will restify that have given them a trial. All wask of the most scrupulous is to give our Zinc Collar Pad a fair trial, as we feel condident in warranting them to detail we claim, and give satisfaction.

WHAT WE CLAIM.

First. Is the chemical action of the Zinc, with the acid and suine constituents or moist sores, resulting in an astringout, acting speedily on the edges of the wound, and by its smooth surface and cooling tendency, quickly produces a circ. and by its smooth surface and cooling tendency, quickly produces a cure.

Second. It prevents, in all cases, the hames from contracting in contact with the neck, or the hames from contracting the top of the collar, and thereby pinching the cords of the neck, and is the only Pad made that will not wear the hair on the neck;

Third. With the use of them you can work a rawnecked horse every day, and cure the worst cases in from six to ten days, as has been done in many cases during the last sesson.

Fourth. It is the most durable Pad eyer made.

We deem it unnecessary to add other advantages, or even to add the numerous testimonials we have received during the short use of our Zine Pad, and only ask that it may lisave a fair trial, feeling full confidence in the success of the goods. it may have a fair trial, feeling full confidence in the success of the goods.

in to the feast." Ah, soul! if God had meant to shut thee out, he would have been more plain about it, but here is not a shutting-out word at all. It says, "If any of you lack"—well, that is you, surely—that lack of wisdom helps to include you within the boundary. It does not limit the character; it widens it to you, because you feel how foolish you are. The promise is, "It shall be given him." 'Suppose I do not get it, you say. You must not suppose God to be a liar. How can you suppose such a blasphemy? "Let him ask God and it shall be given him." "But," says one,
"suppose my sins should prove to be too great!" I cannot, will not suppose anything which can come in conflict with the postive word of God.
"Let him ask of God, and it shall be given him." Do you think that God does not mean what he says? O sinner, will you add to all your sins this one great sin of thinking that God would lie? O man, he invited you to ask of him wisdom and he says he will
