BY JENNIE HARRISON. Yes, I know there are string on my carpet, -The traces of small, muddy boots; And I see your fair tapeatry, glowing All spotless, with blossoms and fruits!

Poetry.

And I know that my walls are disfigured With prints of small fingers and hands; And I see that your own household whiteness All fresh in its purity stands! res, I know my "black walnut" is battered,

And dented by many small heels;
While your own polished stairway, all perfect
Its smooth, shining surface reveals! and I know that my parlor is littered With many odd treasures and toy; While your own is in daintlest order, Unharmed by the presence of boys!

And I know that my room is invaded Quite boldly, all hours of the day:
While you sit in your own unmole-ted,
And dream the soft quiet away! Tes, I know I have jackets that wear out,

And buttons that never will stay; While you can embroider, at leisure, And learn pretty arts of "crochet." and I know there are lessons of spelling Which I must be patient to hear; While you may sit down to your novel,

Or turn the last magazine near! Yes, I know there are four little hedsides Where I must stand watchful, each night; While you may go out in your carriage, And flash in your dresses so bright!

Now, I think I'm a neat little woman :-I like my house orderly, too:
And I'm fond of all dainty belongings;— Yet I would not change places with you! No !-keep your fair home, with its order, Its freedom from trouble and noise;

and keep your own fanciful leisure ;-

But give me my four splendul boys ?

Story.

The Doctor's Office-Boy

BY KATE W. HAMILTON.

The short winter afternoon was drawing to a close, and the light, making its way through the dusty office windows, began to grow din. The doctor pushed back the great book before him on the table and looked over it at the open grate beyond, where the fire had died down to a mass of dull red coals, and an unsightly quantity of ashes was distributed over the hearth. The office chairs, except the two or three in constant use were undeniably dusty, and the carpet, despite the awkward but vigorous efforts at sweeping that had been expanded upon it, was neither bright nor tidy. The doctor's thoughtful eyes scarcely took in these details; his meditations, were of something else; but it occurred to him, vaguely that the place wore a dreary unhome-like air. He was thinking of a pair of brown eyes and a grave, sweet face. Such a vision might have made the old room seem bright, but that the eyes had of late grown so shy of meeting his, and the face so calm and cold when it chanced to encounter him. He did not wonder at it particularly. "Thirty-five years old, and grown dull and plodding from a life of early care and hardship. What should draw her to you Maxwell Cassev?" he questioned, a faint smile at his own folly flitting over his lips for an instant and losing itself under the heavy moustache. Suddenly a rapid, noisy step sounded upon the stairs, and the door was pushed open and closed with a slam, and a fresh, young voice called out breezily: "Hello, Uncle Max!" "Well, Joe?" responded the doctor quietly, unmoved by the invasion. Joe entertained no doubt of his welcome. He tossed his cap, and a few books bound together with a strap, upon the table, drew a chair to the hearth, and elevated a pair of small feet upon the fender. "A'n't they muddy, though? Got em that way runnin' cross the street to get last tag from Tom Snyder. Did it too! He couldn't get away from me-no, sir! Say, Uncle Max, this is not much of a fire!" "My office boy don't half attend to t," said the doctor raising his eye-

"Ho! ' laughed Joe .. "I think you ought to have a boy to look after things while you are studyin' up ou old bones and all that. I'll come myself one of these days. Wish I could do it now; twould be lots more fun than school is," he added wistfully.

The doctor surveyed him from the oes of his muddy shoes to the top of his curly head—no great distance—and laughed softly as he saw the air of conscious ability to fill any office, with which he drew himself up and thrust his hands into his pockets.

"What's 'come of my jacket-buttons?" asked Joe, fancying that he read that question in the glance bent upon him. "Why, some of 'em tore off, that's all. What does go with em Uncle Max? 'Cause ma's always askin' me and I don't know. B'lieve they just tear themselves off every time I'm havin' fun and a'n't watchin' Oh! look here! We're goin' to have a splen-did time some of these nights, I tell you!" exclaimed Joe, forgetting his perplexities in a sudden blissful remembrance. "There's a lot of us fellers—we're a band—and Tom Snyder's got a kettle drum, and Bill's got a-a-oh! a trumpet, that's what walk up home with you. it is; and one of the boys says he can get his father's old bass-viol. We've got a flag, and some of the fellers has torches—real lamps on poles, you know—and some of 'em'll, have lighted sticks. We've had it round in lightedly. But Uncle Max relapsed into silence and walked away to the

A gray fog was settling down upon the town, making it dark early, and already lights were beginning to shine out from the shop windows, here and there along the street. Passers-by hastened their steps, as if anxious to escape from the misty, depressing with a more simple, earnest faith than atmosphere, to the warmth and brightthe boy had ever known. "Take care ness of home, the doctor fancied. A thought of those waiting homes made him glance once more about the room in which he stood. Familiar it was, surely; it ought to be homelike since it was all the home he had. His place of business during the day; the lounge in the small back room served as a bed at night, and for his meals there was the restaurant near by. What more could a busy bachelor physician ask? He went up to Brother George's occasionally. He was glad to meet George, and liked to see the others well enough, but they always appeared to be living in a hurry; and the place, with all its elegance, never seemed to have a cosy, family air, and so had little attraction for him. Joe returned these unfrequent visits with compound interest, and spent a good deal of time at the office; partly because he was neither ornamental nor useful at home, and there was a comfortable feeling of safety in having him with Uncle Max, but chiefly because it was his own sweet will, and he could talk and ask questions there to his heart's content, even though, as in the present instance, not half of them were heard or answered. Joe certainly did not consider the room either dreary or lonely, but then the doctor had scarcely thought about it until lately himself. He had not known, either, how much he had been thinking of the quiet, earnest, young music-teacher, and how thoughts of her had brightened every place for him, until her growing reserve and distant politeness had awakened him to consciousness. And she had fancied he might annoy her with his persistence, perhaps! No fear of that. He was not so vain as to think himself irresistable, nor so selfish as to press even his love upon her, if that love could not make her happier, he said to himself. "Burglars!" remarked Joe.

"Eh! what?" demanded Uncle Max. To be sure, Joe had been talking his face. almost incessantly for the last ten minutes, but he had heard nothing of it until that rather startling word attracted his attention.

"They've broke into a good many places about town and carried off lots of things," pursued Joe. "I guess they must be pretty rich by this time; and they don't care about folks bein' about either; they just put 'em to did not feel at all certain that he est, cheeriest little home in the world, sleep. - How do you suppose they do that, Uncle Max?"

"Oh, I don't know," responded the doctor, carelessly. Relieved that only burglaries in general were under discussion, and that neither his brothers house nor the bank had been robbed. he was far less interested in any maurader's boldness than in considering Edith More's shyness and constraint when she had called with a message that morning. She would never have come to him, he was sure, only that the unsuspecting old lady who sent her would swallow no other doctor's potions, and Edith was too tenderhearted to refuse so slight an act of neighborly kindness. How quick she had been to assure him, when he promised to be in the office on her return, that it was of no consequence! If only he could leave the powders for her, that would answer quite as well. It was almost time for her to come. What if he met her and spared her a part of the long walk? It was out of her way, he knew-so well he had learned the round of lesson-giving! Joe was still deep in the subject of burglars. He had explained to his own satisfaction how, "after dark, they carry lanterns that'll shine or not shine just as they want 'em to; and they wear stuffed shoes that you can't hear no mor'n a cat with mittens on. And anyhow, you can't tell who they are, if you do see 'em, 'cause their faces are covered with-withoh! what is that they put on their faces, Uncle Max?" "On their faces?" repeated Uncle Max; pondering another questionshould he go or not go? Would there be any danger of his failing to meet "Yes; what they cover their faces with, you know?" said Joe. "Cover their faces with? Why, veils brown veils generally," added the doctor, a little absently, thinking of a certain brown one that would be fluttering along the street somewhere now. He decided to go. "Such as women wear?" queried

I "Why, yes, of course; it's, always women that wear them.' "Is it?" demanded Joe, quite excited by this new item of information. "I didn't know that." "I'm going out for a little while." said the doctor drawing on his overcoat and taking up his gloves. "If you'll stay here till I come back, Till "Well," said Joe, contentedly. "And if any persons come, try to keep them till I get back; it won't "Isn't any danger of any one com-creed he held, that the very life of life is not its joys or its sorrows, but its duties. There was work for him there, those who needed him, and he would not desert his post from any cowardly fear of pain. Some oldwords from his boyhood—words that a mother's lips had been wont to quote long ago-came back to him, and the strong man repeated them of the happiness of others, and Godwill take care of yours." Joe, left to himself, suddenly discovered that the office was rather dark. He stirred the coals in the grate, put on fresh fuel, and soon had a bright, dancing blaze that sent its cheery ligh into every corner. "That's more like it?" he soliloquoized, perching himself in an armi-chair, and setting his chin meditatively between his hands, quite oblivious to their recent contact with the coal. "Expect this isn't so poor a place, neither.—Heard him say that white stuff, over in that jur, is one of the most valuable medicines he knew of. Cost as much as diamond mebbe, and he's got a lot of it. But if I was a ful, womanly presence in the glow of goin' burglarin', I wouldn't steal no such nasty-tastin' stuff. Ugh!"

A soft rap at the door interrupted him suddenly. He started to his feet, and, after a moment's hesitation, ventured a rather uncertain "Come in !" He had not heard the light step on the stairs, and that surely was more suspicious still, and she wore a brown was entirely too late for her to walk veil—that was the most suspicious of all. Joe didn't at all like the appearhome alone, and they went away teance of things.

"Is the doctor in?" asked the stranger, pleasantly. Joe retreated a little as she advanced, and responded succinctly:

"No'm." "Will he be back soon, do you know!" questioned the visitor. "Guess so-'fore long. But he's dreadful strong, and he carries all his money in his pockets," replied Joe, discouragingly.

"Ah!" the lady looked surprised -disappointed, Joe thought, and he volunteered another dissuasive remark: 'I'm awful hard to get to sleep." "Are you sure you are wide-awake

now?" asked the visitor, half laugh, ing, but with a puzzled scrutiny of "Bet I am," affirmed Joe, promptly, winking hard to convince himself of his assertion. "I wonder," murmured the lady, "if the doctor didn't leave anything for me. I thought I should find what I wanted if he had gone out." Joe's eyes opened round and large; he changed his position uneasily, and might not be getting drowsy in this perilous state of affairs. The lady's glance swept the room, and as it rested reflectively on the precious white jar, Joe grew desperate. "See here, mebbe you might find something real nice in the other room!" he burst forth eagerly. "Doctor leaves lots of things there sometimes." "Does he, so that people can get them when he is away? Probably he has left what I want there." Her face brightened; she paused an instant as if expecting Joe to lead the way, then asked, "Where shall I look?"

"Under the - on the table in there," answered Joe, pointing toward the article mentioned, but following at a respectful distance until she was fairly within the room. Then he sprang suddenly forward, closed the door and locked it, piled two or three chairs against it, and surmounted them with the coal-scuttle.

"There, now," he cried excitedly. "Open the door!" demanded the lady's equally excited voice from within Such a joke is very, very rude! What do you mean?" "Mean to keep you till Uncle Max comes, 'cause he told me to-that's what I mean. You can't put me to sleep now !" said the young jailer decidedly. "The child must be insane!" exclaimed the bewildered prisoner. But Jee was quite certain of his sanity, and as his alarm gradually subsided into a feeling of security, since his captive had no way of escape, he became convinced that he had done an exceedingly brilliant thing. "Oh! I know all about you!" exclaimed courageously. "The doctor told me to keep you till he got back, but I don't suppose he thought I could do it. I will, though; you can't get out, and you shan't steal nothin' either." "Steal anything? What an idea!"

A slight laugh rippled through the lady's voice, though the situation was seriously annoying. "You have made some strange mistake, little boy. I have a long walk to take, and it is growing dark.. Please open the door," she urged coaxingly.

A Suggestion Concerning Kerosene.

A correspondent writes: I offer a suggestion which has long been in my mind, but which seems so natural that I have continually expected to see it made by those who are more directly concerned—the dealers or the insurance companies. If is, that upon every package of kerosene, (using the term in a general sense) there should be pasted a printed warning, something like the following. It would pay the insurance companies to supply it to dealers free of charge, and this would save the community in the end the trouble of enacting a requirement for affixing the warning to every can or package, and setting a penalty for its neglect:

KEROSENE. buy fire-crackers with for the evening Danger from fire. Never fill a burning lamp. Fill lamps by daylight. "All right; it's all the same thing," If obliged to fill at night, have the Joe did not quite understand it, not ight a yard off, and not in a curren

Sometimes one hears it said of a good wife and mother that "she's a regular home body." The phrase is simple, but what a world of enobling qualities it indicates, and what a universe of frivolities it excludes. The matronly home body is indeed "Heaven's best gift of man." Dashing ladies, whose mission it is to set fashions, wont you laok in upon your gentle sister as she sits in her well ordered nursery making the children happy with her presence? Note how she adjusts their little difficulties and admonishes, encourages, instructs and amuses them, as the case may require. Do you think any nurse maid could produce such harmony in that circle? FEARPUL MARINE DISASTER. One of the most terrible marine calumities that has occurred for years transpired Tuesday morning off Cape Prespect. The steamship Atlantic, from Liverpool to New York, ran ashore on Meagher's Head, at 2:30 A. ... Tuesday. There were on board ver 900 steerage passengers, 50 cabin passengers and the crew, in all amounting to over one thousand souls. Seven hundred and fifty perished, only some 250 being rescued. The Atlantic sailed from Liverpool on March ")th, and getting short of coal determined to run into Halifax. The weather being stormy and the night dark, the struck the rocks 22 miles west of Halifax. The sinking of the vessel was so sudden after striking, that many went to a watery grave without having been awakened from their slumhers. The vessel and cargo are also a total loss.

AN OUTRAGE ON JUSTICE. The practice, in New York, of arresting witnesses and keeping them cenfined in prison is an outrage on justice. If a man or woman happens to be poor and should see an assassin strike the murderous blow, fear of arlest and imprisonment, as a witness, might be a sufficient motive to deter such person from making the fact known. Thus justice would be defeated, simply because of this outrageous practice of imprisoning witnesses. Should a witness have a family dependent on his or her daily toil for subsistence, the motive would be strong to conceal all knowledge of the commission of the crime, lest they should be arrested and their families made to suffer.

We believe that it is in the interest of justice and humanity that the press everywhere should cry out against this New York outrage. Instead of imprisoning witnesses, who happen to know of the commission of crime, the fullest liberty and protection should be accorded them. They should be made to feel that for their knowledge and assistance in bringing the perpetrators of crime to justice, the public would respect and protect them, and their families would not be made to suffer by their arrest. When such a state of affairs exists, we may expect some of the mysterious murder cases in New York to be cleared up. The following from the Detroit Post, on this subject, is pertinent to the point: "I would guard the reputation of witnesses, and see to it that they suffered no injury in either character or purse in their efforts to aid justice. But, while the law and the practice are what they are, it is no wonder that so many murders are never explained. If an unfortunate woman, or a man whose antecedents will not bear inspection, happens to know of a murder, or other felony, she or he dare not reveal it, because the revelation will consign them to jail, or expose their own lives to public notoriety. Who so likely to know who was the murderer in the mysterious Nathan case, or in any mysterious case, as some person familiar with the criminal classes— a 'pal' or a mistress of the murderer? But the law would visit any such who should reveal the murderer with a penalty instead of a reward, and with injurious notoriety instead of protection."

STATE UNIVERSITY.

The bill has at last passed the Legislature requiring the Regents to appoint, in the University, two Homeopathic professors. The war that has been going on so long, relative to the Medical Department of the University, does not appear to be much nearer's solution now than before the passage of this law. There has been a constant conflict between the Regents and the Legislature as to who, according to the Constitution, were the lawful controlers of the University. The Regents claiming that the Institution was under their control without the interference of the Legislature, while on the other hand the Legislature claimed the right to exercise control over the University the same as over other State Institutions. In order however, that the appropriations for the University may be obtained, the Regents will undoubtedly comply with the provisions of the law requiring the appointment of two Homeopathic professors.

What the exact effect such appointment will have, on the Medical Department of the University, is not casy to tell. It is, however, feared that the result will be disasterous, and that the Department will be totally ruined. This should not be the case. but the persistent antagonism of the two schools of Medicine, will hardly be calculated to cause the Medical Department to move on smoothly. We shall not, therefore, be at all surprised to see the efficiency and reputation of the "Ann Arbor Medical School" wane from its now brilliant reputation. This will be brought about, not so much by the Homeopaths as by the stubborness of the Alopaths. The latter are determined on no account to recognize Homeopathy as having any claims to an equality. The hopes that were entertained, by the over sanguine, of the immediate success and prosperity of the Republic of Spain, are all vanished into thin air. Division and discord in the army is leading to many troubles and difficulties. The several parties are striving to see which shall rule Spain. The Carlists, the Communists, the Republicans and the Federalists. Now these parties are all at work with a will, to defect each other. There being much ignorance the inevitable result follows of conflict of arms, bloodshed and general devastation and ruin. The lesson that the Spanish Republic will, in all probability, teach the nations of the carth, is, that a permanent and successful Republican government can only be formed where general intelligence pre-

It is very doubtful if Spain succeeds at all with a Republic. The general information is no better than in France, and hence if the Republic is successful it will have to do so through years of toil and in the education of the masses.

Lansing Correspondence.

March 31, 1873. Editors Record:—I have but little of interest to the many readers of the RECORD to write you this week, and fear that my letter will not be worth the space it will occupy in your valuable paper. The great majority of bills passed during the week in both Houses have been of a purely local character, and from present appearances the Legislature will never have an end of bills to incorporate or reincorporate, revise or amend the charter of some city or ambitious village, or to change the limits of some township or school district, or change the zame of some brainless young man whose Dulciana does not happen to like his present old fashioned, unmusical sounding name and demands, as a condition precedent to matrimony, the change to a more New York Ledger style of name, or perhaps some faded, withered old maid imagines her chances would be enhanced by a change of name, and, (all other expedients having failed) the Legislature is immediately besieged, and his or her cause being championed by the "member" from their particular district, your readers can easily see that a vast amount of local business is thrust upon the Legislature to the great detriment of the State. The subject of "Woman Suffrage" is beginning to attract some attention here, resolutions having been introduced in both Houses to amend the constitution so as to extend the right of suffrage to women, and the discussion will be reached, I think, during next week.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Haslett of Hillsdale, spoke to a crowded house in Representative Hallon the subject. vise the constitution of the State. Her remarks were for the most part addressed particularly to the members of the Legislature in the nature of a plea for what she claims the natural, inherent right of her sex withheld from her by man in plain violation of every principle of right or justice, and I must confess that to my mind her remarks were clear, logical and sound as a brick, and at times grandly eloquent. Every particle of objection to the submission of the question at least was removed, so that the Legislature will fail of their plain duty if they neglect to submit the question to the people, or rather to the few who do the voting, and see what they are "going to do about it." Your correspondent is of the opinion that the resolution will pass in the House, but can not get over about 18 or 20 votes in the Senate, old fogyism still prevailing in the Senate chamber to some extent.

The following which I take from the Lansing Republican will give your readers a pretty correct idea of the more important bills passed during the

From the Detroit Post. Constitutional Commission.

We clip the following relative to Constitutional Commission from the Detroit Post:

"The Michigan Senate has passed a bill providing for a Commission to re-The number of the Commissioners is fixed at Eighteen, or two from each Congressional District. This is, certainly, we think, quite a large enough number: and we question whether a smaller number, or say one from each Congressional District, and three from the State at large, would not be better. We hope the House will pass this very important bill, without increasing the number of Commissioners. An increased number means increased expense, and probably, diminished efficiency. Too many cooks have already, in this State, several times spoiled the broth; and we are not desirous of having any more failures.

The proposed Commission, it must be remembered, is not to create a new constitutsion to be submitted directly to the people, like a Constitutional Convention. Therefore it is not needed that the number of Commissioners shall be large, so as to represent every small locality and small interest in the State, All that the Commission is to do is to examine the present constitution carefully, and report to the next Legislature such amendments and revisions as will cure its manifest defects. The next Legislature will represent every locality and every interest in the State; and that Legislature will carefully examine the work people such portions thereof as it approves. It is plain, therefore, that a small number of Commissioners, composed of able men, will do the work as well as, and probably better than, a large number; while the smaller number will be likely to entertain fewer local crotchets, to defeat the whole thing. We sincerely hope this important resolution will pass the House. If the resolution passes, the Governor will have an opportunity to exercise careful and sound discretion in appointing the Commissioners. The Commission will be a political body in the highest sense; but not a party. It should represent all parties, with a view of putting in the constitution such general principles as all parties can agree upon. And it should be composed of the ablest men in the State. This the more because these Commissioners are not to be officers wielding any power over the people, or having any authority to finally determine any Constitutional changes. They can only propose amendments to the constitution, which proposed amendments will first have to be approved by the next Legislature; and only such of the proposed amendments as are approved by that Legislature will be submitted to the people. Every opportunity to proprsoe amendments. list of all the taxable lands earned by and, doubtless, each will have the op-

"This has been a very severe cold winter. Since the first of February however, we have had some pleasant weather.

"Several from this vicinity are going to Kansas. I presume they wil find the winters more mild there, but the summer months not so pleasant. I am well satisfied with this county. I never had a poor crop yet. My wheat averaged over 20 bushels per acre the last year. 'I am going to sow forty-five acres this spring and expect to harvest over 600 bushels. Have you any Granges in Michigan? It seems as if they would take this State.

There is a lodge organized in this Township at Long Grove. Every farmer in the township except four has joined—myself being one of the four. I am glad to see the farmers wake up and if they can do away with middlemen and get their farming untensils cheaper and a better price for their grain and produce, there will' be much good accomplished. There have been so many rings working in opposition to the farmers, it is high time farmers were forming rings for mutual protection and profit.

At present there are four different railroads graded through the county and will all be in running order by next fall. The Dubuque and St. Paul will be completed to Fayette village in a short time. The Cedar Rapids and Milwaukee R. R. (the one I am most interested in) is now completed as far as West Union. and will be finished sometime early the coming summer. This road runs within 11 miles of my place, and makes a station at Long Grove, then I will have but a short distance to the wheat looking very well, and we are beginning to look around and fix our fences, cut wood and prepare for another summer's hard work. But we farmers never tire of work, when the season is prosperous, we have to work and take what we can get for it, it is certain we cannot figure our own profit after counting the cost. If we raise enough to eat and pay for the newspaper we read then nothing is said. Yours truly, PASSENGER.

"The Best and Cheapest Hotel in · America.

There are a great many hotels in this country whose proprietor, with a sense of confidence, that is truly touch ing, will believe that the above heading refers to their particular hotel, and no other. If these proprietors were all etter written March 23d, to the Junior assembled in a body at a certain time Editor, from his brother in Fayette and place, and a trumpet was to sound the above quotation, wouldn't each and every proprietor there cry out as if with one voice: "That's my house?" We say, "No!" But our "traveling correspondent," whose perambulations extend through every quarter of the globe, says, it is "Alas, to true!" and we submit to his superi> or judgment. We mean however to speak of New York Hotels. There is one hotel on Broadway, that certainly is the largest, best and cheapest first-class hotel in that city. We wish to say, and experience will bear us out, that when a guest receives an elegantly furnished room, with meals, at his command, from early breakfast every hour till midnight, with a perfect parlor on wheels for an elevator, to carry him from one floor to another, and all for $3.00 per day, we think the proprietor of that hotel may come forward and claim the above title for his house. The Grand Cen tral Hotel, on Broadway, upon which has been lavished nearly two millions ($2,000,000) of dollars, is that hotel. Its proprietor, H. L. Powers, judiciously discriminates between the upper and lower floors, fixing the prices at $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 per day, according to location. The Grand Central is the only hotel we know of, that

-Last Tuesday Cornelius Fitten committed an outrageous assault upon his wife, Margret Fitten, at their home on the section line road in the township of China, some four or five miles from this city. Mr. Fitten, as we learn, was badly intoxicated, and in his condition, from some trival occurrence; commenced beating his wife, knocking her down and stamping her in the face with the heel of his boots in the most fiendish manner. Dennis Mahaney interfered to save her life, when Fitten attacked him with a knife, cutting his thumb badly, and then struck him with the edge of the knife across the throat, making a bad gash. The latest intelligence is that Mrs. Fitten was improving somewhat, though not beyond the reach of danger. CIRCUIT COURT. - The next regular term of the Circuit Court will commence on Tuesday, April 15th, 1873.

WE have known business men to go to a distant city- to get their job printing done, laying in, while about it, a large supply, and believing they were making a saving thereby that was something worth while, because the home office, would not do work as cheaply on a $5 order as the city concern would on one of $100. Then we have heard these same men complain because the country printer did not furnish his office more completely with type, or print a better newspaper when at that very time the printer was straining every nerve to excel in both. those respects. With all this, we haveknown the same men to call on their neighbor, the printer, to ask him to give his time, his thought, his best-efforts, gratuitously, to advance schemes for their benefit ten times as much as Farmers and Stock Men. Attention ! for his own, and when all was over,

THE ST. JOSEPH Herald says: Two steam vessels were seen off St. Joseph port, on Sunday last. The railroad bridge was repaired on Tuesday at 3 p. m. The first train to cross was the night express.—The pier light and the bright light in the light house top are regulary burning from sun-set to sun-rise.—A steamer was seen southwest from St. Joseph on Wednesday, fast in the ice. Four steamers are said to be in Lake Michigan out of Milwaukee, and all fast in the ice.—The fish boats last Saturday were very successful. Some took over 1,500 pounds Fifty two boxes were shipped to Chicago from that day's catch, worth to St. Joseph not less than $15,000.—The snow storm of Tuesday night blockaded the trains and for 36 hours the road was tightly closed. This is not the case, as they would know were they to read either of the papers published within our limits. The fruit crop has undoubtedly been injured by the severty of the winter but home are yet ready to admit of a total failure. By examinafions made in many of the orchards in this immediate vicinity fully one half of the peach buds have been found alive and in a good state of preservation. Winter never closed in upon trees in a better condition to stand extreme cold weather than last fall, and we perdict, with confidence, fully a third of a crop. Strawberry vines, blackberry and raspberry bushes have been so covered with snow that their injury has been impossible, so that our neighbors across the way, and in less favored localities, may depend upon a full crop of small fruits and at least one third of a crop of peaches in 1873. bad would put salt on the hills. When the ground is highly manured grubworms will not trouble corn. The reason potatoes are watery is because they do not get ripe.

Dr. Ree thinks there should only be three kernels of corn planted in a hill. The eggs of grub worms are laid in weedy or grassy ground, in the month of May or June. Said it is not worth while to plant corn on the lack of the said of the toes, and thinks it is not any more poisonous than the bugs. Early varieties he plants early, and late ones late. Corn should be plowed until after harvest. Thinks four quarts of Timothy seed is too much to sow upon one acre of good ground. Mr. George H. Martin, late of Indiana, who has settled in Oronoko, has secured the valuable work by Dr. Navin on Stock, which he will offer for sale through Berrien County, canvassing township by township. This work is published in Indianapolis and sold by subscription. No other similar publication sells so well, and its great merit is causing a wide and extensive cir-culation and gives universal satisfaction. Wonderful cures are being effected. It treats upon the diseases of horses, cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry; giving the history, symptoms, causes and treatment of all diseases and blemishes they are heir to. Twenty-five years ago when the Commissioner had only about oneeighth as much money to handle, and about one-tenth as much business to do as they have now, their bills were from one-third to one-half as high as they are at present. I have simply charged what the law allows as the bills will show, to-wit, $1,50 per day, throwing in horse and buggy and board. I have tried to attend to my duty under all circumstances, and nearly worn out a new buggy going over the rough roads on township business with but a trifling compensation for it. I have hired men to assist in surveying roads and paid them out of my own money, then added the amount to my own bill But enough of this It should be borne in mind that while the Commissioner's bill has but little more than

Some gold is spun; still saying, "Thy will be done,"

Sin fills the soul with the most loathsome diseases. Love from without and terrors within, unite to open the window, that God's sunlight of truth may enter. Faith then reaches out and touches the garment of the great Physician, and purity, love and holiness take possession, and the human soul is made a fit temple for the indwelling of the spirit of the living God.—Judge C. R. Brown.

Successful Preachers.

Says the London Freeman, it is an inestimable comfort as well as a benefit to the Church of Christ, that the most successful preachers of modern days are plain, though powerful men, dealing plainly with a plain gospel. The modest student, the simple local preacher, the timid country pastor, after joining in the living mass of worshippers at the Tabernacle of Bloomsbury, goes-away without dejection of spirits. Recognizing nothing in the staple of the discourse save the familiar truths of the great Atone ment, set forth with sympathy, power, and the lively grasp of present conviction—he goes on his way encouraged and not dismayed. "I, too," the says, "am one of them. I have not their powers, but I have the weapons. I, too, can ask, and it shall be given, not in their measure, but in my own, and yet effective." Truly, he may be thankful. God has not made pulpit success in these or in any other days conditional on the possession of learning like Jeremy Taylor's, wit like South's or metaphysics like Foster's. Still less he yoked it to the elaborate, exhaustive essay of our fore-fathers. The best and utmost effort of every Christian may well and usefully be devoted to him; but whether from men of golden eloquence or otherwise, the words that charm are, after all, the words of the dear old gospel, and with prayer and earnest common sense, every faithful minister can employ them, with a divine warrant, backed by all human experience, for success. Thank God for the plain, pointed, evangelical preaching now prevalent in so many thousand places in our land; and wherever prevalent, procuring the attendance of crowded audiences, and the progress of thriving churches.

There is nothing in reason to warm or move the soul; it is cold and pas-sionless; it operates in subordination to some other of the faculties of the mind. We use it as a light to our pathway; we council it, but do not always profit by its admonitions; we ask it to point out the rocks in the ocean on which we are sailing, and when it shows them to us, and indicates which way to shift the helm to avoid the, we often shut our eyes and ears and oat on to destruction; thus giving the lie to that system of philosophy that teaches that there is sufficient in reason to insure the happiness of the race.—Judge G. R. Brown.

No Poverty There.

Millions of good men have left the earth as poor as Lazarus, the moment he died, was a beggar at the gate; but in a moment after his death his estate had grown so fast that the haughty worldling, still surviving in all his affluence, in comparison with him was a penniless pauper. Oh, poor believer! rejoice in prospect of your grand inheritance! It is incorruptible, undefiled, and fadeth not away. It is really immense, inestimable, unspeakable. Has it not been your endeavor to "lay up for your selves treasures in heaven?" Why not oftener think of results there?
Fear not: There is good news from that far country. Unsuccessful as you may have seemed on earth, your heavenly schemes have all prospered. The treasury of God overflows with your results. wealth. And it is safe—perfectly safe: Neither moth nor rust corrupts; nor can thieves break through to steal it. Moreover, it shall in-crease—forever increase. As long as you live on earth you may add to the principal, and its interest will multiply beyond all computation, to all eternity. Crossus was rich, Solomon was rich, Lecullus was rich, and the Rothschilds are rich; but the humblest heir of God is richer far than all. It may be that the stores you have already ac-cumulated in heaven would buy this town, buy the district, buy the country, buy the world—and still be com-paratively untouched. Nay, think not this extravagant! I would not barter the heritage of the most desti-tute of Christians for the whole globe and all its improvements. Lift up your heart; let it expand and over-flow with bliss. At the close of the short journey through time, you will see eternity open before you, all radiant with the variety of your bound less and endless possessions. Be not proud, indeed—alas for the folly of all pride!-but be grateful, thankful, hopeful and happy.—Stockton's Ser-

Widow Jones' husband died far away from home, and it took so long for his remains to reach her that he relect had quite recovered from her grief, and was giving a lunch-par-ty when the body arrived. A wagon drove up to the door, and a large box was handed out. Curiosity ran high among the ladies at the window, and with one accord they exclaimed:

Up went Mrs Jones' eyeglasses, and after a glance, she coolly said:
"Well, it must be old Jones has come hom; Charley, run; down and

A Sacramento lawyer remarked to the Court: "It is my candid opinion, Judge, you are an old fool." he Judge allowed his mildly beamng eye to fall upon the lawyer a rief moment, then in a voice husky with supressed tobacco juice and omotion, said: "It is my candid opinou that you are fined $100.'

An Irishman once lived with his father as hired man. The young folks of the neighborhood, on one occasion, had a party, to which they did self very much slighted, but, after cogitating for awhile, he brightened up and exclaimed, Faith, I'll be aven with 'em yet; I'll have a party myself and I won't invite 'any body."

A bright little boy hearing his father-say that a man-ought-to-"stick to his business, "emptied a bottle of mucilage in the old gentleman's effice chair. The old man says he has not been stuck so badly since 1857 and rewarded his offspring by taking him on a whaling trip to the back cellar.
