assembled to give pleasure to each other. Bob Flint enjoyed it thoroughly. His friend, Mr. Durand, approached him during the evening with

Our Bobby was pinching the kitten,
And kicking his primer about,
And pulling a beetle to pieces,
His face all wry in a pout; so energetically before, Bob. Why, His mamma, who, silent and patient, -Has heard all his fretting and noise, Now reached for the whip on the mantle-Blake, Ellie Blake, yet?"

But grandma, with snow-white 'kerchief Pinned over her warm, loving breast, Where ten little heads have been pillowed. And rocked into childhood's sweet rest, Looked up from her little wool stocking, Just finished and laid on her knee, And said "Dear, you'll ruin his temper, You'd far better let the child be.

'Don't whip him; his father before him Was flogged, and shut up in the dark, And stood on one foot in the corner, And disciplined up to the mark; We gave him no credit for honor,
But watched him as spiders watch flies,
And what did it teach him? Why, mainly
To practice deceit and tell lies. "We called it affection and duty-

God knows we were fond of the boy-

But I guess his remembrance of childhoo

Is not quite a well-spring of joy, So put up that willow whip daughter, And try little Bobby once more; You see he's forgotten his passion, And lies half asleep on the floor." Then grandmother lifted her darling, And patted his head on her breast; And sang an old favorite ditty, Till all Bobby's woes were at rest, And so the wee whip, bright and yellow, Was laid on the mantel again;

THE ODD GLOVE

"It is a dear little thing, anyhow, Ned."

"How much longer are you going to stand there and sentimentalise over it, Bob? Fling it away and come along."

"Fling it away? I shall keep that glove till I find its owner," Bob Flint replied; folding the little fresh lilac kid glove gently, and putting it in his vest pocket.

"And when you do find her what will you do ?" "I pledge you my word to ask her for the hand that wore it."

"A rash vow, my prince; you may not be pleased with your Cinderella when you find her." "Thank you for your suggestion; I will follow the prince's example and search everywhere till I find her, feelng that she is the one incomparable woman Fate has allotted to me." "Only don't get taken in by some spurious article, as the prince very nearly did when the two wicked and ambitious sisters of the adorable Cinderella cut off their toes and their heels that their feet might fit into the

"I heed your warning my good fellow, and shall keep my eyes wide open.

Bob Flint and Ned Durand were spending a week in the dog-days together in the country; Ned enjoying a vacation from the office, and Bob, whose whole life was a perpetual vacation, killing time as best he could. Here, in a little country place, of a bright, beautiful Sunday morning when there was nothing to rouse one from dreaming but the sound of the church bells and the song of the birds, Bob Flint had found, in a tuft of green moss beside a little brook, a dainty lilac kid glove, and on that slight foundation he had built a romance of which he was the hero.

He was young, good-looking, idle and rich. Therefore he was free to indulge in romance. He was resolved to marry when he found some one to. suit his fastidious taste. Now he ed." pictures to himself what the owner of he thinks, blue-eyed, with slender, blue-veined hands, and wavy golden

He did not find her there though, so he abandoned the search for a time, still keeping the little glove, as one would a talisman.

Bob Flint was inclined to take the world easy. The result was that sev- when he did see her again the charm en years later he looked scarcely a deepened. His friend, Ned-Durand, now the sober head of a family, invited him to pay him a visit at his home in the country. Having dence of culture. A cabinet organ nothing else to do, Bob accepted; and was cordially invited into the family dows; a beautifully carved writing

"I declare, Ned, this looks quite patriarchal. Why, under the sun, didn't I get married when you did?" "I really don't know, except that you did not find that Cinderella you were looking for-the owner of the odd glove. Still, it is never too late to mend; and in spite of your advanced years, I think you might try a matrimonial engagement on your own envying my good luck."

"Don't think I envy you; but really it does look very cozy." "I believe I forgot to tell you, Bob, that my wife expects some company; and a lounge completed the furniture. this evening, so if there are any alterations to be made in your toilet, you haven't much time to spare." an approving nod. "Never saw you play the agreeable wife says you are quite an acquisition. Have you been presented to Miss "No. Who is she?"

"She's an authoress." "Horrors! Keep her away." "Wait till you know something about her before you say that. She has been a friend of my wife since the year one, and next to my wife she's the nicest little woman living. She knows how to do everything, make bonnets and dresses, take care of a house, cook, sing and write. She knows everything a woman ought to

"And a little more, I'm afraid. Ned, I do so dread authoresses and clever women. Perhaps she'll make fun of me."

"I shouldn't wonder if she did. My wife made fun of me before she got too desperately in love with me to see my imperfections. I tell you, Ellie Blake is a brave, good woman—a woman who has had a hand-to-hand struggle with poverty, a woman who never quailed before the wolf at the door, but battled with it till she conquered it."

Bob Flint's quick feeling was touched. "I should like to see such a woman," he said. "Which is she?" I don't see any one who looks like an authoress.'

"My dear boy, they're not all made after the same pattern. There she is resting her head on the mantle."

Bob looked eagerly and saw a sweet, fair face, not classically beautiful, but irresistibly attractive in spite of the irregularity of the features.

Laughingly, Mr. Durand approached her. "If you are not in a very critical mood, to-night, Miss Blake I want to present my friend, Mr. Flint to you. He's not so hard as his name would suggest; so deal with him gently, I pray you."

Bob's dread of the authoress soon vanished, and it seemed to him that he was aroused by a general signal of departure. "Miss Blake," said Mr. Durand, I'm here to redeem my promise to see you home; but if you'll accept a poor substitute, I will offer Mr. Flint in my "Provided Mr. Flint be willing," rejoined Miss Blake." Mr. Flint was only too happy. It was a clear, star-light night, and Ellie Blake was even lovelier, with a background of nature, than she was in the parlor. She and Mr. Flint walked unhurriedly till they came to a little cottage, almost covered with vines. Roses, woodbine and pale morning-glories twined over it till there was little of the cottage to be seen save the windows, and in these hung delicate moss baskets: while the delicious fragrance of the heliotrope, roses, geraniums and mignonette filled the air. "Whose little nest is this?" asked "Mine," was the reply. "I thought so," he replied. "Houses reflect the character of their inmates. You can judge every living creature by his permanent surroundings." "What judgment do you pronounce, then, on the owner of this little nest, as you call it." I should say that she possessed exquisite refinment and ideality; that her artistic senses were fully develop-

"Thanks. You flatter me. Come that glove may be. She is a blonde, and see it by daylight. You have the pass-word—the open sesame. Good night." "May I come to-morrow?" "Yes, you may come to-morrow."

"Then good night, and pleasant dreams. No boy in his teens was ever more completely bewildered by a dazzling woman than was Bob Flint by this much dreaded authoress. He was awake all night wishing it was next day, that he might see her again. And

A diminutive colored girl opened the door for him, and bowed him into the parlor. Here he saw every evioccupied the space between the windesk stood in one corner of the room; on each side of the mantel were bookshelves filled with valuable books, while over the mantel-piece there hung a soft chromo representing a scene in the Alps; fine steel engravings hung on the walls, and innumerable little straw frames containing photographs of eminent painters, musical composers and authors. Delicate white muslin curtains, with fluted ruffles, hung account, instead of standing there at the windows. Richly-tinted autumn leaves filled a partan vase on a bracket of carved wood, while an exduisite marble bust stood on a pedestral by itself; three or four easy chairs of this room, with the exception of a centre-table on which was a student's lamp, a vase of fresh flowers and a standing globe of the earth. A light, delicate carpet covered the floor. It was the abode of refinement though not of wealth: Unfortunately the "I want you to make me a promise, two are not always combined. Bob

"I have remarked that fact," Bob replied. "It seems that your hands are never unemployed."

"It is an old habit," she answered with a half sigh. "There was a time | and claim the hand in exchange for when I had to work constantly; when I could not afford to keep such a dot of a servant as I have now, and my own fingers had to do all the work for myself and a young brother who is now away to school. I am far from rich now, but I have bought this little home out of my own savings, and I have many comforts and little work compared with what I had then."

"You cannot mean that you did all the work yourself?" asked Bob. "Yes; every bit of it-sweeping, dusting, cooking, making fires, scrubbing, even," she answered with a merry laugh.

"But to a person of your refinement—" the estimation of any one man or woman of sense. It is greatly to your credit, but I do not understand how you found time to write."

'I always make time for that, as well as for reading. I think those two things are as necessary to me as sleeping or eating. The difficulty at first was to get a publisher for what I wrote. A novice in literature must have patience and perseverance in unlimited quantities in order to succeed. But when you get a fair start, literature pays well, and it is a delightful profession; one that has nothing repulsive in it, nor jarring to one's sens-

"Isn't your departure rather unexpected?" "Yes, rather; may I come in again this evening and take a farewell walk with you?' "You may; but you must accept my hospitality this time, and come to tea; after tea we will take the walk." So it was agreed, and Bob returned punctually. Miss Blake was waiting for him at the door, the vines around the doorway forming a frame for her own picturesque self. She wore a dress of silver grey, a soft material that fitted her graceful, slight form to perfection; she wore a knot of scarlet velvet at her throat, and a bright red rose-bud nestled in green leaves in her chesnut hair. "I cannot come to-morrow," thought poor Bob.

She met him with a sweet, rippling minds to go for the oak tree, and in "I'm so glad you're on time; I was afraid my buscuit would be cold. You stroke of the axe, he cutting on one are very good. Come right in now to | side and I on the other. When it was

I first didn't realize just how bad the situation was. When it began to leak into my head that I was really dead, and was going to be buried in the ground, and shut out forever from the light of the sun, it frightened me. The long ride to Oshkosh passed like those things that happen in a dream. We got there, and I was taken to my brother's house. He felt terribly bad when I was brought home. I hadn't any idea that he thought so much of me as he did. I could hear him cry and talk, and still hadn't the power to move a muscle. I was put in a coffin, and it finally came out that I was to be taken to Watertown to be buried. My old mother lived there you know. Oh, boys, I hope none of you will ever be made to feel the horrors that I felt when I knew that I was boxed up in a coffin and would soon be buried. Seven years have gone by since then, but I never think of it without a shudder. I could feel them putting on the lid of the coffin,

The doctor said I had a narrow escape. My spinal cord, they said, had been struck by the branch of the tree, and I was as good as dead. It was more than a miracle that I was brought to. They had a good deal to say about paralyzing my nervous system and stopping my circulation, and all that, but, at any rate, I got well.

School Teaching in California

A pedagogue in Indiana, who was "had up" for unmercifully welting the back of a little girl, justified his action by explaining that "she persisted in flinging paper wads at him when his something awful had happened, but I back was turned." That is no excuse. The town crier once taught school up in the mountains, and about every half hour had to remove his coat and wasn't any pain, and how long a time scrape off the dried paper wads adhering to the nap. He never permitted I staid there I can't tell. I suppose a trifle to unsettle his patience; he just kept on wearing that gaberdine until it had no nap, and the wads wouldn't stick. 'State Items. -The Jackson Citizen says that

Charles Aylworth who tried upon two different occasions to commit, suicide without success-first in the Police Station Sunday night, and again at his own home on Monday afternoon, succeeded in his work of death early on Wednesday at the city lock-up. He had mounted a chair, tied a handkerchief around his throat and attached it to the top bar of the iron door, and then stepped off from the chair and, though one foot rested on the lower round and the other within an inch of the floor; had persistently strangled himself to death in that position. Mr. Aylworth was an employe in the Citizen office, and when not under the influence of strong drink was one of the best members of the printing profession in this city. A man of high culture, intelligent, gentlemanly, kind hearted and of superior qualities every way, his only fault was his appetite for intoxicating liquors. This he has indulged until his mind, his constitution, his social standing and his prospects were all alike blasted and now he will fill a suicide's grave, with his hopes for eternity imperiled, and or. He was 35 years of age and leaves an estimable wife and two interesting young children, the youngest about two years of age. . -Hon. S. H. Blackman, who has been at the Hibbard House in the city

-Russel Hastings, a lad aged 14 vears, and son of S. S. Hastings, of St. Louis, accidentally shot himself in the hand on Saturday last, under the following circumstances: It appears that the lad went to the granery in the barn after some feed, and while there found an old pistol which had been previously concealed in the feed by a younger brother. Not knowing that it was loaded, he cocked it, when it accidentally went off, the ball passing into the fleshy part of his right hand, and coming out above the wrist, producing a painful and dangerous wound. But it is thought he will not lose the use of his hand.—Gratiot

Mr. Cosper says he approached to within eight feet of the apparition, before it disappeared, and he wishes it distinctly understood that he regards; the matter in no spiritualistic light, but that he "knows he saw, just what the relates;" therefore, as he only, tells, of the circumstance when pressed to do so, we are bound to look upon it as strange indeed:

The time is drawing near when many of the members of the Legislature doubtful. begin to get anxious about returning to their farms and other business avocations. In their anxiety we fear that many of the important measures, now before the Legislature, will be hastily nassed over or wholly neglected. In either case the interests of the State will suffer, and this will be doubly the case if two years must pass before the matter can be remedied. If the best interests of the State are considered the Legislature should not adjourn without some provisions being made tor a session next winter. This might be done by an adjournment, or by an understanding with the Governor that an extra session would be called. The objection urged against the former plan is that it would delay the operat can pass the Senate this session. tion of many of the laws which have Thursday evening the House had as been passed during the present session, as in all cases where immediate effect is not given to acts they do not take effect till ninety days after the close of the session at which they were passed. An adjournment to January would therefore be simply a continuation of the present session, and all laws enacted thus far would be inoperative till ninety days after the close of the next winter's session, except such as were ordered to take immediate effect. The only feasible plan left then is, that of the Governor calling an extra session. The Governor ought to do this, and if it were so understood by the Legislature that body might at once adjourn. Time and thought could then be given to the perfecting of the bills now before that body, and such other

SHIPBUILDING. The great decline in American shipbuilding seems to have reached its lowest point. This branch of American industry is now decidedly on the increase. It is asserted on what seems to be reliable authority, that more ocean ships are contracted for, to be built in American, yards during this year, than in any one year since 1860. This is a very encouraging feature in an important branch of American industry. Iron ships, of American construction, are worth in the market 20 per cent. more than than they were last year. These indications argue that at no distant day, the full magnitude of American shipbuilding will be fully equal to the most prosperous days of our nation's history. We even predict, that not many years hence, more ocean-going vessels will be constructed in this country yearly, than was the case when shipbuilding was in its most prosperous days. The energy, perseverance, and superior advantages, in many respects, of the indomitable A'number of petitions have been presented by the National Banks, and a bill was introduced asking the Legislature to refund to the banks the amount of special tax paid by them before the passage of the act for taxing the shares of stock. They how-ever failed to "see it in that light" and defeated the bill. It will be remembered that while they were pay-

The resolution passed the committee and goes on to the order of third reading of bills. Can the resolution pass the House is a question that no member as yet is prepared to answer. On Friday both Houses adjourned over until Tuesday evening next in order to give the members an opportunity to go home to vote or be voted for as circumstances may determine. March 31, 1873. WAGNER & KINGERY—Gentlemen: -Enclosed please find $6.00 to apply on my subscription to the RECORD. Why is it that farmers in the vicinity of Buchanan, interested in your cheese factory and other village property, bring their farm produce to this market and do much of their trading here? Some of them pass through your town on their way here. Can't your merchants afford to pay what the butter, eggs, &c., are worth? Or are the Buchanan people too poor to buy the necessaries of life at a reasonable price? It gives South Bend rather a poor opinion of your town to see so many of your citizens patronizing this city. However they are good customers and we are glad to see them and hope they will continue to give us their patronage. We think their trade is worth something notwithstanding the Buchanan merchants don't. Yours Truly, J. MILTON ROE.

FROM PIPESTONE. April 3d, 1873. EDITORS RECORD :- We have often read interesting letters in your paper from different parts of the county, but none from Pipestone township. Think-ing probably there may be some who would like to hear from this section I will mention a few facts which I hope will be of interest. The past winter has been the most severe ever seen here, so say) our oldest settlers. We have had good sleighing for about one hundred and fifteen days. Feed for stock is very scarce and almost impossible to get. Many of the farmers are entirely out. Our school (District No. 16) was largely attended this winter-sixty-three scholars I believe. Probably our new school law compelling the attendance of children had something to do with it, for last fall a number of parents were fined $5 fcr not sending their children the required time. I presume there are other districts in the county where it should be enforced .- The United Brethren denomination held a protracted meeting of some length at the Burk school house. Quite a number of new additions were made to the church. Among the number was Mr. Philander Brant, a young man of good education and good habits. By his efforts his father and mother and a number of others have joined the church. For a young man and the chance he has had, Mr. Brant has few equals. On Saturday and Sunday of March 29th and 30th the Brethren held their quarterly conference at this school house. A part of their business was to license Mr. Brant as an exhorter. On Sunday morning Elder G. Sickafoose, of your place, delivered a very able and eloquent sermon at the school house, which was listened to with interest by a large concourse of people. 'His text was a part of the 13th, 14th and 16th verses of the 11th chapter of Hebrews.—The young people in the neighborhood held a "play party" at the residence of one of their number on the evening of the 1st day of April. It being "all fool's day" two promising young men must needs commemorate the event by taking a little more hard cider than was good for their stom-ach's sake. Mr. John Inman is going to build a very large and handsome house the coming summer. The United Brethren also talk of building a church somewhere in the neighbor-Yours Respectfully, QUI DOCET. -The farm house of Mr. Jacob Gentzler, about two miles south-east of this village was entirely; destroyed, by fire, on Sunday night last, between the hours of nine and twelve o'clock. Although diligent search has been made, no trace of the missing man has yet been found. A strange story, however, is connected with the sad affair. It appears, from the account of Mrs. Weston, given to Major E. P. Evans. State Commissioner for the relief of sufferers by the storm, that on Friday morning, after the three days' storm had subsided, as she lay in the bed awaiting the return of her husbandshe having used all the wood he had prepared before leaving-she heard some one approach the house, and presently there was a knock upon the door, with the voice of a neighbor, saying: "Mrs. Weston, John is frozen to death!" She arose, greatly year old child, hearing the announce-real about the appearance of his neighbor that he had no thought of anything unnatural, and when the neighbor addressed him with some familiar exclamation of greeting, he answered as he usually does when so addressed, and added: "Why, you here?" We thought you were frozen." Weston replied: "So I am, and my body lies mile and a half northwest of Horsey," at the conclusion of which in New York City, where he married, and resided until 1850. He was for several years foreman in a large Um brella and Parasol manufactory in that City. From thence he, with his family, moved to this, Berrien County, and settled on a farm in Bertrand Township. He held the office of Supervisor of that town three years. In 1857 he sold his farm and moved to this place, and it company with Wm. B. Perrott, engaged in the mercantile business as the successors of Messrs. Ross & Alexander. In 1862 he was elected County Clerk. After his term of office expired he engaged in the Boot & Shoe trade, which he carried on several years. He subsequently became the agent of several Fire Insurance Companies, which business he continued in up to the time of his death. Last winter he was elected Justice of the Peace to fill the vacancy of D. E. Hinman, Esq., and but a few the village. He was an active and devoted member of the Masonic fraternity. Was by that Order highly respected and hopored. Was Master of the Lodge for many years. He was a man of excellent business qualifications having but low equals. In his many and important offi-cial capacities he proved himsell capable, prompt, and always faithful. His acquaintance was extensive. He was a man of good moral character and strict integrity. In his intercourse always social and genial. Was generous and honorable with his fellow men. He won the esteem and confidence of the public, and had many warm personal friends. ·· He raised an intelligent family of two sons and three daughters, who are most highly respecte men and women. His companion, a devoted, faithful and affectionato wife and mother, though not favored with riches in her widowhood, is blessed with kind and effectionate children. Mr. Terriere's death was sudden and unexpected to all. He had complained of being a little unwell several days, though actively engaged abou his business in the office up to the evening before he died. He had always been a hearty man. When he cross in the morning he said to his wife that, he felt quite ill, and laid down on the lounge, saying he would like to have his physician, Dr. Berrick, called, who was immediately summoned, but before he arrived he fell quietly sleep in death. THE SOWERS. They are sowing their seed in the daylight fair; Tiry are sowing their seed in the noonday's

glare;
They are sowing their seed in the soft twilight;
They are sowing their seed in the solemn night;
What shall the harvest be? They are sowing the seed of pleasant thought; ha the spring's green light they have blithely wrought; They have brought their faucies from wood and dell,

Where the mosses creep and the flower-buds Rare shall the harvest be.

They are sowing the seed of word and deed, Which the cold know not, nor the careless heed;
Of the gentle word and the kindly deed,
They have blessed the heart in its screet need; Sweet will the harvest be.

And some are sowing the seeds of pain, the late remorse and maddened brain; And the stars shall fall, and the sau shall wane, thre they root the weeds from the soil again, Dark will the harvest be,

And some are standing with idle hand, Yet they scatter seed on their native land. And some are sowing the seed of care, Which their souls hath borne, and still must bear; Sud will the harvest be.

They are sawing the seed of nobler deed. With a sleeping watch and an earnest heed. With a careless hand o'er earth they sow, And the fields are fairer where'er they go; Rich will the harvest be.

Sown in darkness or sown in light, Sown in weakness or sown in might, Sown in meekness or sown in wrath, In the broad field or the shadowy path-Sure will the barvest be.

Merit.

Merit is the American citizen's guarantee of ultimate success. Worth -not wealth-makes the man; moral and intellectual fitness, -not hereditand interection interes,—not hereuitary honors—give to our countrymen place and power and assign to our citizens their proper sphere in the civil, political and religious circles. Here, the lordly palace is no index of titled rank or real worth; the meanest hovel may be the castle of him whose noble mind may yet control the helm of our ship of State.—Judge C. R. Brown.

Prejudice.

"Were you ever at sea in a thick fog, when you could not discern between a cloud and the land? Then tween a cloud and the land? Then you know what prejudice is. Those who form their opinions of others by what has been told them, or by merely seeing them pass by, look only through a thick fog, and cannot discern the true character. You may be a friend of ours; we may speak hard things of one you do not know, and on this account you are prejudiced against account you are prejudiced against him. Is it right? There are scores of excellent men, shunned and despised by those who know nothing derogatory to their character, but who have had their minds turned by some one who spoke a thoughtless

Be careful. Never speak lightly or contemptuously of another on account of the prejudices of a friend.
Men of sterling minds are not guilty of this breach of good manners."

Though the world is better than it was a few centuries ago, it is very evident that we are indebted for this fact, not alone to the powers of intellect and reason. The history of our race, with our failures and sucpromote virtue and morality, to be most successful, must be coupled with the energy begotten only by the spirit of the Redeemer of mankind.—Judge C. R. Brown.

Selfishness.

It is said that selfishness has no soul; that it is a heart of stone en-cased in iron. Though the spirit of selfishness aims to grasp all, there is, in reality, nothing so self-sacrificing. It robs its own grave, mortgages its own bones, and sell its own soul. The own bones, and sell its own soul. The man who is all for himself, is no better to himself than a suicide. He perils all the future for a present gratification; he borrows pleasure at an exorbitant rate of usury, and pays by the immolation of himself, body, and soul. Having no eyes to see the miseries of the world, no ear for the wailings of the wretched, no heart for sympathic. the wretched, no heart for sympathizing with distress, he turns away from all, and seeks to enjoy himself alone. He imagines that his own good will be promoted precisely in proportion as he can detract or take from the general good of society. He concludes that individual and social benefits are mutually antagonistical. His mistakes make him see to inquire without imparting. The consequence is, his whole mind becomes eventually narrowed down to the little circle of self, wherein he alone revolves as subject, attribute and object? and he is virtually cut off from association with his fellow-creatures—almost with his God. He is self-sacrificed.

Honorary Members.

"Two-thirds of the members of my church," says a pastor, "are honorary members. They don't come to prayermeeting; they don't attend Sundayschool: they don't add to the life of the church; they are the passengers on the gospel ship; they bear no burdens; add no strength; their names are on our books; they are honorary members."

...Visited Niles For Fifteen Years. DR. V. CLARENCE PRICE,

Only Physician of his Kind IN THE WEST.

Consumption, Rheumatism, Catarri, "Throuchtits, Dyspopsia, &c. The reputation Dr. Price has acquired by, candid, honest dealing, and years of successful practice has induced unprincipled persons to copy and imitate him as far as they dare, in order to deceive. Let it be remembered that no person in the west is treating Chronic Diseases similar, to Dr. Price—thackis practice is not one of experiments, but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experiments but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experiments and the remembered to sustain it. That it does not tear down to build up—make sick to make well—no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of these diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our polaries, claim not to knowleverything, or to cure-very-body, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call, invostigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits will be made regularly.

Dr. V. Clarence Price can be consulted at Niles, Reading House, Saturday and Sunday, the 26th and 27th of April.
