"Oh. that's all nonsense!" said Helen, briskly, as one might check a querulous child. "Now, be good and quiet, there's a darling, and you shall have chicken broth, and port winewith an egg beaten up in it-for your lunch when I come back."

And Helen tripped briskly away, leaving her miserable brother-in-law enveloped, as it were, in a vaporous halo of palm-leaf patterned dressing gown, boiling steam, and a black velvet skull-cap.

"I suppose this is the way I shall look when I get to be an old man,' thought Aleck, as he caught a glimpe of himself in a mirror opposite. don't think I should know myself if it wasn't for the onyx-seal ring on my little finger of my left hand. Oh, dear! I wonder how long this maddening state of things is to last? Phew! how hot the water is! Am I a lobster, to be boiled alive?" and he withdrew his toes with hot haste from the surface of the steaming water, poising them like the claws of a bird, on the edge of the tub. Miss Tracy's ball, indeed! A pretty subject I look like for a ball! I wonder if she is so. very pretty after all? and Helen has faithfully kept the secret of my monied expectations from her, so I shall have the satisfaction of at least knowing that she is no fortune hunter,

Here Mr. Graham's meditations ended in a brace of prodigious snee-

"The top of my head is safe!" he thought rather dubiously, feeling of the crested tassel of the black velvet skull cap. "I didn't know but that it had blown off! confound this thing, it keeps getting over my eyebrows, as if I were going to play at blindman's buff. Helen's respected papa must have a head the size of Giant Blunderbore's! And-Cobe id!"

The last words were hurled in the direction of the door, upon whose panels a gentle tap had sounded. "Betty after the hot water," thought our hero. "She may have it and wel-

"Is Mrs. Graham in?" asked one. "Do, ba'ab, she is dot," Aleck answered, stifling a yell of anguish which had been momentarily caused by his dropping both feet into the tin tub, as the more feasible method of hiding

"How provoking," cried the taller of the two, a blue eyed damsel with a profusion of yellow hair. "What shall we do, Julie?".

"Just step in a moment, and write her a note, of course," the other answered. "You needn't mind that old gentleman, Isabella. He is Mrs. Graham's father—as old as the hills and as deaf as a post, besides being twothirds blind !" "The horrid old creature!" lisped

the torquoise-eyed damsel. "Such people haven't any business to live !" And Aleck, secretly rejoicing at the erroneous conclusion at which his sister-in-law's friends had arrived, shrank still further back into the friendly recesses of the big easy chair, and blessed the obscuring effect-as far as eyebrows were concerned-of the black velvet skull-cap, while he kept up a perpetual oscillating movement with his anguished feet.

The young lady whom her compan-ion called "Julie" advanced smilingly toward him, and ejaculated, in the tone of voice denominated by vocalists "high C:" "I will-write-a-note-if-you

"What had I better say, Isabella?" "Oh, what you like," listlessly answered the blonde. "I suppose that rich brother-in-law has not come yet. Do you really think he is worth waiting for, Julie?" "Of course he is. Tom Jeffers says it is a hundred thousand dollars at the very least," the former answered, abstractedly biting the tip of her pen. "Such things are always exaggerated," said the tall beauty shrugging her shoulder; "and I don't mean to throw myself away on any mere hum-

""You horrid, mercenary thing!" said her friend, laughing. "And poor Leonard Appleton, who is perpetually sending you bouquets that he can't afford; and engaging opera boxes at twelve dollars per night. Isn't it a rather shabby way of treating him to throw him over, after all ?" "Don't speak so loud!" said Isabel

A shudder stirred the folds of the wadded dressing gown. Mr. Graham liked his own cigar, but the idea of beholding the blue smoke wreathes issuing from a woman's rosy lips! Forbid the idea—it was a little short of sacrilege! And this was the beautiful Isabel Tracy, whom he had come to New York expressly to fall in love with! A heartless flirt who uses liquid rouge and believes in cigarettes! It was simply horrible—that was what it was! as! Miss Kesgrove finished her note, directed it in violet ink, sealed and superscribed it after the latest fashion, and the two young ladies swept out of the room with no more ceremonious parting greeting to the figure in the easy chair than a cold nod; and no sooner had the door closed behind them than Aleck Graham jumped up, overturning the tin foot-tub in his glee, and performed a triumphant pas seul on the hearth-rug, flinging the skull-cap half across the room, and recklessly endangering the skirts of the dressing robe against the coals of

"Hold your tongue, Julie!" cried
her friend, sharply. "It's Alexander

"I should rather think it was, my. lear!" was Mr. Graham's mental comment on these words. "And serve you right for amusing yourself with the tortures of my poor friend, Leonard Appleton. Upon my word it strikes me that this whole affair is a Island, off which place the vessel was remarkably jolly lark, take it for all in all."

But Miss Isabel Tracy did not look upon it in exactly the same light. Mr. Graham recovered triumphanty from the cold in his head, thanks to the mustard draughts, potash lozenges, and plenty of Irish moss tea;

In August, last year, a New London sealing fleet left for the South Shetland Islands, and it was mutually agreed that the captains of the vessels should do all in their power to discover what had become of the five lost men. When the bark Nile, commanded by Captain Williams, came to an anchorage on Potter's Cove, St. George's Island, the captain and a number of his men went ashore to see what had happened to the men. The captain expected, owing to the frightful cold of this region of perpetual snow and ice, that none of them would

THE MODOCS AND OTHER INDIANS At last the Modoc war is closed Jack and his band having surrendered to the troops. The question, now of importance, is, what shall be done with the Modocs? They are captured

-they are within the power of the Government, and how shall they be disposed of? Shall they be dealt with by the Military authorities, or shall they be turned over to the courts of Oregon to be tried for murder, is a question of no small moment. Let this matter be determined as it may, it will have great importance as establishing a precedent for future cases that may and will likely arise.

As far as the Indian is concerned it appears, from our stand point, that the best effect on red men will be produced by letting the Military authorities dispose of them. The Indian cares not for the civil law; it is only the Military power that can keep them in subjection. Make the Indians feel that all treachery, lawlessness and raids upon the whites will be punished speedily, by the Military power of the Government, and much will have been done to secure a permanent peace with the various tribes. On the other hand, it may be contended that if these Modocs are turned over to the civil authorities and they are tried, convicted and executed for their crimes. that it will create in the savage breas a respect for law. This may be so but we cannot see it in that light knowing a little of Indian character The Indian is not governed by just principles or principles of right, and we believe this is conceded by all who have had much to do with the West ern tribes. It is only the Military power of the Government that tends to keep the savages in subjection Were it not for the troops there would be no safety for white men any where within the Indian borders. Let the Government then, so dispose of these treacherous Modocs as shall best tend to mete out justice to them, and as shall result in the greatest protection to the white population on the borders of civilization. If this object can best be accomplished by turning these treacherous savages over to the courts, let it be done, but, if as we believe, the Military can best dispose of them, then let the Military do it. Only let the one great object be kept in view-the punishment of the guilty and the protection of the innocent. It is high time that the Government should protect the pioneer white settlers from Indian depredations, no matter at what cost it has to be done. Once let the various Indian tribes understand that if the stock or lives of the white men are taken, that the whole tribe, whose members commit the depredation, will be held responsible, and made to suffer except the guilty ones are surrendered, and restitution of stolen property made. Let this plan be followed up for a brief period with energy and the result will soon be that a white man can travel alone unmolested through the Indian country. To us it appears that Congress should make all necessary provision for the protection of our frontier settlers, even to the authorizing of the raising and equipping an army sufficient to speedily punish any breach of good faith, on the part of any Indian tribe within the jurisdiction of the United States.

THE CONTEST.

The result of the Judicial elections held in Illinois on Monday indicates pretty correctly the drift of public sentiment. In that State the farmers' movement against the railroad monopolies has assumed definite shape. The result was that in most of the Circuits where the farmers had candidates they were elected triumphantly. This farmers' movement is but in its infancy, and is destined to sweep monopolies from the country. The farmers have long been regarded as a class who would submit to almost any imposition, but we are glad to see them beginning to assert their independence and manhood, and make politicians feel that they have rights, which must and shall be respected. The farmers have been long to get stirred up, but when once aroused they will not tamely submit to be robbed by wealthy corporations of their hard earnings. Success to the farmers in all their just and right demands.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

There has been and still is considerable talk, in official circles and through the press, of the annexation of the Sandwich Islands. To an reflecting mind the importance of a foot hold midway in the Pacific Ocean would result in no mean benefit to the United States. The relations with the government of those Islands, are of the most amicable character. It is hoped at least, if annexation is not effected, that a naval station will be secured upon these Islands for the United States. If this is done its importance will be immense, and the Islands will ultimately gravitate to this country. The securing of a naval station there would give our Government an advantage over any other foreign nation on the Pacific not to be despised. President Grant, as is his custom, constantly looks out for the interests of the United States upon the seas as well as within our own borders. In order to know just how matters stand, Col. A. B. Steinberger has been appointed a special commissioner to visit Honolulu, and see and learn how the people there feel upon the subject.

-A day or two ago George W. revealed to his astonished gaze. The lump weighed five ounces four penny weights and eighteen grains, and is worth in greenbacks something more than a hundred dollars. The chunk state of honor which actuated him was almost chivalric. His honesty was as unquestioned as his ability. No public, man of the present century has left behind him a nobler stone when a lump of pure gold was than a hundred dollars. The chunk has the appearance of having been melted and poured on a flat surface to cool. In shape it is flat and hearly round. How it come where it was found is one of the things that will the heart of the heart o probably never be explained.—Hills boarders at the County Poor House.

TALKS PEACE.

Since the proclamation of President Grant relative to the Louisiana troubles, Governor McEnery has issued an address to the people, counseling acquiescence in the Kellogg government. While he casts the most bitter denunciations upon President Grant, he acknowledges the folly and madness of attempting resistance. He also counsels peace and good will to be cultivated between the two races, which are nearly equally divided in that State. It is well for McEnery that he concludes to take the sober, sensible view of the case, and leave it with Congress and the Courts to settle. If he had pursued this course long ago, it might have saved some bloodshed and much bitter feeling in that State. The general impression, however, is that there is not much sincerity in McEnery's professions of peace, and that is only object is effect. Let this be as it may, we trust good will result therefrom, as it is a clear acknowledgement of his inability, to even sustain his government in name, against the decisions of courts and the proclamation of the President. It is then to be hoped that the lesser lights will also see the futility of keeping up this unpleasant political fued in Louisiana.

As able and as prominent as any of his contemporaries, but more fortunate, was the late Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase. Of a famous New England family, he was born in the early part of the present century, and was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1826. Immediately after leaving College he went to Washington and applied for a clerkship in the very partment of which, in after years, he was its honored chief! Unsuccessful in his application, he taught for two years in a private school in Washington, studying law the while, and upon his admission to the bar, began the practice of his profession in Cincinnati. The first part of his professional life was full of discouragement. Poor and friendless as he was it was only owing to his most unremitting application and unwearying industry that he managed to keep body and soul together. Not till 1837 did he come into any prominence in his profession, when his brilliant and scholarly arguments in defence of fugitive slaves and those persons who harbored them won him a reputation as honorable as it was deserved. In 1841 for the first time he took part in the political controversies of the day, when he lent his co-operation and influence to the new party formed on an anti-slavery platform of which he was one of the original founders in Ohio. In 1849 his public life really began, when he was elected for the full term of six years to the United States Senate. He at once acquired a high reputation in the Senate as a powerful debater and eloquent speaker, and though at that time, owing to his strong anti-slavery proclivities was in the minority, yet he exerted a strong influence in legislative action. Upon the expiration of his term in Congress he was elected Governor of Ohio and held that position with distinction for four years, when he was again elected to the United States Senate, but his term of service there the second time was of short duration -it lasted but for a day-for immediately after Mr. Lincoln took the Presidential chair Mr. Chase was made his Secretary of the Treasury. His four years' service in Mr. Lincoln's cabinet won for him a lasting fame. If success is the standard of ability Mr. Chase is certainly entitled to rank among the ablest of financiers. The measures which he originated and put in successful action safely carried the country through years of exhaustive war. There was never a lack of money in the Treasury during his manage-measure of military necessity. In 1864 at the request of Mr. Lincoln, he accepted the position of Chief Justice, which he held till his death. During the last few years of his life he was subject to a painful and debilitating disease, yet his mental powers remained unimpaired, and his decisions one not unworthy a successor of his illustrious predecessors. Although his friends might have chosen that his ambition might not have led him to seek the position of the Presidency, yet he cannot be charged with undignified or unbecoming : action in his

The Modoc War Ended.--Captain Jack and His Band, Captured.

LANGELL'S VALLEY, May 30, 5 a. n.—At six o'clock yesterday morning the troops left Willow Creek Camp for a sharp and decisive scout, and met with admirable success. The Warm Springs trailed the Modocs across the creek and in a northeasterly direction, then due north, and finally to the rocky cliff bordering Langell's Valley on the east. This scout from the outset was the most exciting of the campaign. The freshness of tracks and the apparent proximity of the Modocs maintained a continual excitement. Led over ridges, mountains, along canons and valleys, over small streams and water routes, traveled with difficulty by the best trained horses, and miles upon miles of lava in a fragmentary form, the troops literally left behind them a trail of blood and horse shoes. Several miles south of the valley the scouts lost the trail and were suffered a detention of two hours' halt. It was broken by sudden yells from the Warm Springs and cheers from the soldiers. The command "forward" was given by Colonel Green, the scouts called out to the right and left of the line and covered the trail.

Then came troop K of the Eirst Cavalry, Major Cresson commanding, Lieutenant Bacon in charge of the skirmishers. Troop K belongs to the squadron of Captain Jackson's. Suddenly four rifle shots were fired from the rocks, and four bullets whizzed over the soldiers. A line of skirmishers deployed along the crest of the bluff and started the Modocs from their lair. About this time Scar-faced Charley and two or three other Modocs rushed down the rocks and cried out. "We surrender; don't shoot." The Modocs came in and at once hostilities ceased. Dr. Calaness, of Yreka, a surgeon, who has long been acquainted with the Modocs, went up among the rocks and made the peace negotiations. All the Indians, including Jack, agreed to come in. Dr. Calaness slept with them last night. A few moments

APPLEGATE'S HOUSE, CLEAR LAKE. June 1, 3:30 p.m.—A series of prolonged yells and cheers aroused this camp from a pleasant siesta half an hour after the departure of my courier. General Davis, General Wheaton, and other officers, and all the men rushed from the house and tents to find the cause of the uproar, and at once the whole camp was in commotion. Down the level plain north of the house was a grand cavalcade of mounted horsemen. The steeds rushed forward at once at a ferocious rate. and soon neared the groups of spectators scattered about the premises. "Captain Jack is captured," shouted s sturdy sergeant, and again the valley echoed with cheers and yells. The mounted command was that of Perry. He had returned from a scout of twenty-three hours, three miles above the mouth of Willow Creek. At 10:30 o'clock this morning the Warm Spring Scouts struck a hot trail. After a brief search Modocs were discovered. Colonel Perry surrounded the Indian's retreat. His men were bound to fight. Suddenly a Modoc shot out from the rocks with a white flag. He met a Warm Spring and said Jack wanted to surrender. Three scouts were sent to meet Jack. He came out, cautiously glanced around him a moment, and then, as if giving up all hopes, came forward and held out his hand to his visitors. Then two of his warriors, five squaws, and seven children darted forth and joined him in the surrender. The command that made this famous scout was the first squadron of the First Cavalry, Colonel D. Perry, composed of troop F, Lieutenant Miller; and troop H, Major Trumbull, and medical officer Assistant Surgeon Dewitt. The guards

She in the course of the evening transferred the entire amount to Williams in various sums of twenty or thirty dollars each. In the morning the drover was missing. On going out of her room the woman saw blood along the stairway which she traced to a new made grave. She afterward lived at a house in Omaha which became haunted. The Mexican Question. WASHINGTON, June 2.—There is still a disposition in most official quarters to be extremely reticent in regard to the McKenzie expedition into Mexico. The following may be relied upon as a fact: McKenzie was selected by the President from personal knowledge of his fitness for the work he has begun, and was ordered from another post to duty along the border. While his instructions did not in terms direct him to cross the border, he fully understood that it was the desire of those who selected him for his new duties that all maurading parties should be hotly pursued and punished, without special regard to what streams or lines it might be necessary to cross. His written orders directed him to chastise mauraders from Mexican territory. His verbal instructions covered any foray into Mexico that might be rendered necessary. The President has fully made up his mind that if Mexico cannot maintain order along her own border and prevent invasions into the United States, she shall not become a house of refuge for robbers of our citizens, and that he henceforth use all the needed power to protect the lives and property of citizens of the United States, without regard to the boundary lines of Mexico. In accordance with these views Colonel McKenzie was ordered to the border, and will be upheld for his last expedition, and any similar one in future which he finds it necessary to undertake.

The authorities here are fully advised as to the state of affairs in the Southern States of Mexico. A large majority of land owners are believed to be in favor of annexation to the United States. As a general thing the priests are opposed to it. Local authorities of individual States are for the most part favorable to a protectorate or annexation. No trouble with Mexico is anticipated from McKenzie's operations along the border, since Mexican authorities admit their inability to prevent the incursions and so don't object to the punishment which has followed, and which is expected in future under similar circumstances.

The Arkansas Trouble. .

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 2.—In the Supreme Court to-day the Attorney General filed an application for a writ of quo warranto against Governor Baxter, to show by what authority he holds the office of Governor. The application is in the usual form, and sets out by stating that the Governor has unlawfully usurped the place. Governor Baxter refuses to recognize the rights of the court to hear such an application, and has announced that he will obey no mandate issued from it on such application, and refuses to employ counsel to fight the matter. Judges English and Compton, both eminent attorneys, appeared in court and opposed the filing of the application. Argument on this point has been going on all the evening, and will be continued to-morrow. The filing of this application by the Attorney General has renewed the excitement of a few days ago, when it was rumored that 'such action was to be had. Should the writ be granted a conflict will ensue. The Governor holds that the Legislature adjudges the matter, and is the only power that can. The militia is being reorganized

Louisiana.

NEW YORK, June 2.—A New Orleans special gives an address of Governor McEnery, in which he says: "President Grant, as chief magistrate of the nation, has assumed the high and grave responsibility of foisting upon the people of this State a usurpation without precedent in this or any other free country, and he is answerable before the bar of public opinion for this high-handed measure. The President, with an army and navy at his command, has the physical power to coerce the people of this State into any line of policy that he may be pleased to dictate; and it would be but folly and madness to interpose any resistance likely to bring up a conflict with the national authority; yet the deeply fixed sentiments of irrepressible hostility in the minds and hearts of an outraged people against the vilest usurpation that was ever attempted to be fastened upon freemen will find their full scope and vent. I advise that these manly and patriotic sentiments take form and shape through all the moral and legal, agencies possible to be devised. In the mean time I trust that peace and order may reign supreme throughout the State, and that all our industrial pursuits will be unembarrassed by political difficulties; and especially do I urge upon the two races, who are numerically nearly equal in this State, to cultivate one toward another nothing but feelings of amity, good feeling, and mutual understanding.

We noticed old Mississippi yagers, Hawkins' Rifles, Springfield nuskets, Sharpe's and Spencer's carbines, Colt's, Smith & Wesson's and other pistols, and plenty of knives. Some of these fellows were employed as soldiers during the winter, under General Crook, against the Tonto and Pinal Indians, their natural enemies. and did good service. But it was rather aggravating to see some of the oldest of the party, who have doubtess scalped many a white man, paradng our streets with powder-horns, bullet-pouches belts, guns, etc., that we are sure they procured from the victims of their ambuscades in years gone by. We hope they have buried the hatchet forever, but should prefer to meet them on the highway or in the mountains without such good arms in their hands.

On the Verde Reservation last Monday there were 1,187 Indians, and by this time the Apache-Mohaves from Date Creek have reached there. and 1,600 redskins are now being fed at that reservation. But the redskins did not all leave Date Creek, as the last count at that post showed 592, and Lieuter Schuyler took only 360 of them to the Verde. The remainder-and they are the young braves of the tribe-are yet at large and refuse to go upon the Verde Reservation, and will not until they get another lesson or two from General Crook's peacemakers.

Captain Randall's command surcounded Delchay's camp on Canon Creek, April 25, and fired about twenty shots, when Delchay hoisted a white flag and asked permission to surrender. Captain Randall told him he had so often made peace only to break it, that he (Randall) did not have much confidence in his present assertions. Delchay commenced crying and said he would do anything he would be ordered to do. He wanted to save his people, as they were all starving. Every rock had turned into a soldier, and his people were hunted down as they never had been before. He had nothing to ask for but his life. He would accept any terms. Captain Randall said the terms were unconditional surrender as prisoners of war. These terms were accepted and Delchay is now on White Mountain Reservation, under the charge of our Apache soldiers. To-day we are congratulating ourselves and the outside world that the Peace Commission headed by General Crook, has succeeded in getting the Indians generally upon reservations. rejoice over so great a change; but it vigilance exercised in times past. There are Indians yet in the mounteins, and those on the reservations are there not because they like the situation, but because they are afraid of being killed, having been driven by the troops from one point to another, losing many of their warriors by the wayside, and hurried along so that they had but little time to collect food, and no time to plant their usual crops. Hunger and fear drove them

> Census Studies. Who are the Nebraskians? BY PROF. J. D. BUTLER.

LINCOLN, April, 1872. One-seventh of our United States population is of foreign birth, name ly five and a half millions among thirty-eight and a half; in exact figures. 5,567,546, among 38,558,371.

The foreign element is much largest at the North, but its distribution is almost identical in the newer and older States, on the Atlantic and on the Missouri. 'Thus the foreign percentage in both Massachusetts, the oldest State, and in Nebraska, the youngest is in both States well-nigh the same namely, one fourth. In the former, 353,129, in a total of 1,457,351; in the latter, 30,748 in a total of 122. 993. Yet the quality of foreigners West is, no doubt, better than East. Those who have least of pluck and purse, linger along the Atlantic as drudges, or even 'paupers or worse. But those better and better off, go West, become landlords and lords of the land." The first German Governor was elected in a State on the Mississippi.

Of the 30,748 foreign-born Nebras kians those originating in the British Empire are the most numerous, being 12,271. Next, and almost as numerous, is the Teutonic element. amounting to 12,026. The Scandinavians are almost 4,000, and the Sclavonians half as many. Of the Nebraskians. then, three-fourths are native American while of the remainder two-fifths are of British origin. The English percentage is larger in Nebraska than in any other State except three.

These figures prove that the settlers in the United States will form one homogeneous people, and that English speaking and holding mainly to Engish institutions. As they were in the beginning, so CHILLICOTHE, May 29, 1873. EDITORS RECORD :- The weather iere is very wet and backward yet. The farmers are just finishing planting corn. Those that planted some three or four weeks ago have to plant over again, the ground was so wet and cold the seed rotted in the ground. Grass is looking fine, and also wheat and oats. This last winter was so severe that it killed a , great many of the fruit trees.—The 15th of this month a boy eight years old, a son of Mr. Seymour, of this place, was run over by the cars; while standing too near the track his clothes caught and pulled him under, cutting one leg off and badly mangling his body, so that he lived but a short time. -On Friday evening last, George Van Tassel, a lad aged about nine years, a grandson of Mr. John Vincent, in the First Ward, while catching a ride on a construction train, as it was just reaching the old depot grounds, was thrown from a platform car, and so seriously injured that he will most likely be a cripple for life. He is still alive, though it is not at all certain that he will yet recover, and it is not certain that if he should recover, both of his limbs will be preserved.—Monroe Commercial, 29th.

-Monday we meandered around town and about made up our minds that 1873 will make quite an addition to this village. A $4,200 School House is to be built, a store or two will perhaps be constructed, H. M. Onley will build a nice dwelling house on Shephard Street, &c., &c.—Hartford Day Spring.

-The crop prospects, so far as we have been able to judge, are very fair. The spring has been very backward, and spring work has consequently been put back. Wheat in the timbered land looks finely, which will in a measure make up for the deficiency in the openings and prairies, while the weather has been very favorable for the latter. Our impression is that wheat will be nearly an average crop. Cherry, plum and pear trees are in full bloom and promise a large yield.

Postal Cards.

As postal cards will probably soon be in circulation, it may be well to show how they have been used to facilitate a loan. Recently, in France, an individual sent daily several postal cards addressed to himself, on one of which his inquisitive janitor read:

"Please let me know when you will call for that 14,000 francs. Your carelessness is inexplicable. Yours, Another indicated to the janitor that his acquaintance was in the full tide of good luck: "Answer yes or no. I am aware the girl's thousands do not concern you, but you owe some respect to her will not marry her. Immediate." Better still was this one: "Mr. J-, Notary, requests you to call at his office as soon as possible, to acquire possession of the property of the late Mr. Bigourdin."

Astonished at the contents of this correspondence, the indiscreet porter lent 50,000 francs ($10,000) to the ingenious borrower, who, of course, suddenly disappeared. The police were duly informed of the matter, and when the officer asked the janitor why he lent this man his money so foolishly, he answered naively, "Because I thought he didn't need it." So candid a creditor deserved better number I noticed an article about Granges which are being organized in the western States, and it is strongly intimated that to succeed and have the approbation of "farmers generally" they must keep out of politics. Of course they must attend to agri cultural pursuits wholly and make all the improvements, profits and gains they can and pay over to the collectors all the net proceeds, that our Legislatures may make liberal appropriations. Farmers should have nothing to do with politics, but may they not look into some of our sugar-coated reports of Superintendents of Public Instruction? He took three men on board and brought them to St. Joseph, the fourth man staying with the boat till the tug "Daisy Lee" went to the rescue and towed her in. Mr. Mulholand, the owner, suffers loss of about three hundred dollars by the accident, as some twenty-eight nets and five hundred pounds of fish were lost, also the boat's rudder. WE have often thought it would be wise plan for our merchants and business men to form an organization among themselves for mutual benefit, to consult together and adopt that system of business that will secure the largest trade and result in the most benefit to the the town generally. Not Some of the most important questions that would be discussed by such a society would be, when and where to buy goods of various? kinds What kind of clerk hire is most profitable? What is the best method of dealing with customers? whom to trust, and whom not to trust? the best plan for collection of accounts? What amount of advertising should be done annually, and what kind would be the surest'to get a certain class of customers who are in the habit of trading at other places? What is produce selling at elsewhere, what prices are being asked for goods of different kinds at neighboring towns, what should be done to make it an object for those who do their trading at this place to continue to do so, and to influence others who do not, to come and spend their money in our village? Our merchants should be on the most friendly and intimate terms. Their interests are in a largemeasure identical. What each one does to help build up trade in our village is directly for the good of the whole town. Our merchants should give each other the benefit of

OVER THERTY YEARS AGO LYON'S KATHARRON FOR THE HAIR WAS first placed in the market by Professor E. Thomas Lyon, a graduate of Princeton College. The name is derived from the Greek, "KATHRO," signifying to cleanse, purify, rejuvencile, or restore. The favor it has received, and the popularity it has obtained, is unprecedented and incredible. It increases the Growers and Beauty of the Ham. It is a delightful dressing. It cradicates Dandruff, 'It prevents the Hair from turning gray. It keeps the head cool, and gives the hair a rich, soft, glossy appearance. It is the same in Quantity and Unruggists and renof a Centony Ago, and is sold by all Druggists and Country Stores at only Fifty Cents per Bottle in in the little of the little

Only a heart, a woman's heart, Step on it! crush it! so! Bravely done like a gentleman, Turn on your heel and go.

Only a heart! What harm is done? Let it bleed in the dust and moan; Or stiffe its anguish as best it may, Or stiffen, my lord, into stone.

Only a heart! it was fresh and young, And tender and warm, I know; As pure as the spirit of chastity, My lord, and it leved you so.

But nothing is lost; let it die, my lord! Let its death be quick or slow;

Such hearts are as plenty as summer leaves We find them wherever we go. Only a heart! do not fear, my lord,

Nobody on earth is near To come to the cry of the wounded thing, And God is too far to hear.

What Science has Done for Our Know edge of God.

What then have the sciences added to our sense of the awful power of the infinite God? Astronomy by slow degrees from the conception of a single earth tented over with the jewelled canopy of the sky, to a result which I suppose is as real as any other inference of reason, that the earth is one planet among many in the soler system, and the solar system one among many in the stella cluster, and the stella cluster one among many in the visible heavens. It was a great discovery that the sun's apparent motion was an illusion, and his rising and setting were but movements in the earth's revolution. But the sun itself is moving, and with a speed that can be measured, attended with its planetary train, and the narrow scrutiny of the astronomer's glasss can tell us how the receding stars converge as we are driven along, like the houses on a shore we are quitting. If, as is at least probable, our whole system is revolving round a centre, lurking unseen in enormous distance behind the Pleiads, then may not the very centre itself be subject to the same laws of motion? And where is this chain of thought to end? How far should we travel over immeasurable space before we should reach the point of central rest? If we were to try to express by figures the times and spaces measured in such researches, the usual signs of calculation would be meaningless to us from the vastness of the phenomena. Or ask physiology to speak of the abundance of life upon our planet and by fair analogy in other worlds as well. There is no insect so minute but is truly a marvel of creative power. Each is a little matter, quickened and lighted with life, with a power which we cannot understand, cannot even define, and which only does not arrest us with adoring wonder because its frequency blunts our faculties. When the earth was preparing for man, great strata were deposited, in every cubic inch of which lie buried millions on millions of minute creatures which God saw good to make. Here again would numbers fail us; we can hardly carry our thoughts beyond the first step. In one place a whole town stands on the rocky tomb of such a minute popula-tion; in another, the shore of a lake is powdered with their remains. Oh, the inexhaustible wealth of that crea-tive energy which poured out on this planet, when as yet it was dreary and void, and unfit for the lordly tenant a little lower than the angels, for whom it was being furnished, a mass of living creatures whose only praise of him was their life and motion, too small for eye to see, yet each perfect in its kind and very good! Chemistry, too, would add its record of wonders. How every plant conspires to recruit the air with the element of which the animals have robbed it, and every animal unconsciously requires the benefit

—how our food is changed into the juices of life—how the plant wins from mere soil and air its sweet perfume, its sap with its peculiar virtue, its form of leaf, and the color of its flower.—Archbishop of York.

In all Thy Ways Acknowledge Him.

A young Christian had decided to leave his studies, and enter business. It was a trial to him, but necessity impelled him to make the sacrifice. What should he do? was the next question. Soon a situation offered itself; it was that of a clerk in a large grocery establishment, with a liberal salary for a beginner. There was one drawback however. One branch of the business was the selling of liquor—not to every one, in a vulgar, common sort of a way, but choice articles furnished to genteel customers for social entertainments and private tables.—The young man, or lad rather, was aware of this fact, and requested a little time for reflection before deciding. His pious parents also took the matter into prayerful consideration, and each party came to the same conclusion, unknown to each other. The boy made up his mind that he must decline the situation, even if his parents desired him to accept it. They decided that they could not give their consent to their son's entering into a place of temptation to himself and of injury to others even if he wished to do so.

So they were happily united in obeying the command of their Lord, 'Acknowledge me in all thy ways;' and soon he directed their path; for a good deacon, with a flourishing husiness, took him into his store, in which, in a few years he has risen from the in a few years, he has risen from the position of errand boy to the head clerkship. 'Him that honoreth me, I. will honor.'

"Stand Fast." So long as the garrison can keep besiegers outside of the fort all the advantage is on their side; but once. advantage is on their side; but once give them a footing on the walls and they can rain down death till survithey can rain down death till surviSEWING MACHINES, not to any suggestion coming from the foe—concedes nothing—yields nothing, he cannot be dislodged; but nothing, he cannot be distorged; but let him for the sake of keeping on good terms with the wicked and world-ly even appear to fall in with their opinions, and he opens; the door to a horde of bandits that will push him from point to point till from his stronghold he is utterly driven.

The roputation Dr. Price has acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice has induced unprincipled persons to copy and imitate him as far as they dare; in order, to deceive. Let it be remembered that no person in the west is treating Obronic Diseases similar to Dr. Price—that his practice is not one of experiments, but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experience and evidence to sustain it. That it does not tear down to build up—make sick to make well—no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of these diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call, investigate before themselves. It will obst nothing, as consultation is free. Visits will be made repularly.

Pleasing are the changes which the "intelligent compositor" can ring upon sentimental and touching bits of prose or poetry. A few days since a needy peron applied to a wealthy citizen for nelp, and received the small sum of five cents. The giver remarked, as he handed over the pittance, "Take it, you are welcome, our ears are always open to the calls of the distressed." "That may be," replied the recipient, "but never before in my life have I seen so small opening for such large ears."

A tombstone at Saratoga, N. Y., remembers, testifies, and warns thus: "Emma; dau'r of Abraham and Matilda C., and wife of Theodore S., died Aug. 10, 1868, Æ 36 years, leaving five children; married too young against her father's will. Single women beware."

One of those curious fellows, who is always getting up statistics, has found out that pious printers are scarcer than plaid zebras, and plaid zebras are scarcer than toad stools with cane bottoms.

What's that picture on?" said a countryman in our hearing the other day in a print store, to the proprietor, who was turning over some engravings. "That, sir," said the dealer, "is Joshua commanding the sun to stand still." "Du tell! Well, which one is Josh and which is his son?"

A Sunday school scholar, only six years old, was asked by his teacher, "Why they took Stephen outside of the city to stone him to death?" The little fellow was silent for a moment, as though absorbed with the problem, when, brightening up he suddenly, replied: "So they could get a better crack at him."
