Poetry. A PARODY FOR THE PERIOD. BY ORPHEUS C. KERR.

The rate of Gold was rising fast, As through a Wall street panic passed A youth, who kept as cool as ice, Devoted to the one device-

His brow was old, his knowing eye Gleamed with a speculation high; And, of all mission said or sung, This, only, knew his sordid tongue-More Greenbacks

In home, that once was his delight, He saw but what seemed mean to sight; Beyond, the dream of Fortune shone: His soul he'd risk to call his own More Greenbacks!

Dark perils lurk on every side!" And, curt, to all, his voice replied, More Greenbacks! "O, stay," the maiden said, "and be Rich in the love I'd give to thee!" Short was his answer, with the taunt,

"Beware the end!" his elders said, "Woe haunts the pathway you would trend;

"You're very flattering-but I want More Greenbacks!" "Beware the certain final crash! Beware the banks' and brokers' smash !" This was the wise man's caution vain-

From "corner" came the grim refrain,

More Greenbacks!

At break in Stocks, as, threatened hard, The pious Drew threw up the card He'd played to many men's despair. A voice came like a dying prayer-

A bankrupt, in disgrace profound, Half-buried in his Bonds was found, Still gasping—0, the fearful price Ilis life had paid for such device!— More Greenbacks

There, in his youth, turned wan and gray, Bleeding, a suicide, he lay; And, at the grave, the sexton old Sighed, as he banked the verdant mould, More Greenbacks! -New York Graphic.

THE ELOPEMENT.

BY G. B. P.

She stood with the open letter in her hand, trembling and ashen-pale, and at last had to clutch at the nearest chair to keep herself from falling. "It is all over!" she cried, after a while, putting her hand to her forehead with a dazed look; "all overall over! And yet, oh, how I loved him!" and Leonard Drake had been a runaway one. Her family was richer than his and ambitious that she should make a great alliance, for she was beautiful and accomplished, and had such a charcomparatively, small competence, her father angrily bade her dismiss such a lover forever from her thoughts. But with Lydia, as with most romantic girls, this stern decree acted only as an additional incentive. She thought her father unjust, and went on loving Drake more than ever. Finally she eloped. From that day her parents looked on her as on the dead.

"She has made her bed, let her lie in it," said her father, savagely. The young courle went abroad very soon, from motives of economy, for if you hide in some obscure town in France or Belgium, you can live very much cheaper than if you stay in England. For five years they migrated from one cheap place to another. Notwithstanding their narrow means they were happy. We say happy; but there had been one cloud on the happiness of the wife. She had come to her husband penniless when he had a right to expect a fortune, and she feared that some day he might regret his choice. All at once, like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, came the crushing blow which destroyed her happiness in an hour. In his bachelor days, and before he met Lydia Trentham, Leonard Drake's name had been associated with a beautiful girl who afterwards married a Mr. Dorchester, an old banker. Peo-

Much was lost, all was more or less incoherent, but enough remained to convince the tortured wife that everyhappiness, in this world. She remained there for nearly an hour, dazed, crushed, not knowing, as yet, what to do. The door opened at last and old Dorcas came in. Old Dorcas had been Lydia's nurse, and had followed her after her marriage; the only one, poor or rich, that had stuck to her fallen fortunes. She started back on seeing the ashy face of her mistress.

"What is it?" said Lydia, rousing herself. "A note from master," was the re-"But deary me! are you ill, ma'am?" "No, I am quite well," answered the poor wife with a great effort. "Ah, I see that Mr. Drake writes he is going to join a party to go up to Vevay not to return till night, if I will excuse his coming back to dinner."

"Yes," Dorcas said, vaguely. "The man who brought the note waits for an answer. Tell him to say to Mr. Drake, 'Go, by all means.' I haven't time or I would write."

Dorcas started off, but her mistress' voice again made her pause. "When you have sent him away, come to my room-I want you," said.

Lydia. There was a little delay, but when Dorcas entered the room her mistress was busy with a traveling-bag.

"Dorcas," she said, "you have been with me all my life—do you want to remain with me still?" The voice was so cold, the face so white, Dorcas dared make no scene.

"I'll go with you to the world's end, ma'am," she answered, freezingly. "Then get ready. I am going to Geneva-on from there as fast as I. can. Tell nobody. Get your things out of the house as secretly as possible.' "Going? Where? What is the matter?" groaned Dorcas.

"If you can't be quiet, and obey without a question, you must stay behind," Lydia answered, in the same hard, unnatural voice. "Be quick and choose—I have no time to waste." She sat down and wrote a letter to her husband, enclosed the torn pages she had found, and poured out the made jealousy of the past weeks that hadi his day culminated.

"I have done now," she wrote. "People were right; you loved her and not me; and now that she is rich and I am poor, I am too proud to wait till I am cast off. So I go, and you needming manner that everybody admired | not follow, and could not find me even her. When, therefore, she fell in love | if you wished. Remember that hencewith Leonard Drake, who had but a forth your life is free from me. Think of me as dead, if you like. In your hands is the only proof of our marriage-destroy it; nothing will then stand between you and peace. I have, only to beg you to forgive me for allowing you to link your fate with a miserable and impoverished wife instead of with an heiress as you hoped."
The letter ended as abruptly, as it began, and was sealed and placed on Drake's writing table. Dorcas came: softly into the room, crying a little in a quiet way. Everything was ready -they could go.

Late that evening Leonard Drake returned home. The servants were in bed, so that it was with considerable difficulty he got into the house—got, in to be horrified by the news that his, wife was not there, though the domestic had supposed, from what Dorcas said, that she and her mistress had gone to Veyay to meet Mr. Drake. Leonard took a light and hurried to his room, where the first object that met his eye was the letter Lydia had written.

Three days after the pretty cottage was tenantless, and a placard swung to and fro on the gate with every gust of the wind, warning passers-by that the place was to let.

Five years had elapsed since Lydia's. disappearance. But she looked, older read Mrs. Dorchester's signature at sternly exclaimed her visitor, sitting "Try to come back to your down. senses. I shall not go till I have explained. A few words will do it. Your husband, and I, instead of being what thing was over for her, in the way of you thought, were trying to keep a great misfortune from you, or, if that could not be done, to break it to you carefully."

There was an air of truth about the speaker that staggered Lydia. She sank nerveless into a chair.

"I must tell the whole story in order to exculpate ourselves," said Mrs. Dorchester. "Your father got into difficulties, forged my husband's name to a large amount, and was on the point of exposure when Mr. Dorchester died. The affairs then came into my hands to settle."

Lydia sata leaning both elbows on the table before her, her face supported on her hands, listening, and look-ther, but it would have sent him to die in goal," continued Mrs. Dorchester, "and would have publicly disgraced all his family. You I knew by name, as the wife of my cousin, with whom I had been brought up in the country as a child, and whom I loved as a brother—as a brother, nothing more," she added, emphatically. "Besides, I was a woman, and, I hope, not a cruel one. So I refused to prosecute, suffered the loss of the money, and hushed the matter up." A groan burst from Lydia. Mrs. Dorchester went on :- "Then I came abroad. At Lausanne I met your husband unexpectedly. He had received some hints about your father, and he insisted on knowing the truth. He then, said, you ought, to be told. But I replied that it would only pain guish. you needlessly; if you, continued to live abroad you might never hear the story. He answered that it would come to your ears, sooner or later. This is why you saw us talking so much together, and why, on several walk." occasions, he sought private interviews with me. One evening he nearly won my consent. But hardly had he gone, before I repented-I shrank from it, you see, as a woman—and I wrote to him, telling him he must still keep our

he afterwards remembered. As soon The very act attracted the as he could, he hurried to consult me. You were, he said, getting jealous; you evidently misunderstood us; and he must tell the whole story now in justice to himself. I was engaged with a party to Yevay, and the room was full; so he joined us, in order to have an copportunity to say all this. Of course, in this crisis, my scruples gave way. My reward is that you have believed me a vile woman. There, that's the whole. I've told the story, perhaps in a hard way; I'm sorry for run from him, seized Lydia. She at you, all the same. Thank God, I've tempted it. The hood fell from her found you!"

She had risen while speaking, and caught Lydia's dress in the excitement of telling her hurried tale. Lydia's gaze, which at first had been fixed on her so angrily, had fallen before her; she had buried her face in her hands, and now, as Mrs. Dorchester ceased, the wretched listener sank senseless to

When Lydia revived, Mrs. Dorchester finished. Leonard Drake had spent three years in searching for his wife, and subsequently emigrated to America, believing her dead. The last time Mrs. Dorchester had heard from him, he was settled at Morrisiania, near New York.

The next morning saw Lydia and Dorcas once more on their way; and, when the sun set, they watched it from the deck of a Havre steamer, bound to New York.

It was late in November when she sailed; but the voyage was a pleasant one, notwithstanding, the season. Lydia felt, however, that she could have better; endured storm; and tempest than the intolerable monotony of was lined and seamed with pain; the dark eyes fairly strained and dilated with suspense. The door opened. A man servant appeared. Is Mr. Leonard Drake in?" cas asked:

"No; he is in New York. Drake is at home," answered the man.

Instinctively Dorcas reached out her arm to support Lydia, as she asked, "who is that his mother?" i "No; his wife. Do you want to see her?" asked the man, rather curtly, beginning to think them people in search of charity, and not liking to encounter the cold air. "No," Dorcas said. A Terrific Railway Trip.

The Account of a Recent Collision and Loss of Life on the Paw Paw Railroad. From a New York Letter. Michigan can boast of possessing the shortest railroad on the American continent, and Paw Paw is its name. It runs from the town of the same name to Lawton, a small village, only four miles distant. The Paw Paw railroad is now the popular mode of transit between Paw Paw and the little village where the famous "Lawton blackberry" was invented. The "train" which runs regularly over this elaborate road consists of a locomotive and one second class car. On the down trip from Paw Paw to Lawton the locomotive draws the passenger car; on the return trip the passenger car goes ahead, drawing the locomotive. The speed at which this train runs is perfectly terrific—to persons accustomed to traveling by canal boat or ox teams. A few years ago the company put on a sleeping car to run with the night train which left Paw Paw at six p. m., but the conductor and engineer "played it" on their employers in a way that spoke volumes in favor of total depravity. Soon after leaving Paw Paw, the engineer [who was his own fireman] would fire up lively, open his throttle valve wide, and, being sure that there was steam enough in the boiler to run the concern through the night, he and the conductor would get into the best berth of the "sleeper," which the conductor was careful to reserve, and there sleep undisturbed till morning, while the train sped on utterly unconscious of any such sharp practice. A few minutes before reaching Lawton, the conductor and his "pal" would crawl out of their nests to their posts and prepare for breakfast. This sly game was kept up nightly for nearly six months, when the superintendent discovered it, and dismissing both emplovees, ran the train himself. A few months ago a terrible and fatal collision occurred on this remarkable road. The train was run hog was running in an opposite direction from that pursued by the train. Had he been tarveling the same way there would have been no collision. Quickly appreciating the danger, the engineer whistled down brakes. The hog did the same thing, and both en-gines were reversed. But it was too late; the impetus of two such ponderous bodies could not be checked withface. He knew her, and cried, "Lyd-"in-so short a space. The whistles were blown at 15 minutes past 10 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock the collision occurred. The collision was a terrible one, proving instantly tatal to the hog and almost to the locomotive. The locomotive telescoped into the unfortunate thought at first she must be dead porker in a most extinguishing man-Then she knew that she was in a mer. His entire upper works were warm bright room. She saw Dorcas, carried away, and he speedily sank to a young, pretty lady near the bed, then Leonard, and shrieked aloud. She was held fast in his arms again. In his life insured. Not one of the 500 passengers were injured, though all were badly frightened. One of the number, a shrewd old Yankee, on reaching Paw Paw by Walker's line, immediately purchased an accident ticket and had it dated at 9 o'clock that morning, to cover the collision. He afterwards claimed damages from the insurance company; on the ground that the accident had broken a nap which he was taking when the accident occurred. He never could be coaxed into riding on the Paw Paw Railfoad after that awful smash. Whenever he has occasion to. travel over the road, he buys a ticket and

THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 17, 1878.

THE GREAT QUESTION. The great and important question that must be solved in this Government is, the relation of capital and labor. In England it has been solved practically, by making labor subservient in almost all respects to capital. There the poor man may never expect to rise above his present condition. His labor and toil, the very sweat of brow, tends only to secure his daily bread, while all the profits of his work accrue to the capital giving him employ. The same condition of affairs in this county will be the inevitable result of permitting capital to rule the nation. The contest therefore, is growing warmer and warmer, fiercer and fiercer every day, of which, at present, the immense railroad corporations are the representative of the wealth and its interest, while their opponents work in behalf of the great producing classes of the nation. The day will come if these monopolies triumph that wealth will control the nation to the damage and oppression of labor, as fully as is the case in England to-day. Therefore it becomes the people to stand firmly to each other and by the press that advocates their rights. The people will yet triumph, provided they do not become divided by designing politicians and wily monopolists.

This question of capital and labor can be solved on an equitable basis. and if capital and wealthy corporations will only consider their interests, the necessity must appear of properly and justly arranging the question on equitable terms. This can be done by friendly communications on the matters of issue between the several interests. It must come to this soon or late, as certainly as that two contending armies or nations must declare an armistice to arrange terms of settlement. So let wisdom prevail on this question in time and good will be the result, while great disaster, to the highest interests of both parties, will result from a long continuance of the bitter battle now being waged.

DIVORCE.

In many of the Western States. where easy notions for divorces formerly obtained, the laws and practice have been changed and much improved. Indiana has advanced decidedly, and at the recent session of the Legislature, the divorce laws were changed materially. The worse part of the old law, that of constructive residence, whereby a person could gain and maintain a residence by a mere declaration of intention, or by leaving some article of clothing within the borders of the State, has been entirely abolished. The Chicago divorce law has also been slightly improved, so that it is less objectionable, at least, than those found in some other countries. Chicago now averages but from five to ten divorces per day. In some countries divorce is granted in cases of criminality, mutual dislike, jealousy, incompatibility of temper, and too much loquacity on the part of the wife. And courts have even compelled a husband to divorce his wife if she displease his parents. Chicago, in the hight of her notoriety for grant ing divorces, never went quite so far as this. Divorces have doubtless been granted in Chicago, as well as in Indiana and other States, when there was no cause, under clauses of the law which authorized divorces "for incompatibility of temper," "mutual dislike" and "other causes which in the opinion of the court prevents the parties from living amicably together." Gradually these phrases, which cover so many pretexts for granting divorces, are disappearing, and the courts are becoming more rigid and reluctant in severing by legal decree the obligations of husband and wife to love, cherish and protect each other "until death

RAILROAD LAW. It clearly appears that the law passed at the last session of the Legislature in the State of Illinois, regulating the freight charges on railroads, is not going to result in the good designed, at least in a large majority of cases, as the law is at present construed. Some of the railroads insist that their short rates cannot be reduced, and that as the rate is to be uniform, rates for a longer distance must consequently be increased. On all the principal railroads leading to Chicago, with the exception of the Illinois Central and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincey, there has been, by the new table, a general increase in the rates of freight charges. The new law is creating no little excitement, and different opinions are given as to the true meaning of the same.

The Illinois State Commissioners on Railways and Warehouses have issued a document giving their construction of the new law, which may be of some interest to our readers, and we give it in full below:

OFFICE ILLINOIS R'Y & WAREHOUSE COMMISSION, SPRINGFIELD, July 1. To THE PUBLIC: -Some important gustons narmy gusten unequ une questions having arisen under the act of May 2, 1873, to prevent extortion

The following are the questions above referred to apply to through freights as well as local freights?

2. Does the act admit of any discrimination in freight tariffs based upon the quantity shipped, or must the railway companies, to comply with the act, adopt one uniform rate per one hundred pounds, per ton, or per car loud, regardless of the quantity or the amount of the shipment? 3. Where two or more railways, operated by different companies, are so connected as to form, in fact, one continuous line, and shipments are made from a point on one road to a point on the other, may they charge at the rate applicable to the distance over both roads, or the aggregate of local rates on each road? 4. Can railway corporations hereafter issue excursion tickets? After due consideration of these questions we have arrived at the following conclusions:

1. The provisions of the act are applicable as well to through as to local freights, so far at least as to require that less should be charged for the transportation of domestic or local freights from one point to another within this State than the sum charged for the transportation of through or foreign freights the same distance within the State and for its transportation from or to a point without the State. Thus the charges from a point west of the State 'to a point within the State must not be the same as, or less, than the charges from the west line of the State over the same road to the same point of destination. So the charges from a point within the State to a point east of the State must not be the same as, or less than, the charges from the same point of departure over the same road to the east line of the State. So also the charges from a point west of the State to a point east of the State must not be the same as, or less than the charges over the same road from the west line to the east line of the State. The general principle is, that the charges for any distance within this State must not be the same or greater than the charges for a greater distance.

2. A reasonably less rate may be charged per 100 pounds, per ton or per car, where large amounts of freight are shipped by the same person than where small shipments are made, without violating the act. Discriminations of this character upon fair business principles, which were just and reasonable before the passage of the act, are not prohibited thereby, but seem to be recognized therein by the words "like quantity" frequently occurring in the third section of the act.

3. Where two or more railways are owned and operated by different companies and are connected so as to form in fact one continuous line, and either of such companies receives freight upon its road to be shipped to some may be treated, for purposes of such shipment, as one entire line, and the same rate may be charged as if one company owned the roads upon which the freights were shipped for the en-tire distance, instead of charging the aggregate of the local rates on each road for the distance shipped thereon.

4. The act expressly provides that nothing therein contained shall be so construed as to prevent railway corporations from issuing commutation, excursion, or thousand-mile tickets as the same have hitherto been issued by such corporations.

About Oregon.

THREE OAKS, July 4, 1873. EDITORS RECORD:—I have just re-

June 19th a letter from Oregon, by "Wandering Modoc," that so completely misrepresents Oregon that some of the readers of your valuable paper may be induced to sell their homes and drag their families to that country, and I feel it a duty to present to your many readers the plain facts of just what I have seen and know of Oregon. By whom are the fine reports gotten up that we have been having so long from Oregon? By the real estate men, who have the sale of all the land in Oregon; by the hotel men, who make their living by an influx of emigration; by the North Pacific Transportation Company, that owns the great steam ships that run between San Francisco, Cal., and Portland, Oregon, and these reports are also heralded by the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, that run those fine steamers on the Columbia and Williamette rivers. The Grocer and Dry Goods men join in the chorus. Not the least of all is the money-broker who sits there ready to shave the poor emigrant and take the very largest kind of discount, for you must know that the circulating money is all gold coin or silver. I heard these great reports myself, until I began to think that they were true, although I could, not see the elements there to make a great, rich and prosperous country. Finally I heard somuch of this talk, that I asked them in "what their greatness consisted?" The answer was, "in everything." "But," said I, "specify one thing, They said, "Well, our school fund. I said, in answer to that "that Michi-

100 days in succession. This is very casily proven. I will say that fruit, such as apples, pears, cherries, plums and grapes do exceedingly well there. He says there is any amount of Govvery fast. I ask this gentleman to state where it is, for I know, so does he, that not one acre of Government land worth anything is there unless you go away cast of the Cascade Mountains. He says it is considered very healthy here. I saw as much fever and ague in Portland and the great valley of the Columbia, as in Michigan, for it overflows every year. The great valley of the Williamette does not overflow up about Salem. It is pleasant in summer. He says first' class fare from Chicago to San Francisco is $110; it is $118; from San Francisco to Portland $30; cabin $15. Steerage is correct.

My advice to every man is to go, and see Oregon before taking a family, take no man's statement. I went for a home of that government land-it was not there. I came back to California and like it there very 'much. Shall return this fall.

Yours respectfully, CAPTAIN JACK. About Mississippi.

Buchanan, Mich., July 1, 1873. DEAR RECORD :- A few words here will tell you a few things of Mississippi, which may interest your read-We were getting to feel that we were in very warm weather, so that all clothing but the lightest was uncomfortable, but when I come to Michigan I am told the heat, according to thermometrical indications, has been greater than in any of the southern country down to New Orleans; 940 was the highest, here, I am assured, it has stood over 100 on some days. It has been very wet in parts of Mississippi and Alabama, even to the injury of the crops. Some fields of corn and cotton had actually been given up to grass, so wet they could not be cleaned. But generally crop prospects through those States are good, cotton looks well, corn small but promising. I saw boxes of peaches in Tennessee on their way to market, had ripe apples on the cars. I have no doubt all kinds of fruit might be raised to advantage in all that region and made very profitable to reward enterprise in raising it. It could be sent North very early, before similar fruits would be ripe for market, and for that reason bring good prices. I was told by a gentleman at Madison, 'Miss., that he had sent $300 worth of strawberries to Chicago this season from his own garden. Said that fruit could be raised very easily.

Anniversary Exercises were held at Tougaloo University June 20th. State Superintendent, L. M. Pease, of Jackparts were all well sustained without any of the "breaking down" which is witnessed sometimes on such occasions. There were original essays, recitations, declamations, with the usual interludes of music, which called out the bouquets in kindly recognition. One of these fell at the feet of a young man of deep ebony, whose whole appearance showed him to be a worker under difficulties, but an original essay on "The Sources, of Civilization" was very much commended for the good thought, and thought which was evidently his own. A recitation by a young lady of very dark complexion also, was well pronounced "Jeptha's Daughter." The voice, the manner, the self-control were all admirable. Another, the "Graces," bringing in nine young ladies, all in white, in complexion all the way from the darkest to the lightest. It was pleasant to see these bringing in their parts, one after the other in exact order, with turned from an extensive trip through no break, no confusion, showing what Oregon, Washington Territory, and discipline can effect. And as to con-California. I saw in your issue of ditions, we take them as they are and endeavor to make them what they ought. Then there was "Contentment," very tall, very dark colored, in immaculate white, with most benign expression of countenance. Purity and goodness overcoming obstacles and sure to be acknowledged in its time. Then "Temperance" had, its advocate the same in black and white when you find it. Very well advocated, in clear tones and good words. Valedictory bidding good hopes and Christian cheer to fellow students and

Many articles that were taken into the streets, were there burned before lrays could be got to remove; them. There was a marked contrast between the drayment of Chicago and Grand removed from their unfortunate po-Rapids. Here there was no charge for moving goods, there only the rich could afford to hire a team. The boasted fire extinguisher, for which the city gave $2,000 a few days since, did noble work (after the fire was put out by the steamers.) The greatest loss by one firm was G. & C. Christ's saloon and brewery, valued at fifty thousand dollars; Berkey & Gay lost $5,000; Rich & Tearse, $80,000. It is impossible to tell how much is cov-

From Oregon. OREGON CITY, June 29, 1873. EDITIONS RECORD :- As I promised I once more attempt to tell your many readers something more about Orogon. As a general thing those who have lived here longest like it the best, and I believe nine-tenths of the people here are dogmatical in expressing the opinion that, taking everything into consideration, Oregon is the best, much the best State in the Union. We have got a splendid good country, a better country, according to my opinion, and the opinion of Mr. Colfax, who has been here, and of more than ten thousand others, than any other part of North America. We have no Heaven here, and if we had it would not suit everybody, and we should now and then see a poor fellow returning to old Missouri to hear a favorite preacher, or to worship his idols, a corn pone of bread and a warnuck colored pair of breeches. I have at last found a man who does find fault with Oregon. His name is Johnny Stewart, at Monmouth, Oregon. He wants to go back to Missouri, where he can live on corn pones baked in the ashes. He says the land will not raise anything but wheat, and anybody knows that it takes land too poor to raise white beans to raise the best wheat in America. He says I would go back if it was not so cold there. Why, says he, it was "right smart" cold in Chicago one night last winter. He says he heard it was so cold that the thermometer, had to come son, pronounced them of high order in and sit by the fire. I presume there harness, was stolen from the barn of and beyond his expectations. The may be some such men in Michigan, Mr. Henry Leimbach, near Centrebut I hope not. If you hear of any send him the RECORD and advise him tó go to Missouri. Such men would hardly credit what I would say about the climate of Oregon when I tell them it is as mild as Georgia or Tennessec, because they have heard that Oregon is as far north as Canada. But how can common people be supposed to be posted as to its own climate when an editor of such a leading journal as the Cleveland Herald refuses to credit statements made by a prominent journal of our own State in regard to the weather, until it is confirmed by a United States signal officer in Cleveland stationed at Portat the freezing point? that was Detime, or 4:30 a.m. local time, although there are people here who say they have seen the Willamette frozen over so that boys could skate on the ice, and teams have actually crossed on it. One man said he has seen it occur twice in 25 years, and even snow has been known to lay on the ground eight weeks, but these instances are very rare. The oldest inhabitants say they generally have a little cold weather about every seven or eight years. Last winter was very mild. There were plenty of flowers in full bloom in January. I saw nice bouquets of roses in February in Portland, and saw them growing in the gardens. Eight weeks is the longest time I can learn of any one having to feed their stock. As a general rule twenty tons of hay will carry a hundred head of cattle or horses through the winter in the Willamette, Umpqua or Rogue it. Evidences are stronger than the River valleys. In middle Oregon, ories. I would so like to place before east of the Cascade mountains, in the eyes of all the evidences of good eastern. A New Way to Collect Fare.

Why is it that everybody likes to cheat a railroad? People who are scrupulously honest with everybody else will resort to all sorts of dodges to avoid paying railroad fare; and people who are opulent and openhanded with money seem eager to dodge even the smallest amount for riding on the cars. They never think of avoiding bus, stage or ferry fare thus. It is a peculiar form of kleptomania.

Some of the devices resorted to are very ingenious and very funny. For instance: There is a respectable lady who has occasion to make frequent trips between two stations on the Oil Creek road, which are about fifteen miles apart. She buys a ticket to a station about half-way between, but does not get off there. On the contrary, she goes into the "saloon" and stays there until the conductor has made his round and returns to the forward part of the train. Then she comes out and takes her seat with the appearance of feeling better, with all the censciousness of a good deed performed, and rides free to her destina-

. This game proceeded unchecked until last Saturday. The lady - went through the same performance again, with this difference: when she attempted to come out of her saving re-"curses like pigeons come home to tirement she found the door tied from

A Business of Twenty Years' Standing For Sale.

Owing to ill health, C. M. Beard, of Hill's Corners, Berrien County, Michigan; offers: his store and stock for sale. The business has been established for twenty years, and has never changed hands, nor asked a creditor to take less than the full amount due! Ill health alone is the cause for selling. Any amount of reference and proof can be given to prove the reliability of the business. Address as above.

A Hint to Housewifes—How to Keep Kitchen Ware Clean and Bright, Every housewife of neat and tidy habits takes especial delight in keeping all the tin, copper and iron ware of her kitchen as clean and bright as painstaking labor can make them. A pride in this direction is commendable, and always meets the smiling approval of the "tyrant man" who pays the household bills. Remember that SAPOLIO is the only thing on earth that will make an old tarnished tin pan or a rusty kettle shine as bright as new. And by the use of Sapolio it is the quickest and easiest thing in the world to keep every utensil in a high state of polish.

Beyond the Mississippi! Thousands have already gone, and thousands more are turning their eyes towards new homes in the fertile West To those going to Miss; ourl, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada, Oregon or California, we recom-mend a cheap, safe, quick and direct route, via St. Louis, over the Missouri Pacific Railroad, which runs its fine Day Coaches and Pullman' Sleepers from St. Louis to principal points in the West, without change. We believe that the Missouri Pacific Railroad has the best track and the finest and safest equipment of any line west of the Mississippi, and its connections with roads further West are prompt and reliable. The Texas connection of this road is now completed, and passengers are offered a first class, all-rail route from St. Louis to Texas, either over the Missouri, Kansas & Texas R. He rests his check on the head of his cane, And happily smiling dreams over again.
Of that home, the brook, the meadow, the lane Dreams all with a vision clear.

Then childhood yields unto manhood's place.
And he looks once more in his bright, bright face. And down in the starry eyes he can trace.

A love remembered and dear.

Then he wakes and sighs: "It seems but a dream Then he wakes and signs: "Atsenus out a gream,
That comes to me now like a golden gleam,
Or the shimmering glow of the sun's last beam,
But its pleasant to think it o'er,
That youth was so sweet, but now is past,
Those days of love were too precious to last, But over yonder their treasures are cast, And I am nearing the shore."

He is gliding on in his little bont; Overthe calm, still waters they peacefully float, But echo full oft brings a well-known note, From the land he has left behind, But time will row back for him no more,
And he gazes way to that other shore,
And knows when the voyage of life shall be o'er
That his dream beyond he will find.

The seeds of youth, which in youth were sown, Adown through the isles of the future will grow, Adown through the isles of the future will gro And shed on age a beautiful glow, As they came in memory's gleans. Loved faces will come to the dimming sight; Sweet words will cohe in day dreams bright, And circle old age with their halos of light As they mingle in beautiful dreams.

I once knew a young lady who started well in religion, and gave promise of becoming a bright and shining light in the church. But after a few months her ardor abated; she became less warmly attached to the social means of grace; her place was often vacant in the class-room: and she was numbered with that class of which there are so many in our churches, lukewarm professors.

She was my friend, and I could not bear that she should become lost to the church when there was so much need that every one should stand firmly at his post. I asked her one day what had happened that her harp was no longer tuned to the songs of Zion. Said she, "I can hardly tell what is the matter. I know I am not as I once was, but the change has been so gradual that I hardly have realized it. Sometimes of late I have almost doubted whether religion is all I have supposed it to be; whether it is really the 'one thing needful.' I am young and inexperienced, and, of course, look up to those who have been long in the way, and feel quite safe to follow in their footsteps. But when I meet them day after day and never hear them talk of those things that they profess to consider of the highest importance, I am led to think that either they are not sincere, or else there is no need of making much ado about religion."
Now, I have no doubt that the experience of this young lady is the experience of thousands of young Christians. Why is it that so large a portion of young converts go back to the world? Is it not owing much to the lack of interest in their welfare in the older members of the church? They need all the loving sympathy and care that can be thrown around them to encourage them onward and upward in the path their young hearts have chosen. O, if Christians would only talk more about their joys and trials by the way, and their bright prospects for the end of the journey, if would encourage many to represent it would encourage many a young pil-grim, and make spiritual things seem more of a reality. But when a large share of our time is necessarily occupied with our daily duties, we are apt to lose sight of the grand object of life; it seems dim and unreal unless we are constantly reminded of it. And what better way than conversing about it?

O that every Christian would awake, to the great work the Master has given him to do. May we all become co-workers in the vineyard of the Lord, and our hearts become so deep-ly imbued with the spirit of our Leader that our tongues shall be loosed, and we shall delight to speak of the goodness, and mercy, and loving kindness of Him who has loved us and washed us in his most precious blood.

Christian Sincerity.

The spirit which is of God is a spirit of truth, sincerity, and openness. The citizens of heaven esteem truth as sacred, and hold sincerity to be the first of the virtues. He has no secret doctrines to communicate. He needs no chosen confidents to whom he may impart his favorite notions no private conveticles where he may disseminate his opinions. What he avows to his God he avows to man. He expresseth with his tongue what he thinketh with his heart. He will not, indeed, improperly publish truths, he will not, as the scripture says, throw pearls before swine; but neither will he on any occasions partake with swine in their husks. Arrayed in the simple majesty of truth, he seeks no other covering. Supported by his consciousness of restitude, he holds fast his integrity as he would guard his life. Such is the difference between these characters. The bad man turns aside to crooked paths and insidious mazes of dissimulation; the insidious mazes of dissimulation; the citizen of heaven moves along in the onward track of integrity and chonor. The spirit of the world seeks concealment, and the darkness and the shade; the spirit which is of God loves the light, becomes the light, address the light.—Logan.

For Femiale Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflaminatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs. They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Billous Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Fruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbancles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Eryspelas, Itch, Scurs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

This yarn is told of a Topeka lady who wrote to a New York matrimonial agent for a husband. The agent transferred the letter to a crusty old bachelor, who, in replying accidentally substituted for his own photograph that of a pet orang-outang. The lady answered: "There is certainly not much personal beauty about you, but you appear to have an honest, manly face. I accept."

Suspicious.—A rustic drank his first glass of soda-water very solemnly the other day, and then, eyeing the waiter inquiringly, auxiously remarked, "It's all right I s'pose?" "Why, yes," said the waiter, hesitatingly; "but what do you mean?" "Why, the thing won't go off in a feller, will it."
