Poetry. BEFORE AND AFTER MARRIAGE. GENTLEMAN BEFORE MARRIAGE.

The haby's left to cry and moan,

I am a hen-pecked sinner, An abject slave—I tell you so!

Madam, your folly's ended,

I'm going to a reading-room— I'll join a club thereafter—

.I feel a very solemn sense

I've no'er a decent dinner; You drag me out, you call me down-

You shall not flirt, and go-and go-I'm weary and offended.

So-mend your manners-stay at home,

LADY BEFORE MARRIAGE.

And dry your eyes with laughter!

Of all a woman's duty,
To keep within the door yard fence,
Unmindful of her beauty;
To share her husband's grief and pare,
But, in his shadow walking,
Content to mind his own affairs,

Be reverent when he's talking.

Tis plain our Maker did design That women should be humble;

Not given to looks nor dressing fine,

To feed imagination; All filled with angels shorn wings—

To me they are vexation.

Dear William, as your wedded wife

Shall only be to please you!

I never mean to tease you, My aim and pride all through my life

Greenit Judge: Green S. Clarp, Solicitor for Complainant. 19w7

"Isabel, I am tempted to take you away from here by simple force. I have been to the house, but you were too quick for me. Isabel, you will persist in this foolish business?"

My dearest duck, my sweetest girl, I love you most sinterely; I'd rather own this sunny curl He had taken an empty seat beside her; but near as he could see the paling anguish that lay in her pure classic face, or the flush of momentary warmth that followed his eager words. "It is not foolishness, Champney!

What should I do if I did not go to Mrs. Craven's"-He interrupted her in his quick, earnest way.

"Where should you go? true enough, darling. Is not my home lonely for the want of you? Does not my heart cry out for you, its queen? Isabel, there is yet ten minutes; won't you think of it again, and let me take you from this place to be married to me, and to my house forever. Remember, my Isabel, how

I love you." Under her thick crape veil Isabel's lips grew tightly compressed, and a slow red bloom came to her cheeks.

It was a great temptation; she so lonely, so fragile, to go out in the world, nothing but a companion to a rich, strange woman, whose face she never had seen; and here was Champner Roberts, with his splendid house, his matchless carriage and horses, his handsome face and irreproachable character, who sat beside her begging her to accept of it all! But Isabel was a proud woman, and she could not brook the idea of marrying for a home, for gratitude, even it she knew the offer came from the man whom she felt worshipped her. But for all this she did not love Champney Roberts; and there lay the sccret of her refusals—they had been many-of him. And now again, with the chilling look-out on the world before her, she decided that she would work till the death before she would be the wife of a man to whom she could not give her affections. "I had made up my mind long ago, Champney, and, indeed, it grieves me to have you cling to me so. I am sorry; I wish for your sake I might view these things in the same light you do; but I can't, Champney. It is impossible, that is all. There comes the train." She arose, as the long train creeping past, with a sad, pitying look at her lover's face.

"We will try and be friends then, Isabel, though God knows how mocking and empty friendship is after love. Write to me; if ever trouble comes, command me to any extent. You'll promise me that?"

He held her hand at the last, and in so fierce a clutch that Isabel almost cried out. "Good-bye, Champney, Good-

She was really gone at last, en voyage to her destiny. That was a long, lonely ride, and many tears fell under that heavy masking veil before she arrived at Laverstone, on a clear, bright morning, when the streets were swarming with life and gaiety. It revived her somehow, and she felt almost contented when a respectful railway official tapped her on the shoulder and pointed to a waiting car-

"The driver has been asking for a young lady from Valley Point. I think you took the train there? - Miss Kent?"

And so she found herself in Mrs. Craven's carriage; and later, in the ever. lady's presence.

Mrs. Craven was an invalid, passably good looking, who received her newly-hired companion with a polite welcoming and kind interest that would have gone straight to Isabel's heart had not her pride and reserve been challenged by the young lady to whom Mrs. Craven introduced her." "This is my niece, Miss Folsom;

Miss Kent." Isabel acknowledged the presentation, and if she was stung to the quick by the frigid hauteur of the fair girl, Miss Folsom was as enraged by Isabel's indifferently graceful bow. "Aunt Clara," she said when Isabel had gone to her room that night, to suffer all the long hours, "shall you allow her to entertain our visitors? She is ontirely too elegant and aristocratic to pass unnoticed among company."

"As often as I can spare her, of course. Why should she not see a little enjoyment, poor child? You are getting jealous again, Vivan."
"You remember how my music

Vivan looked together, and, of a sudden, a frightful revelation came to her -so sudden it fairly took her breath -so blissful her sense ached with the joy-and yet so dreadful she thought she should not survive it.

All this in a magical second. And the revelation was this—she loved Champney Roberts, and had loved him all the time; and he loved her no longer, but Vivan Folsom.

At that very moment Vivan came in, in all the blooming beauty and stylish elegance that characterized her. "I have come to you for my first congratulation. Champney says you were once an old friend of his." Isabel felt her eyes growing dim as she anticipated the news. "I am an old friend." It was all she said.

But how fully, entirely, she experienced the truth of her lover's words that night they parted. "We've not decided on the wedding-day, but Champney is in a great

"And there's another thing Isabel. You must pardon me for saying it, but I'm sure your good judgment will approve. Champney has told me of your little love passage, and I thought as long as you had been so much to him, and he'll be coming here so often, it would be prudent for you to find

Miscellaneous. A DAY DREAM.]

BY THEODORE CARPENTER. In a long forgotten pocket, Tied up with a silken band,
I found it: only a letter,
Traced in a girlish hand. I read it over and over, Ah, me! as I did before, In the days that were full of snnlight-

Far back in a joyous time, When every day was a poem, And every hour a rhyme, There came a fragrance of roses, And lilacs and mignonette. And a sound of sylvan music, And the eyes that are with me yet.

The days that are no more.

I dreamed of a golden summer,

A flood of purple sunset,
In scintillant glory came,
Till the deep old forests kindled,
And burned like a fluid of flame. There came a girlish figure,
With billows of floating hair, And she bent her face above me-An angel over my chair!

I saw it all in a moment, While I held the crumpled sheet; And then as the vision faded, The long, gray city street, With its hateful rush and clamor, Came back to my weary eyes; Ah, still the fruitless struggle! Ah, still the worthless prize!

From the Columbus (Ohio) State Journal. Confidence.

The Meanest Operation on Record—The Old Dodge with a New Accompani-Mrs. Christiana Dawson, a widow, residing at No. 200 East Friend street, has been made the victim of one of the meanest confidence operations that has come under reportorial notice. A stranger made his appearance at Mrs. Dawson's house representing himself to be a life insurance agent and surprising the lady with the information that she had not received all the money due her on the policy on the life of her husband, who died lately in Chicago. He talked on the subject for some time, his motives appearing to be of the most honorable description, and then started down street, saying he would call again soon, with other information which he could obtain at one of the insurance offices.

Not long after the bogus insurance man's departure, another stranger made his appearance at the house, representing that he had been disappointed in not meeting his brother in Cincinnati, and that financial ruin was impending over him on account of a lack of $300 with which to move a heavy consignment of silks. While he was oiling his pitiful story, and exhibiting a watch which he said was the only resource he had, the insurance man returned to the house, and pretending to be a stranger to the silk shipper, offered him a fabulous price for his "ticker." But the man said the watch was worth much more than the sum offered, and besides it had associations about it that made him reluctant to part with it unless he might have an opportunity to redeem Mrs. Dawson's sympathies were thoroughly aroused. She believed the man to be unfortunate, and that there was danger of him being compelled to sacrifice his property to get himself out of pecuniary difficulty. She thought she was doing an act of kindnessin nipping the insurance man's speculation in the bud, and offering to lend $300, taking the watch as security that the money would be returned. She hadn't the funds in the house, but the rascal accompanied her to the bank and stood outside while Mrs. Dawson went in and drew the cash. She paid over the money, and after the insurance man and confederate had left for parts unknown discovered that she was the possesson of a "stuff-ed" watch of the kind worth, at wholesale, at about five, dollars a bushel. ushel. We haven't much sympathy for a man, who will sit in a railway car and allow a stranger to "beat" him out of his money, however remarkable a story may be told him; but the case; on Friend street complicates the rascality and presents a spectacle worse than deliberately stealing a person's pock-

and Varnished

In our rambles about town yesterday we came across a story which if true in its facts, vividly illustrates to what an extent evil may be wrought by want of heart and want of thought. The story runs as follows One day about a month ago a brakeman on the Reading Railway, who had permitted his thoughts to dwell upon an accident by which a man lost his life, until his mind had become affected, came to Quakake. Here he fell into the clutches of some train hands, who, perceiving his unfortunate condition And in that moment Isabel Kenti resolved to take advantage of it for knew she was alone no longer forever: the purpose of having some sport. The Acton Murder.

From the Boston Globe, July 7. The Crime of a Boy Who Deliberately Murdered an Infant. One of the most extraordinary criminal affairs it has ever fallen to the lot of a New England newspaper to chronicle is that which took place in West Acton, last week, partial particulars of which were given to the public in the evening papers of Saturday. At any time, and under any circumstances, a murder is horrible; but the deliberate murder of a child. by a child, is something so monstrous that, even after the facts have been proved beyond doubt, the publicmind almost refuses to believe it. The circumstances are given in detail by a reporter who visited the scene of the murder, and are as follows: The murderer, George Edward Curtain, is not quite twelve years of age, and went to Acton, from New York, to live with his Uncle, Maurice Lane. His father is said to be dead, and the boy was sent away by his mother to prevent, if possible, his following in the footsteps of two brothers who have been inmates of the State Prison. Unfortunately, the lad had a disposition that delighted in browbeating and domineering over his companions, and it is said, has been frequently known to whip and torment them. No particular ill-treatment of his cousins, the children of Mr. Lane, has been noticed, however, and they appeared to be fond of "Eddie," who has had them largely under his care. Mr. Lane is a laborer on the railway, and lives in a common laborer's house or hut near the railway in West Acton. Between 3 and 4 o'clock last Tuesday afternoon young Curtain took the baby, as little Maurie A. Lane was called, and started out for a walk. The track hands at work on the Fitchburg Railway, near by, noticed them going towards the woods, but thought nothing about it, as they knew the relations the two sustained towards each other. About an hour afterwards they observed "Eddic," as he was called, coming back alone, and some of them asked him who he had with him when he went by before, to which, for some reason, he replied it was a little girl. Soon after he "turned up" missing, and when inquiries began to be made concerning the baby, "Eddie" could not be found. Becoming anxious the mother started out after baby and others assisted in the search, but although the woods were visited the search was in vain. A young man named Kingsley, fifteen years of age, who had been assisting in the search, finally came across Curtain and asked him to go with him and try to find "baby." Curtain started with him saying "I guess he's asleep in the barn." They guess he's asleep in the barn." accordingly visited and searched an unoccupied barn near by, but found no trace of the missing boy. Curtain then led the way to another barn, but as nothing was found, Kingsley remarked, "We'll go down to the woods." Curtain appeared rather reluctant to visit the woods, and said he thought baby had gone down the South Acton or Acton Center road, doubtless hoping to lead Kingsley away from the woods. On reaching the woods Kingsley called the baby, but no response was heard. He then said to Curtain that baby would know him and told him to call him. Curtain thereupon called "baby," and a feeble little cry, resembling more the mew of a cat than anything else was heard. Kingsley told Curtain to call again, which he did, and a similar cry was heard as at first.

Guided by the sound, the boys entered the road, and soon found the missing boy sitting on the ground, with his face and head covered with blood and dirt. The little fellow was conscious, however, and quickly replied, "You," when Curtain innocenty asked him, "Who has been abusing you?". For an instant the lad appeared overwhelmed with the accusation, and fell down in a half-faint, but was brought to by the exclamation: "Don't be blubbering, now; you've done it." The two lads then carried 'baby" to the residence of Mr. Hurley, near by, where the mother found him, and from whence she took him to her own home. She asked him who had been hurting him, and he reblied "Eddie."

Dr. Hutchins was called and dressed the wounds, but expressed his belief that they would prove fatal. There was one deep cut acrss the nose and another two inches long immediately over the right eye. The most serious cut was one three inches long on the back of the head near its top. All the cuts looked as though they were caused by blows from a ragged stick of wood. The little fellow's arms were black and blue, as was the throat. the latter looking as though some-body had pinched it. Dr. Hutchins asked the boy who had been hurting him, and he replied, "Eddie," and said that "Eddie stuck two sticks in my mouth." The little sufferer was found at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon,

any country, would approach its advantages in its practical workings.

From the extreme ease of the money market in New York, it is reasonable to conclude that the coming Fall will not witness the stringency that prevaded the country last Fall. The monthly letter from the well known banking house of Henry Clews & Co., New York speaks of the prospects as

"The money market still presents Tenders have been steadily flowing in Room. com other points, and the Banks now hold $48,900,000 against $58,400,000 at the same time of last year. The influx, however, has reached its climax, and the future movement will be rather toward a decline than an increase. The Specie line of the Banks stands at $32,200,000, or $4,000,000 higher than a year ago. The aggregate reserve ranges within half a million of the amount held a year ago; but as the liabilities are $2,000,000 lower than then, the reserve is relatively stronger, than at this period of 1872. To this extent we are more favorably situated in prospect of the Fall demand for money than last year. We have, it is true, a less amount of Legal Tenders to spare, which is a decided disadvantage to the West, and indirectly to us also; but we have more Specie, and it appears to be the policy of the Secretary of the Treasury to keep the market well supplied with Gold, while the probability is that our exports of Specie, for the rest of the year, will be quite light, so that this proportion of the reserves is likely to be well sustained. Another consideration, favoring the prospect of our escaping a repetition of the extreme stringency experienced last Fall, is found in the fact that men of business have so shaped their arrangements for the Fall trade, as to be dependent, as little as possible, upon the Money Market. The London Money Market, also, is working into a condition of settled ease; which if not disturbed by unforeseen causes, will prove to be an important element in our favor; for experience has proved that, in times of stringency here, the relief received from that source, in various ways, amounts to a very important mitigation. While, therefore, there is nothing to admit of the hope of a really easy Fall Money Market, and expecting that we shall witness no such excessive and protracted stringency as brought us last year, and even this Spring, to the very verge of serious panic. The New Political Bantling. "The superstition of a certain class" of politicians was never more strikingly exhibited than in the "new party" movement just culminated at Columbus, Ohio. Briefly expressed, this is their theory: "The people will not trust the Democratic party, because they know it to be unprogressive and corrupt. But change its name and they will trust it, because they will then believe it to be radical and honest." There was an ass which once attempted this same kind of policy. He covered himself with a lion's skin, and imagined that he was deceiving every body; but his braying would have betrayed and deceived him even if he had been successful in hiding his ears. knew they could not succeed if they called themselves, by their old party titles. They had tried that, and failed. Is it possible they have such a poor opinion of the intelligence of the people as to believe that they will aconce rejected simply because the new candidates have been stripped of their Democratic clothing, and come danging before them like Fejeo Cannibals, with nothing to cover their nakedness. Let it be borne in mind that the Democrats openly averred that they only parted with their name and left possibly succeed better under a new disguise. Let it be also remembered that the Liberals renounced their name and principles-if they ever had any—because they could not command support with them; and that neither the one nor the other would have stepped out of their old tracks an inch, or acknowledged a single error, but for this stubborn fact.

Now these gentlemen have changed their names, or rather, they have dropped their old ones; but have they also changed their prejudices? Do they not believe as before? Was it the clothes that made the Democratic par- | Board. ty disloyal, or the "Liberals" ready to compromise the national honor? If t was, then there is hope for the new party. The Cincinnati Commercial says: "no negotiations were carried on. The trading politicians were left out in the cold." On the contrary there never was a more shameful barter and trade. The Liberals traded off their name and organization for a few paltry positions on the ticket; the Democrats sold their musty pedigree for the support of the Liberals. Both went cheap—for well nigh nothing; but both brought a good deal more than they were worth. It is possible that a day may arrive when some great question will agitate the public mind, and when a few brave and determined men will unite to right a great wrong and overcome a great evil. Then they will not talk of success; they will simply proclaim their principles, and bear the scorn and jeers of the world until time shall demonstrate their wisdom. It was so with the Republican party, and it will be so with the next successful organization; and when any set of men attempt to create a party out of other material they should look at the carcasses that strew the national pathway, and take warning by those who have gone the same road to ruin be-

Farmers, as a general thing, think that when harvest is over the most laborious part of their summer's work is fininshed, and if their crops have been such as will afford them a little surplus money after paying the "little store bill" and the hired help, they smile all over their faces, very much resembling the picture at the head of your "phunygram" column, which you know is a very beautiful spectacle to behold, especially if beheld in full size and life-like form. Well, the farmers around here are all smiling at present, for their crops are a little better than they expected in the fore part of the summer. Institution for the Deaf, Dumb and the Biind.

FLINT, MICH., July 30, 1873. To the Public:

The Michigan Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind, is now completed. It will accommodate far more pupils than are now in attendance, and it is of the utmost importance that all proper subjects for instruction should enjoy its orivileges.

You are respectfully requested to communicate to the undersigned the name and address of the parent or guardian of any Deaf-Mute or Blind child residing within your jurisdiction, in order that arrangements may be made for the admission of such child to the Institution.

Deaf-Mute and Blind children, between the ages of ten and twenty, who are of sound mind, good moral character, and who are free from contagious diseases, are entitled to eight years of instruction, without charge for board or tuition.

Parents or guardians unable to provide suitable clothing, can have it furnished at the expense of the County they reside in.

It is hoped that every man to whom this circular is addressed will feel a lively interest in secking out and reporting all the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind who reside within its jurisdiction.

By order of the Board of Trustees. EBERT L. BANGS, Principal.

-Miss Elsie Ousterhoust, aged about 12 years, daughter of Mr. H. Ousterhoust, living about three miles north of this place on the road to Elsie, was bit by a rattlesnake on Wednesday of last week. Mr. Ousterhoust had procured a new mowing machine, and the girl went to the field to see the machine work, when she felt something strike her foot, and looking around saw the snake eyeing her. A numbness and swelling of the limb immediately followed and she ran for home. Medical advice was sought and under proper treatment she is expected to recover. The snake was found and killed by the men at work in the field.—Ovid Register.

-Francis McGlinn, a very promising youth of about 17 years, and a graduate of the Reform School, without any provocation, last Saturday attacked a colored boy named Henry Newman, son of Rev. Mr. Newman, and kicked him about the head to such an extent, that one eye was smashed, and had to be removed by the physician. A charge of mahein was preferred, and in default of $500, the prisoner was held to Circuit Court, having waived examination.-Pontiac Bill Poster, 30th.

-We learn that a little son, whom many of our readers will remember, of C. H. Updyke, formerly landlord of the Portland House, but now residing in Pewamo, was drowned on Monday afternoon last, at the saw mill of W. H. Woodworth near that place.— Portland Observer.

BERRIEN CENTER. -- We spent a few days of last week visiting that portion of the country lying east of Berrien in the vicinity of Berrien Center. It is a section of country with which we have been unacquainted, and we must say that it is our opinion that a more beautiful part of Berrien County cannot be found any where. This is saying considerable, for the county can furnish as desirable lands for farming purposes as "ever laid out of doors." Mr. Willis, the veteran thresher of Berrien township, informed us, that the wheat did not yield this year to the expectations of the farmers.

and to have them patiently examined and deliberately decided upon by the assembly.'' Now, then, if the Recorder is a member of the Common Council, he has the same rights as the other members of the Council, and if they have the right to vote, then he has that right. On this point the new Charter is plain. It says: "Sec. 6. The President, Recorder, and Trustees of said Village shall be a body corporate and politic, with perpetual succession, to be known and distinguished by the name and title of "The Common Council of the Village of Buchanan." * * * "Sec. 7. salt rhoun, fever sores, chilblains, scrofula sores, piles, ulcers, sore eyes, burns, caked breasts, &c. We simply ask that the afflicted will key one box, the use of which will convince the most skeptical, and do more to introduce it into favorable notice than volumes written in its praise. Every day brings some new testi-monials from Physicians and others of the wonderful cures they have effected with it. The following conveys the sentiments of all:

Geneva, January, 1865. Ma. J. M. Page—Dear Sir: I commenced using your Arnica Oil Salve in my practice some three years ago. During the time, I have used it in numerous cases of Diptheria. I al-ways apply it to the throat warm, and in no case where I have used it have I eyer known the discuse to go to the lungs, nor have I lost a patient with that complaint when I was called in the first instance. I have also used it with Salt Rhoum, Croup, Brysipelas, Scarlet Pavor, and in fact in all cases where an external remedy is required. I would with greatest confidence recommend it to the profession as a remedy that will do all that is claimed for it;

and in no case will it do harm. H. L. Eddy, M. D. H. L. Enny, M. D. It is warranted to give satisfaction, or the money refunded. Sold by Druggists at 25 cents a box, and will be sent by mail on receipt of 30 cts. All orders should be addressed to will be a J.A. PAGE, Geneva, N. Y.

If our bodies belong to God, we must take care of them for him. We must keep them in good condition for work, if possible. We must give them good food, not to pamper fulse. appetites, but to keep them in repair.
We must give them sleep enough.
They cannot wear well are the state of They cannot wear well without it. We must not evertax them. Good people have cheated God out of years of service, by squandering their physical strength. I fail to see how we can crowd ourselves through the drudgery of digesting the fearful com-pounds known as good cookery, or how men can chew and smoke poisons ous herbs, and yet claim the body consecrated to God. No less marvelous is the inconsistency of maining it, to hang on bits of metal, and loading it down with finery, so that the breath is drawn with difficulty. It is not such a hard matter to keep ourselves in working order, if we really set ourselves about it. With God's great peace to lift all care off the weak nerves, and a little hygienic common sense, one can make small physical strength go a great way. Christ, even with very poor grammar, false rhetoric, and limping logic. But let the same faith and fervor be in the richly endowed and cultured soul, and, according to all analogy, the work will be far greater and more permanent. Never were so many people converted under one sermon as under that of Peter, the Galilean fisherman, fresh from the Pentecostal baptism, Yet afterward this same endangered the very life of the infant. Church by truckling to Juadaizing teachers. Paul had to withstand him to the face, because he was to be blamed. His untrained brain failed to carry him through the task of settling the tenets of the new faith. It was Paul, trained in the best schools, whose cultured mind was used of God to give the Church its theology.— Mrs. J. F. Willing, in Independent.

Contending for Tenets.

We sometimes see Christians contending so earnestly for the particular tenets for their own church that they are in danger of forgetting Christ. A fine illustration of this is given by the late Dr. Norman McLie-od, of Scotland, in his touching story of "Wee Davie, Johnnie Morten and auld Andrew Gebbie, the first a "keen Burgher," and the latter "an anti-Burgher," living at different ends of the same house, and it was the bargain that each should keep his ain side o" the house aye weel thatched. But they happened to dispute so keenly about the principles of their kirks, that at last they quarrelled and didna speak at a'l So ac day after this, as they were on the roof thatching each on his ain side, they reached the tap, and looking ower, face met face. What could they do? They couldna ffae. So at last Andrew took on his Kalmarnock cap and scratching his head said: "Johnnie, you and me, I think, hae been very foolish to dispute as we hae done concerning Christ's we hae flae. So at last Andrew took off his as we have done concerning Christ's will about our kirks, until we have clean forgot his will about ourselves; and so hae fought so bitterly for what we ca" the truth, that it has ended, in. spite. Noo, it strikes me that, maybe, it's wi' the kirk as wi' this house. Ye're working on ane and me on tither, but if we only do our wark weel we will meet at the tap at last. Gie's your han' auld neighbor!" And so they shook han's and were the best o' freens ever after!"

back in confusion. "A thousand pardons, Monsieur; there must be a mistake; I hoped to see M. Tom Thumb." Lablache, taking in the situation at a glance, and enjoying the joke, gravely replied: "Sir, there is no error;
I am Tom Thumb!" "Why—no—how—certainly; why, I tho't Tom Thumb was very small!" gasps the astonished visitor. "Oh! that's no matter," replied the basso, graciously; before the public, I am small—
