Poetry.

THE OLD CANOE. Where the rocks are gray and the shore is steep,
And the waters below look dark and deep,
Where the rugged pine, in its lonely pride,
Leans gloomily over the murky tide;
Where the reeds and rushes are long and rank,
And the weeds grow thick on the winding bank;
Where the shadow is heavy: the whole day through,
There lies at its moorings the old canoe.

The useless paddles are idly dropped, Like a sea bird's wings that the storm has lop ped, And crossed on the railing one o'er one, Like the folded hands when the work is done While busily back and forth between The spider stretches his silvery screen, And the solemn owl, with his dull "too-hoo," Settles down on the side of the old cance.

The stern half sunk in the slimy wave, Rots slowly away in its living grave, And the green moss creeps o'er its dull decay, Hiding its mouldering dust away, Like the hand that plants o'er the tomb a flower, Or the ivy that mantles the falling tower; While many a blossom of loveliest hue Springs up o'er the stern of the old canoe.

The currentless waters are dead and still-But the light wind plays with the boat at will, And lazily in and out again It floats the length of the rusty chain, Like the weary march of the hands of time, That meet and part at the noontide chime, And the shore is kissed at each turn anew, By the dripping bow of the old cance.

Oh, many a time, with a careless hand, I have pushed it away from the pebbly strand, And paddled it down where the stream runs quick, Where the whirls are wild and the eddies are thick,
And laughed as I leaned o'er the rocking side

And looked below in the broken tide, To see that the faces and boats were two, That were mirrored back from the old canoe. Eut now, as I lean o'er the crumbling side, And look below in the sluggish tide, The face that I see there is graver grown, And the laugh that I hear has a soberer tone, And the hands that lent to the light skiff wings Have grown familiar with sterner things.
But I love to think of the hours that sped As I rocked where the whirls their white spray shed, Ere the blossoms waved or the green grass grew, O'er the mouldering stern of the old canoe.

A GOVERNESS.

BY LOTTIE BROWN.

"You will find her in the library, Victor." "There is no need of my criticising her if she suits you." "As Nellie's guardian, you should know the person who is to be her teacher and companion," said the housekeeper.

So Victor Delmaine flung his fragant cigar out of the window, and stalked indifferently toward the library, wishing that his guardianship was not burdened with so many disagreeable responsibilities.

It was a triffe shadowy in the library, and he was quite in the center of the room before he saw the slight figure, which stood near the window. Then he paused, with the first embarrassment he had felt for years, checking his steps, and altering his courtly grace of manner into the awkwardness

The stranger was marvelously beautiful. Her dress of black cloth draped a stately, queenly figure, and gave her a statuesque beauty at once perfect and peculiar. The face was wonderfully white and clear, with great, dark, burning eyes, and heavy, drooping lids, a mobile, scarlet mouth, with a strange, stern expression.

"Miss Dare?" hesaid.

"Yes." "I am Victor Delmaine. You must excuse Mrs. Colfax, she is too busy to come with me to give me an introduction."

"It does not matter," she said idly. "I fear you have taken a sorry task upon yourself. Nelly's a spoiled

"I am not frightened; I am used to children," she said, in that cold constrained voice, and he, seeing that he could not win her from her reserve, said a little about her making herself, comfortable and at home, and then went out, brought forth a fresh cigar, and found a seat on the lawn under the trees, and went on smoking, and wondering about this new comer and her strangely beautiful face. The Delmaine family was a small one, consisting only of Victor, his niece Nelly, and Mrs. Colfax, the busy housekeeper, Thus Viola Dare found little of labor to perform, and nothing to annoy or perplex, and judging her sad and weary face, this was what she most needed.

"You are very quiet, Miss Dare," said Delmaine, coming in one evening when she was struggling between Nellie, (who was an indifferent scholar); and a sum in multiplication. "I am very busy," she said, without lifting her eyes from the slate. "Will you drive with me after din-"No," she answered.

He could not be angry. The answer was delicately given, but with a politeness in the regular tones of her voice that almost compensated for the refusal of his courtesy. He went on, however, with the Delmaine persisten-

"You are doing yourself no good by sitting so many hours at your tasks.
We do not want it so. My sister in law, Mrs. August Delmaine, and some merry friends of hers, will come, here to-morrow. Won't you lay aside your labors for a few days, and be one of what cannot fail to be a gay party?"

She shook her head mournfully. "I should be a very sorry addition

"I'd like to know what it all means. I'd like to know why she is so sad and strange."

In these few days his curiosity, for Eye did not leave it all to her daughters, | had been considerably aroused.

Their evenings had necessarily been passed together with Mrs. Colfax and Nellie, until the nurse came for the last named young lady, and they had learned as much of each other as people can reasonably expect to learn over commonplaces and formalities. But, meanwhile. Victor, seeing that she was handsome, and of more than ordinary intellect and recticence, got up an ordinary amount of interest in her, and during the most of his waking moments, amused himself with speculations concerning her.
In due time Mrs. August Delmaine and her party came. She brought Delia and Esther Traverse, and Kitty Glenn, and Melville Orr, her brother, and Will Audlyn, and they filled the Delmaine house with merriment.

Victor acted his part of host with a great degree of cordiality, and when everybody was at ease, he took Ada, his sister-in-law, away, to introduce her to Viola Dare....

Mrs. Delmaine was a lady in every sense, and saw Miss Dare as she was, and gave her the courtesy due her, and Viola's iciness thawed as before. the sun beneath this glow of warm.

"You must join us at once, Miss Dare," said Ada. "We have a gay party, and you must not keep away from us. Some one will surely find you out." "I'm a poor adition."d .

Mrs. Delmaine stopped her, and Viola found herself borne away to the parlor, and introduced to Miss Esther Traverse and Melville Orr. The rest were beyond the library, and Kitty Glenn was saying—

"Oh, Victor, everybody believed in Theodore Lent. Wasn't he a beauty, Delia?" "Oh, a perfect beauty, but he went to prison, after all, and died there. His wife must feel terribly." "Who was she?" asked Victor. "Why, don't you know? She was

Victor put up his hand to check her, but not soon enough to prevent Viola, who was just entering, turning white as death.

"Oh! my!" said Kitty. But Victor stepped forward and introduced the party, and Ada, with womanly tact, led her away to chat with her about Nellie; and all who looked on knew, for a positive fact, that she was Richard Dare's daughter, and Theodore Lent's widow. She said to Ada, as they moved

"You have heard a little of my history from your merry friend, Miss Glenn. I am Viola Lent."

"I am so sorry for you," said Ada, "You need not be. I am infinitely happier than I have been for months. Mrs. Delmaine, however, did not let her friendship subside because of Viola's happiness, but with the delicacy of a lady, held a friendly arm around the laboring governess, and tried to make the rest of the party know, to a certainty, that she was one of them.

It was not so easily done. The. Traverse girls were favored by circumstances, and as such were haughty and unbearable, and in spite of all Mrs. Delmaine's endeavors, Viola was most unmercifully snubbed. There were times when the slights were so cruelly given that Viola could not bear them openly, but went to her own room to shed bitter floods of tears. But Kitty Glenn was, in every sense, her friend, and frequently relieved herself thus after one of their.

talks-You are jealous, Essie. You know that Victor Delmaine likes her." "Nonsense! do you suppose Victor Delmaine would stoop to a convict's ife ?" "I don't know. Just look!". And Esther Travers saw Victor start up and walk away toward Miss Dare, who was idly running her fingers over the keys of the piano, and lean over her. "Nonsense!" said Essie, Traverse gain.

And Kitty maliciously said a firm "Not at all. You will see that? it is not nonsense one of these days. Even as they looked, Victor, and Miss Dare: were walking away, and went to the library, and had Esther; ears been as s harp, as her eyes, she would have heard him say, as they walked—

"Come away, Miss. Dare: L have something to say that all these busy people must not hear."

When they were in the library he closed the door, and turning to the si-lent figure, standing indifferently in the centre of the room, he said-""Viola Dare !"

boreYes, and chrispillon of edenu ed. L. don't like to repeat love passages, "I should be a very sorry addition to a gay party. You had better leave me to my work."

There was nothing to him but to go away after this, but before he closed the door he took one good, long look at the beautiful woman, who sat so earnestly laboring with his perverse, little neice.

She was very young not more than twenty, but there was a life-long experience in the sad eyes, and about the tender mouth, and he went down the hall saying over and over to himself.

"I made up my mind," said Victor, impressively, "to fall in love and marry you, when I first saw you. I do not care who you were.'

"But you thought me poor." "That's nothing."

"I am not poor, Victor, nor has poor father turned me away from his heart and home. My heart was breaking, and to save myself I sought the sovereign remedy, labor. I am saved, so when you wish it I will go home."

So Esther Traverse and all the rest went away to the grand church; and saw Victor Delmaine marry his ward's governess, and saw the old millionaire, Richard Dare, give the bride away.

Catch a Weasel Asleep.

The workmen in the engine house of the New Haven railroad were greatly amused a few days ago by the movements of a weasel that had killed a rat nearly as large as itself, in one of the engine pits. The side of the pit being perpendicular, and the rat too heavy for the weasel to carry up in his teeth, the question arose how he should get him out. It looked like a difficult task, but the weasel was equal to the emergency. After several unsuccessful attempts to shoulder the rat and climb up the side he laid him down and went about to the different corners of the pit ou a tour of inspection. Finally selecting one in which sufficient dirt had accumulated to make an elevation of several inches, he went back, dragged the rat to the corner, and stood him upon his hind legs. He then clambered out of the pit, and going to the corner where he had left the rat, let himself down by his hind feet from above, clasped the rat around the neck with his fore paws, pulled him up and trotted off with him to his hole. The weasel is one which HORSE. A poor old stage-horse, lank and thin, Not much else than bones and skin, I jog along, week out, week in,

Kicked and cursed, and meanly fed,
Jammed in the side, and jerked by the head;
And the thing I can't at all make out, Is, what on earth it's all about.

Why was I made to toil and tug Two-legged, dumpy as a jug,
Who sits aloft my ribs to batter?
Or why was he made, for that matter?
And if I needs must be created, Why is it that I was not fated To prance and curvet, finely mated, Silver-harnessed, sleek and fat, With groom and blanket, and all that?

Here I go, day after day, Pounding and slipping down Broadway, Dragging these curious biped things, With forelegs gone, and yet no wings: Where they all go to, I don't know, Nor why in the world they hurry so, Nor what good use Heaven puts them to!

It wasn't my fault, you see, at all. That my joints grew big and my muscles smal And so I missed of a rich man's stall. I'm clumsy, crooked, stupid, slow:
Yet the meanest horse is a horse, you know,
And his ribs can ache with a kick and blow.
As well as the glossiest negs that go;
And pray, how long will they use me so?

Diptheria—A Sure Cure. We take great pleasure in laying before our readers the following method of treating diptheria, hoping that it may prove useful in arresting the ravages of this terrible disease, now so prevalent in many parts of the country. Dr. Scott says it has been used by himself, and others to whom he has given it, in over one thousand cases, without a failure. "It will always cure," says he, "if the treatment is commenced before the diptheria membrane extends into the air tube, which is always known by the great difficulty of breathing and restlessness. In such cases no remedy yet discovered will always effect a cure; but if the patient is watched, and this treatmentused in time, there is no danger." We subjoin that portion of Dr. Scott's letter which gives his mode of treating diptheria, as published in the

Stewart's New House.

A. T. Stewart's new white marble residence on Fifth avenue, New York, isdoubtless the most magnificent private establishment in the country. It covers an area of 116 by 62 feet, and is four stories high. The ornamentation of the exterior is elaborate and tasteful, and the interior is described as regal in its splendor. On the ground floor is a grand entrance hall entered through a superb marble vestibule, a reception room, parlor, breakfast and dining-rooms, picture gallery and music room, all of spacious dimensions and elegant design. The floors and walls of all the rooms are of marble and the ceilings are beautifully frescoed. All the apartments are adorned with splendid mirrors, elaborately carved mantle-peices, and furniture of costly wood or gilt. The chandeliers are all connected by electic wires, so that they can be lighted or extinguished in a moment. The carpets, of rare beauty, have been made to order in Europe. The second floor is reached by a grand stair case of white marble, which was manufactured in Italy and imported in sections. On this floor are the sleeping rooms of Mr. Stevart, a library and a billiard room, all elegantly fitted up. The third story consists of a series of beautiful sleep-

Did you ever see a woman undertake to saw wood? It is always a little while before dinner, when the pies won't bake, and the potatoes absolutely refuse to come to a boiling point, and the only stick of wood is exactly three inches too long. After vain attempts to prove the elastic of matter by putting a two foot three-inch stick anto a two foot stove, she goes out to the saw horse, puts her knee on the refractory stick, in the way she has seen men do. But the edges of the wood are sharp, and she takes it down again with an ejaculation; and with a growing disregard for appearances, puts her foct on it instead. Her hair hever fails to come down at this juncture, and she has to stop and twist it into a tight knot before beginning to saw. Here the saw commences a frantic jumping and skipping on its notch one end, and wrap a strip of lown account, and the whole feminine cotton cloth around it, letting the mind being concerned on keeping up the foot that is up, and down the foot the prize of a fine intellect with a | youd the end of the stick, so as not | that should be down, until, in an unto jag the mouth and throat, and fas- lucky moment the center of gravity as lost, the stick flies up and launches a blow at her nose just as somebody goes by. Sir James Alderson, M. D., F. K. So, has an elaborate article in the British Medical Journal, in which he discusses the cause: and amelioration of sen sickness. Referring to the experience of sufferers from this strange and gloomy malady, he says it is admitted by all that they are most sensible of the miserable feeling at the moment of the descent of the ship. They are also conscious at that particular time of an instinctive effort to sigh, or take a deep inspiration, the meaning of which is manifest. During deep inspiration the chest is dilated for the reception of air, and its vessels become more open to admit blood, so that a return of blood from the head is then more free than at any other period of complete respiration. while, on the contrary, by the act of expelling air from the lungs the ingress of blood is obstructed. According to Dr. Alderson, this obstruction is proved by observation when the surface of the brain is exposed, by the operation of trephining, a successive turgescence and subsidence of the brain is then seen in alternate motion with different states of the chest. Reasoning from this well-known phenomenon. Dr. A. concludes, very plausibly, that a deep inspiration at the time of the descent of the ship tends to counteract the turgescence of the brain. . ### THURSDAY MORNING, OCT., 1873.

THE LESSON OF OHIO.

The result of the late election in Ohio is calculated to cause politicians to stop and consider whither the political craft is drifting. That the Democrats, the regular old Democracy, should have succeeded in electing Al ien for Governor of Ohio may well invite Republicans everywhere to enquire into the cause. Is is true, that after Democracy has been proclaimed both dead and buried, that it shall rise up and manifest new life in a triumph in the great State of Ohio? What does it mean?

There is one important element to secure the perpetuity and constant triumph of any party, and that is purity in the persons chosen to represent that party in public offices of honor and trust. That there are many | the law it would permit a man to bring corrupters within the ranks of the Republican party, there is not the least doubt, and he who would deny the fact would only show his ignorance and presume on the ignorance of the people. That the party must free itself from the rule of corrupt politicians, or soon or late invite complete disaster and defeat, is a proposition that needs no argument m these columns. There must needs be economy of administration in public trusts, and the people, the rank and file of any party, must feel that their interests are being jealously guarded by their public servants. So soon as a distrust shall creep into their breasts of the integrity and honor of those whom they have elevated to office, so soon their interest in party begins to wane, and they become ripe for some new movement, they know

It is and has been the constant work of the olden Democracy to infuse, if possible, the seeds of discord within the Republican ranks, in the hope, that through divisions and distrust in the camp of their enemies. they might once more ride into power. To prevent these divisions should be the aim and work of true Republicans, by reforming the abuses, and bringing into subjection the discordant elements and ridding the party of the undue influence of corrupt politicians. When these efforts fail, and the good and true in the Republican ranks have no longer an influence over the direction and policy of the party, then is it time to talk of the formation of new parties. Then will be the time to proclaim that the "mission of the Republican party is ended."

The lesson of Ohio should be heeded especially by the coming session of Congress. There is no doubt but a wide-spread dissatisfaction with the course of a number of Republican Congressmen exists. While this is true, and it cannot be denied, the eyes of the Republican masses will be directed with increased watchfulness tcward the coming Congress. Let then, every member of the great national party realize, when he sits in the national Capitol in December next, that the eyes of the whole country are upon him, and that on his action, together with that of his compeers; hangs the fate of the party of progress, the great national Republican party, and the good of the country. Let the next Congresss attend speedily to rectifying the mistakes of its predecessor, and to the granting of the assistance necessary to free the people from the opposition of the great monopolies of the day. Not that we would be understood as advocating any unjust dealing toward railroads or other corporations. We would simply have justice done all parties, and the evils complained of rectified with a due regard to the rights of all. If such a course be sincerely pursued by the coming Congress, then will the Republican party be fully reinstated in the hearts of the people, and its influence in the control of affairs of State more firmly fixed. Let an opposite course be pursued and it needs not the prophetic eye to discern its speeedy degeneracy and its certain dissolution.

riage. It is a suit brought by the widow of one Silas Porter, to recover the estate of her husband to whom it appears she was never formally married. Common sense in this as well as many other cases, should be allowed to decide the matter. Parties who have lived together as man and wife, sustained that relation in their representations and transactions with the world, should be considered as married, though their marriage has never been solemnized by the usual ceremonies. A marriage is a contract, and when once entered into cannot be set aside at the inclination of parties. They can only be relieved from the obligations they have voluntarily assumed, by a decree of divorce. This doctrine is sound and has been declared time and time again by the highest judicial tribunals of this country and England. If this were not disrespect upon his companion and offspring, and do them great injustice in depriving them of their marital or parental rights in the disposition of ais property.

SCHOOL LANDS.

The general Land Office at Wash ington has recognized the fact that Michigan is entitled to about 50,000 acres more of school lands. The deficency is accounted for in this way. By the original grant the State was to receive one full section of land for each township six miles square, or 36 townships. Section 16 in every surveyed town was designated as the school land. Owing to the inland lakes and water boundaries of the State a great many fractional towns occurred and many of the school sections were fractional. The deficiency of fractional sections, No. 16, far exceeded the deficiency in the fractional towns, so that by recent computations it is ascertained that the State is entitled to 50,000 acres more of school lands which have been granted to it. This will add to the primary school fund about $200,000. The land is distributed as follows: Detroit, 6,000 acres; Ionia and Traverse city, 1,-200 acres; Lake Superior District, on the great plane of justice to all, 26,000 acres, East Saginaw, 5,000 acres.

The voyagers had will continue till Christmas. Often in season has been quite good, everything considered. Wheat was a fair crop, and in the market bears a fair price. Corn was pretty good and brings a better price than last year. Oats never were better. Potatoes and all kinds of vegetables are very poor. Fruit is not very plenty. Cattle pay well, as they always do in our State, though beef is down to the lowest notch. We have had a money panic here as in other places, but are recovering from the effect of it. Emgration continues to pour into Kansas, which of course brings more or less money. I have just returned from a trip to Burlington, where I have been attending the Neosho Valley Baptist Association. Enjoyed a very profitable and pleasant meeting. Burlington is a very pleasantly situated town, on the banks of the Noesho river, and is the county seat of Coffey County. The Missouri, Kansas and Texas R. R. passes through the town, and like all other western towns, another road is soon expected. It is surrounded by a fine farming country which is filled with enterprising people. The Neosho valley is one of the finest portions of our State. One can hardy realize the change that four years has made in this State. Church spires and lofty edifices greet the eye in every town, and some of the finest school buildings and court houses in America speak well for our new State. I had the pleasure a few weeks ago of attending the Southwestern Kansas Baptist Association, held at Wichita. Had a pleasant trip of sixty-five miles across the country, and enjoyed also a very interesting meeting. Wichita is located in the famous Arkansas valley, and is one of the fastest towns in our State. Young America may them. The Arkansas river is the great wonder of the world. It is some thirty-five rods wide, and has banks only about five feet high; has tributaries without number, and conreys the melting snow from the Rocky Mountains, and never overflowing. A few miles above Wichita the bed of the river is entirely dry in the summer, the water being conveyed in an under current through the sound. At Wichita the bed of the river is so sandy that fording is not safe. An excellent iron bridge substitutes the dangerous ford. When I came to Kansas four years ago, I could have got a homestead that would have included a part of the present townsite. Then there were two small villages one mile apart that were on a strife with each other for the ascendency, but the question is settled, as the town reaches from one to the other. There are churches of almost every order in this place. The Baptist number sev-

HARTFORD, Oct. 13, '73. EDITORS RECORD: Our election has passed, and Hartford is at last the sole Capital of Connecticut, by a majority of between 5,000 and 6,000 only, when it was thought that the amendment would be carried by far the greater majority. New Haven used the most energetic efforts, by money, persuasion, and other measures as the number of votes polled in that city showed, but it all did not avail them, although they gained the democratic party to their aid.

There was another exciting occurrence in the western portion of the State on the same day, it was the passing of the Graphic balloon, which started to cross the Atlantic, and passed along and landed in Canaan. The papers are full of jokes about their ending their pilgrimage in the "happy land." They started about 9 o'clock Monday morning and reached Goshen Center a little past twelve o'clock, a distance of little more than a hundred miles. The balloon; was sailing along through the storm very low, and as it passed Mr. Geo. Crandall's, among several ropes that were hanging down, one long one dragged on his hog-pen and broke his clothes line. He caught hold of it and they called to him to hold on, it did not appear to move in a straight line, but rather wavered. As it passed Mr. Scoville's he called to the voyagers and asked them to "stop and get some cider," they replied they did not want such as are used only on ships, a cask containing water, labeled telegraph to Brooklyn. The cask sunk nearly two feet into the ground; they threw also a bag of sand. The balloon then passed over our old homestead and seemed to rise and go over the mountiful sight they ever saw. crops. The weather has been pleasant of late, not frost enough to kill the tomato vines. The rain has not filled the fprings and streams full yet, apples are very scarce and tobacco, where it was not previously destroyed, is below the average crop.

"Captain Jack" Criticised. UNION RIDGE, CLARK Co., W. T., Sept. 27, 1873. EDITORS OF BERRIEN Co. RECORD. -In your paper of July 17 and also that of Sept. 8th, appear letters from "Captain Jack" (not he of the "Horse Marines") not at all commenda-tory of Oregon and Washington Territory. In his first he tells of having just returned from an extended tour through Oregon, Washington Territory and California. That he traveled many miles while far away from home, and as he supposed, civilization, may be true. That he visited people at their homes or had extended observation outside of the town, steamboats, R. R cars, and hotels I know to be a mistake, and more especially do I know this of his history while in Washington and Oregon. While in Washington Territory he stopped with me for a few weeks and all the time he was in the Territory. In that time he visited the families of Captain D. R. Fales, Hon. Joseph H. Goodland, Asa Richardson and Mrs. C. Shobert, and of these one lady alone expressed dissatisfaction with the country. And while here, the extent of his travel ing was not at any one point; three miles from the Columbia river, nor up and down the same more than 16. miles, and I defy him to name two families other than those I have named whose hospitalities he enjoyed while here. The said "Captain Jack," after spending about seven weeks here, (and most of the time sick,) went to Portland, the commercial center of this Northern coast, and twenty miles from here, and where in the city at East Portland, and on the Columbia river steamers between here, Portland and St. Helens, for about four or five weeks his time was spent after he left. And that constituted his "extended trip" to Oregon and Washington Territory. That he was in Oregon, except upon the steamers, two miles outside of the city of Portland I deny.

In regard to his travels in California

I will now say nothing. Let California take care of herself, she is abundantly able. Now I defy "Captain Jack" or any other "Jack" to take any county in Oregon or Washington and show one family in a hundred that would exchange their home here for one east of the Rocky Mountains

Quagle of Portland, he is a kind hearted; leasy-going man, having a wife living near Cleveland, Ohio, and he has been away from her for 24 years, and has a quarter section of land within three miles of me; and to my certain knowledge he has been sending her means to come here with. and for the past nine years using every means in his power to induce her to come here to spend together the balance of their days.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have given condensed history of "Captain Jack's" travels in this region, and at some future time I may say something in regard to the country, its climate, to-pography, &c. I cannot close, however, without a word in regard to Mr. Thomas Frazer, of Portland. With him I have never had other than a speaking acquaintance, but we have men here of a good repute among. their friends, and none better than he. Respectfully, M. R. HATHAWAY.

have had no bank failures as vet. The door of the First National is wide shut to day on account of the indisposition of the Graded School Trustices in allowing the Grangers to get possession of the Town Hall, and they forced to have the principal school held in the rear end of the church, which is a poor choice and they know it. It smokes like a smoke house and is about as well lighted, and about as warm.-Last week, in the night time, a brakeman went west of town about half a mile to signal a train, and laid down near the track and went to sleep. Having been over-worked, it is said, and so sleepy, he rolled around so that one of his legs laid across the track. He slent so soundly that he did not hear the approaching train, which crushed his leg just above the ankle oint, and the next day his leg was amputated before a number of citizens who would look on a while and then look off a while, and then look on a while and get faint a little, and then go out in the air, and then come back and look on again, and were not satisfied until they saw the instruments all wiped off and laid away for another call. Probably the next time the patient will be surgeoned on the street near the railroad, where all can see.— There has been more crying among the females and swearing among the men the past week than for a year previous, all owing to the improper adjustment of stove pipes. The only happy and pleasant men are the stove dealers, it is now their harvest. When going down street a few evenings since I saw a leading citizen with a stove pipe elbow under his right arm, going to see Jo and Josh, the hardware men. Citizen says, "Josh, I want you to fix this elbow." Josh, says, "Roll up your sleeve then." Citizen says, "I mean the stove pipe elbow. I hate and dispise a store pipe elbow. They have caused more trouble in my family than caused more trouble in my ramity than any other one thing. Late years every time I take, hold of a stove pipe elbow my wife. Jerusha Jane, cries enough to break her heart. I just left her at home crying. "Wal, Mr. Citizen," says Josh, "I don't think it will pay to have that fixed." "Fix it if you can, for I have been to a great expense already. Thave been to a great expense already. Thave had a colored individual work all the afternoon helping me, and my wife cried about that. Wal, Josh, what does a new one cost? Thirty-five cents, says Josh. Citizen, astonished, says, "Is that all? and I have been working for an hour for the marshal of said village to sue the person or persons against whom such tax was assessed before any court of competent jurisdiction, and to have and take all lawful ways and means provided by law for the collection of debts, to enforce the payment of such tax.

Sec. 65: In case the marshal shall be unable to collect the tax assessed on any real estate, he shall make reback-vard with a broom and dust pan, and the citizen going down street wearing half a collar, and a white bandage around, the upper part of his face at an angle of forty-five degrees, just covering the left luminary. There were six new cases of the stove pipe disease to day. Probably most of them will recover unless they have a release in which case they will surely throw them, and so they are used longer. Some say it is owing to the speculations of Vanderbilt and Drew, who are running the country. Yours truly,

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fover and Ague. Such we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of Fever and Ague from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if poison of Fevera and Ague from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of everybody; and in bilious districts, where Fevera and Ague prevails, everybody should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A greatvariety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical: This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally or daily while exposed to the infection, that will be exercide from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure; and few will ever suffer from Intermittents if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity, and producing many truly remarkable cures, where Correct-attest: A. F. ROSS, WM. PEARS,

CASH SYSTEM. - Merchants are generally impressed with the fact at this time of the year how much more convenient it would be to them if they adhered strictly to the cash system. It is often apparently a great accommodation to some persons to get trusted for a while, and they make such promises that the merchant is induced to let his goods go running a risk of ever getting anything for them. Parties who are thus relied upon should make special efforts to settle their bills at this time of the year, when the merchant has need of every dollar that is due him in the management of his

"THROW PHYSIC TO THE DOGS."-"The Graphic" recently gave an il lustration of the new chromo issued by the Murray Hill Publishing Company, 129 East Twenty-Eight Street, from Bispham's-"Throw Physic to the Dogs." The subject is a little girl physicing various specimens of the canine race. The scene is a laughable one, and the different attitudes of the dogs are exceedingly pleasing.

It was designed to illustrate Dr. Foote's aversion to drugs, and accompanies each copy of his valuable work, "Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense." The Drs. practice is thoroughly "New School," and in this way he stands prominently out from the profession of a successful practitioner.

The book is a volume of 912 pages and 200 illustrations, filled with facts and reason relating to mankind, and their social and physical status. The Graphic says of it: "It is an encyclopedia of useful knowledge." A noted clergyman of this city testifies to its merits, remarking: "It is a library" in itself." The Franklin Repository, of Chambersburg, Pa., speaks of the picture as "a beautiful chromo, very pleasant, and so enjoyable as to be almost good company."—New York Express.

Oct. 18, 1873. EDITORS RECORD :- Last Tuesday evening, Oct. 14, the monotony of our little town was slightly varied by a quiet donation party, at the residence of Mr. Clifton Gardener. The participants were principally relatives of the family, the object being to surprise and present to Mrs. Gardener a number of useful and ornamental presents, upon the anniversary of her birth-day. It proved in every respect a success. The friends came early, congratulations and gifts were presented, followed by a merry and social chat, dried apples and plenty of warm water. Soon after refreshments there was a general departure, with thanks and Yours truly, many kind wishes from host and host-

FROM THREE OAKS. MESSRS. EDITORS .- Please permit me through the columns of your paper, to reply to a communication from "Anxiety." A few days ago while Mr. Kinney was absent from home, a young man entered the house and carried off a few trinkets. Mr. K. returning home found the young man: had taken his galvanized watch chain, valued, in K's. sworn affidavit at $35. Through rage and excitement, K. started for Three Oaks, and had a warrant issued. The constable and Mr. K. started in pursuit of the young man, and on making inquries they found him south of New Buffalo. The officer made the arrest, read the complaint, and the young man plead guilty and delivered up the goods to K. He then asked him how much he would take to release him, Mr. K. gravely replied, $25. The young man failed to raise the sum demanded. CANDIM Boots & Shoes FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE Sunday Reading

REPENTANT. Mother, I kneel at the door-stone, Penitent, wearv and worn; Many a mile have I wandered,

And fasted since yesterday morn;

Darkness is gathering 'cound me, Never again shall Troam; 'Open the door to me, mother; Welcome your prodigal home! Father was angry—so angry— And stern, when he knew my disgrace; He thrust me away from his presence; And then shut the door in my face!

But, mother, your love did not leave me;
I saw the tears ready to start,
And I knew that though guilty and banished,
I still had a place in your heart!

They say you grow feebler and feebler;
By reason of sorrow and shame!
That your hair is as white as a snow-wreath, And 'tis seldom you mention my name. But, oh, I will never believe them. When slanders like this they repeat;

For the voice of my mother has called me, And brought me again to her feet!

She talked to the Saviour about me,
And prayed—as a mother can pray!
And back to the fold He has brought me, The lamb who went wand'ring astray.
I soon became weary of exile;
I soon became weary of sin;
And longed for a life that was purer—
But who would have taken mg in?

O, mother dear, say you forgive me, dear And take me again to your breast!

Nor let me die here on the door-stone,

Alone, unforgiven, unblest!

Come qui. kly leaf footstep approaches! Not yours—but mother's—good-by!
Tell father—that God—has not—left me—
Outside of His threshold to die!

The Efficacy of Prayer.

The fervent and effectual prayer of the righteous will ultimately prevail. For proof of the above assertion, we have only to examine the sacred pages of the word of life, wherein is record. ed the will and promises of God which, though heaven and earth may pass away, not one jot or tittle therein revealed to us, shall ever fail. How great then are the encouragements given us to continue our supplications and our efforts for the salvation of our friends and fellow-beings around us; when we have the positive assurance that our prayers (if offered aright) will be finally if not speedily answer-will be finally if not speedily answered.

When we look abroad over the earth we in imagination behold the almost countless multitudes of immortal beings, who are actually rushing on in the broad way to eternal death—blind and heedless of the awful vortex of dark despair into which they will soon inevitably plunge. If we look around among our own circle of acquaintances how many do we find without God and without hope in the world; and those too, perhaps, who are near and dear to us by the ties of nature and affection; and in so doing let us ask ourselves the question, if we are offering that fervent and effectual prayer for their future and eternal happiness:

If not, we are far from fulfilling the command and following the example command and following the example of our blessed Savior, who said, "as ye would that others, should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." Oh! it is highly necessary that Christians should awake from the lethargy into which they are (too often) fallen, and to labor earnestly and with great zeal for perishing souls, and for the cause of Christ, who not only spent his whole life in going about doing good, but was offered a sacrifice for sin, and submitted to the ignominious, death of the cross, that we, through his sufferings and death, might obtain everlasting life. Let us, therefore, renew the vows we have made, and by our life, conversation and labors of love, convince the world that we are really what we profess to be-Christians in-

The Aim of Worshipers.

Is our religion a mere luxury to be enjoyed? It would seem to be so, to a very large extent, if we judge from appearances. The course often pursued by professing Christians, and frequently by a ruling majority in our churches, and sometimes by a ruling minority, indicates that the end sought in maintaining religious institutions, is their own enjoyment or entertainment instead of the glory of God, and the advancement of true religion. The mind seems to be intent on the good that is to be obtained from the wor-ship of God, as though this were the primary end of all worship; and even the good to be derived from it seems to be measured by the amount of enjoyment or entertainment it affords. Hence the demand for church music of such a character as can be enjoyed. as a musical entertainment, instead of that which may be employed as the channel through which the worshiper may render to God the sincere homage of his heart. So also the preaching and the prayers must be alike enter-taining to meet the demand of a fastidious taste. It is not so much the truth that is demanded by a large class in our churches, as that which will amuse and please and entertain. This fastidiousness extends to all the concomitants of the preacher—even to his dress and personal appearance. Anything faulty in this respect is enough, in the estimation of such fastidious critics, to destroy every good quality that may be possessed.—Se-

The Bible Grows with One. If you come to Holy Scripture with growth in grace, and with aspirations, for yet higher attainments, the book grows with you, grows upon you. It is ever beyond you, and cheerily cries, "Higher yet! Excelsior!" Many books in my library are now behind and beneath me; I read them years ago, with considerable pleasure; I have read them since with disappointment; I shall never read them again, for they are of no service to me. They were good in their way once, and so were the clothes I wore when I was ten years old: but I have outgrown them—I know more than these price, $7,50 per Doz. It is true; it INSURANCE cannot really grow, for it is perfect; but it does so to our apprehension. The deeper you dig into Scripture, the more you find that it is a great abyss of truth. Only Physician of his Wind IN THE WEST.

Consumption, knowledge, account of the reputation Dr. Price his acquired by cardid, honest désling, and years of successfel practice has induced unprincipled persons to copy and initate him as far as they dare, in order to deceive. Let it be remembered that no person in the west is treating Chronic Diseases similar to Dr. Price—that his practice is not one of experiments, but founded on the laws of Nature with years of experience and syddence to sustain it. That it does not tear down to build up—make sick to make well—no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of these diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know, everything, or fo cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. A lady on North Main Street saw something on the carpet on Saturday morning, and hunting up an old paper, she placed it over the object, and carefully lifting it up, went to the back stoop and dropped in the slop pail—a pair of gloves. She says she doesn't see anything very amusing about this, but it seems as if her husband would split himself over it.
