How Sammy Helped the Poor

"Sammy, run out and get some wood and make a fire in the settin'room. Mind you don't get any of that hemlock stuff to snap over everything, for I don't want holes burnt in that rug afore the fireplace. Gracious knows I was long enough braidin' it not to have it burnt up. "Who's comin', marm?" questioned

Sammy as he started for the wood-

"Why. Deacon Gooding has apint-a meetin' to see about helpin' the poor, and the folks are goin' to meet here Now start along, for it takes a dreadful while to heatup that settin'-rocm.' "Seems to me they've taken a very ing why people who had money were of so much more account than everybody else, and then he went for some dry kindling, and came to the very wise conclusion that he didn't know But at last the sitting-room was nicely warmed, the chairs were all set back against the wall, the evening lamps were lighted, and widow Martin and Sammy, each in Sunday best. waited for the expected company to assemble. They did not have long to wait, for in less than an hour the room was full. . The tall and the short, the old and the young, the married and the single, turned out, and Widow Martin whispered rather spitefully to Sammy:

"I wonder which they think the most on, the apples and the cider they allers git here, or helping the poor? As Mr. Stanwood, the minister, was absent, of course Deacon Gooding ook it upon himself to speak first. "For massy sake why didn't you say somethin' that was someth n'?" questioned Mrs. Sanford, as her husband fell back into his chair, and vig-orously wiped his face with his red bandanna. After several other gentlemen had spoken, Deacon Gooding called on Mrs. Burnam, a lady who was very particular to scold all the time week days, and be very pious on Sundays. "I'm glad I have got a chance ter say somethin' at last," she commenced, "for I've been achin' ever sence I set here. I think it's a desprit good thing that somebody has thought them Nortons and Smiths and Baileys ought to have somethin' done fer em. disposing of nearly a bushel of apples and drinking two gallons of new cider, they bade Mrs. Martin good night, and returned to their homes feeling that they were indeed workers in the Lord's vineyard.

It was arranged that they should meet the following Tuesday evening at the house of Mrs. Burnam, and each should carry what he or she intended to give the poor in the neighborhood, and also the money towards buying presents for Mr. Stanwood, and several wealthy gentlemen who belonged to the church, but: who, with their minister, were then absent, attending a conference. Deacon Gooding was to decide what the presents should be. The days passed swiftly away, and Tuesday ovening came, "before a body had a chance to turn 'round," as Widow Martin expressed it.

Before seven o'clock every person in Lincolnville might have been seen walking along in the moonlight toward Farmer Burnam's residence, each with a parcel or basket in his hand.

When all were assembled, Mr. Burnam asked Deacon Gooding to inform them what he had decided the presents for the absent ones should be. After the customary ahem, the Deacon proceeded to address his audience, "straightway in such words as follow: "I have decided, my dear friends, that as it will not ab do to offer such a-ah-rich, that is, wealthyman as Mr. Stanwood any ordinary present, it is best to give him a rosewood writing-desk. It will cost thirty dollars. If no person present—ah has any objections, we will give—ah that is—present Mr. Fullerton with a nice robe for his new sleigh. Now, my dear brothers and sisters, I hope each one of you will-ah -give with pleasure whatever sum is needed to make out enough to buy sat-down: "It's tarnation hard work to talk so

Each gave readily, and after countthe money, it was found that the Deacon would be obliged to give ten cents. was called upon to unite a jolly old couple in the bonds of matrimony, and just as they were pronounced man and wife another couple entered the room to be joined likewise. The moment the two latter entered they were somewhat surprised at seeing the divine receive the splendid ransom of a a new and bright half-dollar piece from the hands of the newly-married bridegroom. Our eminent divine immediately thrust the money into his pocket, and then, congratulating the happy pair, bade them adicu, and at once commenced upon his duties in performing the marriage rite for the remaining couple. Being pronounced man and wife, the youthful huspand thrust his hand into his pocket and pulled out the same amount, an equally bright, new half dollar, and presented it to the divine; whereupon the good man looked with profound astonishment at the insignificant piece, and remarked:

"My customary fee on such occasions is five dollars." "You married the last old ugly couple," said the indignant bridegroom "for fifty cents, and now you dare to tax me ten times that amount, merely because we are a young couple." . The good divine, placing his glasses several inches above his nose, looked the young man in the face, and then

"I have never married you but this once, while I have married the former man five times! and on such occasions justice demands a liberal discount to the trade!"

Suffice it to say that the remaining four dollars and a half were forthcoming, and with a smile the couple took the nearest way to the door.

Polite Children.

"Thank you, Charlie," said Mrs. Brown, as her little son handed her a paper he was requested to bring. Thank you, Bridget," said the little fellow, a few hours after, as he received a glass of water from his nurse.

"Well, Mrs. Brown, you have the best mannered children I ever saw," said a neighbor. "I should be thankful if mine were as polite to me as yours are to the servants. You never spend half so much time on your children's clothes as I do, and yet every one notices them, they are so well-behaved.' "We always try to treat our children politely," was the reply. This was the whole secret. When I hear parents grumbling about the illmanners of their children, I always wish to ask, "Have you always treated them with politeness?"

Many parents who are polite and polished in their manners toward the world at large, are perfect boors inside the home circle. If a stranger offers the slightest service, he is gratefully thanked; but who ever remembers thus to reward the tireless little feet that are traveling all day long up stairs and down, on countless errands for somebody? It would be policy for parents to treat their children politely for the sake of obtaining more cheerful obedience, if for no other reason. The costless use of an "If you please;" and "I thank you," now and then will go far to lighten an otherwise burdensome task. Say to your son, "John, shut that door!" with a scowl, and he will move slowly toward it, and shut it with a bang. The next time say to him. "John, will you please to shut the door?" and he will hasten with a smile to do your bidding.

The Poison on the Walls.

Prof. Kedzie, one of the leading analytical chemists of the day, has prepared a valuable paper on arsenical and other poisoning cases that have been traced directly to the poison contained in the coloring matter of wall-

That poisoning does frequently occur from this source is too well known to admit of an argument, and with these facts before us it becomes our duty to see to it that the people at large should know just what to do in the matter. Prof. Kedzie, in his report to the State Board of Health, gives the following advice: The question how to avoid such dangers, becomes an important one. And a sweeping rule may be given by saying, use no wall-paper of any kind. If persons dislike the naked white wall, and are not satisfied with kalsomining (which may be tinted of any hue desired) the walls may be frescoed or painted to suit the taste. The oil will fix any color upon the wall in such a manner as to obviate all danger of the color dusting into the room. If wall paper is used, be sure that it is free from arsenic in any form. Test the paper before you use it, and if the poison is present in any quantity, reject it entirely. The means of testing the paper may be found in any drug store in the State.

If the arsenic paper is already on vour walls, and if for any reason you do not wish to remove it, the paper should be varnished with a thin and perfectly transparent varnish, to securely fix the pigments on the wall. It will usually be cheaper to remove the paper entirely, and to replace it with paper free from poison, than to varnish the old paper.

METHOD OF TESTING. The green arsenical colors are read ily soluble in ammonia water. If a little ammonia water poured on the paper discharges the green color or produces such a change in the color as indicates the removal of green, the paper should be rejected, as it probably contains arsenic. To identify the presence of arsenic in any paper, wet the paper with ammonia water, pour off this water on a clean piece of glass, and drop into this a crystal of nitrate of silver, or a small piece of lunar caustic. If a yellow precipitate forms around the crystal it indicates the presence of arsenic.

The Shirt that Opened Behind. A man in Greenfield, whom we will call William, got up the other morn ing and proceeded to put on a shirt which his wife had just made for him after a new pattern.

As she stood at the mirror curling her hair, she heard a suppressed sound. half-way between a groan and an oath, and turning around said, laughing: "Why, my dear!"

"Shut up!" he ejaculated. "You are a born fool. Never let a woman attempt to fit a shirt; it is one of the impossibilities.''

"But William-" deprecatingly. "Don't you talk-let me talk. Do you think I am going down town in this rig? A pretty disposition you've got; just because I happened to find a little fault last week with your ironing, you must go and make me a shirt without a bosom! Such malicious conduct, madam, is unpardonable. Shut up, I say! I won't hear a word. When a starched shirt front is the only finery that a man indulges in, is he not excusable for being particular in regard to that, I should like to know? And this thing sets like the devil! Look how baggy it is here in front, and it feels behind as if there was a board bound across me"—walking up and looking in the glass, hitching up first one shoulder and then the other, after the indescribable manner of a man trying a new garment. His wife dared not speak, but bringing a good sized mirror from the next room, she held it up behind him for a moment; and perceiving by his chopfallen expression that he saw the point and the front, she ran down stairs to settle the coffee, and see that Bridget had set the table geometrically.

As William walked down to his office that morning, he said to the first friend that he met: "I tell you, Tom, that little wife of mine is a born genius. Look at this shirt, now; she cut and made it all herself. Do you see, it's open behind, the pattern." And it was by the way of Tom's wife that Lizzie first knew that William was pleased with his shirts.

the way to cure the habit: "No stammering person ever found any difficulty in singing. The reason of this is, that by observing the measure of the music-by keeping timethe organs of speech are kept in such position that enunciation is easy. Apply the same rule to reading or speech, and the same result will follow. A Word About Marriage.

A physician writes the following sensible advice: "My profession has thrown me among women of all classes. and my experience teaches me that God never gave man a better proof of his love than to place woman here with him. My advice is, go—propose to the most sensible girl you know. If she says yes, tell her how much your income is-from what source derived -and tell her you will divide the last shilling with her, and love her with all your heart in the bargain. And then keep your promise. My word for it, she will live within your income; and to your last hour you will regret that you did not marry sooner. Gentlemen, don't worry about feminine extravagance and feminine untruth. Just you be true to her, love her sincerely, and tell her of it frequently, and a more fond, faithful, foolish slave you will never meet anywhere. You won't deserve her, I know, but she would never see it. Now throw aside pride and selfishness, and see what will become of it."

How Could She?

Some young ladies are thin, and would give up all hope of a new dress for a year, could they possess the coveted plumpness of form which they admire; while some young ladies are stout, and would make any sacrifice to become slender. One of the latter class, according to her indignant father's statement, has been trying to prove that she knows a great deal more than Dame Nature, as to her fashioning, and by means of drinking vinegar—said to reduce flesh—has become broken down in health-dyspeptic, nervous, lethargic and generally despondent. Her color is gone, her eyes are dull, and all ambition seems to have departed. She has lost onefourth of her weight, two-fourths of her health, and four-fourths of her beauty. From a well-looking, jolly girl, the foolish creature has degenerated into a sallow, melancholy invalid. Moral-let Nature alone-she knows what is most becoming to you, girls.

Mulching Apple Trees.

If mulching was not attended to in the spring, the following fall is a good time to have it done. Then, strawey manure and such material could be obtained for the purpose; now, it will be a good plan to cut some swale hay, or trim up the coarse grass and brakes growing in the pastures or along the roadsides, to be used as mulch. One of the best orchardists in Kennebec county informs us that he has noticed the most excellent results from mulching bearing fruit trees in August, and some of the heaviest crops of apples he ever obtained he attributes to the use of mulching at this season. If the material used does not decay sufficiently before winter sets in, it may be a good plan to throw it away from the trees a little, that it may not afford lodgment for the mice, as they are very liable to injure young tress in winter by gnawing the bark, and the mulch, if it is not pretty thorough ly decayed, furnishes them just the house they like. Hence the advantage of putting on the mulch early in spring—but it is better to be put on now than not at all. And, considerng its great advantages, it is not a little surprising that orchardists do not practice mulching to a greater extent than they do. It is the very best means for promoting the life and growth of young trees, and the orchardist who neglects it ought never to eat of the fruit thereof.

Don't Scold.

A great deal of injury is done to, children by their parents scolding them. Many children have been nearly or quite ruined, and often driven from home to become vagabonds and wanderers, by scolding. It sours your temper, provided it is sweet, which is question; if you scold the more you will have to scold, and soon you will become crosser, and your children likewise. Scolding alienates the hearts of your children. Depend upon it, they cannot love you so well after you have berated them as they did before. You may approach them with firmness and decision; you may phoish them with harshness and severity, and their hearts will only rise in rebellion, and a deep vindictive feeling will be cherished for years thereafter. Let gentle actions; and loving, tender words be used instead, and the result you so much desire will be easily ac complished.

Health of Farmers. Massachusetts is winning an honorable reputation for the excellence of herstatistical reports. Among the most valuable of these is the report of the Board of Health, which devotes several pages to the health of the agricultural population. The facts, it is said, are gathered from the reports of leading physicians in the State. The diseases to which farmers are most subject are, in the order of their frequency, rheumatism, dyspepsia, fever, ague, lung diseases and consumption. These, and other diseases not named, are produced by over-work, improper diet, exposure and defective dwellings. The remedy for the evil effects of overwork is simple and obvious-don't. Easier said than done, of course; but if one's whole mind is given to solving the problem, something may be effected. In regard to diet, the report says: Bad bread is common, much of it being made of unwholesome substitutes for yeast; meat is almost always fried; too much pork and beans are used; pies and cakes are used too plenty; the diet is not sufficiently varied; coffee, tea, and water are too freely used, the water being used to excess internally, we suppose, rather than externally); too much fat used in cooking and baking. The advice which follows is a natural deduction from the foregoing: Use more fresh and less salt meat; substitute broiling and roasting for frying; eat more fruits and vegetables; make better bread, and, finally, abjure featherbeds and ventilate sleeping apartments better. For some of these evils we can see no cure but in co-operation. Freshmeat, for instance, can hardly be obtained in some parts of the country, and if obtained would probably be cut up and cooked in such inartistic fashion as would not develop its most nutritious qualities. This and the other faults of faremr's diet would find a natural solution in co-operation. If the farmers will confine their attention more to such practical questions as are suggested by the report, there will be ess dyspepsia. It has been noted, too, by intelligent observers, that farmers are more subject to attacks of disease n the full than at any other time. This is doubtless due to the overtaxing of the system during the busy season. A change of scene and associations, even if only for a few hours, will often do much to counteracts the eftects of this exhaustion. Go fishing or hunting if you can not take more elaborate recreation; but try at all events to secure for all hands a short recess when the harvest is over—The Christian Union.

De Not Feed Too Much Corn.

It is evident that much of the disease that affects swine in this country comes from feverish food. While we do not agree with the theory that the heavy corn feeding produces cholera, and that it is the chief cause of that troublesome epidemic, nearly every feeder of hogs will admit that constant and excessive corn feeding to hogs is dangerous and should be avoided. The following, from the Western Farmer. is good advice, and should be followed, as much for the purpose of preventing disease as for economy:

The indications are decidedly in fayor of a good price for corn during the summer, and next fall and winter. In view of this it is especially important that farmers should make provision to secure as much growth and flesh for their stock during the summer as practicable, and to provide food that will take the place of corn to some extent. If there is a good field of clover for the hogs, this will ave the corn during the summer. We wish there was more attention paid to root growing for stock feeding. Some farmers have found peas a profitable drop for feeding from the field, sown either alone or with oats. A great growth of pumpkins can be secured and they are well worth their cost. Corn thickly sown in drills is not only valuable for cattle, but for hogs in the early fall. We would substitute artichokes for dumpkins, and plant them in a field y themselves.

In compliance with the custom es-tablished by the reverence of our fathere, and sanctioned by the gratitude of their children, Linvita the people of this State to observe Thursday, the Lith day of November, as a day of thanksgiving and praise. The gener-cus response of our daily needs again reminds us of that old yet ever newly lilustrated true, that to every "Oh my Father" there comes a "Here, my child." While we rejoice in, the evidences of a Divine Fatherhood, let us remember when gathered together on that day in our places of public worship, or at our friends, that honest thanksgiving and praise find their true expression in a charity of thought and deed, one to another, which gives promise and proof of the Divine bretherhood of man.

Given at the Executive Chamber in Lansing, this sixth day of November, in the year of our [L. S.] Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-ninth.

THE CLOSING SESSION.

Two weeks from next Monday the Forty-fourth Congress will assemble for its last term. Although the Republican party will have opportunities in the near future of showing its true principles, and adding to the reputation it has always enjoyed as a party of progress and reform, grave apprehensions are entertained that the legislation the present winter, for which the party will be directly chargable, will not be such as will inspire new confidence in the people, or con-tribute to the success of the party in the future. There is reason to fear this, and it is the duty of all who wish the good of the Government, to speak out on this subject, and sound the alarm in advance.

Nearly two thirds of the members of the present House of Congress retire on the fourth of March next, with no present prospect of ever returning to Congress. They are not under the same influence and restraint as if they were expecting a re-election. It is feared that these men, thinking it is their last chance, will endeavor to make their official position as remunerative to them as possible, and give is during the closing session that the greatest temptations to extravagance and robbery is held out to the members of Congress. It is difficult and impossible to anticipate in advance all of the appropriation bills and jobs that will be introduced and undertakon, to obtain the use of public monies for unworthy and illegal purposes. Some of them, however, are an easy matter of prophecy. For instance, it is known that the different departments of the Government have run behind on the amounts allowed them during the last session, and they will ask for appropriations to cover the deficiency. Then there are the lobbies for different schemes to extract money from the public treasury, and the numberless railroad jobs and land grants, the Centennial Exposition job, which will be the most difficult perhaps to counteract. There are the southern claims waiting, and will be strongly urged, and if the Government once commences allowing them, and 'let the bars down," as the saying is, they will continue to present them, and the treasury will be drained for the next twenty years. There are thousands of other smaller jobs and steals which ought to be rejected and discouraged, and if permitted to succeed through any means, the whole blame will be charged directly to the Republican party. What the Republican party asks is, that the people be not deceived in these matters. The party have discarded a number of their present Representatives, on account of their unfaithfulness and unworthiness, but these men hold office yet for the next three months, and no doubt will vote on many questions in direct opposition to the wishes of the party. Democrats will do the same thing, but their acts will be hidden because the Republicans are in the ascendancy, and responsible for all that is done. The next Congress will show the true colors of the Republican party and the Democratic party. The Senate will be Republican and the House Democratic. There will be a healthy competition between the two, and the people have an opportunity to correctly

Every man should pay his debts promptly, and if he cannot pay all, pay one half. Don't keep the money on hands, lying idle, until you have accumulated enough to discharge the whole debt. THE SPIRIT OF THE SOUTH.

If the accounts of outrages and Leaguers were manufactured for poof disguising the fact well known, that there exists in the South such a spirit of enmity towards Republicans, that one of the party is not safe in traveling through portions of the South and make public his political sentiments. This is free America (?) where a person of a certain political faith cannot live in sections without running a risk of losing his life. He can have no favors shown him, and must be put down on account of his political complexion. The following appears in a recent issue of the Shreveport (Louisiana) Times: "Let our people see to it that they employ none but those who voted the Democratic ticket. * * * * Every man who voted the Republican ticket on Monday is known, and we say again, let the people see to it that these look to their carpet-bag and scalawag friends for employment." This is the encouragement held out to induce some of the people of the North to move to the South, should they have a desire to do so. If there is anything that a true American demands, it is that this feeling and spirit be subdued. A Northern man, be he Democrat or Renot disposed to make trouble, but to live peaceably. They have been hunted down, persecuted, and in many instances compelled to leave, because they have not fallen in and voted the Democratic ticket. A Democrat is all right in the South. His property is secure, he is protected himself, and Ku Klux and White Leaguers never molest or disturb him. Surely, Democracy is at a premium in that land of | me back to the editorial arena I tender liberty.

THE TRIBUNE.

We give below a synopsis of the address of Joseph Medill on assuming the editorship and control of the Chi cago Tribune. We trust the readers of the RECORD will give it a careful perusal. It is a gem, containing many important facts requiring particular consideration at this time, and presented in a manner terse and yet compre-

"My predecessor has pursued the course which he believed to be the path of duty with a courage which challenges the respect of both those condemning and supporting his views, and with an ability which extorted their admiration, and he leaves his editorial chair after having achieved a national reputation. The readers of the Tribune will naturally desire to be informed at the outset of the probable tone of conduct of the Tribune under the change of management. A full explanation cannot be given on the instant. Men's opinions and actions are more or less influenced and controlled by circumstances which surround them, and always by unforeseen causes, but this much may now be safely promised. The Tribune will be, as it formerly was under my management, an independent Republican jour-nal. It will be the organ of no man, however high; no clique or ring, however influential; or faction, however fanatical or demonstrative. While giving to the Republican party and its principles a hearty and generous support, it will criticise the actions and records of Republican leaders as fairly and fearlessly as in former days. But it seemed to me unwise for a great representative journal, for the purpose of correcting some alleged abuses of the administration, to desert its party organization and turn its guns on old friends, or to refuse to help to power and place the leaders of the organization whose political records and whose official conduct show that they are sincere in their professions of desire for administrative purity.

Such being the case in regard to the necessity and ma-chinery of parties in free countries, the press, to be useful, cannot avoid being partisan in a greater or less degree. If an editor undertakes the task of supporting both sides his position is equivalent to a double affirmative, which amounts to a negative. If he habitually censures and condemns both, he is soon regarded as a common scold and a nuisance. To be entirely unpartizan leaves him in the condition of a cipher, and when a newspaper undertakes to be wholly independent

They have of its party, and yet discusses politics, endured the present state of affairs to it is on the high road to the camp of ards harbor of neutrality and abdicates his duties altogether, which is a despisable position. There is no need political opponents will detract nothpolitical opponents will detract nothing from the influence of a paper, nor will it injure the prospects of its own party. Such, in brief, are the views I have long entertained of parties and the relations which the press should bear toward them. A political newspaper to be of service to the public must give one party or the other the preference. While the Democratic party embraces many excellent and worthy members, who would be an honor to any organization, yet I sincerely believe the Republican party comprises a much larger proportion of the intelligent and educated classes, of the moral worth and business enterprise, as well as of the patriotic elements of the nation, and therefore the government of the country and the civil rights of the poor and weak can be more safely and prudentially committed to its keeping than to that of its antagonist, whose past history and antecedents furnish so much cause for misgivings and dread of its future behavior. Looking, then, to the individual composition of the two great parties, all other parties being mere fragments, ephemeral in duration and narrow in object, and at their respectmerative to them as possible, and give publican, must have the same protection and the same liberty while traveled and swindles that are now waiting at the door of the Capitol, many of which ana, that he would have in Michigan Hence the Tribune will be conducted were successfully guarded against dur- or Indiana. From VanBuren Coumiy.

Nov. 12, 1874. ED. RECORD:—I wish to burden your columns with a few observations made during my travels in Van Buren county, Michigan. The agricultural resourses of the county are not excelled anywhere. The wheat crop is scarcely ever a failure, and yields from 16 to 40 bushels to the acre. Corn is better here than sum of $30,000. The passer-by would hardly believe it cost so much, but a close examination of the interior will satisfy any one that these figures are not exaggerated. The entire building presents a model of architecture, and is furnished with every modern improvement, regardless of expense. Gasoline pipes, and water-pipes for hot or cold water, extend through every room in the house, and each bed-room is richly carpeted and furnished with marble wash-stands, gothic bedsteads of the most costly pattern, full length mirrors, and other furniture of like expense. Mr. Nesbitt is about to lay out $1,000 on the grounds in front of his house, which will make this the most magnificent country residence in the State. .

Mr. Nesbitt settled here in 1835, bought his land of the Government, and after wearing out seven saw-mills, one after the other, has succeeded in clearing up the greater portion of his purchase. He still runs one saw-mill and a grist-mill. He has sold off his land so that now he owns but seven hundred scres. His neighbors tell me that he is respected by all, was their entire dissatisfaction, and are its political opponents, whether its never dunned or sued for debt, and hoping, expecting and praying for a conductor so intended at the outset or change for the better. Illinois Correspondence.

We take the liberty of publishing the following extract of a private let-ter received from a friend in Illinois: You will perceive that the job work has reached me, and I must say that I am very well pleased. You mentioned something regarding the recent elections, in your last, stating that it was a defeat of ours. How it is possible for you to admit that it is a Democratic victory, I cannot conceive. The results of the elections in this county were the same as with you; but when I find that the whole cause is simply an appeal for Reform by our own party, (for it is this and nothing more) how can it be other than a Republican as well as a Democratic victory-for where are the Democracy without the aid of Republican votes? Thousands of those same votes in a Presidential campaign would be given back to elect a Republican President. Mark this. At the next important elections we will certainly come out victorious, as a party. This recent broak of our party will tend to awaken an interest in the rank and file of the old war party, the result of which will bind up these wounds, and we will continue at the holm of State against all the combined forces of our county's common enemy, Old Democracy. To my mind, this is a beneficial result, as our party has formerly been in a fearful majority. Too great a majority in a Republican form of Government is dangerous. We shall barely be able, in the next important campaigns, to hold the ascendancy, which is all we ask; besides, it will give purity and reliable strength to the future legislation of our party. Don't you get weak in your zeal for the old War Party, for I tell you that they will "rally once again," to the utter discontent of this now jubilant southern element. These are the times that try men's souls. Let us be Your Friend. faithful.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste. Prospectus for 1875-Eighth Year.

The Aldine, THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA, ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A Magnificent Conception; Wonderfully Carried Out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish the art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely itnerest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill. In black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo.

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmojolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art usis, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic one it. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention beating and the productions of the most noted American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, "A Magnificent Conception; Wonderfully Carried Out."

It is curious how many mistakes are made annually in writing and mailing letters. Some are misdirected -some not directed at all, others not stamped, and not unfrequently a letter is laid away or carried in the pocket for months, and the writer boring the postmaster to death enquiring for his answer, and surmising all kind of evil things on the part of the post office employees.

A DECREE in favor of the Goodyear Vulcanite Company has been rendered against a druggist of Detroit. This was a test case, defended by the Dental Protective Union of Michigan in behalf of the dentists throughout the United States. The decision prevents dentists from using vulcanite rubber base for artificial teeth without obtaining a license from the patentee-a hardship that has been endured for a number of years.

A child beginning to read becomes delighted with a newspaper, because he reads of names and things which are familiar, and he will progress accordingly. A newspaper in one year is worth a quarter's schooling to a child. Every father must consider that information is connected with advancement. The mother of a family, being one of its heads and having a more immediate charge of children, should herself be instructed. A mind occupied becomes fortified against the ills of life, and is braced for emergency. Children amused by reading or study are, of course, more considerate and easily governed. How many thoughtless young men have spent their earnings in a tavern or grog shop. who ought to have been reading! How many parents who have spent twenty dollars for books for their families would have given thousands to reclaim a son or daughter who has ignorantly, thoughtlessly fallen into temptation.—Ex.

· JOB PRINTING.—We are prepared to do all kinds of job printing, and at prices to compete with city offices on large orders. Paper dealers say they sell us paper as low as to any other establishment. Our rent is less, we pay less for help, expenses are less in every way, and there is no reason why we cannot furnish job printing as low as can be afforded at any office. Where there is unfairness shown the country offices, as a general thing, is in this way; if a person wants 50 or 100 bills they will go to the nearest office, and is charged perhaps $1.50 or $2.00. The next time he wants perhaps 20; 000 of the same bills. He now goes to Chicago, or some city office with his bill-the copy all plain and the mechanical work all laid out, and he pays Hos Marker.—The market for pork is improving. Michigan, Thursday, Buchanan. Every day of pleasant weather now shortens, winter.

WHO inspects the stoves, chimneys, and chimney flues in our village? Is this work deemed unnecessary and consequently neglected? It is natural for a person to not be afraid of his own stoves and fixtures. It is always his neighbor that he is afraid will be careless. This is why a person is not a safe judge of his own arrangements in this regard.

EVERY enterprising business man will appropriate liberally of his income each year, for advertising. It requires energy and effort to succeed at any business in any community. We have a good territory surrounding us to draw trade from. It depends on the enterprise of our merchants whether they secure this trade or let it go to benefit other parties. No man can please customers who is close, penurious and afraid that he will never have another chance to sell them anything. A disposition to be liberal, enterprising, and ahead of the times, is what attracts customers, and makes business of any kind a success.

FROM THREE OAKS.

November 17th, 1874. This morning at one o'clock, a fire broke out in the extensive handle manufacturing establishment of N. D. Loudey, a little east of the business part of the town. The establishment was burned to the ground, with heavy loss, but was insured; how much I am not able to say at this writing. At the time of the first alarm the wind was blowing strong from the West. The large store room of the Bennett Brothers, containing 100,000 handles was in flames. Then the handle establishment of the Bennetts was in the most eminent danger of all being swept away by the devouring element, but by the terrible, persistent efforts of the whole town, fighting inch by inch, we saved the mill and all that part of the town from destruction. The men of Three Oaks never worked with such desperate will before to save the property of the Bennetts. The loss of the Bennett Bros. is fully $2000, with no insurance. The Bennetts tender their thanks to the men of Three Oaks for their hard work in saving their property. The fire is, without doubt, the work of an incendiary.

This will cause the people of this town to bestir themselves and make some preparation to fight fire. have no organized fire company, no water, no ladders; nothing with which to save the town in case of fire. Ye 'village dads' take warning by this. NED. Yours,

APPLETONS'

AMBRICAN CYCLOPADIA.

New Revised Edition.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand Engravings

The work originally published under the fitle of The New American Overlopæpia was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled The American Overlopments.

and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN OYCLO-PARDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in overy department of knowledge has made a new work of.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and the fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social, life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenc-ed, od.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is currious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transcient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible, dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science; of every fresh production in literature, and off the newest inventions in the practical arts; as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination;

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopedia, with the same plancand compass as its prodecessor, but with a far greater expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer expertence and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition have, been added not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of science, and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although infended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will-find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopeedia, and worthy of its light character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large Octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerons colored Lithographic Maps.

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experiment and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, makesick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no edicouragement without a prospect. Candid, in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, seconsultation is free. "Nobody," answered Sir Isaac. "It == ppened here."

The gentleman looked up in amazement at the answer, but he soon understood what it meant.

says Colonel Stuart, in his reminiscences of a soldier, "was told me some time ago by an old lady who had an ancient servant that had lived with her for many years, named Ann Brady. One day Ann came in to her mistress in the parlor, crying, "Now ain't I the unfortunate woman? Och, what will I do at all, at all?" "What's the matter, Ann?" said the mistress. "Och, ma'am," replied Ann, "the postman's outside, an' he's got a letter for me from purgatory, an' I know it's from me old mother, who's been there these tin years, an' it's all about me not payin' for the masses I said I would. Ochone! but I am a miserable woman." On her mistress going out, she found the postman in a fit of laughter, with a letter directed to "Ann Brady," from the "Dead Letter Office." Nothing could induce her to touch it; the "dead" to her, meaning purgatory, and nothing else; and her mistress was obliged to open the let-ter for her, and found it was one Ann had written to a nephew in Clare, but as he had come to America, the letter had consequently been returned.

I went to a fair out in Missouri the other day, and about noon wended my way to a booth to procure me a dinner. Opposite me sat a young fellow from the country. His plate was overwhelmed with plenty to eat, but he had not been waited on with a knife and fork. He complained of

A Detroit policeman, passing certain house about ten o'clock at night, saw a man drop from a window and heard smothered cries inside. He seized the man for a burglar, but soon found, that he had the owner of the house in his clutches. Well, said the officer, "it looked suspicious to see you drop out of the window that , way." "Well," replied the man, heaving a sigh, "when the old woman gets her dander up, I ain't particular about what road I take to get out of the house."

A man who hadn't much talent for conundrums, in attempting to get off one at a tea-party at his own house, the other evening, got somewhat mixed. He intended to ask the old question; "Why is a woman-like ivy?" the familiar but gallant answer to which is: "Because the more you're ruined the closer she clings." But he put it. "Why is ivy like a woman?" which none of the ladies could tell, and so the infortunate man himself told them it was "because the closer she clings the more you are ruined.

The Size of the Ark.

inches, we will take it only at the lowest. Moses states that the ark was 300 cubits long. This would make it

450 feet long, or about the length of St. Paul's cathedral, of London. The breadth he states to be fifty cubits; we have it seventy-five feet in breadth.

He states it to be thirteen cubits high.

In other words, it was as long as St.

Paul's cathedral, nearly as broad, and half as high. The tonnage of the ark, according to the computation of modern carpenters, must have been 32,-

000 tons. The largest sized English ship (of a size altogether unimaginable to those who have never seen it) is 3,500 tons burden; so that the ark must have been equal to twenty-six first-rate ships of war, and if armed, as such ships are, it would have contained beyond 18,000 men, and provisions for them for eighteen months.

Buffon has asserted that all four-footed animals may be reduced to 250 pairs, and the birds to a still smaller number. On calculating, therefore, we shall find that the ark would have held more than five times the required quantity of food to maintain them: twelve months. - Christian Advocate.

Theology has lost a great many of its repulsive aspects; they disappear-ed with the horrible old pulpits that resembled sentry boxes, with the interminable sermons upon "doctrine," and the gloomy estimate of a future state, that hung like a pall over our youth. "Hark from the tombs a dole-ful sound," and "There is a never ending hell," have given place to "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and the tender pathos of "One sweetly, solemn thought," while instead of the West-minister Catechism we listen to the gentle story of a Heavenly Father's ove, and the pleasant tidings of that better country towards which our footsteps tend, and, best of all, many souls

Perhaps upwards of a hundred thousand sermons are preached every week, heard by millions, yet where are they now? Men sit studying at them for days, reading, transcribing, comparing, digesting, writing and reviewing; and in fear and trembling, and with much effort to preach to them on the Sabbath, after which they seem to have no existence. Many of them are sermons full of deep, strong thought, tinged with poetry, made to glow with passion, and abounding in the best moral lesson, all of which appear to waste as distributed—as spilled, like water, on the ground, where it cannot be gathered. But the rain-drops which cannot be collected are not lost; they show existence in the growth of flower and fruit, and in the fountains gushing from the hillside lives of those who. hear them, and in the steams of influence and Christian power, which are gushing forth from "A rather amusing story,"

A country lass was driving a lonkey to a fair in Renfrewshire one fine summer morning. The donkey was a laggard, and was more intent on cropping the roadside herbage than "going to the fair;" but the girl did not put herself out. Pleasant thoughts of her sweetheart were passing through her mind, and she sang gaily to herself. An Irish laborer overtook her, and, as he passed, he said, "My darlint, you're as lively this morning as if you had been newly kissed." The happy girl at once answered, "If ye think, Pat, that a kiss makes ane live; y, I wish ye would kiss my donkey, for he's unco stiff this morning."

the neglect, and remarked that he could not eat without his knife and fork. I then said, "How do you do, then?" He answered, "I'm well; how's your folks?"

"How much is your stick candy?" inquired a boy of a candy dealer, on Tuesday. "Six sticks for five cents." "Six sticks for five cents, eh? Now lem'me see, six sticks fer five cents, five fer four cents, four fer three cents, three fer two cents, two fer one cent, one fer nothin. I'll take one," and he walked out, leaving the candy man in a state of bewilderment, which lasted three days.

How IT WAS DONE .- An Irishman, ddicted to telling queer-stories, said ne saw a man beheaded with his hands tied behind him, who directly picked up his head, and put it on his shoulders in the right place. "Ha! ha! ha! ha!" said a bystander. "How could he pick up his head when his hands were tied behind him?" "An' sure; what a purty fool ye are!" said Pat. "Couldn't he pick it up with his tathe?"
