The Hole in the Pocket.

James Slack and his wife commenced housekeeping as many other young people do, with little means of defraying the necessary expenses, but as he was a good mechanic he could generally find employment in his native village, and she being an industrious little woman, besides doing her housework, earned considerable in the course of a year, by doing plain sewing. But still they did not seem to prosper as Ned Bowen and his wife, who commenced housekeeping near them about | So forth-with gaze fixed on the futurethe same time, under similar circumstances. The reason why, and the way he made the discovery, we will let him tell in his own words:

My wife said to me one evening, "Mr. Slack, I wish to get some thread and needles at the store, and I want a little change."

I felt in my pockets and examined in playing cards and billiards, instead my wallet thoroughly, but could find nothing that would pass for currency at the store, and reported the unpleasant fact to her. "Why, what has become of the half dollar I gave you this morning?" She always made me cashier of the firm.

After another unsuccessful attempt to find it I said: "Mrs. Slack, I think there must be a hole in one of my pockets, for certainly I have not got it; and I do not was duped by his professions, that he It was not long after this conversation that I remembered having treat ed myself and three friends to ice cream, but concluded to keep the discovery to myself.

"I couldn't find any hole in your pocket last night;" said my wife the next morning in a gentle tone, and with a look that my feelings prevented me from scanning closely; and all the reply I felt willing to make was,

"Ah, couldn't you?" A few days afterward she called on me for twenty-five cents she had lately deposited in my sub-treasury for safe keeping.

"Really, Mrs. Slack," said I, think-ing it best to show a bold front, "there must be some corner or seam in my pocket that is open;" though really I could not find one any more than I could the missing quarter.

"If there is, it is singular that I did not find it the other evening," in her usual quiet way, "but I will be sure to find it this evening if there is any." On my way to work after dinner, while passing a cigar store, the fate of my wife's quarter came distinctly to my mind. It had vanished in smoke; were finished, and one morning Aunt | i. e., it had paid for five finely flavor-Deborah handed them to her nephew ed cigars, which some of my village friends had helped me to dispose of, while discussing politics there the pre-

One day I was presented with a sub-ant feelings whenever I contrasted their home with our own.

"I wonder," said I to my wife on our way home, "if Bowen doesn't go very glad you are willing to tend on in debt for some of their furniture. "He does not, for his wife told me they didn't owe a dollar in the world." "But how can they live as they do and give five dollars at a time for charitable purposes?"

"I think I can tell you," said my wife in a hesitating manner. "Well, do if you please," I replied, not a little curious to know what her ideas were on the subject. "Well," she continued, "in the first place, she never buys for herself any unnecessary finery, and takes good care that nothing is lost or destroyed | kerchief. that comes into the house-"

"But," said I, interrupting her, "] doubt amazingly whether she is more careful in that respect than my own model wife."

"In the second place, he is as careful in these respects as she is. He buys no ice cream, cigars, etc., neither for himself nor any of his pretended friends. In short, my dear Mr. Slack, he has no hole in his pocket.".

It was the first word of suspicion my wife ever uttered on the subject, and that fact, together with the conviction that she clearly saw, and so unexpectedly, but in so-kind a manner, told me the real cause of the difference between our home and that of Ned Bowen and his wife, cut me to a clean pair of hose and a proper place to put them on.

That Flour Trick.

Yesterday morning, says, the Detroit Free Press, and innocent looking young man was loafing around the Central Depot with one of those small lung testers, which throws a handfull of flour into a man's eyes just as he imagines heris going to blow her up to a hundred and fifty pounds. There was an old man waiting around for the train to go, and he was at once attracted to the machine. He saw others blow, and when told that it would not cost him a cent. he pitched in. He was allowed to blow two or three times, and then the young man told him to put in a regular told hurricane and beat everybody by five, pounds.

Fences or po Fences?

The question of fences or no fences is one that has long agitated the farmers of the country. It is, from a money point of view, of the greatest importance, since there is no doubt that the fences of the country represent fully one-half of the improvements of farms. To the farmers throughout the prairie regions of the West. it becomes a most vital question, since the scarcity of fencing material, it has to be carried long distances in wagons or, as in the majority of instances, it must be bought with cash after being transported by railroad. With lumber at $16.00 per thousand, and posts at $13.00 per hundred, the cost of material at the railroad station, including nails, will be eighty cents per rod. If to this we add moving to place and labor in building, the cost will be raised to $1.00 per rod. To enclose a quarter section therefore will cost $320. Subdivide this section into forty-acre fields and the cost is doubled making $640. The average fence will need renewal once in ten years, making the annual cost of fencing sixty-four dollars; certainly more then the wear and tear on the average 160 acre farm in the West. In older settled portions, the cost of fencing will fully keep pace with other farm improvements, so there is no need of carrying this estimate further, There are in round numbers, 26,-000,000 acres of improved land in Illinois. On the basis on which we have calculated, it would cost $140 .-000,000 to fence the farms into forty acre fields. The value of the live stock in Illinois is greater than that of auv other state in the Union, New York excepted, being in round numbers according to the census of 1870. $150,000,000. The annual proffit derivable from this source may be of fencing per year, this would make the yearly cost of the fencing in Illinois about $20,000,000, $5,000,000 more than the interest on the investment in cattle. Will it pay to fence cattle out in Illinois? The Western Rural thinks, from these figures, it will pay better to fence them in, in many sections at least, and, in others, to modify this system by partial herding. If it will not pay in Illinois to fence, it certainly will not pay in any other state. We know that in sections where the no-fence system is in force, in Livingstone Co., Ill., for instance, the plan works satisfactorily. - Western Rural.

Home Carpentry.

Very often a screw hole gets so worn that a screw will not stay in. When glue is handy, the regular carpenter makes the hole larger and glues in a large plug making a nest for an entirely new hole. But this is not always the case, and people without tools, and in an emergency, often have to fit the thing at once. Generally leather is used but this is so hard that it does not hold well. The best of all is to cut narrow strips of cork, and fill the hole completely. Then force the screw in. This will make as tight job as it is driven into an entirely new bole.

NEW STYLE OF COOPERAGE.—A new barrel is being made in New York State. The entire sides of the barrel are to be made of a single stave. Those staves are to be made from a section of a log cut the length of a barrel, thoroughly steamed and then placed in a powerful machine, which shaves it into a long ribbon, like the unrolling of a piece of wall paper. This ribbon wood is then cut into sections equal to the circumference of a barrel. Gores are taken out at either kitchen, the dining room, and of the end to make a bilge, when it is hooped parlor. and headed. Machinery will soon be in operation, turning out 1,000 barrels per day.

Aunt Deborah's Gift.

BY CAROLINE F. PRESTON.

A young man attired in a showy dressing-gown, sat at a table about 10 o'clock, lazily sipping a cup of coffee. Before him were two letters, one directed in a dashing masculine hand to Arthur Lawrence, Esq. The other in a cramped female hand, was addressed to Mr. Arthur Lawrence, Medical College, Philadelphia. Both contained invitations. The first was from his particular friend, a rollicking (fellow student; who for reasons best known to the Faculty of the institution, has been requested to transfer himself to some other locality. He wrote from Maryland asking Arthur to pass the vacation with him, promising him lots of fun. The other was from Miss Deborah Lawrence, a venerable spinster, Arthur's great aunt, expressing the wish that he would come and visit her in his approaching vacation, as she was getting old, and didn't know how long she might be for this world. She closed with the hope that he was

I must not forget that she has a hundred thousand dollars, which she is a little more likely to bestow on me than anybody else, if I play the good boy's part. Jack will be disappointed, but no more so than I. I must write to him and explain matters. He brought his desk to the table, and dashed off a note, after which, with more care, he indited an epistle to his aunt. It is needless to say that the tenor of the two notes was entirely different. As his unlucky star would have it, he misdirected the two envelto read the following: "MY DEAR AUNT:- (What does he mean by calling me his aunt? It must be one of his larks. However, I'll read on.) I need not say with what pleasure I received your kind invitation. After the long weeks of hard study, which I find have impaired my health, and naturally weakened my robust constitution, it will be a delightful change to turn from my books and seek rest in your pleasant farmhouse. I find it necessary to sit up very late, in order to do justice to my studies, but if I should become distinguished hereafter in my profession, and gratify my friends, I shall feel abundantly repaid. You may expect me this day week.

Your devoted nephew, A. LAWRENCE. "Well," thought Jack, "that's a tall joke. I suppose he did it to make me laugh. It's all true about his sitting up late, but I fancy that sherry cobblers and billiards have more to do with it than medicine. I'm glad he's coming, though, and I'll look after my nephew." About the same time, Aunt Deborah, having adjusted her spectacles, read, with amazement more easily imagined than described, a missive commencing thus:

"What !" ejaculated Miss Deborah, rubbing her spectacles, "can it be that gay times, I promise you. My aunt is now over seventy, and may not live long. What jolly larks we shall have when the time comes! I can't help sighing, to be sure, over the dull vacation before me, but I must make the best of it, I suppose. Write a fellow often, and let mo know what you're up to. I will answer promptly. Direct, after Thursday, to the care of Miss Deborah Lawrence, Plainville, Connecticut. But I have a double epistle to write to my aunt and must stop here. The most useful friends which can be made by the modern Amanda, are -or is?-since they are one-a happily married couple. For, when wedded, a woman does not cease to be a belle, nor the man a beau. The beauties of the wedded life, indeed, develop all those sweet qualities which make the wife more truly admirable and social-the husband more gallant and generous. It would be a deplorable result if marriage deprived the wedded pair of their old social position. It does not; it rather enhances its influence and power. No social leader or personal guide is safer than the wife assured of her position, and the husband of uprightness and honor, as all good husbands are sure to be. The young girl first entering society, feels not only safe under the guidance of the married lady, but a degree of confidence in her knowledge of men and observances which is very encouraging and helpful. But the young man who defers to his elders and patterns his own conduct after that of the well bred husband, is very certain to be both a gentleman and a favorite. To be unmarried, the entree to the parlors and dinner tables of the happily married couples is more to be desired than the passport to the gay

A Perfect Home.

The most perfect home I ever saw, says Helen Hunt, was in a little house, into the sweet incense of whose fires went no costly things. A thousand dollars served for a year's living, of father, mother, and three children. But the mother was the creator of a home; her relation with her children was the most beautiful I have ever seen; even a dull and commonplace man was lifted up and enabled to do good work for souls by the atmosphere which this woman created: every inmate of her house involuntarily looked into her face for the key-note of the day; and it always rang clear. From the rose-bud or clover-leaf which, in spite of her hard house-work, she $15,000,000. A fence wears out in ten always found time to put by our plates years. If to its cost we add ten per at breakfast, down to the story she had on hand to be read in the evening, ty four per cent as the depreciation there was no intermission of her influence. She has always been and always will be my ideal of a mother, wife, home-maker. If to her quick brain, loving heart and exquisite face had been added the appliances of wealth and the enlargements of wider culture, hers would have been absolutely the ideal home. As it was, it was the best I have ever seen.

in all of its departments, it is edited with great care, preserves a healthy and elevated tone, and has a well-carned reputation for ability, scholarship, good teste, and vigorous originality.

As a family newspaper, the Werkly Post, while culling from all sources of information, is careful to remember that its columns are for the youngles well as for the old, and that the merals as well as the mind are part of a newspaper education. While hoping to promote the general good through this modium, it will scripulously guard against doing individual barm.

The Literary Character of the Werkly Post is higher in one and broader in scope than that of any other Detroit paper Its News Department is edited with reference to ternishing the most accurate information on the mest subjects. The twenty-five to joity columns of telegraphic dispatches received each week by the Dairy Post are carefully condensed and summarized especially for the weekly, and thus the press from all parts of the world is given with each issue. In addition, it employs a large corps of local correspondents in the State, whose especial duty it is to give more, in detail an account of domestic events. The proceedings of State Organizations, the Legislature, religious, educational, and other local bodies, are all carefully reported.

The Market Reports given in the various editions of the Post are by all odds more full and reliable than these of any of its Detroit cotemporaries, each reparate issue being carefully reported.

The Post has been guilling ground steadily for several years in the estimation of the reading public as the

The Politics of The Post.

The Post will continue to be in the future what it has in the past, a faithful and earnest advocate of the principles and organization of the Republican party. Without the latter, the former must necessarily be a dead letter, No great political measures can be effected in a republic except through parties and party organization. Good docfrines may be preached; and the wisest and most; beneficent theories evolved, through individual agencies, but it is, only by the combined agency of individuals working through a party that any practical impress can be made upon the administration of government. The people of the country will always be divided into two principal parties, one or the otherior which must control public affairs. The Post believes that in the fundamental principles upon which the Republican party was organized, in its traditions, its impulses, its general tendencies and tone, and in the mental and moral characteristics of the great messes composing it may be found the basis upon which rest the best hopes of the country. Individual members of it may prove corrupt, or inefficient; some of its measures or policies may be unwise; wrongs and defects will exhibit themselves in this, as in, every other human organization that has existed since the world began. But underlying every imperiection it has a better fibre than any other party, that has administered the Government since the adoption of the Constitution in the last century; and it has done more for the good of mankind and for the development of this nation, than any other party that has agency in the sadministered the Government since the adoption of the Constitution in the last century; and it has done more for the good of mankind and for the development of this nation, than any other party that has agency it aims to be expressed and seek to reform the abuses and wre reas of the own party. We venture to say that for painstaking and conscientions fidelity, The Tribuxe commercial columns cannot be excelled by any paper in the country.

In addition to these prominent features, there are many minor ones that add to the solid value and superior excellence of The Tribuxe. Its commend of the general news of the day is always carefully made up, and comprises all the leading events that transpire from week to week throughout the world. Its miscellaneous reading matter embraces the widest possible variety of choice selections upon all sorts of topics; embodying in itself a vast faul of information and instructive comment. Its literary Department will always furnish the best stories and poetry to be found in all the broad field of literature. In short, whatever can add to the entertainment and instruction of its readers, is diligantly sought for an ascured for them.

THE Michigan Central offers to carry students who are attending the State University at reduced fare during the holiday vacation. Passes good until Jan. 10th.

Pork still commands a good price, but beef is rather low. The latter is caused by cattle being plenty, and the former is the result of the scarcity of

> THE enterminment given by the Literary Society was well attended. Considering the circumstances, the exercises were good. This is an institution which should receive the support of all who are interested in educational affairs.

> MANY papers state that the law requiring newspaper publishers to prepay postage after the first day of January next, was enacted through spite to the press for censuring and criticising the action of political leaders. There is more truth in such a statement than the average politician is willing to admit.

> THE average number of bushels of wheat to the acre raised in Michigan the present year is larger than that of any former year, and much larger in proportion to that raised in other States. Michigan is fast earning a reputation as the best wheat-growing State in the Union.

The amount is only a trifle, and by a little effort and management could be paid regularly in advance, as well as at the ex-

WE notice that many of our exchanges the past week contained holiday oills. This is a very nice way to circulate bills, but in direct violation of law. A thousand bills sent out in this way cheats Uncle Sam out of just ten dollars.

Many of the villages are preparing to again petition the Legislature this winter to incorporate them as cities. It is a wonder that Buchanan never gets this fever to put on airs with the rest of them. A city government is rather an expensive luxury. What's in a name!

To Advertisers. — The Record visits more than 1600 families regularly every week. Count four to every family, and the paper is read by 6,-400 persons every week. PERSONAL .- Mr. K. F. Morse, of Whitehall, Mich., formerly of this village, called on us yesterday morning. He was called here to attend the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Wm. S. Merrill. Mr. Morse is in the hardware business, and his friends will be glad to learn that he is doing well and prospering finely. Our exchanges come to us filled with new advertisements. No enterprising business man will attempt to do business in this day and age of the world without advertising liberally and continually. If parties do not advertise their goods it is pretty conclusive evidence that their stock has run down and that they have nothing to induce people to trade with them.

QUITE a number have responded to our notice in last week's paper to bring us wood on subscription. We will accept a few cords more. Those who desire to pay for their paper in this way will bring the wood at once. If it is not brought within the next two weeks, we shall conclude that you would rather pay us money for the paper, and you must not find fault if we refuse to take wood afterwards.

Some of the papers in the state in noticing the number of burglaries committed in Berrien county, put us down as a very poor class of people financially, from the amount of plunplace to practice such vices, and besides, there is great danger of being caught and but little mercy shown by the Court after conviction.

PERSONAL.—Our former townsmen, Mr. T. M. Fulton and Mr. James Smith, of Chicago, were in Buchanan on Tuesday last. Mr. Fulton expressed himself as well pleased with living in Chicago, and although he and his wife have many friends in Buchanan, and the place possesses many attractions to them, yet they do not regret having made the change. Mr. Fulton also said a good word for the RECURD, and thinks that the people living at home do not know how to appreciate its value. THE Law Alumni of the Michigan University have taken proper steps to prepare a complete "Directory" of the law graduates of that institution. THE RECORD .- In selecting your cending for the coming year, we earnestly invite those who live within the county to duly consider the value of a county paper to them, over any other newspaper publication. The county paper is a chronicler of every event and transaction within the county, as well as the most important general news of the country. Are you not more directly interested, and should you not feel more concerned in what goes to make up the history of your own neighborhood and your own county than in what transpires in some foreign State or country? It is not unfrequently that a subscriber informs us that he noticed a single item in the RECORD in regard to some meeting that was to take place, or perhaps some legal proceeding, or, it may be, some local occurrence, that alone was worth to him more than the price of the paper. No person or family knows how to value a home paper until they have taken it, and when they have once subscribed for it they will not part with it. We have placed the subscription price of the RECORD at the low figure of $1.50 yer year in advance, and subscribers within the county get it free of postage; or four months to trial subscribers for 50 cts. in advance. Suscribers who do not pay in advance are required to pay at the rate of $2 per year. No paper continued longer than one year without being paid for.

WE have received an engraving entitled "Red Riding Hood," which is presented gratis to every subscriber to the Evening News, who, before March 31st, 1875, may order the pader reported. The retail value of this engraving is about $3.00, and it is abundantly worthy of a neat frame. Price of the paper $5, a year or less time in same proportion. Address James E. Scripps, Publisher, Detroit, Mich.

> THE DETROIT TRIBUNE. - We pubish this week the prospectus of the Detroit Tribune. Our readers are well acquainted with the Tribune, as we so often select from it for publication in our columns. The Tribune, for State and general news, is without doubt one of the best papers in Michigan, while its agricultural and miscellaneous departments are conducted with more care and ability than any other newspaper of its class in the Western country. Next to your county paper you should subscribe for a good State paper.

THE ANSWER.-I give below the answer to the problem published last week. The same problem was given to me about fifty years ago, when I was a school-boy. # in many ways, and sorrow comes from a variety of sources. And hasty words have much to answer for, among the rect. We are apt to think that a word or two does not matter—that we need not trouble ourselves to be over-particular as to what we say. But this is only one of our many mistakes. Words live. There is so much vitality in them that they take root even upon very unlikely soil. Hasty words are almost sure to have little sense.

and less kindness, in them. They are not the offspring of meek and quiet spirits, but of hot, passionate tempers. "All men are hars:" Who but a man in a passion would have said that? The assertion is so sweeping and unjus that, if David had not prefaced it by his profession, I said, in my haste, we should not have understood it. Perhaps the reason why such words are spoken, is that the speaker feels him-self aggrieved. We often do, in this life of ours. We cannot have all we wish, from our brothers and sisters, and so we allow ourselves to grow fret ful and angry. We are unreasonable enough to suppose that all things should be ours; and, when we find only a few things coming to our share, then we become discontented and peevesh, and speak hasty words. We are surrounded by wonders and mysteries everywhere. I have often in the springtide watched the advance of the sprouting leaves, and of the grass, and of the flowers, and observof the general joy of opening life in nature, and where asked myself this nature, and grave asked myself this question—Can it be that there is no being or thing in nature that knows more about these matters than I do?. Do I, in my ignorance, represent the highest knowledge of these things existing in this universe? Ladies and gentlemen, the man who puts that question to himself, if he be not a shallow man, if he be a man capable of being penetrated by a profound thought, will never answer the question by professing the creed of Athe-ism, which has been so lightly attrib-uted to me.—Prof. Tyndall. The Examiner and Chronicle takes a cheerful view of the pulpit: "We are free to declare our conviction, that the tendencies of the pulpit are stead-ily in the direction of increased efficiency. While rendering all honor and gratitude to the memory of eminent preachers in the past, we are sure that they have worthy success-ors, and are in a way to be succeeded by those who will uphold the standard of Christian achievement and devo-The rising ministry is full o promise for the future." Never give up old friends for new ones. Make new ones if you like, and when you have learned that 'you can trust them, love them if you will, but remember the old ones still. Do not forget they have been tried and found true; they have been merry with you in time of pleasure, and when sorrow came to you they sorrowed also. No matter if they have gone down in the social scale and you up; no matter if poverty and misfortune have come to them, while prosperity came to you; are they any less true for that? Are not their hearts as warm and tender if they do beat beneath homespun instead of velvet? Yes, kind reader, they are as true, loving and tender, don't forget old friends. What God has in store, and what he intends by present proceedures, we cannot always tell; his ways are past finding out. He is in no haste. A million seeds fall from a tree when it is the arrangement for but one to take root; and the spawn of a single fish numbers two hundred millions. No girl should be indifferent to her personal appearance. God meant wo-men to be attractive, and it is one of our duties to carry out this design. But that dress is to be all, is more than we can believe. Just because we love to see girls look well, as well as to live to some purpose, we would urge on them such a course of reading and study as will confer qualities which no modiste can supply.

Look above you, and in the overarching firmament read the truth of an all-pervading Providence. You sky is God's outspread hand, and the glittering stars are the jewels on the fingers of the Almighty. Do you not see that His hand closes around you on all sides, and that you cannot go where universal love shines not?
