Poetry. DON'T GO INTO DEBT. BY J. R. L.

Dont run into debt-never mind, never mind If your clothes are all tattered and torn; Fix them up; make them do; it's better by far,
Than to have the heart weary and worn.
Who will love you the more for the set of your hat, Or your ruff, or the tie of your shoe, The style of your boots, or shade of cravat, If they know you're in debt for the new ?

Good friends, let me beg of you, don't run in debt, If the chairs and the sofa are old; They'll fit your backs better than any ner set Unless they are paid for in gold.

If the house is too small, draw the closer t gether, Keep warm with a hearty good will;
A big one unpaid for, in all kinds of weather
Will send to the warm heart a chill.

Don't run into debt—dear girls take a hint.

Story.

ONLY A FLIRTATION.

"But you see its only a flirtation,

Marian. The speaker, a tall, handsome fellow, with bright blue eyes, and wavy, tawny hair, was lying on a lounge in the boudoir of his pretty cousin, Marian Leslie, at the Rockland House. Nantasket. It was a warm August morning, and his cousin, in a lovely morning neglige, sat by the open window, looking out upon the long stretch of beach, just now lined with bathers.

"But your flirtation may turn out serious, Allyn," said his cousin, "and you are not treating Minnie as you ought, either. Just imagine how you would feel to see her so very attentive to another." "That is different, my dearest cousin, and Minnie will never hear of it. She is many miles away, and even if she did she would not believe it; thank fortune she is not jealous; she has too much faith in me for that." "And so you take advantage of that trusting girl, whose very life is cen-tered on you, to flirt with a woman who is not to be named in the same day with Minnie Forsyth. Allyn Leslie, I did not think you were so mean. I am ashamed to own you for a cous-"Oh, come now, Marian, you are too hard on a fellow; because your husband dotes on you, you think no one else need do otherwise. I presume I shall do the same when pretty Minnie is my wife, but till then I mean to enjoy myself. I shall probably marry Minnie, but I must flirt; that is altogether too bewitching a pastime to give up." "But suppose that Minnie should expostulate with you about it when she sees you. You know that there are plenty of gossips to tell of such doings." "Yes, I suppose there are," said he, with a frown. "But I could easily disabuse her mind. A few loving words, a kiss or two, a present, and all is over. But I must go now, Marian, for I promised Elyne Marks to sail this morning. See here, Marian, you and I are old friends; don't tell

Minnie." "You needn't fear on my account," with a dash of haughtiness, "but mark my words, you will carry this flirtation too far." An hour after a soft tap came to the door, and, in answer to the summons to enter, the door was softly opened, and a tall, lovely girl, with blue eyes, and chestnut hair, looked in. A regally beautiful girl, with creamy skin, and coral lips, and a bright smile curving her mouth, and displaying even, pearly teeth, and making deep dimples come and go in her pink cheeks. "Minnie Forsyth! am I dreaming?" cried Marian Leslie, tossing her book. to the floor, and folding her friend in a warm embrace.

"I think not," said Minnie, with a soft laugh. "I judge you are wide awake by your actions, and very glad to see me, are you not?" "Indeed I am," said Marian, and meant it. "But when did you come, and where are you stopping? Sit down and take off your hat, and tell me all

"I came yesterday," said the girl, seating herself wearily, and removing her shade hat, "and am at the Obean House with auntie. You know that my great uncle died a few months ago and left me his property. It is not much, only a few thousands—three, I believe—but to me, Marian, me, the poor school teacher, it seemed a large fortune. It is vacation, and auntie fortune. It is vacation, and auntie insisted on my accompanying her here. seating herself wearily, and removing for a month. I was very glad, for two reasons, Marian, one was because I always admired the ocean, and the other was because I had heard of Allyn's flirtation with Elyne Marks. I could not believe it Marian, for when he visited me he said that nothing could make him change or make love to any one else, and I believed him. Heavens! how he has duped me!" "Oh, well, Minnie, he may be true; he is only flirting, I suppose, or per-haps the person who told you was wrongly informed." "Marian, you know better," cried Minnie, passionately, "and I saw him myself on the beach with her last evening. I was very near them and they did not see me. I heard him tell her that he never saw any one so superlatively lovely as she was; and when she mentioned me he almost denied that he knew me," and the girl hid her flushed face in her hands. and large tears fell over her face like

"My poor little friend," said Marian, gently, putting her arms around her, "I am sorry for you; but since you are informed, it is useless for me to equivocate. Minnie, he is a great flirt, a male flirt. He is my cousin, and I would speak well of him; but it is a great pleasure for him to flirt. He intends to marry you, dearest, if you will accept him.

"After he gets sick of every one else," said Minnie. "No, Marian, I wouldn't accept him. But before I leave Nantasket, he will come to his senses. I think.' "You are very cool and sensible.

"Why not stay to dinner? Hugh is in the city, and I am alone. I want company for dinner with me. Come, do stay; and there is to be a hop this evening, and Gilmore's band is to furnish the music. Do stay, that's a

"Shanks, but I must not stay to dinner-auntie would be sadly frightened; but if you send Hugh after me I will come over to the hop. Now I must really go. Good morning, dear; my love to your husband," and Minnie picked up her hat and prepared to

"Oh, well, I suppose you must go, but I do wish you could stay. I will send Hugh for you. Look your prettiest."

And with an embrace they parted. "What a fool Allyn is, not to see how much better Minnie is than Elyne Marks: but then Miss Marks is rich, while Minnie is poor. Well, it is the way of the world, I suppose," mused pretty Marian, as she slowly walked down to dinner. Allyn Leslie and Elyne Marks were just entering the dining room in front of her-the latter in a bewitching suit of white, with rose-colored ribbons, leaning on the gentleman's arm and smiling up in his face. She was a handsome brunette, rather dashing, "Here is Mrs. Leslie," said she, as Marian reached them. "Mrs. Leslie, pray describe Miss Forsyth to me. I am dying to know how she looks, but this naughty man won't tell me a thing. Is she pretty?" "Very handsome," returned Marian, coldly, "and what is far better, a very honorable girl, too-one who is true to herself and everyone connected "Indeed!" eaid Miss Marks, arching her slender neck. If she is such a paragon of perfection, I must look out for my laurels. Why don't she come to Nantasket?" "She does'nt care for such things," Allyn replied. "But is not dinner waiting?" "I fancy she cannot afford it," said Marian, coolly. "You forget that she is only a poor school teacher, and can not afford the luxuries that we can, Miss Marks, but I intend to send for ner. her before the season is over," and she passed along to her seat. "And then I must bid adieu to my master yet."

"Did I not promise?" asked Allyn, reproachfully; and you will honor me by wearing my poor rose buds that I sent you, please?" "Certainly," smiled the beauty; "but Allyn, your cousin does not like our friendship. I cannot get into her good graces.' "Never mind Marian She is a little prude, just right for Hugh, devoted to him, and he is just the same, and thinks I am a fast fellow just because I flirted with pretty Minnie Forsyth: but I believe I am my own my room, and then I must dismiss you till evening." Allyn obeyed; and at the door of her room she said:

on his arm. Marian turned from her mirror to welcome them. "I was waiting for you," she said, kissing Minnie, "and it is so fortunate —Hugh's brother Frank is here, came with Hugh from the city to-night. He is just home from Europe. He was adopted by his uncle, and had all his property. I expect he will be the catch' of the season, and he will be a splendid escort for you. How levely vou are. I had no idea that you were so handsome! Isn't she splendid.

Hugh?" "She is very nice, dear," said Hugh, with an amused look at his own handsome wife, in her blue silk and pearls:

Minnie was indeed lovely, in a soft tulle of white-puffed, ruffied, and looped with pink ribbons in a most bewitching manner. Her hair was also puffed, coiled and waved in the style of the day, and a few sprigs of smilax and tube rose were its only ornaments. She wore no jewelry, and only carried a fan in her hand.

As she gave the finishing touch to her toilet, a tap came at the door, and a young gentleman entered, dressed in the regular evening costume, with diamonds blazing on his bosom, and a heavy soltaire on his white hand-a noble fellow, with black hair and eyes and mustache, very unlike his blonde brother.

"This is my brother Frank, Miss Minnie. Mr. Leslie, Miss Forsyth," said Hugh, presenting them. "Happy to meet you, Miss Forsyth," said the gentleman, bowing over the gloved hand. "Marian, my dear sister, I remembered your passion for flowers, and brought you a boquet, and as Hugh mentionad your friend was here, I took the liberty to bring one for her, if she will accept it," giving each lady a choice boquet, which they accepted with thanks, and then, as Marian declared her readiness to go down, he offered his arm to Minnie, and they

Allyn was promenading with Elyne as they entered and his face grew deathly pale as he espied Minnie. Elyne noticed it, and asked:

"Are you ill?" "Oh, no, only a brief spasm," he replied. "Will you let me find you a seat, while I go out in the air a moment?" "Certainly."

Hastily seating her, he went out on the piazza. "How on earth came she here?" he muttered, "and with cousin Frank, of all people. If he notices her, every one else will, and she will be the rage. She is looking twice as handsome as Elyne, even if Elyne is in maize colored silk and topaz ornaments, and Minnie is only in tulle. I must stop my flirtation with Elyne till she is gone; she probably won't remain long. I will go in and get her to dance. Ah! I forgot I am engaged to Elyne for the waltz. Minnie must wait. I can easily make it all right with her. There is the music," as the strains of 'The Blue Danube' floated out; "I must go in."

"Are you better?" asked Miss Marks, as he led her upon the floor, "and do you see your cousin from Europe is present, and a very lovely lady with him, in white tulle, very simple, but she is so stylish, and they are surrounded by admirers. Is it his wife?" "I do not see them," said Allyn, evasively, "but she cannot be his wife; he is unmarried."

persuasively, as they floated round the room. "There she is now; she does not dance. Who is it?" "That is Miss Forsyth," said Allyn "Is it possible? Do not let me force you to stay away from her then, Allyn. Take me to a seat, please.

"Introduce me, please," said Elyne

I am sorry I made you waltz with me. What must she think?" said Miss Marks in a depreciating man-"She is enjoying herself, to judge from appearances," said Allyn, mood-ily. "I could not desert you for any pleasant companion when she one, of my own will; but if you do

Allyn felt uncomfortable, but he entered his wife's room with Minnie going to stay awhile. How nice it is here! and what a fine gentleman your cousin is, Allyn and what a beautiful girl Miss Marks is! I quite admire her, don't you?"

"She is very pleasant," said Allyn, cooly; but how did you get acquainted with my cousin Frank!" "Never saw him before to-night; think he is very agreeable. Oh, Allyn, come and go over to the Hull with all of us to-morrow morning in the steamer.' "I-I have business that must be attended to," said Allyn, hesitatingly.

'Wait till the next day, wont you, Minnie? and I will get a sailboat, and just you and I will go alone, Minnie, and that will be nicer." "What is your business? I wanted to-go very much. Hugh and Marian and Hugh's brother asked me to go.

"Well get them to take some one else," said Allyn; and Minnie you had better not go with him. It is not just the thing for an engaged lady to encourage a gentleman to a flirtation.' "No, it is not," affirmed Minnie, while an amused smile flitted over her

After their dance others claimed Minnie, and it was with a sigh of relief that she gained her room late at night. The next morning as she descended to breakfast, she found Hugh waiting in the parlor. "Minnie, may I ask you a ques-tion?" he said, after she had greeted

Make Children Useful. The energy which some children manifest in mischievous pranks may be made to subserve useful and instructive purposes. Little odds and ends of employment may be given them—work suited to their small capabilities may be assigned them-and under judicious direction and considerate encouragement their little heads and hands can accomplish much, and that gladly, The bright little ones who would "help" mamma should not be repelled with a harsh word, but some simple task should be devised for their occupation, and some trifling thing—so, very great to them—should be the reward of its performance. As a general rule, give your child-ren something to do. A daily employ-ment of some sort will exercise their minds healthfully and develop elements of usefulness and self-reliance which may prove incalculably valuable to their manhood and womanhood. Miserable is the plea urged by some that they "have not the time" to look after their children. No such pretext can divest them of their responsibilities which the having of children imposes. The laws of God and humanity demands of parents the best care and training for their children owe their worthlessness and sins to the negligence of their parents in developing and directing good natural endowments for lives of industry and independence! Large Firmness in a child is a good thing; it contributes to steadiness of thought and deed. Large Self-Esteem is desired, in that it confers the sense of personal worth and dignity. Large Approbativeness is more serviceable in its restraining and stimulating ministrations. Large Destructiveness is a good heritage; under proper control it contributes to activity and achievements. Large Combativeness is a good quality; it contributes courage, boldness and progession to the character. Large Acquisitiveness, rightly trained, supplements industry with economy and theft. The custom of burning dead bodies has something in it cruel and barbarous, in destroying so hastily the remains of persons once so dear to us. How to Mend.

Two Hardwood staves from an old barrel, screwed upon a block of wood, make a very fair pair of clamps for holding leather while stitching. The top ends should be cut so that they will meet squarely, and the block levelled so that the pressure at the top will be hard. Do not attempt to nail the staves to the block, for they do not hold as well as when screwed, and are very liable to split to pieces. By getting a shoemaker or harnessmaker to instruct in the making of a waxed end, the farmer or the farmer's boys can keep the harness in good rig at all times, and such work may be done in good shape, as the old stitches make guide. Use needles instead of bristles, and do the work by the kitchen stove on rainy days and evenings when there is no hurry. "A stitch in time saves nine" applies nowhere better than to the harness, and if conveniences are such as not to enable one to do repairing at home, neglect follows and ex-

As a general rule I am a free trader, am also in favor of a full, complete and and radical division of labor, and am in favor of that practice that when you are ill to consult a physician, when you have legal business to transact, or papers to draw, pay the small fees which some reputable lawyer would ask to do such business right. Disease of the Throat,

BY DR. Y. O. PRICE.

Hundreds through the country suffering from various affections of throat. Some are only disturbed during the changeable weather of winter and spring, while others are troubled more or less most of the time. In some instances an affection of the throat will exist a long time without getting in upon the lungs. Notwithstanding this slow progress in some cases, I do not believe there is one case out of ten that will not, if left alone, gradually grow worse, evidently reach the lungs and end in consumption.

The symptoms of chronic diseases

the throat are many, and vary according to the nature and locality of the disease. Among the symptoms of this aliment is an alteration of the voice, its tone not as clear as usual, a slight irritation, or tickling sensation in the throat, with more or less dryness, giving rise to a hacking, hemming, or an endeavor to clear the throat of something wich is felt to be an obstacle to a full and free utterance. On attempting to speak there will be an inability to produce a proper sound, until the throat has first been cleared. Loud or long talking, or reading produces cough, irritation, or dryness of the throat. In the first stages there is no expectoration. Passing from a warm to a cold atmosphere or room, produces difficulty in breathing, and in advanced stages gives rise to more or less cough; the same symptoms follow an exposure to dust, or when walking against the wind. In cold or damp weather the symptoms are generally more aggravating, the person liable to take cold from the slightest exposure. Sometimes the symptoms disappear entirely, but return on contracting a cold. It may thus go on disappearing and returning, the pa tient meanwhile in conparative comfortable health, until the disease has made considerable progress. There is often a tired feeling about the throat, a feeling of disconfort or uneasiness along toward evening. In the early part of the day the tired feeling about the throat is not noticed, as the voice organs have had a chance to recover their power, by rest, during the night. In the beginning of the disease no such symptoms are felt, but as it progresses these symptoms show themselves every evening, then earlier and earlier every day until the voice is clear only for a short time in the morning. The voice becomes more rough, hoarse, and sometimes completely destroyed. Sometimes the individual will be able to speak a sentence in an audible voice, while the next one will be a whisper, or the audible articulation may be cut off in the midst of a single word. Thus the disease may go on for some time, but gradually the symptoms increase, the general health, if not | it was charity mingled with true be-Dr. Hoag will prabably locate at New Buffalo, soon in partnership previously affected, becomes impaired. nevolence, given in the fear, the love, tice the sum of two thousand five hundred Digestion is imperfect, the appetite changeable, the bowels irregular, the kidneys become implicated, the pulse frequent and quick, the skin dry and harsh, the feet are cold, and often clammy state of the hands. The cough at length becomes severe and > or old who have any trouble about the throat should not allow it to progress, for it is indeed an ailment of a most insidious character, often making serious inroads upon the general health, as well as parts nvolved before the person is aware of its danger. It is more dangerous among those disposed of a scrofulous disease of the blood. The course of many physicians for the curing of this disease is a mistaken one, burning the throat with Nitrate of Silver in order to destroy its sensibility for the cure of this complaint. I consider it wrong! and more calculated to exgravate the complaint than to subjugate it! It you de prive the whole throat of strength, as you do in burning with caustic, are you not more likely to invite disease to the part by rendering it weak? As for medicated inhalation it has done much more harm than good in this com-plaint, by diseasing the blood, weakening the lungs and dibilitating the patient. The majority of our best physicians do not deem it worthy of notice, for they know it to be an exploded theory, revived with alleged improvements by ignorant medical speculators to ompose upon the credulous as a means of subsistence and pecuniary gain. Medicated air is diseased air. If this ailment is produced by dyspepsia, general debility, the excessive use of tobacco, and other constitutional troubles. how can the solution of the Nitrate of Silver applied to the throat, or medicated air breathed into the lungs cure the disease? The cause of the disease must first be removed, or cure is impossible. By the aplication of Nitrate of Silver, or by medicated inhalatious the patient may for a short time experience some relief, but the cause not being removed the trouble soon returns. Unless the cause is known, removed, and nature assisted in her reparative progress, the disease cannot be cured. I have treated many hundred cases and never failed to cure when the case is presented before the stamina of constitution is destroyed, and that by means that do not

THE CONVENTION. As will be seen by notices elsewhere the call has been issued for a Republican Judicial Convention, for the second Judicial Circuit to nominate a candidate for Circuit Judge, to succeed Hon. H. H. Coolidge, whose term of office expires Dec. 31, 1875, and also a Republican County Convention to select delegates to the above convention and delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held at Jackinate a candidate for County Superintendent of Common Schools. These offices, though not partisan in their character, are very important and the best men should be selected to fill them. We agree with a number of our leading journals in their views, as expressed, in reference to these offices. People should not be influenced by party consideration to son, March 3d, 1875, and also to nom-the exclusion of fitness and ability. In reference to Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed Judge Christiancy, we indorse what our correspondent says in another column on the subject. We think that Berrien County, in the person of Hon. H. H. Coolidge, presents one of the best men yet named as a candidate for this important and responsible office, and the delegates chosen at the coming County Convention will doubtless be instructed to use every honorable means to secure his nomination. Judge Coolidge is a man of good character and ability, has applied himself assiduously to the study of the law for upwards of twenty years, has been eminently successful in his profession and won high distinction as a Judge. His disposition, his life and his study have especially fitted him for the office of Justice of the Supreme Court.

petent for the position. ELECTION OF PRESIDENT AND

VICE PRESIDENT. Several bills have been introduced in Congress the present session proposing an amendment to the Constitution, so that the election of President and Vice President might be by a direct vote of the people. A bill has also been introduced abolishing the offices of President and Vice President, and providing that their duties be performed by a Council or Commission chosen by the House of Representatives. The fact that so many bills have been introduced, and so many plans suggested, and the discussion and comments they have provoked in and out of Congress, very plainly indicate that the people are not pleased with the present system for the election of the two highest officers in the na-

It is claimed that so radical a change as that of having the people to vote direct for President and Vice President as they do for Governor or Congressmen in the States and Representative districts would not be favored by the smaller States that under the electoral system have a vote based upon their Congressional Representation. This is evidently one of the most objectionable features of the present system and one sought to be remedied. The principle is that these officers, having no interests to look after in any particular State or locality, but being officers of the entire nation should be elected by a majority of the popular vote. The electoral vote, as has been dem-would have been defeated by large maorities if the public vote had decided the election, and vice versa. Rarely has it happened that a candidate for President has ever received a vote in the Electoral College proportional to the number of votes he received compared with the whole number of votes

The objection, however, that is claimed the plan of a direct vote will receive in the smaller States may not really be so great as apprehended. The new plan when carefully examined might give these States greater influence in the election of President than they have under the present sys tem. For instance, Maine, New Hampshire or Connecticut may give a larger majority for a candidate for President than New York, and would do more towards deciding the election on the final count. And why should not this be so? If every man in the State of Vermont vote for a candidate why should they not be counted the same in determining the election as the same number of men in any other State? In the recent election Vermont gave Grant over 32,000 majority, and New York gave 10,000 for Seymour. Justice would say that Vermont should have over three times the power of New York in computing the majorities. How was it under the present system? Vermont gave five electoral votes for Grant, and New York thirty-three for Seymour. The whole system is cumbersome, awkward and inconsistent with a Republican form of government, and should be discontinued and some better method substituted.

HENNEPIN CANAL BILL. A bill has been introduced into the present Congress providing for the construction, by the Government, of a canal from the Mississippi River to Lake Michigan. It is known as the Hennepin Canal Bill, and is only part of the plan proposed by Senator Windom and his transportation Committee in a report last spring for the construction of four great water-courses between the West and the Atlantic. A strong opposition to this bill has manifested itself, and there is but little chance of any such measure carrying, by any fair means, during the present session. This special canal would cost the Government from $15, 000,000 to $20,000,000. The work itself would be of great benefit, perhaps, to the entire Northwest, but it would be a bad precedent for the Government to establish under our present financial embarrassments. This is the least expensive of all the watercourses contemplated, and is the most necessary, and is therefore proposed first as an entering wedge to the whole, the construction of which would cost

As stated by some of our leading journals, there is some danger that bills of this character will be hurried through under a suspension of the rules at the closing hours of the session. For all the bad legislation of the present Congress the Republican party must be held responsible. Thus far all efforts to obtain land-grants and unnecessary appropriations have been successfully counteracted. Nearly every bill introduced in the interest of railroads and monopolies have been adversely reported upon by the committee they were referred to. The only safe course during the remainder of the session is to demand the yeas and nays in voting upon every bill that "has money in it," that each member may stand fully committed. The fact that so many of the present members of Congress retire from office at the close of the present term, with little prospect of ever again returning to public life, is regarded as an unfavorable circumstance. Some of them will regard the remaining days of the session as their last chance to secure and vote to further personal and private interests.

Death of Judge Comstock. Proceeding of the Bar Meeting. Resolu The bar held a meeting Wednesday morning at a few minutes before 12 Mr. N. A. Balch presiding, when the following committee were appointed to prepare resolutions; Hon. Dwight May, H. F. Severens, J. D. Burns, T. R. Sherwood, and J. W. Breese. The meeting then adjourned until two o'clock in the afternoon, when Mr. Balch, after announcing the sad occasion of the meeting in fitting terms, called the meeting to order. Gen. May, chairman of the committee, then reported the following resolutions, which were adopted:

WHEREAS, Death has again entered our ranks and removed from among our number our esteemed brother and judge of this Circuit; therefore Resolved, That in the death of Hon. D. E. Comstock the bar has lost an honest and upright member, and the bench a faithful, honest, and much respected Judge. 2. That the bar of Kalamazoo county deeply sympathize with the widow and family of our late Judge, and tender to them our condolence in this their great affliction.

3. That the bar request that these resolutions be spread upon the journal of the Circuit Court for this circuit, and that Hon. H. H. Coolidge, now presiding at this circuit be requested to adjourn Court for this day. 4. That a copy of these resolutions be published in the papers of the circuit, and that a copy of the same be certified to the widow of the deceased by the Clerk of the Court. 5. That the members of the bar of this county will, so far as they may be able, attend the funeral of our deceased brother. DWIGHT MAY, T. R. SHERWOOD, HENRY F. SEVERENS. J. W. Breese, J. DAVIDSON BURNS

Committee. Judge Coolidge then made the following eulogistic remarks upon the late Judge Comstock:

MR. PRESIDENT :- It is but little I need to say on this occasion. My personal acquaintance with Judge Comstock was quite limited, but from that Senate adjourn as a mark of respect to onstrated in the past, is not a representation of the popular vote. Prestion I received from the members of idents have been elected to office who is the bar in his circuit, I gladly unite to, and the Senate adjourned.

with you in according to him while upon the bench, candor, diligence and integrity. Indeed, I have learned from the attorneys who attended his courts, that he more than met the expectations of those who were most active in securing his appointment. But he has gone—death, the common enemy of man, marked him and early closed his earthly career. This is an hour of thought and reflection; we pause amid the activities and bustlings of life, and think of the great future, where our friend has gone, and where you and I shall soon go. You and I, and these our brothers, one by one soon will follow the departed. May I say, as we stand here around this bench, so lately occupied by Judge Comstock, hence to be occupied by him no more, and reflect upon the brief time alloted us here to stay; let our worldly ambitions be moderated; let the asperities of professional life be chastened and softened; let our intercourse at the bar amid the excitement of sharp litigation be graced by generous impulses and by Christian forbearance. Let us be advocates of truth, justice and equity.

Then, Mr. President, shall we do honor to our noble profession. Speeches were also made by Messrs. J. W. Breese, J. L. Hawes, General Dwight May, T. R. Sherwood, D. Boudiman, Geo. M. Buck, Robt. F. Hill, and A. J. Mills, eulogistic of the deceased.-Kalamazoo Telegraph.

MR. EDITOR .- To-day I made a call at our State Asylum for the Insane, at Kalamazoo. I have visited many institutions of this kind in almost all parts of the world, but none in all respects better than ours. The grounds and buildings are not only beautiful, but every way suited to the objects of the institution. They now have five hundred and twenty-six inmates, of whom some are hopelessly insane. Some are improving, and many are helped and sent forth into society to battle again with the elements with a restored brain. We have one citizen from our place there whose case is considered hopeless. He, and all the persons here have the best of care, -much better than they could have at home, in all respects.

On Wednesday of last week, while terrific wind storm was raging, our citizens were startled by the cry of fire, and soon it became known that it was our Union School building that was threatened. Fortunately the fire was soon extinguished. Had it got fairly started, it would have been impossible to have saved the building, and with the high wind prevailing, the probability is that a number of other buildings would have been destroyed. chimney, forming part of the wall. Last Sunday night a sneak thief got into the house of Mr. Richardson. of the firm of Richardson & Henderson. On reaching the sitting room he was heard by Mr. R., who sprang out of bed and made for him. The tellow attempted to get out in a hurry, but Mr. R. succeeded in hitting him once or twice over the head with a chair. He then seized him, but after a short struggle, the scamp managed to make his escape. He wore a mask. His little enterprise hardly paid expenses. We learn that there were several other houses visited on the same night, by burglars, but no other enterances effected.

From the Elkhart Observer. One of our merchants had his safe obbed this week. It was a bold act. We were guilty of quite an error in speaking of the sum raised last Sunday at the dedication of the lecture room of the new M. E. Church, Goshen. The amount should have read $5,300 instead of $53.00. A burglar entered a house on Railroad street, last Wednesday night, but. was confronted by a plucky woman, armed with a revolver. The woman heard somebody rummaging about the house, and thinking it might be her husband arose from her bed to investigate. Just as she opened the door of the room from which the noise seemed to come, she was suddenly made aware of the presence of an intruder, who, thus surprised, struck at her with a knife. In attempting to ward off the blow she received a cut in the arm. She did not faint, as is usual under such circumstances with most woman and some men, but immediately fired at the miscreant, who at once fled.

Mr. M. followed him for some distance, when the thief dropped the pants after taking a memorandum from the pocket. The thief got a small sum of money, which Mr. M. says he can retain if he will return the book, which is of some value to the owner. From the number of tramps daily seen on our streets, and persons out of employment, it certainly is surprising that there are not more burglaries; or the proneness of house breaking cases show that our citizens are very careful in guard-. ing their houses.

THE M. C. R. R. Co are now buying wood. Thousands of cords have been piled up along the track, but the Company refused to purchase until recently. Of course those who have wood to sell will now get their money for it. There are many in this county who depend largely upon their "wood money" to pay their expenses of living, They have had a hard time of it this winter, but the money they are now receiving when put into circulation will materially affect the business interests, especially in the southern and western parts of the county.

FROM our correspondent we learn that a party of young men visited the Colvin school house on Thursday evening of last week, and after exhibiting their ignorance, took their departure, and with it several articles of value. These acts of lawlessness are becoming frequent of late, and should be checked. The school has been enjoying a good reputaion this present term, and to its credit we are informed that these parties have been tracked outside of the district.

WE clip the following complimentary notice from the Edwardsburg correspondence of the Cassopolis Vigilant: "Prof. Jones, the celebrated magician and ventriloquist, held forth at Sweet's Hall, last Thursday night, and to say that his performing was good, is but small praise. Instice of Supreme Court. ED. RECORD: -- As everybody knows, there are to be elected this spring two Judges of the Supreme Court of this State. And it is a noteworthy fact that divers papers of the State are trotting out candidates for this posi-tion. It is further a matter of record and fact that since the organization of the Supreme Court in 1855, its members have come from the eastern part of the State, save Justices Martin and Graves. Is it not fair to say that the western part of the State may have a voice in the coming Judicial State Convention, or one of the candidates for the high office of Supreme Judge?

I have been pleased to notice that quite a number of papers in the State have seen fit to mention the name of Hon. H. H. Coolidge, present Circuit Judge of the Second Judicial Circuit of this State. Judge Coolidge has been upon the bench for three years past, and has won golden opinions from the members of the barin various parts of the State where he has been called to hold Court. The Judge is a ripe scholar, a sound lawyer, a man of indomitable perseverance and industry, and a sound Judge. He would do honor to the bench, and the good people of the Second Judicial Circuit hope he may be selected as one of the coming men for this high position.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE.

Rascality. ED. RECORD: - Occasionally we hear of petty outrages, committed by boys from the rural districts, upon private as well as public property. With the exception of talk, little or nothing has been done with these marauders, and emboldened by previous exploits they have become bold and audacious in the extreme. Ofttimes the children of some of our first families are implicated in these disgraceful scenes, and the matter is quickly "hushed up," thereby opening an avenue of escape for all that may be implicated in that particular transaction. As a sample of one of these performances, that has come under my immediate observation I give the following: On Thursday evening, 11th inst., the Colvin school house was visited by parties who supposed that a literary entertainment was to be given there by the members of the school. entertainment had, however, been postponed on account of the inclemency of the weather, and as the postponement was not generally known it was deemed advisable not to lock the doors of the house, so that any coming from a distance might enjoy the privlege of warming themselves before returning. This kindness was not appreciated by those who did come, for hey proceeded to mutilate books, and commit depredations of a provoking nature, as well as to commit theft by taking away with them articles of

Friday evening. The greatest item of news in this vicinity, and also the object of a great deal of curiosity and talk, is the successful completion of the Warren Brothers calculating engine, the invention of Mr. F. R. Warren, of this village. It has been known to many here for a number of years that he was at work upon a very intricate piece of mechanism, but what it was, no one knew, until about two years ago it was ascertained that it was a calculating engine,—an instrument to do brain work by machinery. An attempt to accomplish so apparent an impossibility caused much wonder. The machine invented by Mr. Warren adds, subtracts, multiplies, works interest and discount with rapidity and accuracy and seems to be capable of extending its calculations much further. It is the most complicated machine ever constructed, containing over 2,100 specially formed pieces, and including screws, rivets, etc., over 3, 000 pieces. I presume it has cost $1,000, besides years of study, and if any man in Berrien county has any scientific ideas about him it will pay him to come here and see this wonderful machine. Mr. F. P. War-may live many years yet to reap the benefits of his great invention, and that when gone a monument may be erected in memory of his fame as the writing this for an advertisement, for life a tonic is necessary; but there is will be the first mention of the invention. Respectfully, Jo. BAKER.

The cold weather has, of course, effected the handle factories somewhat but the sleighing has brought in lots of timber, and now that the M. C. R. R. Reduction of New: York Hotel Rates. The plan of reducing rates and adjusting prices for board according to the floor or the location of the room occupied is now recognized every-where as the best one. This plan, the H. L. Powers, the proprietor of the bill was introduced to amend the Grand Central Hotel, on Broadway, Charter of the village of St. Joseph. New York. From the start the plan world, containing 630 rooms), and the horse and sleigh can pass over the most elegantly furnished, scales its surface of the drifts, in many places, rates from $1.00 to $2.00 per day without breaking through: No trains less than the other first-class hotels that approach it in style and rank. considered necessary at first-class though strenuous efforts are being hotels in New York. If Congress had employed as much scientific skill in the arrangement of its "Reconstruction Policy" at the close, as the War Department did in the beginning of the war, in arranging for the manufacture of what was called Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders for the use of Cavalry horses, no doubt the Union would have been restored long ago.—Exchange.

Senator James J. David and J. D. Corey and Represenatives Simpson, Howland, James Craig, L. Meyer and Isaac Stowe, of the Legislative Committees on Fisheries, were in the City on Tuesday, and in company with Superintendent Jerome visited the State Fish Hatchery, with a view to reporting to the Legislature the condition of the State's interest in this direction. We uncerstand that these gentleman expressed themselves highly pleased with the condition of things at the Hatchery, and it is fair to expect a favorable report......Ed Fail-ing, of this City, so well known at home and abroad as one of the most daring and successful tumblers and jugglers in this country, is organizing a troupe to travel the coming season. It will be a first-class variety company, composed of acrobats, jugglers, contortionists, tumblers, etc. Singing and dancing will be the prominent features of the entertainment. Some of the talent has already been engaged, and soon as the organization is completed, the names will be given to the public.....George Webster, breakmen on a freight train, Mart. Howlit, conductor, coming east on Tuesday morning, when about two miles west of this City got out upon the top of the first car, when he slipped and fell down between the first car and the way car and the four wheels of the latter car went over his right leg, near the lip, smashing him in a terrible marner. The conductor thought it was ... broken rail when he passed over him, and went to the end of the way car and saw his breakman. He lay in the cold nearly an hour, when the conductor, who had come to Niles to avoid a train, went back after him. He was brought to the house of Mr. H. R: Johnson in this City, where Drs. Bonine and Dougan attended him. The unfortunate young man died yesterday morning. His father

The Alden fruit factory of this village has just closed up the season's work, during which time they have successfully preserved 32,712 pounds of dried fruit. The establishment, though commencing too late to do large business, has nevertheless been able since it did get started to do a very successful business. The coldest weather of the season occurred here on Tuesday of this week. The minimum temperatue at various points in this vicinity was as follows: Benton Harbor,-19°, St. Joseph.-22° Fair Plain, (formerly Heath's Corners)—22°, Spring Vale,—18°, Milburg, (at C. C. Sutton's),—27°, Lake Shore, North of Paw Paw river .from 14° to 19°. It is impossible as yet to tell whether the fruit has been seriously injured. Some who have thawed limbs of peaches by the fire report half the buds in good condition. This is no test, but if true, the fruit prospects are better than with a full crop. It is a great mistake to suppose that a certain degree of, cold kills fruit under all circumstances. Two years ago the mercury fell to peer of any inventor of the 19th century. The machine will be on exhibition here but a few days. Mr. Edpeaches. The buds were in good condition to stand the cold, and were frozen hard previous to the cold of About BITTERS.—At certain periods of Tuesday. On Monday the mercury stood 28 below at Grand Rapids and Saginaw. THE ST. JOSEPH Traveler and Herald

REMINGTON.

How many a leaf I've turned before, And tried to make the record true: Each year a wrock on Time's dull shore Proved much I dared but little knew.

Ah, bright resolve! How high you bear The future's hopeful standard on; How brave you start, how poor you wear How soon are faith and courage gone. You point to deeds of sacrifice.
You shun the path of careless case;
Lentils and wooden shoes? Is this
The fare a human soul to please?

What wonder, then, if men do fail, Where good is ever all austore; While vice is fair and pleasant all, And turns the leaf to lead the year? Yet still again I turn the leaf, And mean to walk the better way

Why should the road that leads to heaven Be all one reach of sterile sand? Why not just here and there he given A rose to deck the dreary land? But why repine? Others have trod, With sorer feet and heavier sins, Their painful pathway toward God :-My pilgrimage anew begins.

Failure and failure, hitherto, Has time inscribed upon my leaves; I've wandered many a harvest through And never yet have gathered sheaves. Yet once again the leaf I turn, Hope against hope for one success; One merit-mark, at least to-earn,

One sunbeam in the wilderness

The Folly of Pride. Let me ask the man in whose heart pride andhaughtiness predominate, if he really imagines that he can be a candidate for a glorious and immortal existence? Does no not at once perceive the inconsistency of such a thought with the dictates of reason and the nature of future folicity? Of what has he any reason to be proud . Is he proud of his birth? of his ancestors? of his wealth? of his station of his beauty? of his personal accomplishments? of his gallantry? of his debaucheries? of his military prowess? or of the thousands of human beings he has slain in battle? Is he proud of his skill in music, in dancing, in fencing, fox-hunting, and in gambling? of his knowledge in languages, in literature, in arts and sciences? Or is he proud that he is subjected to the asthma, the gravel, the dropsy, and the gout, that his funeral will be attended by a train of mourners, and that a monument of marble will be erected to his memory, when his carcass is putrefying with the reptiles of into the celestial mansions-which of the dust? Suppose he were admitted all these topics would be choose for the theme of conversation, and the ground of his boasting? Would bo attempt to entertain the cherubim and seraphim by telling them how many rude chieftains he was descended from, how many ancient families he was connected with, and how many acres of land he possessed as a patrimony in that wretched world which is soon in that wretched world which is soon to be wrapped in flames? Would he tell them of his experimess as a marksman, of his dexterity as a horse racer, of his adroitness as a boxer, of his skill in maneuvering an army, of the villages he had burned, of the towns he had pillaged, or of the thousands he had butchered in storming a city? He would be overwhelmed with shouts of indignation, and instantly hissed from their abodes.

Would he boest of his skill in lan-

Would he boest of his skill in languages and antiquities? or of his knowledge in arts and sciences? What a poor ignoramus (if I may use the expression) would he appear in the presence of Gabriel, the angel of God, who has so frequently winged his way, in a moment from heaven to earth, and surveyed the regions of unnumbered worlds! Would a poor worm of the earth, whose view is confined within a few miles around it, boast of its knowledge in the presence boast of its knowledge in the presence of beings endowed with such capacious power, and who have ranged over so vast a portion of the universe of God? And, if he has nothing else to boast of, why is he proud? What a pitiful figure he would make among the intelligent and adoring hosts of heaven? While such a disposition, therefore predominates in the mind, its fore, predominates in the mind, its possessor can enjoy no substantial felicity either in this life or the life

On the other hand, the man who, like his Redeemer, is "meek and lowly in heart," has "the witness in himself" that he has obtained the approbation of his God.

Christian Cheerfulness.

A paster fells the following story of one of his flock:

She was a poor widow; and supported herself with knitting. I saw her in the intense cold of last winter.

The house was one upon which time had made such sad ravages that only one room could now be inhabited, and one room could now be inhabited, and in that she dared not to have a fire when the wind blew hard, because the chimney had become unsafe.

"How favored I am," she said; "for when it has been the coldest, the wind didn't blow much snow off the house, and I could have a fire without danger; I cannot be thankful enough; and then" she continued, "Joseph has been at home nights almost all winter, and he could get my wood and water when there was so much snow I could not get out."

not get out."
'But do you not feel very lonely while Joseph is away?"

"Oh, no; I get along very well through the day, (her Bible lay on the table at which she was sewing,) and when I can see the neighbors' lights in the evening, they are company for me. I have thought a good deal about sick people, this winter; and then I think how favored I am that I can go to bed and sleep all night in health.

"How favored I am! she exclaimed; "when my poor Lydia was alive I lost the use of both my feet for a time, and she took care of me; but now I can get about by moving my feet upon a chair, and I make out to do my work, and get Joseph's, meals ready nicely. What if it had deen my hands? How favored I am."

Regularity Brings Vigor. Local irregularities produce weakness of the entire system. In order, therefore, to re-establish health and strength upon a sure basis, these irregularities must be permanently overcome. Many persons endeavor to reform them by remedies which address themselves merely to the symptoms without aff-cting the cause. If such individuals were to use instead Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, they would speedily appreciate the difference between, a medicine which palliates and one which entirely removes physical disability. That prime regulator of all bodily disturbances restores the derelect organs to an uninterrupted and healthy performance of their various duties, whereby alone the system can recover its lost tone and vigor. Hostetter's Bitters are a tonic medicine, but they are a tonic which regulates ere they strengthen the system.

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with are of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with are of experiment, and with the laws of Nature, with are of experiment and without the hard treatment, in orifing, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively, no encouragement, without prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sones. We invite the sick, no matter wint their aliment, to call, invostigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

APPLETONS'

New Revised Edition. Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand Engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of The New American Orotopedia was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developements which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision and to issue a new edition entitled The American Croto-Paddia. and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CICCO-PEDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in overy department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and the fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement, of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commen-ed. H. ROE of commercial and manageral activity has been commended.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of A frica.

The great holitical revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public views multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives, every one's curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sleges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transcient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history. Watches, Jewelry, Stationery, Music, Periodicals the transcient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the letest possible dates, and, to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature; and of the nish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature; and of the nish and accurate and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it, on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopudia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater expenditure and with such, improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition have been added not for the sake of protorial effect, but to give, greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and or natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture, and art, as well as the various processes of michanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather then embellishment, no pains have been spared, to insure their artistic excellence; the cost-of their execution is enormous; and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopadia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume, the will be completed in sixteen large. Ocrayo volumes, each containing about soo pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with
