Poetry.

A SONG.
BY A. W. BELL.

Here on the hill,
I look with a will,
To find the children's bread;
I like my sails
Like mighty sails,
That the workers may be fed.

With a burr and a whirr,
In a ceaseless stir,
I grind for beast and man;
Be he rich or poor,
None could do more,
For I eye do all I can.

I love the spring,
When an quivering wing, The swallow skim the stream;
When the seed is sown,
And all alone
The daisies sit and dream.

And I love the lights,
That dance like sprites, Below me on the vale,
When the time hath come
For the harvest home,
And dance and song prevail.

I drowse and dream,
When the evening gleam
Is on the distant West;
On plain and hill,
And the winds are left to rest.

But when morning pale,
Like a silver sail,
Shakes out her robe of pearl,
I hail her with song,
That is sweet and strong,
As my giant sails unfurl.

With a burr and a whirr,
In a ceaseless stir,
I grind for beast and man;
Be he rich or poor,
None could do more,
For I eye do all I can.

Story.

From the Bridal Veil.

ELLA'S CONSTANCY.

BY A. N. DEMOREST.

Ella Welsley was beautiful, accomplished, wealthy and an orphan. None knew this better than did Major Wel-ley, her uncle and guardian. Her mother had died when she was very young, and her father, addicted to strong drink, had died of delirium tremens but a short time before our story opens. Being involved in debt by his constant drinking, he had mortgaged the old homestead without the knowledge of his relatives, and at his death he carried the knowledge of the mortgage to the grave, being too proud to let his folks know he had drunk it up.

In his will he left everything to Ella, his only child. She being under age, her uncle had been selected as her guardian.

About six months after her father's death, Ella, while at a village picnic, became acquainted with Lawrence

Wickley, a young and handsome Augustus Welsley gazed after the recreating form of his cousin, and then said in a sorrowful tone—

"That's a pretty way to treat a fellow, by jove! Just got home from college, too. Well, if this is the reception I get from my cousin, I'm off again soon."

He sincerely loved his beautiful cousin, and his affection was slightly returned, but only by a cousinly love, and he, deceived by this and his father's words of encouragement, pressed his suit, which so distressed Ella that she parted with him in anger. He went to college, not angry with his cousin, but mad with himself for being such a fool as to press his cousin so for an answer which so crushed his hopes.

He did not despair, however, and when the college term came to a close he went home again, and a few days after his arrival he met his cousin in the garden, as before narrated, with the intention of speaking to her on the subject of his love. But he was disappointed, and sitting down on a seat in the bower he remained in deep thought until the god of sleep overcame him, and he was soon dreaming of the future.

Ella did not remain long in her room, as she expected to meet Lawrence Wickley, and with a trembling heart she issued from it, and again took the direction of the bower.

As she neared it she thought she heard voices, and fearing that her lover and her cousin had met, and words passed between them, she hurried forward, and was considerably relieved when she found her cousin sleeping peacefully, with a smile on his face, but snoring in a manner quite loud indeed. She remained in the vicinity of the bower all the afternoon, but saw nothing of Lawrence Wickley.

The next day she again paid several visits to the now desolate bower, but was again disappointed, as there was no appearance of her lover. That afternoon, unable to bear suspense any longer, she walked down the main street, and as she saw the lawyer's office closed she would have fallen to the ground in a faint had not her cousin appeared in the opposite direction and caught her ere she fell.

Without expressing surprise at her agitation, he conducted her home, and when in her own room, she sat meaning and thinking of her lover's infidelity. Ever and anon she would glance out of the window with the vain hope that her lover still remained true, and perhaps was at that instant waiting for her at the appointed place. But upon going there she found him not, and with a heavy heart she sought a couch, to toss about, torturing herself with thoughts as to what had become of him.

Lawrence Wickley, after leaving his intended, went directly to his office, where he found a telegram from his mother, announcing that she was beyond recovery, and was at that minute dying. His father had long since died, and when leaving home his mother was in poor health. Hardly waiting until he had finished reading the telegram, he looked up his office, and as he knew a train left Bogueville for his native place in five minutes, he was soon making all haste for the depot.

His only regret at leaving so hastily was that he would like to let Ella know his reason for so abrupt a departure. But the train was already sounding its whistle as it approached the depot, and thinking he would write her when he got home, he sprang aboard the train and was soon speeding to his dying mother. His native place was but twenty-five miles from Bogueville, on the outskirts of the city of B—and reaching there in a little over one hour, he found an old servant waiting for him with a carriage.

"Well, James, how is my mother?"

he asked of the servant, as he sprang into the vehicle.

"Oh, master!" exclaimed the faithful fellow, "I fear she is beyond this world now. I left her in her last minutes." And brushing away a tear he drove on in silence.

"For heaven's sake, drive on faster!"

exclaimed Lawrence, as the horse, an old family one, was trotting leisurely along.

The servant complied, and whipping the old horse they sped rapidly along the highway. Lawrence sat in the carriage buried in deep thought, unmindful of the beautiful scenery through which they were passing. His thoughts were abruptly terminated by the carriage coming to a halt, and looking up he found himself at home.

Springing out of the carriage he found all the servants on the steps to welcome him.

As he approached, he saw by their faces that something was wrong, and on asking to be shown to his mother's room, they simultaneously burst into tears, and replied that she had died but ten minutes before. One, however, conducted him to her room, where he found her on the bed, with a smile on her face, and her arms extended out as if to embrace some one.

Alone with the dead, Lawrence burst into a passionate fit of weeping, and remained so until night, when he went forth and roamed around the homestead.

The Wickley estate was a large

Is Dairying Profitable?

As there has not been to my knowledge any statistical report given of the profits of dairying in your valuable paper, I take the liberty of giving one or two reports that the citizens of the county might reflect upon.

I give the statistics from the com-menorement of the business with the parties heretofore named, which was in 1860 and ending in 1874, a period of fourteen consecutive years. The following table shows the amount of money received by one of our patrons, Nathan Shumway, the number of pounds delivered, and the price per 1,000 pounds of milk each year:

Year. Pounds milk each year. Average price per 1,000 lbs.

1860. 15,000. $1.50. 1861. 15,000. 1.50. 1862. 15,000. 1.50.

1863. 15,000. 1.50. 1864. 15,000. 1.50. 1865. 15,000. 1.50.

1866. 15,000. 1.50. 1867. 15,000. 1.50. 1868. 15,000. 1.50.

1869. 15,000. 1.50. 1870. 15,000. 1.50. 1871. 15,000. 1.50.

1872. 15,000. 1.50. 1873. 15,000. 1.50. 1874. 15,000. 1.50.

1875. 15,000. 1.50. Total. 150,000. $15.00.

The party delivering the above milk at the factory has been a constant patron since the factory commenced, and has a farm of 100 to 150 acres for farm and dairy purposes, the balance being timber land. We cannot state positively the number of cows in each season, but from memory would say not less than eight nor more than ten.

PIGEONS are flying northward. They seek that region where spring wheat is sown.

We may safely say that "spring has come," although some still insist that it will get snowed on yet.

GREAT damage is being done in different parts of the State by the breaking up of the ice in the rivers.

The price of the Chicago Daily Inter-Ocean has been reduced to $10 per year.

It is reported that nearly 100,000 men are now idle in Pennsylvania, owing to the strike in the iron mines.

By the Senate concurrent resolution our Legislature is to adjourn April 22d.

It is getting to be a little dusty in the streets. The services of the street sprinkler will soon be needed.

The Grangers are building a ware house at the depot for their own private use.

AFTER the 7th day of next month all subscriptions outside the county must be paid in advance. No exceptions to this rule.

The weather has been very changeable of late. Cold winds most of the time, and colds and sore throat are prevalent.

The Legislature adjourned on Friday of last week until the following Tuesday in order that members might go home to attend the election.

The mill of Roe & Rough caught fire on Saturday last from a cinder that fell on the roof. Luckily the fire was noticed and extinguished before any serious damage was done.

We verily believe that if we had the money spent in this town for tobacco and cigars, we could send the paper to every family in the county.

We are approaching the next Presidential campaign. If you want to keep posted now is the time to subscribe for a good paper.

The Niles Democrat entered upon its 24th year last week. The paper is ably conducted and worthy of the patronage extended to it.

Mr. Wm. POWERS, of this village, trapped a white skunk at New Buffalo, on Monday night last. It is the first of this species we ever saw. It was taken to Niles Tuesday morning to a taxidermist to be put in a state for preservation.

SALE.—Mr. Wm. D. Roe has sold his farm of 40 acres in Lake Township to Mr. John E. Shetterly. Consideration, $800.

The village assessor is around interrogating the public in regard to their worldly possessions. Under ordinary circumstances his inquiries would be deemed rather impertinent.

HORSE-THIEVES are active in different parts of the State. Horses are so low in price that they are not very desirable property, but are selected because convenient to get away with. Keep your stables locked and your guns loaded.

CAPT. BINNS had the Stars and Stripes floating to the breeze on Tuesday last, in commemoration of the great battle of Shiloh.

It is very difficult to hear from some of the townships in this county after an election. Full returns are always delayed on their account.

IMPROVEMENT.—Mr. Jacob Brown is putting up a new building on Portage street, to be used for a planing mill and the manufacture of all kinds of bracket works. The building is to be 16x38, and two stories high.

We think it excellent advice we overheard a man give his neighbor who was a little attacked with the Black Hills fever. "That he would better not go unless provided with means for coming home again in case the climate should not suit him."

SEVERAL families on Day's Avenue were treated to some very nice music on Monday evening last. We return thanks to the serenaders for that which was rendered for our especial benefit. Come again.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Fred Warren, inventor of the wonderful calculating machine, is lying dangerously ill, at his home in Three Oaks.

CAUCUS.—The Republican Township Caucus on Saturday last was well attended. Candidates nominated were elected on Monday. Proceedings will be found in another column.

The South Bend Register of last week contained an article credited to the "Berrien Springs Record." It made us fairly groan when we read it. Brother Beal, be careful to not inflict us that way again.

The Detroit Free Press states that some of the eloquent public speakers of that city are so well convinced that saving has come that they are busily engaged writing up their Fourth of July orations.

DOTING mothers with their cabs and little "treasures" are now frequently seen upon our streets—an unmistakable sign that spring has returned, and also a promising sign for the future welfare and prosperity of the village.

THE popular game of croquet is being revived. Several in our village have doubtless made up their minds to devote the greater portion of their time this season on the croquet grounds.

JOHN ALLISON, of Dayton, had his left hand severely cut while running a bolting saw, in the employ of Wilson and Needham, Friday, March 26.

AARON ROY plead guilty to the charge of forgery at the recent term of our Circuit Court and was sentenced to State Prison for five years. He is the man who forged a mortgage on the farm of Mr. Clark, living just south of this village, an account of which was published at the time.

MUSICAL CONVENTION.—A musical convention is now being held in this village, conducted by Prof. S. W. Straub, of Chicago. The class numbers over one hundred. The Convention will conclude with a grand concert at Collin's & Weaver's hall, on Friday night of next week.

REV. JOHN RUSSELL, of Detroit, Grand Worthy Chief of the order of Good Templars, will deliver a temperance lecture in the M. E. Church of this place, next Monday evening, 12th inst.

OUR position enables us to judge of the proficiency and reliability of the attorneys in this village in conducting cases of mortgage foreclosures. Those having business of this kind to transact can safely trust it in their hands and rest assured that it will be properly attended to.

THE Niles papers announce the death of Dr. Richardson of that city, which occurred on Monday of last week. Dr. Richardson was one of the earliest settlers of Berrien County, and always ranked among its leading and most respected citizens.

AN error occurred in our last week's paper in giving notice of the spelling school. It should have read Tuesday night, instead of Friday night. The error was made by the compositor, and the proof reader not knowing what evening the spell occurred, of course did not mark the mistake. We were absent pressday, and like "Samuel" Weller's aged progenitor, must insist on putting in an ad lib.

THE excitement on election day in this township was mostly all over the office of Superintendent of Schools. All of the candidates before the Convention were good men for the position, and many hesitated before deciding to whom they should give their preference.

We already receive advance sheets of publications containing a history of the Beecher-Tilton trial. The works are recommended not only as valuable (?) to the general reader, but as being of particular interest to the legal profession. Attorneys therefore come in for an equal share of the tortures from these advance sheets and prospectuses. When will it be calm again?
