Mi Poetry.

The girls are planning to get a beau; They dress for party and ball and show— And the old folks tell us it wasn't so

After the verses and prayers are said The old folks light the boys to bed,
And they lie as still as though they were dead,
Till daddy goes off to his dreams instead;
Then down the back stairs—so sly and slow,
With their boots in their hands—and away

Those good old maids are waiting yet— Over love affairs they froth and fret— Of girls they never saw such a set—

Of course to the aged 'tis right to hold
They years they were happy the best that rolled;
But the truth is plain, and ought to be told,
That the world grows better in growing old;
And only love, in its show and ilame,
The even changing and yet the same— Is ever changing and yet the same— Freaks of fashion and charm, you see; But it's just the same as it used to be!

Story.

From the Waverley Magazine. MY FRIEND EMILY

BY JUDITH K. DE RUYTER.

I well remember the first time I saw Emily. It was at school, and I was standing talking to a set of giddy young girls about the ball my mamma and just given, and those who were

"All the Armstrongs were there," said I mentioning the name of a very high and mighty family in H——; and the girls all said, "Oh, how splendid! what did Amelia wear?" Then a voice called me. "Meta," said Mrs. Averly, from the hall.

Mrs. Averly was the principal of the school. I turned around, somewhat provoked to be interrupted in my high-flown description of mamma's ball, and said sotto voce to the girls,-"Continued in our next;" and aloud o Mrs. Averly, "Yes'm; here.I am.

Mrs. Averly took me aside in the hall, and put the hand of a trembling little girl in mine. "This is Emily Thaxter, a new scholar, Meta, and I give her over to

I saw a small, wizened face peering up into mine-eyes of the deepest blue, hair of a strange, golden brown—but not a pretty face; and now that it was a frightened face it was less pretty than ever; an oldwomanish face, strange to see on such a child. Emily's dress, too, looked odd and old-fashioned, though excess-surprise. "A new friend, Meta?" said Josephine Lever's voice in a cold, sneering tone, as her eyes glanced over the child's odd dress and noted her unfashionable air.

"Sit down by me, Emily," said I; and I still kept her cold hand in mine as I went on relating the incidents of mamma's ball.

But our short hour of recreation soon ended, and our teacher began the lessons once again. Emily was questioned as to what she knew, and showed herself somewhat proficient, much to my surprise.

This was my first meeting with Emily Thaxter, and from that time we were the firmest friends, opposite as we were in character. I was all frivolity, whereas Emily was all substantiality-plain common sense. I was brought up in a home where all was bright, gay, fashionable, for mamma was an acknowledged leader in the society of H--- a somewhat pretentious town on the sea-coast, and liked nothing better than to be surrounded with a crowd of friends. On the contrary, Emily's home was far from lively. Her mother was an invalid. and possessed a very small income, which necessitated much economy and a very humble way of living. Though Emily's home was apparently quiet, peaceful, and blest with love and cheerfulness, a cloud hung over it like a pall—a cloud of keenest suffering, borne with greatest fortitude, for Emily's father was far from a worthy man, and helped squander the small pittance belonging to his wife in a rapid and sinful manner, all of which was trying indeed to Emily and her sick mother. What little Mrs. Thaxter could save from her husband's clutches went toward Emily's educa-

Malcolm Forbes. I became a dreamy, silent girl, and often wandered away from my gay friends to be by the sea alone, where I could think of him. I dare say all the time he never imagined that I was in love with him, and that he talked with me only because we were thrown together. But I was blind. I could not force myself to believe that he meant nothing by his attentions. Looking back on my wild

Clive Armstrong, from our own town of Hwas at the same hotel with us, and was one of my most devoted cavaliers; but I did not care for him at all. His conversation appeared insipid and dull after talking with Malcolm

Forbes. One day, I remember, I went off on a ramble by myself, dreamily thinking as I walked on the sea shore, of him whom I loved so well. I sought a retired nook, and sat down on the rocks. The waves came in and beat on the shore with their solemn monotone, and the sun danced on the water, and the wind blew over the sea so freshly.

"Ah, me," I sighed, "if only this bliss could be mine! After all there is a great deal of joy and brightness in the world, if one loves." I bowed my face in my hands, and the sun touched my bowed form with a warm, tender caress. Yes, the world seemed very fair. I was young,

"What has happened?" I asked. starting abruptly. "My dear! A note from papa. He is in great trouble. His firm is in danger of bankruptcy. We must hasten home, my child. Farewell all our summer's joy. Hurry, hurry, Meta, the maids are packing our trunks, and we must leave here on the noon train." "Oh, mamma, mamma!" was all I said in despairing tones, and I guess mamma did not guess how much I felt this new distress. Leave the hotel where I was so happy, for the heat and dust of the city! and perhaps, when I should arrive there, be obliged to encounter a worse distress in papa's failure!

I hurried back to the hotel with mamma, however, and tried to seem hopeful. As I entered, I saw my admirer, Clive Armstrong, standing near the office, looking troubled and perplexed. As he saw me he advanced

A Puzzled Darkey.

Not a hundred miles from Crestline a colored American citizen keeps a stand for the sale of newspapers, cigars, apples and other knick knacks. Thither one day went a burly engine er, given some what to practical joking, and asked for a nickel's worth of peanuts. The elongated edibles were immediately measured and hand-place of them." "All right, sah !" and the exchange was made in a twinkling. The engineer still hesitated, fum-bling the apples in an undecided manner. Finally-"Darn my buttons; I don't believe want these either. I'd trade them to you for a cigar."

The dicker was made without ob jection, and the engineer, after lighting his cheeroot, turn away. "Hol' on, dar! you done gon, and forgot to pay for dat cigar!"

"You didn't pay for the nuts." "Well, I didn't keep 'em did I?" "Dat's so ! fo' God, dat's so !" and while the puzzled darkey was scratching his wool, the engineer made his escape. Before turning the corner he glanced back and beheld the darkey with head in rummating attitude, clasped hands, and felt comfort in so | evidently satisfied that as a commercial transaction it was all straight, but wondering where he had made anything out of the dicker.

THE following which we take from an exchange is comical and suggestive: During the pioneer days of Ionia. Michigan, the town had a editor who was patient and long suffering. Some of the members of the church got him to give $20 toward securing a ious notices inserted free; then he was asked for $25 toward helping to build a parsonage, and finally found he was giving the church more than he gave his family. He nevertheless "hung on" "I congratulate you;" and I kissed for a time longer, until one evening my friend. "Pray, tell me, who is to he went to prayer-meeting and was be the happy man? Mind and Health.

The mental condition has far more nfluence upon the bodily health than is generally supposed. It is no doubt true that ailments of the body cause depressing and morbid conditions of the mind; but it is none the less true that sorrowful and disagreeable emotions produce disease in persons who, uninfluenced by them would be in sound health; orif disease is not produced, the functions are disordered. Not even physicians always consider the importance of this fact. Agreeable emotions set in motion nervous currents, part of the system into healthful activifeeling, and brooding over present sorrows or past sorrows or past mistakes, depress all the vital forces. To be physically well one must, in general, be happy. The reverse is not always true; one may be happy and cheerful, and yet be a constant sufferer in body.—Brooklyn Journal.

Whatever you try to do in life, try with all your heart to do it well; and whatever you devote yourself to. devote yourself to it entirely. In great aims and small, be thoroughly in earnest. Never believe it possible that any natural or improved ability can claim immunity from the companionship of the steady, plain, hardworking qualities, and hope to gain its end. There is no such thing as such fulfillment on this earth. Some happy talent and some fortunate opportunity, now form the two happy sides of the ladder on which some men mount, but the rounds of that ladder must be made of material to stand wear and tear, and there is no substitute for thoroughgoing, ardent, sincere earnestness. Farm and Household.

The Golden Rules of Agriculture. Plants live a double life. They have a two-fold nutrition - mineral and organic. Their mineral food is derived from the soil, and the organic from the air. While the organic constitutes of plants are generally uniform, by a strict analysis of their ashes it is discovered that the different classes are marked by the prevalence of certain mineral elements. Some abound in potash, others in silica. Different parts of the same plant have also their preponderating elements. Thus it appears that the reason why all crops are not suited to the same soil, is a variation of the mineral elements. All crops are not suited to the same soil, mainly because it is deficient in certain mineral elements, or they exist in too large quan tities. The fertilization of soil is the addition to the soil of suitable pabulum for the gawth and development of plants. I allowed sufficient, plants can extrac organic materials from the surroun ag atmosphere to attain a vigorous gr. wth; yet if they apply to their roots manures yielding ammonia ,carbonic acid, nitrogen, etc., we supplement the atmospheric supply and hasten their develoment. Liquid manures are, therefore, of high value, as their action is immediate and powerful. But if this policy is long continued, it will exhaust the soluble mineral elements of the soil and render it comparatively worthless. Hence in all permanent systems of agriculturel, mineral fertilizers can no more

be dispensed with than organic. Long continued cropping removes from the soil all the available mineral constituents of plant food, unless we restore to the soil, in the shape of manuers, exactly what is lost in the crop. This, then, is the golden rule of agriculture. By failing to heed this important principle, millions of acres of the choicest land have become worthless, and millions more are now undergoing the same ruinous

We should economize every source of fertility. Manure heaps should be sprinkled with some absorbant, such as gypsum or diluted sulphuric acid, to prevent the escape of ammonia, liquid excretions preserved in tanks that none of it be wasted, ashes saved and spread on the fields. Com-post heaps should be formed where all refuse—animal or vegetable—may be utilized; and while the accumulation of filth and noisome odors is prevented, the soil is enriched and farming made remunerative. With fertilizers the careful farmer can accomplish much; without them, he can accomplished nothing .- Cor. Ameri-

Wood Ashes as a Fertilizer.

Ashes, says the Rural New Yorker contain essential components of all crops. They should not be mixed with compost (their is no gain in so mixing them) but applied broadcast directly over the soil, whether it is grass or arable land. We never knew a farmer who could get more ashes than it was profitable to apply to his land; 100 bushels per acre is not too much to apply to old cultivated lands. Especially are ashes excellent for orchards. they should not be heaped right about the bodies of the trees, but spread over the roots, which extend as far from the bodies of the trees as the branches do. Ashes are especially valuable as top dressing on old grass lands, or on lands cropped with grain. For root crops they are equally important; indeed, as we say above, there is no crop grown and no land cultivated that is not benefited, in a greater or less degree by the application of leached or un-plunge the parts in cold water. This relieves the pain in a second, and allows all hands to become composed. If the part cannot be kept under water, cover it with dry flour, an inch deep or more. In many instances nothing more will be needed after the flour; simply let it remain until it falls off, when a new skin will be found under. In severer cases, while the part injured is under water, simmer a leek or two in an earthen vessel, with half their bulk of hog's lard, until the leeks are soft, then strain through a muslin rag. This makes a greenish ointment, which, when cool, spread thickly on a linen cloth and apply to the injured part. If there are blisters, let out the water. When the part becomes feverish and uncomfortable, renew the ointment, and a rapid, painless cure will be the result, if the patient, in the meanwhile, lives exclusively on fruits, course bread, and other light, loosening fruit.—Dr. Hall. THE LEQUOR QUESTIONS.

The Senate and House of Reprecentatives bare voted by the necessary two thirds majorities to submit to the people at the general election in 1876, an amendment to the Constitution of the State repealing Section 4 of Article IV, which declares that "the Legislature shall not pass any act authorizing the grant of license for the sale of ardent spirits or other intoxicating liquors."

Bills have been introduced into the Legislature in auticipation of the repeal of the prohibitory law, for the regulation of the liquor traffic. Of the bills which have been introduced. the following have been the most favorably considered, and will no doubt be passed, perhaps with little amendment or alteration. One of these bills repeals the prohibitory law, and substitutes therefor a system of taxation. It provides for an annual taxation of the traffic in liquor, graduated according to the population of the community where it is carried on. The following are the rates:

In the country, not within three miles of any village or city, the tax on malt liquors, $25; on spirituous liquors, $50. In villages with less than 1,000 inhabitants, $40 and $75. In cities and villages with a population exceeding 3,000, $50 and $150.

The payment of the latter tax for the sale of spirituous liquors also in-cludes the right to sell the malt liqnors. The tax upon wholesale dealers and manufacturers of spirituous liquors is fixed at $300 per annum; upon wholesale dealers in malt liquors, $100 per annum. Manufacturers of malt liquors pay a tax graded by the amount manufactured, as follows: Up to and including 1,500 barrels per year, $50; over 1,500 and under 5,000 barrels, $100; over 5,000 barrels, $100. Those selling over five gallons or one dozen quart bottles of liquor at one time to one person are held to be wholesale dealers. The bill does not apply to persons selling wine or cider made from fruits raised by themselves, or to druggists selling for medicinal, chemical or sacramental purposes. The tax is to be assessed by the township, village and city assessors, and collected in the usual way by township, village and city treasurers. It is also to be in lieu of all State, township and city taxes, and its proceeds are to be placed to the eredit of the contingent fund of the township, village or city, to be used like other contingent funds. The hill further makes it the duty of the assessor to keep a complete roll of all individuals or firms engaged in the liquor business, and provides for the revision and correction of and additions to said roll. The taxes are to be paid on dates fixed by the law during the month of June in each year, and in case they are not paid at the specified time, the treasurer is empowered to levy on the goods and chattels of the delinquent for the amount, with ten per cent. interest and four per cent. collection fee, (the levy to take precedence of all other liens and claims, and no property being exempt), and sell the same at public auction, ad journing the sale from time to time if there are no bidders; and making further levies if the first is insufficient to satisfy the claim. A pro rata tax is also to be levied upon persons beginning the business after the annual roll is made up, in proportion to the length of the unexpired portion of the year. The bill also provides for making statistical returns of the number of persons engaged in the traffic, and the amount of tax paid, by the treasurer to the clerk, by the clerk to the county treasurer, and by that official to the Auditor General. The penalty imposed upon officials for refusing or neglecting to perform their duties under this act is fixed at $100, and upon persons refusing or neglecting to pay their tax at from $25 to $100, or, in twenty days.

The second bill is for the regulation and restriction of the traffic in intoxicating liquors. It prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors, intoxicated persons and habitual drunkards, or upon Sundays, or between 11 o'clock at night and six o'clock the following morning. The penalty for a violation of this law is a fine of $25 to $100 and costs, or imprisonment from ten to ninety days. Any person publicly intoxicated shall be subjected to a fine of $5, or imprisonment not exceeding 20 days, and any minor obtaining liquor under false representa-tions shall be subject to a fine of from $5 to $25, or imprisonment from five and costs, imprisonment from ten to to sixty days. The bill also provides a remedy for damages by an action against a liquor dealer, to be brought by a wife, child, parent or guardian, or other person who shall be injured in person, property or means of support by the intoxication of any person.

The bills for the taxation and regulation are kept separate, and each relies on different machinery for its en forcement.

That many of our people do not understand the nature and use of this society is evident from the doubts they express with regard to the good it is doing, and the important results accomplished by it. But notwithstanding the opposition it has met with many of our farmers and young people have joined it, and find their meetings interesting and profitable.

The Buchanun Grange is considered one of the best in the State. It has nearly 150 members, with the folowing officers:

Master-Wm. Haslett. Secretary-C. F. Howe. Treasurer—Wm. Rough. Chaplaiu—S. French. Lecturer-B. Chamberlain. Overseer-Wm. Burrus. Steward-D. Fisk. Asst. Steward-F. Franklin.

Jan.-John Haslott. Asst: L. Steward-Mrs. Louisa J. Ceres-Mrs. Nancy Bliss.

Flora-Miss Sarah Guyer. Pomona-Miss Ella Broadhurst. They had Grange socials once a week most of the time during the winter, which were well attended and enjoyed by the young folks.

They generally take dinner together in their hall once in four or six weeks. On such occasions their table is loaded with delicious fruit and luxuries which the farmers' wives and daughters know so well how to preare, and it does a person good to enoy the sociability and cheerfulness that prevail at such times. They are there taught to give thanks to God, and to look to Him as the giver of all blessings; to love their country, do good to their fellow-men, be merciful to their animals, kind and compassionate toward all the animated creation with which they are surrounded. The Grange must be a good institution because its members are made more refined, wiser and better. It has been very successful in creating a spirit of sociability among the farmers, of which there has been a great lack, and should be encouraged for this reason if for no other. It would be much to the advantage of the farmers and young

Cor. Central City (Col.) Register:

A Trip Into Michigan.

DEAR REGISTER :- Having given your readers as fair a view of Chicago, its progress, prosperity, commercial relations and surroundings as it was possible to obtain under the peculiarly trying state of the weather during my brief stay in the city, it is my purpose to afford them in this letter a glimpse, more or less historical, of my present resting place, the pretty little town of Buchanan, nestled picturesquely among the black walnut, beech and oak forests of Berrien Co., Mich., eighty miles east of Chicago. Its name indicates to the stranger a partiality by its founders for that gloomy old imbecile who, as Chief Magistrate of the nation tho't we had better "let the Union slide," but I am glad to say that such is not the case. With all my inquiries I have not been able to learn exactly who it was named for, but I place it to the credit of the early settlers that they had no intention of honoring the last Democratic President by it. It is located on the line of the Michgreatly prospered by the advantages afforded by that great thoroughfare. The face of the country is undulating, something after the character of the great plains east of Denver, but every-where admirably adapted to purposes of husbandry. The landscape, viewed from the point at which I write, is one of sylvan beauty, rarely surpassed during the summer months, and stretches as far as the eye can reach. The uniform richness of the surrounding neighborhood in the best fruits of agriculture, with the profits arising from an extensive and constantly increasing trade in the finest lumber in America, have made it oncof the most important and flourishing of the smaller towns that have not ripened into the fullness of cities. The county is situated in the extreme south-western corner of the State, and on its north-westerly side is for many miles washed by the deep blue waters of Lake Michigan. The climate being generally equable and moderate, for this latitude, together with the unfailing adaptability of the soil, renders it celebrated for the abundance and excellence of its fruit. Magnificent forests of black walnut, hickory, beech, oak and maple are seen on every side, forming a prolific source of commerce, as well as of cheap and ample supplies of fuel, whereby the severity of the northern winters are mitigated, and the warm, bright firesides of even the humblest family in the long winter evenings are rendered centers of cheer and enjoyment. Coal is seldom used here, even by the railroads, but instead, a quality of timber that in Colorado would be worth its weight in gold, almost, is used with reckless prodigality as if the supply were warranted to be of perpetual replenishment. This is not to be wondered at, however, since the finest beech, oak and maple wood is worth in town only about $1.60 per Notwithstanding last year's crop was full, and the county filled with its abundance, the people of the north-west are complaining bitterly of "hard times," and many are anxiously seek-. ing new homes and brighter prospects further west. "The illusion that the times that were are better than those that are," says Horace Greeley, "has probably pervaded all ages. But there is nothing more certain than that however happy, sweet and enjoyable the days of those who explored struggled, conquered, and finally peopled and built up the great West, wealth is as fairly distributed, and the labor, of the industrious artizan or tiller of the soil is as adequately rewarded as those

A vast amount of capital is employed in the manufacture of lumber for export, and so rapidly is the land being denuded of its valuable timber that in a few years scarcely a tree will be left standing that can be wrought into merchandise. Says a local writer on this subject: "Cupidity and waste have joined hands in this unpardonable and irreparable destruction. Under the shadow of private right, this public wrong is safely perpetrated, and no one has power to prevent or restrain it. The man who now destroys the

The town of Buchanan was laid out, founded and fostered to its present beauty and respectable proportions by Andrew C. Day, Esq., who came here in 1836, from Delaware county, N. Y., and after building and conducting a flouring mill for a year or two, pre-empted a farm of 160 acres, whereon he erected a small log cabin for the accommodation of his family. The whole surface of the country was covered by a dense growth of the finest timber. He built a saw mill, or rather purchased one that had been run a short time by a man who was not successful, and then commenced to clear his farm for the introduction of another kind of crop, cutting the superb walnuts. maples, oaks and beeches into lumber as he went along, floating it down the St. Joseph river to Lake Michigan, thence across to Buffalo, and via the Erie canal to New York, the nearest market in those days. Soon others came in and settled around him. DEATH.—We are called upon this week to chronicle the death of one who was among our most respected citizens - Mrs. Harrison Epley, who died on Monday last. The deceased for several months previous to her death endured a great deal of suffering from cancer, submitting to two severe and painful surgical operations, which proved ineffectual, and death put an end to her suffering as above stated. Mrs. Epley possessed to an unusual degree a true Christian spirit and those womanly virtues which distinguished her in her daily life, and which so much endeared her to those who were so fortunate in claiming her acquaintance. Industrious and intelligent, of an affectionate and sympathetic nature, attractive, social and agreeable in disposition, she was a valuable member of society, an estimable lady, a true friend-command-WELL-evil-doers will come to grief, ing the highest respect, admiration and love from all those with whom she was the most closely allied and most intimately acquainted. So well pleased are the members of the Musical Convention with the method and style of their leader, Prof. S. W. Straub, that efforts are being well if more who are not members | made to secure his services in conducting a Normal here this summer. If these efforts are successful, as they certainly should and undoubtedly will be, the Normal will begin the last of June, to continue for three weeks, six hours a day, chorus class four nights a week-terms, $8 per scholar for full course. Prof. Straub will have two assistants from Chicago, and the occasion will be one of profit to those who attend. To secure the Normal it will be necessary to secure fifteen resident pupils, and to furnish boarding to nonresident pupils at $3 a week. Eor further particulars call on J. H. Roc.

> NEW INVENTION .- We have printed some circulars for the Champion Manufacturing Company-manufacturers of the Champion Carpet Stretcher and Tacker, N. H. Merrill, patentee. This machine is very simple in its construction and does the work to perfection. We now have the Excelsior, the Eureka, and the Champion Carpet Stretchers manufactured in Buchanan - all good stretchers-and the person who can't be suited with either of these should be content with the old fashioned way -a long stick with a few brads in one | them at proper time.

THE grand concert last Friday evening was in every respect a decided success. The singers all accquitted themselves creditably, and where all did so well particular mention of any is unnecessary. [From the Editor Three Rivers (Mich.) Reporter] A RELIABLE PHYSICIAN. - We have never been acquainted with a practitioner who makes a specialty of throat and lung diseases and kindred complaints who has been so uniformly successful as Dr. V. C. Price, whose regular visits we have chronicled for years. In every case that has come before him, Dr. Price has had the honesty to give the patient advice to give up if there was no help for him, and where the doctor believed that a proper course of treatment would save life or prolong it, he has taken hold of the case with an amount of perseverance and skill unsurpassed in medical practice in the West, and we venture to say not one case in a hundred fails of benefit when treated by Doctor Price. The doctor will be in person on his next visit at Niles, Reading House, during Saturday and Sunday, the 15th and 16th of May.

Toutine Life Insurance. "That tontine plan," of which so much has been said, is destined to be the popular plan. It was introduced by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States during the year 1868, and has become so popular that nearly one half of the policies issued by the Society are so taken. It provides for the widow and orphans, and creditor. It provides for the insured in old age, and as an investment it has no equal. To illustrate: (the following is vouched for) policy No. 45,103 for $10,000 was issued July 9, 1869, assured being 37 years old, Total amount paid in five years, $1,408.50. Accumu lated surplus, $725.33, or over 50 per cent. of the amount paid. Calculations have been made showing the experience of the past seven years, which prove that the accumulated surplus on policies of this class are larger than the dividends heretolore declared by any company on any plan of insurance on policies of the same age. THE GATHERING OF THE SHADOWS. Ahide with me ! first falls the eventide; The darknuss deepens. Lord, with me abilie; When other helpers fall, and conforts flee, if Help of the helpless, (* abide with me!

Boilt to its close this out life's fittle day; Earth's joy grow dim, its glories rass away; Change and decay in all around I see; O, though who changes not, abide with me!

Not a brief glance I beg, a passing word, But, at a father with his children, Lord, Tender, compassionate, to access free, Come, not to snjourn, but abide with me!

Come not in terrors, as the King of kings; But kind and good, with healing in thy wings; Pity for tears, a heart for every plea; Come, God of mercy, thus ubide will me! Thou on my head in early youth did smile,

And, than rebellious and perverse meanwhile, Than hast not left me, oft as I left thee; On to the close, O Lord, abide with me! I need thy presence every passing hour; What but thy grave can foll the tempter's power?

Who like thyself my guide and stay can be?
Through cloud and surabine, O, abide with me! I fear no foe, with thee on hand to bless: Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness; Where is death's sting? where, grave, thy victory? I triumph still, if thou abide with me! Come then in light before my closing eyes! Shine through the gloom, and point me to the Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;

In life and death, O Lord, abide with me;

The Proposed Revival. The proposal to begin a series of revival meetings in Chicage has been met with much encouragement, and the committee of ministers think the matter had better be deferred. There are some milusiastic persons who imagine that it is only necessary to hire a hall, get speakers and singers, and a revival will follow as a matter of course. But others, with more experience, know better. Certain conditions must be consulted in revivals ns in everything else. We think perhaps the committee was wise in the conclusion that those conditions were not favorable just now. Under the management of some persons a great interest in religious services could be developed even at this time, but this would be in spite of the unfavorable circumstances against which it would be necessary to contend. Wo do not profess to explain the cause of the phenomena but it is a fact that religious revivals in the late spring or in summer is almost unknown. Great meetings of this character, followed by success, generally begin and are prosecuted in winter. This is not owing to climatic influences, probably, but simply to the fact the winter is the least busy season of the year. It our religious views. The old-fashion style of worshiping God has become almost obsolete. Our views have become broader, more tolerant, to be sure, but perhaps with this toleration of little sins in others we have become more charitable toward our own. At any rate a change will come, Some of these days, and mor far in the fature either, in the midst of our thoughtlessness and worldly bickerings, the voice of some Whitfield, or Irving, or Moody, will startle us from our careless dreaming, and without any preliminary preparations, without any arrangement as to the time or place, or considerations regarding the fitness or suitableness of either, the work will begin. A necessary adjunct to the revival singing. It is hardly probable that Mr. Moody would have met with such success in England had it not been for the sweet-voiced singer who accompanies him. There is hardly a feeling of a passion of the human soul that cannot be roused or interpreted by music. The Marseillaise of the French in-
