The restless sense of wasted power,
The tiresome round of little things,
Are hard to bear, as hour by hour
Its tedious iteration brings; Who shall evade or who delay The small demands of every day?

We rise to meet a heavy blow— Our souls a sudden bravery fills— But we endure not always so The drop by drop of little ills; We still deplore and still obey. The hard behests of every day.

Poetry

EVERY DAY.

Oh, trifling tasks, so often done,
Yet ever to be done anew!
Oh, cares, which come with every sun,
Morn after mors, the long years through!
Weishrink beneath their paitry sway—
The irksome calls of every day.

The heart which boldly faces death
Upon the battle field, and dares
Cannon and bayonet, faints beneath
The needle points of frets and cares;
The stoutest spirits they dismay—
The tiny stings of every day.

And even saints of holy fame, Whose souls by faith have overcome Who wore amid the cruel flame
The moulten crown of martyrdom, The petty pains of every day.

Ah, more than martyr's aureole,
And more than hero's heart of fire,
We need the humble strength of soul Which daily toils and ills require; Sweet Patience, grant us, if you may, An added grace of every day.

Story.

From the Waverley Magazine. My Husband's Cousin's First Visit.

ANNA NEMOUS.

Last summer, whilst looking out for a place wherein to rusticate for two or three months after a gay winter, and preparatory to entering upon one still more gay on the opening of our new mansion on the "avenue" the coming season, my "beloved" suggested the propriety of taking "our girls" to stay at a farm house owned by a worthy uncle of his. He remembered the many pleasant days of his youth passed under the simple but hospitable roof of the farmer, and thought we could not better or more wisely pass our time than at his house. So after settling preliminaries and independences, &c., we joyously betook ourselves to our sylvan retreat.

The gentle manliness and repeated good sense of the farmer and his wife and their buxom and blooming daughter, all uncultivated as she was, proved pleasing diversion after the excitement and routine of fashionable life in the city. We enjoyed our freedom, spent hours in healthful walks and drives or rides on the back of "Dolly," getting up astonishing appetites for discoursing the goodly viands of the farmer's bountiful table.

The snowy table cloth, the fresh, sweet butter, the short cakes, the strawberries and cream, cottage cheese. fresh eggs and boiled chickens, to say nothing of the cakes of all kinds, the mere enumeration of which makes one's mouth water-all came duly in for a share of appraciative favor; and throwing off all but healthful and proper restraint, we gave ourselves up to the enjoyment of the season of private life to our mutual satisfaction. The farmer and his wife at first demurred at receiving such "fashionable" guests, saying they were plain folks, and didn't like "stuck up city folks;" however, on the assurance of my husband that we were very good natured and not at all stuck up, they took us in, and never did "home, sweet home" seem more fitting to be sung. But all things must come to an end, and so did our pleasant sojourn in the country. Our adieus were made amidst trunks, bundles and packages, and a sincere invitation, as cordially accepted as given, for Miss Sophronia Elizabeth, my husband's cousin, to make us a visit during the winter, and we parted.

We had just taken possession of our new house, and my two daughters. Ada and Edith, having finished the "course" at Madame Blanque's, were to "come out" on the opening of our new home, and be introduced into so-ciety by a grand ball. The important day arrived, for two weeks previous cards of invitation had been given out, and responses had been received from as many guests as our spacious saloons could contain, and all "went merry as a marriage bell," as the newspapers have it, when who should arrive, carpet-bag, bandboxes and all, but our country cousin, Sophronia Elizabeth; she had intended to give us a pleasant surprise. Alas! alas! what a sad dilemma did this unannounced and ill-timed visit put us in! Our invitation had been given in all sincerity; "our intentions were strictly honorable." The blooming, joyful girl literally flew into our arms in the most "robustest" manner, as my friend, Mrs. Kelly, would say. What to do with her was the question. What cowards we telt ourselves to be thus put out of our wits at the untimely appearance of this simple-minded country girl. Truly "conscience does make cowards of us all," to treat her with all due hospitality, to bring her to understand the "situation," unable "to change our base." Here was a predicament! After a short consultation - we knew there was no time for parleyto break the ice, to broach the matter as delicately as possible, and propose to prepare her a comfortable retreat. with all appurtenances for amusement airy-nothings, withal, local habitation and names sounded about us, giving an ethereal feeling to everything as if we trod on air. But down we came from our airy flight. Behold our Nemesis! There, in full regalia, sat

Miss Sophronia Elizabeth, in ample hoop, blue ribbons and pink flowers; her flounced dress and tremendous, her flounced dress and tremendous, etary panic. In the year 1873 Mr. array of ornaments, not omitting. Shanafelt, of Philadelphia, visited watch and chain, rendered her an object once seen long to be remembered.
"I know'd you'd be surprised; but I aint bashful; you needn't think I am. I asked that genteel nigger and he told me all about it. So sez I to Land. At Jerusalem he expressed a myself, "taint no use to trouble Cousin idesire to cross the Jordan, and proceed Sally to fix for me up stairs; I'll dress up and take care of myself.' And here I am. These folks don't know me, so I needn't care, you know." "Ah! no—indeed!" I stuttered he determined to make the trip with forth; "we'll try to make you enjoy a native guide as his sole companion.

"That I will; you may bet your life on that," returned she, in her pleasant, ringing voice, which resounded in my ears like a kettle drum. "I'm real glad I came just in the nick of time. I guess I'll stick close to you and the girls, and you can tell me the folks' names as they come along."

"Ah! but, my dear, that will not do," said I. "My daughters and I must receive, and it will not be proper for you to sit with us. Allow me to provide for you here.'

"Oh, I aint bashful. Can't I help woh, I aint bashful. Can't I help you introduce folks to each other? I know how real well, I can tell you. Why, when we gave our minister a donation party, I took it all on myself. I jestsaid, Mrs. Sparrow—Mrs. Sharp; Mrs. Sharp—Mrs. Sparrow, and so on. So you see I know how." What a situation it was for us

Thanks to dressing-room delays, I managed to settle the matter in time. "Ah! but, my dear that will not do here; that is not etiquette, and I fear you will find yourself embarrassed by the full toilettes of our guests and fashionable formalities."

"Ah! no, indeed, I don't care anything for them, and they don't care anything for me. I'm real glad I came; I'll have a nice time, so don't worry, aunty, about me. You do look real handsome, though, and so do the girls. But I ain't jealous; I'll walk about and take care of myself; I'll tell the folks I'm your husband's cousin, and that'll make it all right." And thus she prepared innocently enough to make herself the observed of all observers without a thought of doing anything out of the way. Imagine the feelings and looks of despair enjoyed by myself and daughters! But the blessed music struck up and brought harmony into our home and hearts, and I forgot, for the time being, more exation and mortification.

Beautiful girls in beautiful toilets soon fluttered in, accompanied by exquisites most irreproachably "gotten ip." Music and the dance soon silenced us and we mingled with our guests. Occasionally uneasy thoughts disturbed my brain as to the whereabouts of "our friend." I intended to treat her with the utmost kindness; notwithstanding the misery and tumult she had subjected me to. There she sat as blooming as a full-blown cabbage rose, happily unconscious of being or doing anything mal appropos As I passed near her she seized my hand, taking the opportunity to cry out,-"You see, Aunt Sally, I'm making myself quite at home; it's real nice; you needn't be ashamed of anything. don't believe anybody's folks could do better. I tell you I'm real proud of you." This last she had the grace to say in a whisper. I managed to escape by giving her a nod of understanding and passed on. I could hear her still talking to herself as it were, "How lucky I am! I always did want to see a real stylish party or ball as they call it, and this aint no dull

Won't I have lots to tell our folks? I'm real glad I came! And there she sat, enjoying her own pleasant state of mind utterly unconscious and unmindful of the trial to which she was subjecting me. Oh, how I regretted our last summer's visit, my good-natured and thoughtless invitation, and this terrible ordeal. When I saw her almost beautiful in her child-like unconsciousness, I had reasoned myself somewhat out of my uncomfortable feeling and anxiety on her account, But alas! my troubles were not at an end! She was asked to waltz. I tremblingly listened, for Iknew that my country belle, although quite fair to look upon and very good at an occasional response, in this com-pany of exaggerated exquisites she might not deport herself quite equal to the occasion. Imagine my horror turn round and round in a polker; though I ain't got nothing agin it, only it always makes me sick, it roally does; I always throw up if I only spin around once or twice. on, Mr. Fitz Whisper's face, and the innocent carnestness of my country

Recently the Rev. Mr. Shanafelt, of Hudson. Mich., was summoned to Philadelphia to attend the funeral of his brother, at the time of his death pastors of a Baptist church in that city. The announcement of his death recalls an incident of the recent mon-Europe with a party of knights templar. After visiting the places of greatest interest the party broke up, but Mr. Shanafelt continued his journey, with a few others, to the Holy through the forests and over the mountains of Lebanon to Beyrout. None of the party would accompany

The journey was attended with many difficulties. It was necessarily tedious, and for the last few days they were on short rations. They came in sight of Beyrout in the early part of the day, and, as their eyes rested on the city, they promised themselves a good dinner that day to make amends for the enforced abstemiousness of the preceding days. As they entered the city they saw a ship riding at anchor in the harbor, and Mr. Shanafelt was pleased to find the means at hand for his speedy departure for Paris, where the greater part of his effects had been left, and where he expected to find letters from home. At the hotel, when dinner was announced. Mr. Shanafelt found himself seated at the table, with an English gentleman opposite. The Englishman remarked:

'You are an American?" "Yes," replied Mr. Shanafelt, "I have been in Palestine and the wilderness for several weeks, and only arrived at Beyrout this morning, and do not know what has been going on in the outside world for a considerable time."

"You have not heard then of the panic in your country?" said the Englishman. "No, I have not; pray what about

"Why," resumed the Englishman, great banker has failed and carried down many business houses with him; there is a general suspension of business and bread riots have occurred in all the great cities. "What is the banker's name?" asked Mr. Shanafelt. The Englishman could not remember, but after thinking awhile said: "It is the banker who negotiated the Government bonds." "Not Jay Cooke?" exclaimed Mr. Shanafelt.

"I believe that is the name," said the Englishman.

Although Mr. Shanafelt had gone to the table with a ravenous appetite and had not tasted a morsel of food, his appetite was suddenly gone; his letters of credit were signed by Jay Cooke & Co.; he was more than four thousand miles from home, with only two dollars' worth of the small coin of that country in his pockets. He arose from the table, and wandering down a principal street, came to a banking house. He stepped in and handed his letters of credit to the clerk in charge. The man looked at them a moment and then shook his head. Neither could understand the language of the other, but that ominous shake of the head and the accompanying look of commiseration told Mr. Shanafelt that he was a destitute stranger in a foreign land. He applied to the American consul, told his story, obtained sympathy, but no money or other material aid. He recollected that there was an American mission and college in the city, and that he had made the acquaintance of one of the missionary professors in Palestine. Thither he went, but they too could give only pity; they had no money to spare. He returned to his hotel, and made his situation a special subject of prayer. He was soon upon the streets again, walking along with downcast eyes, so great was his distress that he had no courage to look up. While thus walking his eye caught sight of a Maltese cross pendant from his watch chair. The thought occurred to him that there must be masons here; if it is ever proper to make use of the order it is proper now. Returning to the hotel he asked for a guide to take him to some of the most prominent business men of the city. Entering the store of one of these he requested a private interview. It was granted and a few moments sufficed to satisfy him that the merchant was, a mason, and he made that appeal which he had been taught would be of avail under such circumstances. The merchant looked at him in seeming astonishment for a few moments and then said: "State your wants." the tale was soon told, and when ended swung back the door of his private vault, and laying out some bags of coin; said: "I would willingly give you enough for your needs, but there is another man in the city who wants to give you half.24

"I was born in the United States and lived in Philadelphia, and while there became a member of St. John's Commandery. I came to Europe, and after wandering around for a time, I settled here and commenced business. I was prosperous, and at length adopted the customs, the habits and dress of the natives. But, said the merchant, you are going home through Europe, and will see many things you will want to buy, and he pressed money upon him much in excess of his actual needs. That evening the two merchants brought several of the brethren to Mr. Shanafelt's room at the hotel, and caused a banquet to be served in his honor. They assembled again the next morning and escorted him to the ship and took leave of him in his stateroom, which, by their considerate kindness, had been provided with everything necessary for his comfort, and well stored with the delicious fruits of that country .- Hudson Cor. OVER THE WAY.

Over the way, over the way, I've seen a head that's fair and gray; I've seen kind eyes not new to tears, A form of grace, though full of years.

A form of grace, though full of years.

Her fifty summers have left no flaw,

And I, a youth of twenty-three,

So love this lady, fair to see,

I want her for my mother-in-law!

Over the way, over the way, I've seen her with the children play, I've seen her with a royal grace Before the mirror adjust her lace; A kinder woman none ever saw; God bless and cheer her onward path, And bless all treasures that she hath, And let her be my mother-in-law

Over the way, over the way,
I think I'll venture, dear, some day.
(If you will lend a helping hand,
And sauctify the scheme I've planned)
I'll kneel in loving, reverent awe, Down at the lady's feet, and say: "I've loved your daughter many a day-

Truth Will Out.

Please, won't you be my mother-in-law?"

Jakey, His Ma, and the Sunday School Teacher. Jakey crept up and sat down by his mother's side as she was looking out of the window yesterday morning. After a few minutes of silence he broke out with-

"Well, if you must go poking into every thing, I'll tell vou. new teacher says to me, 'What's your name, my little man?' and when I said Jacob, he asked me if I ever heard of old Jacob, and I thought that was pa's name, so I told him guessed I had, but I'd like to hear what he had to say about him. He said old Jacob used to be a little boy once, just like me, and had stilts and

"The wretch!" ejaculated Mrs.

Watts, shaking her fist at M. Watt's old slipper. "He said old Jacob had a dozen or two children, and—with all appurtenances for amusement above-stairs, promising to run up during the evening when we could steal away to see how she fared. So time passed. Everything was in readiness, and in the retirement. Of our dressing rooms we prepared for the reception of our guests.

Nine o'clock, so said the invitations. Nine o'clock so said the invitations and we repaired to the drawing room to receive our guests, my daughters locking as fairy-like and fair, as there he could gas fairy-like and fair, as there he could gas fairy-like and fair, as the receptions, day aring the evening of trial, and my country in the season occurse he had pursued at two weeks visit; but the bare-recoil the same course he had pursued at two weeks visit; but the bare-recoil the same course he had pursued at two weeks visit; but the bare-recoil the same course he had pursued at two weeks visit; but the bare-recoil the same course he had pursued at two weeks visit; but the bare-recoil the same course he had pursued at two same course he had pursued at the same course he had pur the larder. Later in the day Mrs. Lewis hap happened in and Mrs. Watts confided to her the story of her husband's villainy. Of course Mrs. Lewis was very Mrs. Watts with the necessity of being philosophical, and left with the observation that she had never yet seen rascal.

Towards evening Jakey was sitting on the steps, having recovered from Sunday school teacher chanced to be passing that way, and Jake hailed

"Say, Mister, I told my mother, what you told me about old Jacob, last night, and there has been the old scratch to pay ever since. Ma called pa a villain, and a bloody thief, and, tried to break her back on the sofa, and said there wouldn't be anything to eat, and there haint been such a time since pa offered to kiss Aunt Jane good-bye. Maybe you had better drop in and see the old lady; she aint so bad as she was."

The teacher, after some pressing, accompanied Jakey into the house, and was presented to Mrs. Watts in the parlor.

Mrs. Watts began to thank him for disclosing her husband's perfidy, but he disclaimed having done anything of the kind, and at length, after considerable talking, it was discovered that Jakey had misapplied the story of the patriarch Jacob.

Mrs. Watts started right out to find Jacob, and when she found him, astonished him again by being as loving as she had been distant. Jakey is contented in the fact that there is no immediate prospect of a lack of supplies in the family, and Mrs. Watts would be perfectly happy if she could only shut Mrs. Lewis' mouth.

Mr. Phineas T. Barnum, on being inaugurated as Mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., delivered a short address. Concluding he said: It is painful to the industrious and moral portions of our people to see so many loungers about the streets, and such a multitude whose highest aspirations seem to be to waste their time in idleness or at base-ball, billiards, etc. No person needs to be unemployed who is not over fastidious about the kind of occupation. There are too many soft hands (and heads) waiting for light work and heavy pay. Better work for half a loaf than beg or steal a whole one. Airing Bed Rooms.

The most desolate looking, sick melling, and every way repulsive looking room in most houses in cold weather is the cold, unventilated bed room. The prevalent notion is that if it is cold it does not need ventilation; and the next thing is to caulk up the windows, so that they do not get open by any chance.

This is all wrong. Other things being equal, cold air is more invigorating than warm air, because more condensed, and therefore cold air in the bed room is to be preferred during the night. It is also true that cold air may be impure; and warm rooms need ventilation even in winter. If ths room is warm, the air, being colder than in warm weather, rushes in more eagerly, and we feel it more keenly, and that misleads us to think that we need not take care to ventilate rooms in cold weather. All this being true, a fire in the room helps ventilation, especially an open fire, and it is well to have fire enough to take the chill off the air and bedding every evening. It may even be kept going all night, provided you have some window or ventilator open. If you have not been accustomed to sleep with the window open begin with a very small opening, and then gradually increase it, but do not let the wind blow directly on you. If you feel it and cannot avoid it, turn your face to it. In the morning, just as you are vacating the bed room, throw it open, and all the more if there has been no

A. B. Allen sounds the praises of orchard grass as follows, in the New York Tribune:

"This is the best pasture crop grown, and is nearly equal to timothy for hay, if cut early, just as it begins to blossom. It comes forward from two to three weeks carlier than all der in them aint proporshuned to the | other grasses usually growing among us, with the exception of clover, and Wit makes a very good gravy, but it remains green latest of all in autumn. It gives the largest amount of forage per annum, and best endures a drouth. It can be grown on any land, but the soil ought to be pretty rich, or else highly manured, to obtain a good crop. The ground must be well cleared of weeds, deeply plowed and finely pulverized by the harrow, before sowing the seed. Then sow as early in the spring as possible; sow at the rate of two and a half to three bushels per acre, brush in and

> Parents, above all things, says ex-President Hill of Harvard College, should have regard for the physical capacities of children. No machinery is so delicate in its structure, or is called upon to produce work so fine as the endurance of school children. Their capacities of endurance are very limited at the age when the faculties are developing. There is more danger to be apprehended from long continuance in study than from close application for a brief period. In this particular, half is better than the

If you would govern well, have but few general rules, but steadily adhere to these. Do not have a rule and a penalty for every act of childish forgetfulness or carelessness; for leaving the door open, for letting a dish fall, for playing too boisterously, for asking questions when you are busy. But have a fixed rule as to prompt obedience, speaking the truth, and all moral duties; and never pass easily by an act of willful disobedience, or a lie, or a theft. No matter if you are in ever so great a hurry, stop and attend to this. It is infinitely more important than your ordinary affairs. Make a great matter of it, for God does, and it may, one day, prove a great matter to you and your children.

Some of the Democratic journals throughout the State say that through the present system of advertising the sale of lands for delinquent taxes, the price has been raised from 40 cents to 90 cents per description. The Lansing Republican, in commenting upon these gross miss-tatements, gives a full and succinct history of the different laws which have been enforced in Michigan pertaining to this subject. At first the list was printed by the State, under the direction of the Auditor, and each County Treasurer was supplied with five copies of all the delinquent taxes in the State. In 1842 the law was changed so that each County Treasurer was furnished enough of these copies to supply himself with two copies and one copy to each of the Township Clerks in the County. The County Treasurer advertised and sold the lands for taxes. In 1843 the Auditor General was directed to furnish sufficient copies of the delinquent tax list to supply each County Treasurer with three, each County Clerk with one, each Township Treasurer with one, and to give notice through one paper in the County that such lists were left on deposit with the County Treasurer. In 1844 the Auditor General was required to publish the delinquent tax sales in each County, in one newspaper printed in the County, for eight weeks, at a cost not to exceed 30 cents for each description of land to be sold. The law remained principally the same until 1858, when the price for advertising was increased to 40 cents for each description. In 1873 the time of advertising was reduced to four weeks. nothing was allowed for the caption, two copies containing advertisement to be sent to the Auditor General and two to each County Treasurer in the State. The price remained the same it had been for over fifteen years, viz: to not exceed 40 cents for each description. The costs charged by the State to each tax payer for the past five years has been $1.50, but the last Legislature reduced the amount to $1.00.

This, then, is the whole history of this matter. There never was a time when the State paid 90 cents for advertising the tax sales. It is no difficult matter for one to see from the above how the present system of advertising and selling lands for taxes came to be adopted At first there were many counties containing no newspapers and but few inhabitants. The sending of lists of tax sales to each Township Clerk was sufficient to stand that I intend to work so strong bring notice before the people. There | for the good and useful that by and ing to the State, as the sales were few but little trouble. The settlement on bigger things. and development of the State required the changes that have been made until now the tax sales of each County are advertised in a paper published in the County, and all can have an opportunity to learn what lands are to be sold each year for taxes. The papers throughout the State that have been discussing this question do not find fault with our present system of advertising tax sales, which is really of Democratic origin, so much on account of the expense attending it, as that the advertising contracts are usually let to Republican papers. These journals are always gushingly non-partisan in regard to matters pertaining to those localities where the Democratic party has no patronage at its disposal.

WHERE SHALL THE MONEY GO

At the time of the great Chicago fire in 1871, a large collection of fine pictures were contributed by French and German artists to be sold for the relief of the sufferers of that city. The pictures were shipped to New York, sold for $40,000, and the money placed in the hands of Ex-Gov. Morgan. In the mean time the donations of the people were fully ample to allay the distress occasioned by the fire, and the Mayor of Chicago sent word to Gov. Morgan that the city was provided for and that no further help was needed. This left Gov. Morgan with $40,000 in his hands, and not knowing exactly to whom it belonged, or what to do with it, the money was deposited in his bank in

New York city. No one can accuse Gov. Morgan with any intention to misappropriate this money, but several gentlemen of Chicago are getting uneasy about the is not by rushing rills of water, but matter, and think that he has retained by soakage and travel. This occurrance forms a strange event connected with the history of the great fire, and as such we give it to our readers.

In Holvoke, Mass., a church caught fire while filled with people, and in the jam and struggle to escape, the way was entirely blocked, and over one hundred lives are reported to have been lost. The only means of exit was a narrow door, and it swung on the inside. In the rush the door was closed and the means of escape entirely cut off.

BERRIEN SPRINGS. June 1. EDS. RECORD :- I have traveled a good deal with dad on a loaded lumber wagon, and with our folks in the buggy. And I have studied the roads just as I do my lesson in school, in which I keep my eyes open, and keep seeing things. I have talked to the old man how men don't know how to make roads, till I have got sick of it, and I guess he has got sick of it, and I guess he has got sick of hearing me. Says

"Rob., you have got a touch of the big-head. What do you know about men's business?"

"Dad," says I, "haint I got eyes? Can't I see the shape and the work of things just as well as you or uncle Pete can? Can't I see when a road is made and left so that it will be drained in the middle of the road track, and must be driven over six months or more in the year? Can't I see and feel the jolt of the wagon over a big stone, or the jounce over slabs that have been covered over like a hypocrite, thinking that the evil will never come to light? Don't I see that stump yonder, half rotten and easily grubbed, standing in the edge of the track for the wagon to pound against and bound from every time it passes? Don't our good and faithful old horses, Tom and Bill, know and feel all these things? But they can never say a word about it, and that is what makes it so monstrous for us men to let such things be."

I wish Bergh would come along here with his humane law, and fine the biggest part of the overseers of roads in Berrien county and the State for their stupid ignorance and neglect in making roads which amount to cruelty to animals, as well as other folks. If they worked as stupidly on their farms, the Grangers would turn them out of their church and they ought to do it, we boys would all cheer big at the act.

But here comes George Stout and Joe Covert, and here is a stump, and I propose to mount it and make you a stump speech on road-making, considering you the road overseers of the State. I want your attention, in fact I will have it, for I give you to underthey happen to think of it—and then and purchasers could be obtained with I shall probably make a stump speech

I seem to see you think-"Oh. pshaw! you are nothing but a boy, yet, but we will hear you just for fun." I know I am a boy, but I have eyes and ears, and can't I think some, as boys may? I want you to know that I set my mark high, and intend to go to the Legislature of Michigan, as soon as I get big enough, and just on the south, in every city, village and here and now is where I am going to town in this broad land of ours lie sleeplearn how to do it. I shall introduce a bill to create a Superintendent of Road-Making in each township of the State, whose business it shall be to see that the roads are made right. Until then you should learn and practice what the law supposes you to know already. Gentlemen Overseers, you will soon call out your men to work the roads. Your first point should be to see where repairs are most needed, and then how in loathsome prisons, sick, sore, starved, best to do the work. You assume that the work and repairs are to last the traveling public a year. Do you estimate the wear of travel, and work and tear of the soakage and drainage of water in that time? Do you foresee and provide for the discharge of the water of thaws and rain floods? And now let me say to you in the most polite and delicate manner in the world, that a road made up hill or down hill, without sluices and ample side drains, is not worth three skips of a louse; but amounts to a continual torture to animals, and a vexation

Drainage, drainage, is the alpha and omega, as our preacher says, in road-making-do you hear? In all my boy scoots in this state, I have seen few, if any, turnpike roads that were made right. You must remember that the injury to level roads must be made so as to be drained sideways, or the track will be soaked and to a perfect oval, and do not fear carrying the dirt to the middle-horses' as you generally do. After you have will do you honor, run a farm roller your hand. Watch how that road will be drained sideways, and no mudholes growing larger and deeper in it, and above all, notice the happy men and women riding over it, and the happier horses drawing the vehicles.

If you do not want the water to make a ditch for you to travel in over a hill, make your turnpike high in the middle, particularly over the hills. Don't forget to make a deep and good drain ditch on each side. Don't make a turnpike road in the fall unless you are fond of traveling through deep mud in the fall and spring.

Dig out the stone in the road track theatres, halls and churches so that wood in the road-bed, and not play the and forgetful of our duty to the living as

Should good men provide little fountains for you on the way, would you not pray for the largest sized blessings to be showered upon them? Think of the horses that move swiftly before carriages, or the faithful team horses that draw a heavy wagon with a ton or two of lading, for many weary miles, and not a watering trough provided for them. You ought to be ashamed of it. It is believed that sins against horses will stand high on the day of judgment. So please stop cracking your whip at the horses, and crack away at yourselves without ceasing,

Some of them fell gloriously in battle and rendered up their lives to their country, their souls to their God. Others there were who fell by the way-side in weary marches, or whose eyes grew dim and spirits fled from camp or hospital and whose names adorn no battle roll. Many, very many, suffered emaciated, and breathed their lives away. praying for friends far, far away, and asking God to protect and preserve the Union. Strong and manly soldiers once, their wounded limbs and shattered bodies as they have passed away, are held and revered, and doubly precious. All "honor, then, to our patriot dead!" The nation mourns her warriors slain, and weeps over the rivers of blood which have reddened its southern plains, and to-day we convene here in this resting place of some of our gallant defenders to place upon these grassy mounds "flowers, sweet flowers," garlands fresh and beautiful, as a token of that regard which is due from a nation to her sons who have so gallantly and nobly defended our homes and hearthstones in order that the great principles underlying this, the best government that God ever gave to man, might become a living truth, in order that the Declaration of our fathers, made almost one hundred

THE BERRIEN SPRINGS Journal says:

Rev. J. F. Morris, of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, of this place, formerly tenders his resignation to the Church this Saturday a week. We understand Mr. Morris has a call to some Church in the State of Indiana, with greatly increased salary...... We understand Mr. John Burk, who lives on the Niles road some two or three miles from town, who had the misfortune to loose his large new residence by fire last winter, has a new house nearly completed. It is some smaller than the former dwelling, but a very fine style of architecture ..... A hasty trip through our county — the town-ships of Oronoko, Niles, Buchanan, Bertrand, Galien, Three Oaks, New Buffalo, etc. satisfies us, that, indeed, Berrien county is the garden of the State. While all over the State the wheat crop has been seriously damaged by the severe cold weather, in Berrien county the wheat crop was not damaged as in other counties in the State, but is far superior to what it was last year, and bids fair for the largest yield to the acre ever before known. There is no exception in fruits except peaches and blackberries; and there will be a torerable yield of peaches and blackberries in some parts of the county. Apples, cherries, pears, &c., never bid fairer for an abundant yield. The spring has been very backward of course, and the putting in of spring crops has been very much delayed; but we have no reason to doubt but there will be an abundant harvest of everything. Grass looks splendid. It is nearly knee high already. We observed many new buildings going up in the country through which we passed, and the towns, generally, look prosperous. At New Buffalo, peach trees generally were in the most favorable condition we have ever seen anywhere, except here and there an orchard. THE BENTON HARBOR Palladium says: A Clandestine wedding took place in St. Joseph, on Monday, between two of Benton Harbor folks, Mr. William Martindale and Miss Dora Dewey. For better or worse..... Mrs. Rachael Cronkhite attempted suicide on Tuesday, in the canal near William's mill. Mr. O. D. Rector, who was in the mill at the time, rescued her, and she was taken by Mr. Sorter in his buggy to her friends in St. Joseph. Her trunk was found at a saloon where it was no doubt been pawned for liquor. Whatever might have, been the immediate cause of this attempted, self-murder, it is but another entry on that endless list of crimes caused by the rum traffic.

Circuit Court begins next Tuesday with a light calendar. But four criminal causes are on the docket, with lawing.

FROM NEW TROY, May 28. EDS. RECORD :- It seems that your correspondent from this town has ceased to take notes and report. Like other communities, ours has its history, some fragments of which may be of interest to your readers. Farmers and land-owners are more actively engaged than at any previous year in improving and cultivating their land. Acres that have been for years open commons, are being fenced and planted. Fields that for some time past produced only brush and briars, are being cleared off, and the ground broken up and prepared for crop growing. Many, I think, will profit by the experience of the few who have grown fruit so profitably in these parts. Many large patches of strawberries are being planted, and quite a number of new orchards have been started this spring. These all show that land-owners are waking up. to their best interests.

Our school, which has been so ably superintended during the present year by Prof. Ross, closes to-day. believe it is generally conceded that the present year's school has been the most satisfactory of any since the occupancy of the new building. Our Board of Trustees are making an effort to retain Prof-Ross another year. Have not learned of his acceptance of their proposition.

Business in our town seems to be in more prosperous condition than for some time past. Our merchant says he is doing a larger proportion of cash business than ever before since he has been in the place. The panic which so depressed for a time, has been the means of accomplishing great good for us, by largely doing away with the credit system, which has been so ruinous to all parties that were engaged

Toledo, O., May 25, 1875. EDS. RECORD: - We are, having beautiful weather in Ohio. The spring has seemed, and all have called it, backward. Cold winds have prevailed. Vegetation has been slow to put forth. Farmers had more time than usual before spring's work hurried them, but now all are encouraged and prospects are good for the annual fulfillment of the old promise. Seed-time with its warm skies and sweet breezes is here. When the season comes, doubtless harvest will crown the year. When it fails we will begin to "stick a pin there." The tone is changed, as is usual when all the wished for developments are slow. People were despondent. First we heard, "All the wheat is killed." Speculators really began to reap their harvest from the pretense. And when the warm rains scattered that we were assured "we should raise no fruit this year." All the germs were destroyed by the cold weather. Now it is conceded that the prospect in this state is good, full average or more for a full crop of all fruits except peaches. It is claimed these are killed, even the trees winter killed to a serious ex-work with some of the streets, raising in one place, cutting down in others. This process of improvement will doubtless add much to the permanent beauty and convenience of the city, but upon property, residences, lots, shade trees, fences and structures already erected, it makes sad havoc. putting all former arrangements out of gear, leaving some dwellings up over head from the street they were supposed to stand upon, so that occupants who were in the habit of walking into their front doors must now make their entrance by climbing. And others, several feet below the street, with side-walk on a level with the chamber windows: And the pleasanthess is enhanced by notice of the amount assessed upon the estates so ruthlessly invaded, to pay for the invasion, and a lien upon the property holds them to the engagement. The fact seems to be that Toledo, by reason of its uneven surface, has more of this sort of expense and inconvenience than most cities. Some streets, as nature laid the surface, are high and well drained; others low and ill-drained and they want them alike as much as practicable. It involves immense cost and great disappointment in some cases, some individuals being compelled actually to sell their property to defray these expenses made for public improvement. But it is claimed.

Toledo keeps itself agitated upon new railroads, some of which, for a good while ut aleast, get no farther than the neitation. Railroads have determined it to be a point of large trade, and every year is adding to its list. The lake gives us nice cooling

This city will be well represented in the commencement exercises of the Indiana Asbury University, at Greenat liberty. He was found five days castle, opening June 17th, and continuing until June 24th. Hon. John Brownfield will attend as Trustee, and and Rev. H. A. Gobin as Visitor. John Brownfield, Jr., will read the quinquennial poem for the Platonean Society, and Rev. H. A. Buchtel will deliver the master's oration before the graduating class. The old slave case which caused > such a furore among our citizens some years since has been resurrected by Amiable M. Lapierre bringing suit in the United States District Court, at Indianapolis, against Joseph Henderson and Lott Day, for contribution. Lapierre was one of the defendants in the original suit brought by John Norris, a slaveholder, for the recovery of damages, and his property was sold with that of others, to satisfy the judgment. He now sues Henderson & Day, the present owners of the property, to whom it came, it is claimed, through an illegal sale, and asks judgment to the amount of the proportion of Day in the original judgment. Anderson & Matthews appear for the defendant, and are confident that his title cannot be disturbed. From the Cassopolis Vigilant.

Yesterday we were shown a piece of Gen. George Washington's original coffin, produced by Miss Achsah H. Woodsom, while on a visit to Mt. J. Fellows, Umpire. WARNER BRO'S Calculating Engine was on exhibition in this village a few days last week, and we availed ourselves of the opportunity of witnessing this truly wonderful invention. Those who have not seen this Engine, and observed its capacity in making various mathematical computations, will be reluctant at first, as we were, in believing the statements which have been published in regard to it. We are thoroughly convinced, however, that the Calculating Engine was constructed upon settled and fixed principles, and is capable of producing results through a system, different from any special object that the inventor could have had in view originally. "He built better that he knew." If machines like this can be manufactured at a reasonable expense they will come into practical use and be considered almost indispensible in counting houses, banks, insurance offices and wherever extensive mathematical calculations have to be made. As a fine piece of mechanism and in its complications it is truly a wonder in its present condition and should be seen by every person who has an opportunity of doing so.

HAIL STORM .- This vicinity was. visited by a severe hail storm on Wednesday afternoon of this week. The storm lasted about twenty minutes, and the largest hail stones fell that were ever seen in this country. Our Marshal secured one that measured 23 in. in length. Mr. LeRoy Dodd one that measured, sometime after the shower, 62 in. in circumference. Mr. Noble one that measured over 5 inches in circumference, and many fell that would weigh one ounce and over. The ground was white with them. We have not learned yet whether. any considerable damages was done to crops, but conclude that the wheat in places must have been beaten down and cut up badly. No damage was done in this place that becoming celebration in Buchanan.

Decoration day was observed with

Preparations were timely undertaken by the committee, W. I. Himes, in of several patriotic ladies, whose names we regret we did not get, that we might present them in letters of gold. Flowers were abundantly furnished to show due respect to the fallen brave, without any sectional distinction. The weather was beautiful, and Heaven seemed to smile upon the acts of the tender-hearted, loving, brave men, fair women, and innocent lovely youth who thronged the ceme-try and scattered floral tributes, rare and fragrant, over the soldiers graves. The column was formed promptly at 9 a. m., composed of the Buchanan Brass Band, Clergy, Speakers and Common Council, the soldiers numbering about forty, the Fire Department, the Musical Union, and a long procession of citizens on foot besides some thirty wagons filled with people, which, if in the column, would have made a string nearly one mile in length. With his accustomed pariotics. ism, Capt. B. E. Binns unfurled the Stars and Stripes from his flag staff to show his devotion, not only to his was much larger than anticipated. The address delivered by the Hon. E. Ma Plimpton, which is given to our readers in another column, was a masterly production, and was a fitting emblem in honor of the dead brave. The Musical Union gave two beautiful pieces, with powerful effect, and the Band played a dirge while the column marched through the cemetry and strewed their mementoes on the graves of the soldiers, after which the columns formed in line of march, the band playing the funeral dirge, and thus proceeded to the old cemetry where an open square was again formed and Mr. N. Johnson, better known as "California Johnson," was unexpectedly (by him) called out and gave a short extempore address, that caused not a few tears to flow; and which filled every heart with the solemnity of the occasion. The procession was again formed and marched to the place of starting where the Band gave another of their choice selections and the column broke ranks and dispersed, having been gone just the allotted time - from

WE made a short visit of inspection at the County poor farm, on Wednesday of last week. We were kindly received by the new keeper, Mr. Wheeler, and his estimable lady, and were by them shown throughout the der in every department. The entire building, from cellar to garret, has received a thorough cleaning, and the rooms, bedding, furniture and everything have been put in the very best the whereabouts of of shape. Mr. Wheeler has correct suitably rewarded. ideas in regard to the management of an institution of this kind, and any one would be convinced, from the appearance of things, that he is complete master of the situation. We are of the opinion that a better man, for the management of the poor, this County has never had since its first organization. There are at present forty inmates of the poor house, three of whom are insane and have to be confined in cells. It is to be regretted that these unfortunate persons cannot be transferred to the asylum for proper treatment. When our new asylum is completed it is to be hoped that accom-modations will be afforded for all of at present on the farm twenty-five all we ask. acres of corn, twenty-six acres of wheat, five of potatoes, two of beans, twenty-five of meadow, four of orchard, and twelve of pasture. The growing crops all look well, and the products of the farm this season, under the management of Mr. Wheeler, will doubtless go a great ways towards dethe county poor.

Public Discussion-We had the pleasure of attending a literary entertannment at Niles city, on Monday evening last, the principal feature of which was a debate between three members of the Philo Ponian Literary Society, of this village, and three of the Philomathean Society of Niles. The subject discussed was stated thus: Resolved. That we have good reasons to believe that the United States will decay as did the nations of antiquity. Messrs. Roe, Fuller and Smith, of this place, on the affirmative, and Messrs. Potter, Jackson and Lambert, of Niles, on the negative. Hon. E. M. Plimpton, of Buchanan, Hon. J. E. Johnson, of Niles, Rev. Jay Huntington, of Niles, acted as judges. The hall was crowded, and everything went off in the best of order. We were well pleased with everything except the decision which was given in favor of the negative—the popular side of the question. We think the argument was best presented by the affirmative, and was decidedly in the preponderance. Every one present with whom we conversed on the subject was of the same opinion. we have learned of except breaking The boys all did well and we trust that the public discussions yet to be held between these Societies may pass off as pleasantly and as creditably to those who may engage in Manhood: How Lost, How Restored. Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatornease in the radical cure (without medicine) of Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Ephaersy and Firs, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only six conts.
The colebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicane or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what. his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

En This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

SUNDAY SAUNTERINGS.

OUR HYMN. Blest hour, when earthly cares resign Their empire o'er the anxious breast, While all around the calm divine Proclaims the holy day of rest, Blest hour, when God himself draws nigh, Well pleased his people's voice to hear, To hush the penitential sigh, And wipe away the mourner's tear. Blest hone, for where the Lord resorts, Foretastes of future bliss are given, And mortals find his earthly court The house of God, the gate of Heaven.

Contentment-4 Short Sermon by the Genial Angier. And these thoughts shall be told you, that you also may join with me in thankfulness to the giver of every good and perfect gift for our happiness. And that our present happiness may appear to be the greater, and we the more thankful for it, I will beg you to consider with me how many do even at this very time, lie under the torment of the stone, the gout and the toothache; and this we are free from. And every misery that I miss is a new mercy, and therefore, let us be thankful, There have been others that have met disasters of broken limbs; some have been blasted; others thunderstruck, and we have been freed from these and all those many other missions that threatened human nature: let us therefore rejoice and be thankful. Nay, which is a far greater mercy, we are free from the unsupportable burthen of an accusing conscience, a misery that none can bear and therefore let us praise Him for His preventing grace, and say, every misery that I miss is a new mercy. Nay, let me tell you there may be many that have forty times our estate that would give the greatest part of it to be healthful and cheerful like us; who with the expense of a little moncy have eat, and drank, and angled, and sung, and slept securely; and rose next day and cast away care, and sung, and laughed, and angled again; which are blessings rich men cannot purchase with all their money. Let me tell you, I have a rich neighbor who is always so busy that he has no leigure to laugh; the whole business of his life is to get money, and more money, that he may still get more money; but he considers not that it is not in the power of riches to make a man happy; for it was wisely said by a man of great observation that "there be as many miseries beyond riches as this side of them." And yet God deliver us from pinching poverty, and grant that, having a competency, we may be contented and thankful. Let us not repine or so much as think the and restless nights, even when others sleep quietly. Let me tell you that Diogenes walked on a day with his friend to see a country fair, where he saw ribbons and looking-glasses, and nut crackers, and fiddles, and hobbyhorses, and many other gimcracks; and having observed them he said to his friend, "How many things are there in this world of which Diogenes hath no need!" And truly it is so, or might be so, with very many who vex and toil themselves to get what they have no need of. I know a man that had health and riches and several houses, all beautiful and ready furnished, and would often trouble himself and family to move from one of the houses to another, and being asked why he did so, he replied that it was to find content in some one of them. But his friend, knowing his temper, told him that if he would find content in any of his houses, he must leave himself behind him. And for most blessings, because they be so common, men forget to pay their praises. But let not us, because it is a sacrifice so pleasing to Him that
