Story.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE GUILLOTINED.

BY LOUIS FAVOUR.

Whether Capital Punishment is a relic of barbarism" which should be speedily abolished, as certain humani tarians of the day contend, it is not my purpose to discuss; but so long as the death penalty is inflicted, I maintain that it is the duty of the law-making power to concede to the culprit the privilege of being deprived of life in the speediest and least revolting manner. How this is best accomplished, medical science has not yet determined; and "when doctors disagree, who shall decide?" Different nations have their favorite methods, each claiming pre-eminence in excellence. Among the ancients, poisoning and drowning were frequently resorted to; and in modern times we have the gallows, the bullet, the garrote, and the guill-

In order to arrive at any satisfactoy conclusion as to which of these methods causes least suffering to the victim, we are only safe in taking the testimony of those persons who have actually experienced some of the different methods. At first thought this may seem paradoxical or absurd; still it is, in a measure, practicable. It is a well-known fact, that many persons have experienced all the sensations of drowning, and been resuscitated by timely exertion. Numbers, also, have been hanged sufficiently long to pass all consciousness of pain, and been relieved before life was extinct. On the battle-field, unconscious soldiers, left for dead, frequently recover; and a glance at almost any daily paper will suffice to show that attempted suicides by poison are frustrated by the efforts of skillful physicians. All these have given their testimony in regard to the suffering they undergo, and in the cases mentioned it is quite reliable. In regard to the guillotine, however, there is not so much evidence as is desirable. About all the knowledge of the subject, acquired thus far is speculative, gained by observations of the antics of turkeys and chickens after being decapisome scientific information on the sub-tated by the cook; and conclusions drawn from these observations are not agreeable to contemplate. Monsieur Guillotine, perhaps, might have given ject, had not the French, in their usual happy manner-so peculiarly a propos in the present instance, -decapitated the unfortunate inventor on his own machine. It has been the fortune of the writ er, however, to receive the narrative of one man, who, in a measure, survived the horrors of the guillotine; and it is the testimony of this witness that I purpose to give. His pitiful story has never been made public. At the time of the occurrence of the terrible event which it narrates, and for a considerable period subsequent thereto. it was kept secret for political ressons. I learned it by the merest accident, and can vouch for its authenticity, having received it personally from the lips of the unfortunate victim. Having seen a notice of his death in a late Paris paper, I feel at liberty to give publicity to the facts.

In the summer of 1867, I visited the Paris Exposition and witnessed the excitement caused by the attempt ed assassination of the Czar. In the evening of that day I repaired to a popular cafe, which I found nearly filled with a miscellaneous company conversing, with great animation, upon the exciting event of the day. Making my way to a part of the room

The continued assessment of the paper of the room which was visible to me; the room of the assemblace and as far back testing to a part of the room which was the comparatively quiet, I said myself at a table which table the who attempted the life of the Coanter of the room of the wood of the same throughout the continued and as far back testing the who attempted the life of the Coanter of the room of the wood of the same throughout the continued and as far back testing the who attempted the life of the Coanter of the room of the wood of the wood of the same throughout the continued and plainly marked sear, it will give to me to be served, said time to the who attempted the life of the Coanter of the room of the same and as far back testing the who attempted the life of the Coanter of the room of the same continued. A crumply horn is a good indication of the wood of the subject with which all Paris was fa- did so. I could not have been mismiliar. 'This did not attract my notice at the time, but it recurred to my mind from circumstances which fol-

One of the party of strangers earnestly expressed his conviction that the would be assassin would receive his deserts, should be tried, convicted, and sentenced to die by the guillotine. Upon hearing this, the elderly gentleman turned ghastly pale and recoiled with a look of terror. Then, seeing me for the first time since I seated myself at his table, and observing my surprised and startled look, he said, with ill-feigned carelessness:

"Pardon, Monsieur; an acute pain in my head, which occasionally annoys me, has just given me warning that an old man cannot be too careful of his health."

Being detected in the act of staring at a stranger, and discovering some weakness which he wished to conceal, quite disconcerted mo. I stammered some reply by way of apology, and felt greatly relieved when the waiter appeared and placed before him the repast he had ordered. I gave my own order, and by the time the waiter perceptible tremor, he said: reappeared, had somewhat recovered my composure; and feeling that I had appeared to a disadvantage before the stranger, and wishing to remove any prejudice which he might have formed against me, I attempted to open a conversation. Unwitting-ly I began by asking if executions were generally public in Paris. Immediately I saw that I had blundered; for the same expression, in a modified degree, passed over his face. He controlled himself by a slight effort, however, and added but little to my

"You would not wish to attend one of the disgusting exhibitions, I hope. "Certainly not," I replied. "I merely asked to gratify my curiosity.' I could not conceal my chagrin, composure and self-respect by reply-and I felt that the stranger saw it too, and in a manner enjoyed it. I made no further attempt to conciliate him, but was greatly puzzled by his beha-vior. He had alluded to an acute pain in his head, with which he was afflicted; but I was convinced that his expression of pain and terrorfor it was as if physical and mental mention of the guillotine. What se cret horror he had of that, I knew not: but on two occasions I had seen him shudder and turn pale at the mention of an execution. I had no hope of gratifying my newly aroused curiosity concerning the stranger, and was about to return to my lodgings. when suddenly raising his eyes to mine, he said abruptly: "You are an American, I perceive;" and without pausing for me to reply continued: "Your country wisely adopted the gallows as an instrument of execution. That is bad - bad enough-but infinitely superior to our hideous monster, the guillotine." He was greatly moved, but I de termined to appear unconscious of it, and replied, carelessly: "That is a matter of mere speculation. I have no desire to make an experiment on either; but should I be allowed as a culprit to take my choice in the matter, I think I should prefer to have my head neatly clipped off by the guillotine than to suffer a dozen deaths by strangulation in one of those miserable bungles that too frequently characterize an American hanging. "Ah," he replied, "better suffer a dozen deaths by strangulation, or any other method, than a thousand agonizing ones as inflicted by the guillotine. This reply, so positive, when his knowledge of the subject must have been nearly or quite as limited as my own, vexed me. "Here is a man." thought, "who for some reason has formed a strong prejudice against the guillotine. Perhaps some relative or friend has been sacrificed on it; possibly he himself had been sentenced. and reprieved at the last moment,

"No rogue e'er felt the halter draw, With good opinion of the law," he thenceforth condemns this instrument of punishment as the most crue in use, simply because he has some personal aversion to it." I allowed my vexation to show itself when I answered: "I shall not attempt to argue, when as I before remarked, all is a matter of speculation. We have no experimental knowledge on the subject-as I have never been hanged, and I presume that you have never been guillo-

I regretted this as soon as I had uttered it, for its effect upon the stranger was startlingly different from what had anticipated; he turned sickly pale, his eyes assumed a leaden appearance, and his breathing came labored and rapid. By a strong effort he rallied himself, and leaning across the table till our faces nearly met, in a heavy, unnatural whisper, as though each word cost him a pang, he uttered this fearful sentence: "Young man, I have been guillo-

. It was not what he said, but what I saw, that startled me most. The man wore an unseemly high and stiff standing collar, which ordinarily would conceal his neck as high as his chin; but I mentally, soliloquized, "walking as he leaned forward over the table, about in this great city, is a man who his neck was inclined towards a horizontal position, and slightly protruding from his collar, as it naturally would in such an attitude, it left the all, Wilkes Booth, may be alive, as . "Oh-John-Henry la you said a taken. There was an ugly scar left by some keen-bladed instrument, running completely around the stranger's neck. Had I not seen that, I should have looked upon the man as a monomaniac, and given little heed to his words; but that scar staggered me. 'It seemed to corroborate his statement, although against my reason,, and despite the utter absurdity of such a case. All my recent ill-nature towards the stranger - had changed to sympathy and pity; my curiosity also was thoroughly awakened, but I despaired of learning more of the stranger's story, fearing that I had unintentionally wounded his feelings and offended him. I dared not attempt to excuse myself, or make any attempt to console him, lest I might only add to his misery. I was considering in what way I could best ex-tricate myself from the difficulty, when the strangers himself came to my relief in a manner I little expected. He raised his head from the table, and I saw with satisfaction that all traces of his recent emotions had vanished. In a voice with the least "Pardon me, stranger. I fear that I have given you an exhibition of weakness that ill becomes a man of my years. Unintentionally, you surprised me into a confession that I would rather have been spared." "There is no occasion for any regrets," I replied, "for if you can forget whatever distresses you, I will forget I ever heard it."

"No, no," he answered, "after what has occurred, I feel that an explanation is due you, as well as myself. But this is not the place, nor am I in a condition at present to make such explanation. But," he continued, at the same time handing me his card, "should you care to spend an hour or two of your leisure at my rooms, you shall hear my story, and then you can judge whether I may be excusable in speaking and acting in a manner which must seem to you inconsistent and unnatural."

I took his proffered card, assuring him that it would afford me much pleasure to be the recipient of the

"Thank you," he replied. "I hope pain combined—was caused by the it may interest you, and I trust it listen to a brief story of an exciting you have formed upon this disagreeable subject. I keep carly hours,' he continued, "and am at home nearly every evening after dining at this cafe. I am engaged during the day, but on any evening agreeable to yourself, I shall be happy to entertain you;" and wishing me a very good night, he hurried out of the cafe.

Left to myself, I puzzled more than ever over the strange affair. I was so desirous of learning more of the stranger's history, that I called the waiter who had attended our table, to glean from him, if possible, any further information. The waiter was quite communicative, but my inquiries led to no satisfactory results. The waiter did not know the stranger's name, but he had been a constant visitor at the cafe for the previous five months; he always came alone, and seemed desirous of avoiding company with strangers; he seldom entered the cafe if unusually crowded, but would go away and return at a later hour; he always ordered a light repast, with excellent wine, and paid without: grumbling ;- a description which I thought would apply to any well-bred gentleman of good taste and quiet habits.

I returned to my lodgings, resolved to take advantage of the stranger's invitation as early as I might with propriety, for my curiosity was never so strongly excited. I lighted the gas, and remembering his card, examined it to see if it would give any additional light on the subject. It was a plain piece of card board, bearing this inscription:

"BAPTISTE BOURIER,

24, Rue St. Antoine." I procured a directory, and found two solid columns of "Bouriers" and twelve "Baptiste Bouriers," with various trades, occupations, and professions, but none with residence on Rue St. Antoine. I looked at the date of the directory, and found that it was published isix months before. The waiter stated that the stranger had been a visitor at the eafe for five months. Rue St. Antoine was in that vicinity; evidently he had taken his present rooms since the directory was Being baffled in my attempts to learn more of the stranger, I resolved to think no more of the matter until I made my promised visit. Notwithstanding this resolve, I found myself continually puzzling over the marvelous affair, and arriving at conclusions the most contradictory and unsatisfactory. At length, thoroughly fatigued by the exciting events of the day, I turned off the gas and went to bed. But I was nervous, and could not sleep. That fearful scar haunted me. I closed my eyes to shut it out from my sight; but I quickly opened them, for it appeared plainer and more ghastly than ever. Finding it. impossible to sleep, I rose, relighted the gas, and dressed myself. "Here," once lost his head; not his wits, but his veritable head that sets, on his. shoulders and carries his hat. After to relieve him.

That same evening I found myself standing before a small, two-story brick house, 24 Rue St. Antoine. rang the bell; and shortly the door opened, and an old lady, bent and wrinkled with age, wearing a black dress and widow's cap, presented her-

"Is Monsieur Bourier at home?". I asked. "Monsieur is at home;" replied the old lady. "Walk up stairs, if you please, and knock at the first door on the right. That is Monsieur Bourier's I followed the old lady's instruc tions, and knocked at the door indi cated. It was immediately opened by Monsieur Bourier himself. He recognized me instantly, greeted me cordially as "Monsieur L'American," and invited me to enter: His manner was so easy and natural, his expression so pleasant and dignified, that among a hundred men he would have been the last selected for a monomaniac. Nothing in his appearance, actions, or language, was in the least eccentric or unnatural. His room, too, was in keeping with its occupant; handsomely furnished with everything conducive to comfort, but with no attempt at display. A large, old-fashioned book-case, with pigeon-holes and desk attached, occupied one corner. This case was filled with wellworn volumes; the holes were stuffed with papers, and on the open front of the desk lay a partly finished manuscript, upon which he was evidently engaged when my knock interrupted him. It was certainly not the cell of a maniac or the retreat of a hermit, but a very cozy sanctum of a pleasant old gentleman given to study and thought. .

I apologized for interrupting his meditations, and hoped my visit was not untimely, begging him not to attribute it alone to vulgar curiosity. He soon put me at my ease, however, by his agreeable demeanor; and after a little conversation upon topics of general interest, he arose, and openng a sideboard which was one of the convenient appurtenances of the room, he took therefrom a couple of glasses and a bottle of old wine; placing these confidence that he so generously of on the table before me, and seating himself opposite, he said:

"My friend, I invited you here to ance of my invitation leads me to believe that it will interest you. I trust it may, and I hope I shall not weary you with unimportant details."

The Distinctive Mark of a Drummer.

A merchant of Kankakee, who had been somewhat worried this year by drummers from this city, devised what he thought was an effectual means of preventing the annoyance. He fitted up his private office with all the sepulchral suggestiveness of a lodge of colored knights of the resurrection; it was hung with black; blunderbusses, bowie-knives and revolvers were scattered around profusely, while a skull all smashed in, lay on his ledger, inscribed in blood-red characters: "This was a Chicago drummer." He foolishly fancied himself safe; but his dream was delusive. Wednesday a Chicago drummer, in the hardware line, reached Kankakee at II A. M., and by two in the afternoon (despite the assurance of his landlord that he was taking his life in his hand, and that if he persisted in going he would do better to settle his bill first) he had stormed the merchant's intrenchments. "Hullo;" said he, as he wrung the merchant's hand, "how are you?" How's the folks? How's biz? Fine weather for the crops, ch? Nice cheerful black you've got here? What did you pay for that black tapestry? Oughtn't to keep your blunderbusses at full cock. Lots of accidents happen that way because you try to draw t towards you by the muzzle and off she goes. Always keep it at half cock. That's a mighty nice revolver; one of the lot you bought of us last March. I can sell you the same revolver now ten per cent less. Hullo, where'd you buy that bowie knife Sure as you're born, they've cheated you. Pot metal, I'll bet." Here the merchant interrupted him and pointed to the skull. "Ha! ha!" laughed he with a mirthfulness which did not altogether conceal an almost offensive contempt, "That's a very good joke, but it's too thin. That ain't no drummer's skull; look at the cheek-bones; why, you could mash 'em in with a

Size with the eye, as with the brain, is generally conceded to be a measure of capacity. A large eye has a larger range of vision, as it unquestionably has of expression, than a small one. Generally speaking, a large eye sees things in particular. The one sees many things as a whole, considering them in a philosophical or speculative way, often seeing through and beyond them; the other sees fewer things, but usually looks keenly into them, and is appreciative of detail. Some eyes, however, look at everything and yet see nothing. Fullness of the eye. causing a bulging of the eyelids, is the well-known sign of language. Persons with this sign large, have not only a speaking eye, but also a speaking tongue; whereof their fellows do not remain long in ignorance. A general projection or fullness of the eye above and below, which brings the eye ball forward on a line with the face and eyebrow, denotes the quality of physical perception, or the capacity to see quickly whatever appears upon the surface of things. A person with such an eye, on entering a room for the first time, would note rapidly the shape, size, arrangement, and general appearance of the different articles of furniture in it, the color of the walls, curtains, etc.; take in with equal facility, the color of eyes and hair, size and appearance of any person who might be present. In looking at a picture, such a person would at once incline to examine the details of color, number, grouping, attitude, and costume of the figures composing it.—Annual of Phrenology.

Disastrous Awakening.

Last Sunday one of the churches was the scene of an amusing incident which showed up one of the lady members in no very enviable light. Smith and his wife went to church and during the sermon Smith fell asleep, according to his usual custom. During his sleep he was probably laboring under the delusion that he was a high pressure engine, for he snored until the glass in the windows, fairly rattled. Mrs Smith, who is a great stickler for propriety, and who had a great terror of a scene, punched him vigorously in the ribs with the end of her hymn book, hoping by this action. to awaken the sleeper. But she was little prepared for the effect that followed, for to her intense consternation and to the great astonishment not to say amusement—of the congregation, Smith bawled out at the top of his voice: "Tarnation seize veu. Water Lilles.

A lady living in Reading, Pa., gives the following account of her method of growing water lilies. The roots having been procured in the fall were kept damp during the winter in flower pots. In the spring a tub was made by sawing a substantial barrel in two, this was set on brick feet, out of doors, and one-third filled with garden soil and well rotted manure. The roots were planted in this mixture and covered. Water was added in small quantities, and at intervals of a day or two, and so gently as not to disturb the earth, night and reopening in the morning, as is the habit of water lilies. The blooms are about two inches in diameter-not quite as large as some of the specimens in the pond from whence the roots were taken, but

In treating of "clover-sick soil," Mr. Bruce, an Aberdeenshire farmer, states that in some districts of Scotland the clover plant dies out after taking root. Having noticed in several fields where this occured that near the gate, and head and end ridges, which was much trodden upon -a circumstance, we need scarcely say, that has been often observed-Mr. Bruce procured a heavy roller and rolled the field twice before putting in the grass seed. The experiment was perfectly successful, a full plant of clover being the result, although the field had for years before showed signs of sickness. Again, on one of the greatest farms in Aberdeenshire there were several fields which refused to grow clover. The farmer got a roller which weighed 15 cwt., and rolled his fields, leaving in one field a ridge which was not rolled, in order to prove the efficacy of the operation. The result was that while there is abundance of clover where the soil was rolled, on the ridge that was left unrolled scarcely a plant is

If brooms are wet in boiling suds once a week, they will become very tough, will not cut the carpet, last much longer, and always sweep like a new broom. A very dusty earpet may be cleaned by setting a pail of water out by the door; wet the broom in it, knock it to get out all the drops, sweep a yard or so then wash the. broom again as beine, and sweep again, being careful to shake all the drops off the broom and not sweep far at a time. The warm may need to be changed once or twice if the carpet is very dusty. Snow sprinkled over a carpet a a swept off before it has time to melt and dissolve, is also nice for renovating a soiled carpet. Moistered Indian meal is used with good effect by some house-

The varied and extensive use of paper pulp at the present time, is llustrated in the manufacture of such. articles as water pails, which are being made in large quantities of that material and are found to answer an excellent purpose. In the ordinary way of making pails, the separate parts or staves are cut, one at a time, from the log of wood, and, in this process, all the chips and smaller pieces are wholly wasted — that is, so far as the real object of the manufacturing operation is concerned. In producing a paper pail, however, the fibrous material is of course wholly utilized, and, if the original stock is wood—as in part it may be—then the large proportion that would bewasted in chip and debris is entirely

In the spring the roots were separated and about half the increase returned to the same tub in a fresh mixture of earth. They were brought out earlier than before (about April Specimen Democratic Economy.

Democratic economy in the House is, in a number of respects, simply aristocracy in disguse. It proposes to favor the rich, and discriminate against the poor. It proposes to leave salaries of Democratic Congressmen untouched, but to cut down the wages of the hard-working petty clerks. It proposes to stop all Government improvements, and to take work and wages from the mechanics and laborers, at a time when they most need work and wages; and this without saving a cent; for the work neglected this year will have to be done next year, while the delay really costs the country a loss. It proposes to cut down the allowances of West Point cadets so that only rich men's sons can afford to go there. The pro-fessors of West Point have already sent a protest to Congress. Though their own salaries are threatened to be cut down by the House, they do not complain, much as they feel the injustice; because their salaries are no larger than the salaries paid in first-class colleges for scientific professors.

But they do protest against cutting down the allowance of the cadets, their pupils; and they base their protest on the statement that a reduction will operate to prevent the sons of poor parents from becoming cadets, and so make the National Military Academy an aristocratic institution for rich men's sons, who can afford to pay their own expenses. The protest says that the present allowance is fifty dollars a month. Out of this students have to pay for their uniforms, rations, board, books, and all other expenses. It requires the strictest economy now for cadets to make it suffice, without aid from their parents; especially as the expenses attending a military education are inevitably larger than the expenses of attending any other kind of college.

If the allowance is cut down to forty dollars a month, says the protest, it will compel a number of poorer cadets to resign, and be driven from the National school, which was established with the design of giving all the sons of the Republic an equal chance, with.

out odious distinctions between the rich and the poor. Fifty dollars a month—the present allowance—is six hundred dollars a year; or eleven dollars and fifty cents a week. There is no first-class college in the country where a student, however frugal, can and clothe himself respectably, upon a sum less than this; while the average expense of students is higher than this. Besides, the student at Harvard, or Yale, can get certain aids, if poor, from outside sources. Besides, he has vacations, during which he can labor, or go home and save expenses.

But the West Point cadet has no vacation, and no outside aid from free libraries, scholarships, funds, or any other source. He is bound to his studies and to his expenses, the whole year through. He cannot dress cheap-

About 400 delegates are in attendance. Grand Master George H. Durand, M. The session promises to be extremely interesting. It will not close until to-morrow night. Grand Master Durand's address, received this afternoon, shows that Masonry is flourishing in Michigan, that peace and harmony have prevailed in the lodges, that death has not been unusually rapacious in the ranks, and contains some valuable suggestions to the members of the Order, particularly as to the cultivation of the social features of Masonry.

> The Ship Canal,-Progress of the Preliminary Survey.

Mr. H. Willis of Battle Creek, has made a report of his survey of the Michigan ship canal so far. He says: On Monday moraing, our party, consisting of C. F. Miller, A. V. Powell, and A. Gardener, engineers, and myself, arrived in Detroit, and commenced the procuring of material, instruments, etc., for the preliminary survey of the ship canal route. We found the valley of the River Rouge much better than we had expected, the elevation being about twenty-five feet, at or near the village of Plymouth, in the southwest corner of Wayne county, eighteen miles from Detroit. But little excavation will have to be is a mystery. done for a slackwater down this river, nine miles, to Dearborn.

From this point to the Detroit River there is but little current, and the stream is deep. It will only require some straightening to make a fine channel, and but a little work to deepen it, all of which can be done by steam dredge. From Plymouth to Trenton, at the crossing of the M. S. R. R., is about the same distance as to the mouth of the River Rouge. The declivity at Trenton is about the same as that of the Rouge-no deep cut to be made, the natural surface being but from one to five feet above Detroit River; and as Trenton is a good harbor, and will make a good point for shipments, I cannot see why that may not be a point worthy of consideration, especially as the citizens of Detroit seem to take but little interest in the proposed improvement. From Plymouth west as far as Whitmore Lake, eighteen miles, it would seem as though nature had designed that beautiful slope of country for a canal-not a hill or rise of ground, to amount to anything. West from Whitmore Lake, along the same line, is a chain of lakes, for fifteen miles, through which a canal can be made for vessels of 1,000 to 1,500 tons. We are free to say that we were agreeably disappointed in this portion of the route. The cold and snow storm so interfered, we were obliged to defer further work for a few days, hoping for milder weather, when we shall endeavor to complete our present survey, so as to find the summit, elevation, supply of water, etc., etc. Amount paid out, including printing bills, petitions, etc., to this date, January 18th, 1876, $62.15. I think $225 more will complete the requisite survey at this time. I hope every man will see the importance of signing the petitions that are left at all stores friendly to the proposed improvement. The following is the text of the bil introduced in Congress providing for a survey of the proposed ship canal from the mouth of the Kalamazoo river to Lake Erie. It will be seen that this bill contemplates the mouth For these reasons, it is said, the of the Raisin as the eastern terminus; be able to use his leg again about House Military Committee will stren- but should the bill, which has been this morning.

SENATE, Jan. 20 .- At the expiration of the morning hour the question of the Mississippi election was brought up, and Senator Morton continued his speech begun the day before but did not conclude, and asked to have the resolution go over, which was granted. Mr. Ferry laid before the Senate the petition of manufacturers, shippers and others of Manistee, Mich., asking an appropriation for the improvement of the harbor at that place. Referred. Mr. Sargent introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a new postal telegraph system, of which the folowing are the main features: Every postoffice in the United States situated at point on any telegraph line shall also be telegraph station, at which any telegraph company, maintaining such line, may establish and operate its instruments. If in any case it is apparent that the duties of postmaster and telegraph operator could e performed by one person, the Postmaster General may appoint a suitable person for both duties, and all postmasters shall receive messages for transmission by telegraph, and cause them to be delivered, the telegraph company paying to the Government a postage of 1 cent on each. The charges for telegraphing all messages to be received at or delivered from the postoffices shall be fixed by the Postmaster General, but must not exceed the following: For ten word messages, less than 250 miles, 10 cents; for a distance between 250 and 500 miles, 15 cents; from 500 to 1,000 miles, 25 cents, and for all greater distances, 50 cents, the address and signature to be free of charge, and for additional words the rate to be in like proportion. The last section directs the Postmaster General to advertise forthwith for proposals, and to award a contract to any responsible party undertaking to form taken measures toward a breach of telegraphic connections, and carry out the object of this bill for the lowest tariff not exceeding the prices above named. HOUSE, Jan. 20.—The House went into a committee of the whole on the Centennial Appropriation bill. Several speeches were made for and against the hut no action was taken ect. House adjourned.

HOUSE, Jan. 21.—The House Com mittee on Appropriations decided to report adversely on the bill appropriating $222,797, to pay interest on the 3.65 District of Columbia bonds on the ground that Congress is bound to the extent only that interest shall be p-id and that as $800,000 of the sum appropriated remains Disease of the Throat. Hundreds throughout the country are suffering from various affections of the throat. Some are only disturbed during the changeable weather of winter and spring, while others are troubled more or less most of the time. In some instances an affection of the throat will exist for a long time without getting in upon the lungs. Notwithstanding this slow pro-gress in some cases, I do not believe there s one case out of ten that will not, if left alone, gradually grow worse, eventually reach the lungs, and end in consumption.

Among the symptoms of this ailment is an alteration of the voice, its tone not as clear as usual, a slight irritation, or tickling sensation in the throat, with more or less dryness, giving rise to a hacking, hemming, or an endeavor to clear the throat of something which is felt to be an | delicate yellow color, clear and free obstacle to a full and free utterance. On from spots; it cuts smoothly and throat has first been cleared. Loud or long talking, or reading produces cough, irritation, or dryness of the throat. In the first stages there is no expectoration. Passing from a warm to a cold atmosphere or room, produces difficulty in breathing, and in advanced stages gives rise to more or less cough; the same symptoms follow an exposure to dust, or when walking against the wind. In cold or damp weather the symptoms are generally more aggravated, the person liable to take cold from the slightest exposure. Sometimes the symptoms disappear entirely, but return again on contracting a cold. It may thus go on disappearing and returning, the patient meanwhile being in comparatively comfortable health, until the disease has made considerable progress There is often a tired feeling about the throat, a feeling of discomfort or uneasiness along towards evening. In the early part of the day the tired feeling about the throat is not noticed, as the voice organs have had a chance to recover their power, by rest, during the night. In the beginning of the disease no such symp toms are felt, but as it progresses these symptoms show themselves every evening, then earlier and earlier every day unof employment. We noticed Supt.
Millard, of the Michigan Wood Pulp Co. on the ground with a force of men til the voice is clear only for a short time in the morning. The voice becomes more rough, hoarse, and sometimes completely destroyed. Sometimes the individual will be able to speak a sentence in an audible voice, while the next one will be in a whisper, or the audible articulation may be cut off in the midst of a single word. Thus the disease may go on for some time, but gradually the symptoms increase, the general health, if not previously affect ed, becomes impaired. Digestion is imperfect, the appetite changeable, the howels irregular, the kidneys become implica-ted, the pulse frequent and weak, the skin dry and harsh, the feet are cold, and often a clammy state of the hands. The cough at length becomes severe and troublesome, accompanied with a free, frothy and transparent expectoration. There is soon a gradual wasting of flesh and general debil-scrofulous disease of the blood. The course adopted by many physicians for the curing of this disease is a mistaken one, burning the throat with Nitrate of plaint, by diseasing the blood, weakening the lungs and debilitating the patient. The majority of our best physicians do not deem it worthy of notice, for they know it to be an exploded theory, revived with alleged improvements by ignorant medical speculators to impose upon the credulous as a means of subsistence and pecuniary gain. artists that the superiority of their designs and wood-engravings must in a great measure be attributed. In consequence of its scarcity and high price, many substitutes have been resorted to; maple, apple, pear, mahogany have been experimented upon; but hitherto no wood, metal, or composition has been discovered that possesses the requisite qualities. In addition to engraving, boxwood is used for scales, rules, gauging rods, and similar articles on which figuring is made; and there are factories in Connecticut that consume hundreds of tons annually for this purpose alone. Any one that has ever held a carpenter's rule in his hand knows what boxwood is like. It differs in color and texture from all other wood. and it is somewhat remarkable that it comes to perfection only in a compartively limited region of country in the vicinity of the Black Sea. It weighs about seventy-five pounds to the cubic foot, and varies in price to land it in Boston from $75 to $250

A STRANGE disease has made its appearance among the horses owned by Mr. Willard French, a few miles south of this place. The disease seems to affect the lungs and proves fatal in a short time after making its appearance. During the last week Mr. French has lost five horses, that could not be replaced for less than $700 or $800. The disease has thus far baffled all attempts of the farriers, either to arrest or determine the cause. A correspondent of the Detroit Post, from Niles, gives the following account of a liquor war on a small scale in that burg: "Esquire Barran, on the complaint of Dennis Murphy, a saloon-keeper, fined Edward Dunn $5 and costs for disturbing the peace and comfort of his sanctum (!). This fine the boy's mother had to pay, besides lawyer's fees, which in all amounted to $18. Now George, being of tender years, our legislators had forewarned Mr. Murphy not to sell him any "ale, wine, beer, or other spirituous or intoxicating liquor." So Mrs. Dunn has had Murphy arraigned before Recorder Gilbert, according to early.

Mrs. Dunn proposes bringing a civil action for her pecuniary disbursements and losses." The Maintenance of Health, The maintenance of health is foften more difficult then its recovery. Vitiated conditions of the atmosphere, unhealthy occupations, extremes of heat and cold and constant exposure to rough weather are all so many provocations of disease. There is but one sure way of eff. tually guarding the system when thus subjecting to influences prejudicial tonic and alterative medication, vigor of the body and regularity of its functions. The properties of an invigorant and corrective are happily combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, at the same time that it infuses unwonted vitality into the system overcomes all tendency of the stomach, liver, bowels and urinary organs to deviate from regularity in the discharge of functions upon which the welfare of the entire physical organization is dependent. Health cannot be more effectually maintained than by using the Bitters.

Niles Correspondence. NILES, Jan. 24, 1876. EDITOR BECORD :- Thursday evening at 10.50 the fire fiend paid us another visit. About that time the clanging of the fire bells, together with a fierce red glare and the screeching of steam whistles in the direction | attempting to of the dam, informed us of the fact that a fire was raging among the shops and factories there located. Upon repairing to the scene we found the extensive pill box factory of Craig, Thomas & Co. in flames. Hose No. I was the first to reach the ground, and in the absence of an engine a line of hose was carried into the Paper Mills and attached to a large pan pump, but owing to some defects in the coupling it did not prove very successful. About this time Engine No. 2 arrived upon the ground and soon had a powerful stream playing upon the flames, which were soon deadened to such an extent that danger to adjoining shops was over, although the paper mill for a long time was in great peril. The horses attached to Engine No. 1 balked on Second street and could not be made to budge, and so this machine was abandoned. The fire was no doubt the work of incendiaries. The loss will reach $10,000, with an insurance of $2,000. The loss of the factory and couldn't stop." This is the way that a great many boys get into difficulty; they get agoing and can't stop. The boy that tells lies began at first to stretch the truth a little-to tell a story or relate an anecdote with a little variation, till he got agoing and couldn't stop till he came out a full grown liar.

The boy that was brought before the police, was sent to the House of Correction for stealing sweetments and other nice things that were put away. Next he began to take things from his companions at school. He got agoing and couldn't stop until he got into jail.

Those two boys you see fighting out on the green, began by bantering each other in fun. At length they began to get angry and dispute, and call each other names, till they get agoing and couldn't stop. They will separate with black eyes and bloody

See that young man with the dark lantern. He is a merchant's clerk. He came from the country a promising boy. But the rest of the boys went to the theatre, and he thought he must go too. He began thinking he'd go only once just to say he had been to a theatre. He has used up all his wages and wants more money. He cannot resist the temptation when he knows there is money in the draw-er. He got agoing—he will stop in the State Prion.

Hark! do you hear that horrid oath? It comes from the foul mouth of a little boy in the street. He began by saying by-words; but he has got agoing and can't stop.

Fifty young men were, some years ago, in the habit of meeting together in a room at a public house, to enjoy themselves in social hilarity, where the wine cup passed freely around. One of them, as he was going there one evening, began to think there might be some danger in the way. He stopped and considered a moment, and then said to himself - "Right about face!" He turned and went back to his room, and was never seen at the public house again. He has become rich; and the first block of buildings which he erected, was built directly in front of the place where he stood when he made that exclaimation. Six of the young men [followed his example. The remaining forty-three got agoing and couldn't stop till they landed in the ditch, and most of them in a drunkard's grave. Beware, then, boys, how you get agoing. Be sure, before you start, that you are in the right way; for when you are sliding down hill it is heard to stop.

They are not only pleasant to take, but their operation is easy-unattended with any griping pain. They operate without producing any constitutional disturbance. Unlike other catharties they do not renler the hawels costive after operation, but, on the contrary, they establish a permanently healthy action. Being entirely regetable, no particular care is required while using them. $500 Reward is offered by the propriefor to any one who will detect in these Pe'lets any calomel or other form of mercury, mineral poison, or injurious drug. They are sold by Druggists.

Where Does it All Come From? Pints and quarts of filthy Catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane which lines the chambers of the nose, and its little glands are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure of the air changes it into corruption. This lifeliquid is needed to build up the system, but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's the died Discovery, which also acts directly upon the glands, correcting them, and apply Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Donche, the only method of reaching the upper cavitics, where the discharge accumulates and comes from. The instrument and both medicines sold by druggists and dealers use; and every family should have them on hand for their protection and relief, when required. Long experience has proved them to be the safest, surest, and best of all the PUIs with which the market abounds. By their occasional use, the blood is purified, the corruptions of the system expelled, obstructions removed, and the whole machinery of life restored to its healthy activity. Internal organs which become clogged and sluggish are cleansed by Ayer's Pills, and stimulated into action. Thus incipient disease is changed into health, the value of which change, when reckoned on the vaste multitudes who enjoy it, can hardly be computed. Their sugar coating makes them pleasant to take, and preserves their virtues unimpaired for any length of time, so that they are ever fresh, and perfectly reliable. Although scarching, they are mild, and operate without disturbance to the constitution, or diet, or occupation.

withour disturbance to the constitution, or diet, or occupation.

Full directions are given on the wrapper to each box, how to use them as a Family Physic, and for the following complaints, which these Fills rapidly cure:

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Billous Headache, Sick Headache, Jaumdice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it. diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Hysentery or Diarrhoea, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Riteumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression, a large dose should be taken, as it produces the desired effect by sympathy. pathy.
As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and howels, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with sars of experiment and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, makesick to make well; no harsh treatment, no triffing, no flattering. We know the cause and the remody needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Ohronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope; make interrogations and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

Dr. V. Clarence Price can be consulted at Niles, Reading's Hotel, Saturday and Sunday, the 19th and 20th of February. At Laporte, Ind., Marrill Bouse, on Saturday and Sunday, the 22d and 22d of Jinuary.

It will labor unceasingly to cultivate such a public sentiment, and to diffuse such general information on all questions of politics as shall lead to a grand and glorious Republican triumph, with which fitly to enter upon the second hundred years of the life of the Republic.

In the news department The Tribuse will avail itself freely, as heretofore, of telegraphic facilities and special correspondents, for the purpose of giving the earliest authentic, news on the most attractive and readable form. Its compilation of Michigan news, largely gathered by its own paid correspondents, far surpasses in variety and extent that furnished by any other Detroit paper.

Its Agricultural Department has only imitations—nothing equal to it. Its value is seen in its voluminous correspondence from practi-cal farmers and their wives, who make it their medium for exchanging views and intelligence.
Its Commercial Department embraces market reports that cannot be excelled for accuracy, prepared with the greatest labor and pains, so that they can be implicitly relied on.
Its stories, poetry and miscellany are all selected with the greatest care, and from the best attainable sources, the design being to make The TRIBUNE a most welcome, enjoyable and useful visitor in every home.

In short we aim to make pride in the paper, and untiring zeal can possi-bly produce. That THE PRIBUSE will continue to outstrip all rivals in the completeness and excellence of its various editions, we intend here shall be no doubt about. The Weekly Tribune, it should be borne in mind, is the LARGEST weekly paper in the State, being EIGHT COLUMNS larger than any of the other Detroit papers, thus furnishing very much more reading matter. It is carefully edited and, altogether, has no equal anywhere in the West in point of real value and general attractiveness in all its departments. It will be kept fully up to its previous high standard, which has given it an immensely wider circulation throughout Michigan than any other paper published either within or without our borders.
