A RETROSPECT. BY RUGENE I. HALL

"The prayers that I sent trembling up the golden thread of Hope all came back to me."

Love is a strange commotion Within a youthful breast, Till, like a troubled ocean, It sobs itself to rest. No human will can check it; When left to slow decay, Like a pebble on the sea-shore It wears itself away.

How many beautiful moments Are made on earth by love; It renders a woman heroic; It makes a man a dove. There are sighs and tears that are wasted, There are songs that are idly sung:
O Love! ('tis like the measles—

All have it when they're young.)

Many a prayer I have nttered For things that could not be; On the thread of Hope they trembled My soul has been torn by anguish, My heart has been filled with woo And I wished that my life was over (Ere my beard began to grow).

She lived in a marble mausion. With a hugo plate on the door She rode in a costly carriage (That a black man sat before): I dwelt in a dingy office,
My prospects all looked drear,
For I was a poor law-student (On seven hundred a year).

I puzzled my brain with "Blackstone," And cheerless "Chitty" I read; With love and law compounded, I filled my empty head.
She talked of "Monte Cristo,"
And, when I mentioned "Coke," She said she always liked it,

Because it made no smoke.

So she became my angel,
She haunted my waking hours,
And, when I wandered in dreamland She strewed my path with flowers I was hopeful and happy; A glance from her tender eyes, Or a touch of her tremulous fingers, And I was in Paradise.

Her voice was the sweetest music That fell upon my ear; He hands were small and slender, Her skin was soft and clear! And nothing could compare With the bright and wonderful beauty Of her glorious golden hair.

It is only retrospection,
A dream that has passed away:
Both have grown wiser and older;
I am a trifle gray: Her golden curls have vanished, And now she wears instead A little tult that is yellow Tied up upon her head.

She married her "Monte Cristo," (Though her carriage and dusky driver Have long since rolled away). My wife looks over my shoulder,

And, snatching away my pen, She adds, with a smile, "The saddest Are the things that might have been." Love is a strange commotion Within a youthful breast, Till, like a troubled ocean,

No human will can check it: When left to slow decay, Like a pebble on the sea-shore,

A SCOTCH SAILOR'S YARN.

All about Slievochan there was no lassie like Maggie Miller. Her father, you observe, was a man o' some substance and one trusted by the laird o Taggart; so that the minister, and the bailie o' the nearest town, an' Mrs. Gillespie, an' the farmers all ca'd him Mister; and my Uncle Ivan, who had his pounds away in the bank, ca'd him Mister too, and would send me or Rab up with a creel o' fish when we had a fine take, now and then, so that we were on a footing of visitors; and Maggie would stand and laugh and talk with me, and would gie Rab a blink, and a rose-blush, and a smile that made us all laugh taegither, till I used to wonder why it was that I wasn't one of Maggie's lovers-of which she had three already, not counting Rab, who was two years younger than she, and, of course, was lookin' at her as a boy of eighteen always looks at a girl of twenty, too shy to speak, and too much in love to keep silent, and so talking to anybody who'll listen to him, which in Rab's case was me.

There were two men, if not three, hankering about Donald Miller's house such times as they could make some excuse to gae there, an' one o' them made believe often enough, for he was head keeper to the laird on some shootin's that lay an hour's stout walking from Slievaloch; an' now it was a couple o' rabbits for Mistress Miller or a word or twa with Donald about the bit cover for game beyond the big house; but a' the time he sat an' smoked his tabacker, or took a sup o' parritch or sowans, or a dish o' herrin'. he'd have an eye to Maggie. An evil eye it was, too, for he was a lowerin' carl, and 'twas said that he was more poacher than keeper, while some folk (and I was one) knew well that there was anither business brought him round towards Slievochan. Ishame to say it, but at that time-ye ken I speak of nigh sixty year ago-there was a smoke to be seen coming out frae a neuk i' the hills at a wild place where there seemed to be naething but granite and bracken, and a shanty or two for shelter to the men quarrying the granite. But it wasna' frae the huts that the smoke rose. A good two mile awa' there was a stone cottic, more like a cave, as though it had been burrowed out by wind and water, and got closed in wi' boulders o' rock, and covered with earth and broom, so that naebody could see how it led by a hole i' the prong o' the hill to just sich anither hut, and neither of the twa to be seen except by goin' o'er the hillside. In this second one there was a fire smoulderin' in the furnace, and a' the place dark and smoky and fu' o' the reek o' sma'-still whisky that had nae paid the king's duty:

an' on a cowhide i' the corner crouched auld Birnie, as blear and withered

as a dried haddie, waitin' for his wife to come trudgin' back wi' silver shilricketin' cart. It was suspected that | back to find uncle an' Rab, who'd Rory Smith, the keeper, was in league | most likely be at Donald Miller's to wi' auld Birnie in this sma'-still, and that both he an' the o'erseer o' the quarrymen-a Welsh body o' the leading to the main street, where I name o' Preece-knew weel enough men were as unlike as a rayon and an search the cliff for the keeper. As I owl; Smith bein' suspected of half came nearer to those cottages I could gypsy blood-though few men daur say so to his face, for he'd a heavy hand an' a look in his face that boded mischief-while Preece was a slow, heavy eyed, quiet body, short an square-built, an' wi' a still tongue an' decent, careful ways that yet kept his about Mrs. Gillespie's door, an' the rough men in order, and got him speech of the tradefolk at the village where he lodged, such times as he wasna' up at the quarry. These were the two that went each in his own fashion to visit Donald Miller, and to cast an eye on Maggie; much encouragement, least of all the keeper. Precee thought it prudent to wait till Smith was out o' the way; an' both of them, as I foun' out after long years, were jealous o' me for seen in' to find mair favor wi' Maggie, an' carryin' her the little presents that I told ye of, though never a word o' love making passed my lips; and perhaps Latte o' us thought more o' my cousin Rab than o' each other.

Weel, it was just on one o' the occasions when I was on my way to the house, one evening in the airly summer, carrying with me a gaudy necklace o' shining beads that I'd bought of a packman at Farmer Nicol's shearin', whaur I'd been the day before. I'd shown the toy to my stepmother and uncle, and to Rab too, and had asked him to take it to Maggie himsel': but he put me off, saying that he'd rather not be amang them that was gi'en and gi'en sma' things, for he'd gi'ed her the best o' himsel' a'reedy. It was, maybe, to ponder over these words that I took the way up the steep by-path that led up the beach, an' so zigzag along the cliff's edge. There was a sort o' neuk beside a turn o' this path, where was a big stane, that one might sit upon, and so lose sight o' everything but the distant sea an' the beach below, to which the rocks shelved down, rugged an' bare in places, an' in others wi' a toss an' tangle o' weed an' brushwood, of the cliff. There I sat an' sat, and felt all strange an' drowsy, dreamin' about Rab an' Maggie, but not rightly think-ing o' anything; but holding in my hand the bauble that I had taken out o' my pocket to look at. Night was | years?" comin' down quick out at sea, an' the mist was creepin' over the hills, when I heard a man's footstep on the path, and stood up to see who came.

where there was a hollow in

No need to look twice; 'twas Rory Smith, the keeper, trampling quick and heavy, and with a heavy cudgel in his clinched hands—a murderous look in his eyes. He turned upon me, clutching his stick.

"Whaur are ye goin'?" he said, "an' who's that for?" pointin' to the necklace that hung on my fingers. "I'm no here to answer questions, answered I: "but ve can know for a that, or ye can turn back an' see for

"Go, if ye daur!" he shricked; "for it shall be but one o' us, if ye'll no turn about the way I'm walkin'. It's through you, is it, that Maggie flouts me, an' throws back my gifts, that are o' mair cost than ye can earn, ye loupin' heggar?" "Hand off!" I shouted; "or I'll no answer for mysel'," for he was pressin' on, an' there was no room for a struggle between the rock an' the road's edge. "Haud off, or not one. but baith, may make a turn too many." "Gie me that trash," he said, making a snatch toward the necklace.

"Gie it me, and go no more to Maggie's house-you nor your baby cousin Rab. Gie it me, I say!" He was upon me before I could answer him, mad wi' passion and wi' whisky, and dealt me a heavy blow upon the head; but I was quicker and stronger than he, and before he could repeat it, had him by wrist and shoulder. As I've said, 'twas no place to wrestle in, and when we both came to grips we had but one scuffle, and then our footing was gone and I lost him and myself, too-lost sense, hearing an' a' things.

The sun was high in the sky when I came to myself, skining like a golden shield over the blue sea and the wavin' grass and heather, and I could just see the ripple o' the waves and the fleece o' white clouds far away, but naething else.

It was a while before I could do that, for I seemed to be covered wi' dried grass and leaves above my chin, as I lay there in a deep cleft in the cliff side, midst a tangle of stalks an' roots an' dry driftsand that had got into my claes and filled my ears an' eyes. I was like a man paralyzed, too, and had to move an inch at a time, till I could rub first my arms an' then, when I had got upon one elbow, give my legs a turn and then my back. The first thing I did was to feel if the necklace was on my wrist still, but it had gone; dropped off an' lost in the scuffle. Next I crawled to the edge of the hole, and peered down the cliff side, an' all round, as far as I could see, to look for the body of Rory Smith, living or dead.

lins' and the empty leather bottle of ever it was, I must get to the fillage twa gallons that she'd carried out full and see what could be done. The When I went down again to eat nie bride hame. Auntic an Mistress i' the mornin', under her lang, patch. quickest way was to climb up the path some more bread and to look for a Miller were with us; Uncle sitting by ed cloak, or hid awa' in the loose again, and so get toward the long little whisky to put wi' the milk, there me while I stood at the tiller and two kindlin' wood at the bottom o' the street o' Slievochan, nearer than goin' look for me.

I tottered on to the first cottages, meant to go first to Mrs. Gillespie's, what went wi' the whisky. The two and find some of the fishermen to see that something was stirring in the village, for women an' bairns were all out in the street an' in their best claes; and across the street further away was a rope bearin' a great flag an' bunches of heather, an' the people all by-way leadin' towards Donald Miller's cottage, and so right up to the chan.

I turned up a by-way and got near to the church itsel'. where a man an' woman-strangers to me-were leanin' against the wall, talkin'. I thought but neither o' them could boast of I knew everybody in the place; but these people had just come out of a cottage that belonged to auld Nannie Dun, and had turned the key o' the door as though they lived there, at the sicht o' me coming along the path. They eved me over, too, as I came near, and answered wi' caution when I asked what was goin' on the day. "Weel, it's a weddin' in the kirk, says the wife, an' sac lang waited for that it's little wonder a' the toon is oot to give joy to the bonnie bride an' groom. "Ye're a stranger, an' where may ye come frae?" "Nac, nae," I said, between a laugh an' a fright. Ae body kens me hereabout; but where's auld Nannie that ye've come to see to-day? she'll know

The couple looked skeerit. "Auld Nannie Dun was deed an' buried six years ago come July," said the woman. "Ye've been long away frae this toon,

I'm thinkin'." "Frae this village," says I. "Slievochan's na' a toon.'

"'Deed, but it is, though, since the auld laird's death, and the new street was built, two years ago, when Donal' Miller an' Ivan Dhu bought the land that it stands on, for a portion for son an' daughter-but they come."

"Just one moment," I cried, clutching the man by the arm. "Will ye kindly tell me the day an' the year?" "What day, mon?" says he, looking at me in doubt. "This present day of the month an" the year. Is it auchteen hunnerd saxteen?

"Hoot, mon!" cried the fellow, gettin' away frae me. "Noe; but the third June, auchteen hunnerd twentysax. Ha'e ye been asleep these ten

It rushed upon me all o' a sudden. My claes like tinder; the bed o' dry leaves; my shriveled boots; the bacca in powder. There in that cave o' the cliff I'd slept in a trance, with ne'er a dream to know of, an' the world had gone round while I stoppit still. There was a sound o' talkin' an' laughin' at the kirk door, an' then a shout, as a band o' fishermen came out, all in their best rig; an' then a shoal of pretty lassies, an' then my Uncle Ivan an' Mistress Miller (Old Donald was deed, then, I thought); and then the bailie and my Aunt Tibbie: and, after all, Rab an' Maggiehe looking a grand, noble man, for he was no longer a boy; but wi' his father's strength and Aunt Tibbie's soft, tender smile; an' she-Maggie, I mean-older an' paler, but wi' a light in her een and a lovin' look unon her face that made me forget mysel' in joy to think how they had come together at last, whatever might have happened in the ten years.

But what would happen if I should be seen by the bailie, starin' there at the church porch, in my rags and unkempt hair an' beard-I, that had perhaps been sought for, an' might be suspectit? Ah! that was dreadful! -suspectit o' murder! for where was Rory Smith? and who could tell the true tale but me?

I might be recognized in a minute; for how did I know whether I was altered? and I could remember half the men who were there shouting, an' half the women claverin' in the kirkyard. I crept away.

The best thing I could do was to make off down to the fisher village on the beach; for everybody had come up to the wedding, and I could gain my uncle's house without meeting any one that I knew. So crammin' what was left of my bacca into my pipe. I turned down a lane, and could see the man and woman that I'd spoken to stopping to look after me.

I was wrong in the thinking that I should reach my uncle's house unknown. At all events I was known after I'd entered the house, though there was naebody there. The first thing I did was to stir up the embers o' the fire, for I was chilled, though it was a warm summer's day; then I cut a slice frae the loaf, and took a mug o' milk from the pan; an' then went to the ben, to see after washing myself, and go: on to my ain auld room, to look what had come o' my

The room was altered, but the chest was there; and though my men's claes had gone, some o' my boy's claes were there; an' even some of them that I wore as a child, when Aunt Tibbie made me a new suit. I was thocht to be dead then, but wasna', forgotten.

If a mon can cry, it does him a I could not tell how he had fallen; world o' good at times—that is, if he but unless he had clutched at the long | doesna' cry much nor often. I cried, veed, or reached a cliff lower down, | and it did me good. Then I went up he'd hardly be alive after a whole to the little bit o' broken glass that night; for, had he fallen on the beach was nailed to the wa' to speer what and been disabled, his body was now like I was. My hair had began to under the water, above which the sea-birds wheeled and piped in the bright air. I had a strange, wild look, for morning air. Perhaps he had cried out, and help and my face was grey instead of redhad come while I lay senseless. How brown, as it once was. Would my uncle know me?

window, and before I could stir, the door-latch clicked, and in walked my Uncle Ivan. I had started to my feet, and my uncle strode in, with his hand uplifted, as if to strike me. I nover stirred, but looked at him full in the eyes.

His hand fell to his side. "What brings ye here frae the dead, or frae waur than the dead, Sandy Macpherson," he exclaimed, hoarsely. "I've no been that far; if they that I'd have looked for had looked for me," I answered, "If Rory Smith is alive, he can tell ve about it; or if his dead body's been found, I'll tell my story over that afore all Slievo-

"Then it was you, after all?" said my uncle, sinking into a scat, and leaning his head on his hands. I've stood up for ye, an' swore that if there was foul play 'twas he, an' not you-or maybe Preece, as your aunt thocht at first, because he had the necklace. Can ye, an' will ye, clear up this dreadfu' mystery?"

"Uncle Ivan," I said, takin' him by both hands, "look at my face and hair; look close at my class and shoon! Come wi' me, and bring others too, to the cliff face below the sitting stone in the turn o' the pathand then it's just possible, but it's no likely ye'll believe what I have to tell. First, let me say to ye, I'm innocent o' any crime. Do you believe that?" My uncle lookit at me long and hard, and I grippit his hands tight. "I do," he said, at last. A weight sprung off my heart. "Uncle, did I ever tell ye a l

"Never, that I ken." "Never, never! I kenned he come back!" said another voice. It was Aunt Tibbie, and she me in her arms. "I believed ye innocent, Sandy; and sae did and a many more," she said. where ha' ye been?"

"Ye'll no believe me, gin' I tell ye. I don't wonder at that. Ye can't believe it, mebbe, but I'll tell ye." "It's naething wrong, Sandy?" said Aunt Tibbie.

"Nae, nacthing but laziness, an' I couldna help that. I've been asleep, in a traunce—in a stupor—like a toad in a stane, for all these years, and have come to life this verra day!"

Then I told them all about it; and sic things as traunces—though no maybe, to last as lang as mine-had been heard o' before, and they could not but believe it; but they were awa'. again to Rab's wedding, frae which they'd come hame only to fetch a silver cup, that was to drink the healths o' the bride and bridegroom.

"Auntie, where's my silver mug, that I won at the games at the laird's hair'st?" I asked. "Safe put away wi' the chaney, lad, an' noo it's yours again."

"Auntie, wud ve tak it as my gift ta Maggie? and, uncle, will ye gie my message to Rab, that I'll no stay here to bring an ill name or suspicion on him or his; but if he'd come an' gie his hand before I'm awa'? 'Twill be little to him and much to me, though I've been true to him for a whole lifetime-what's gane of it, at least."

So auntie took the silver mug, and they both left me, but not till I had heard how, two days after I had gane, David Preece had been to Donald Miller's cottage, an' offered Maggie a necklace o' gaudy beads, an' how Maggie handed them back to him, though he told her he was to leave Slievochan next day. Aunt Tibbie heard o' this, and when Maggie told what was the like o' the bauble, there was a cry for Preece, till it was heard how Rory Smith hadna' been seen for those three days, and I hadna' been found or heard of.

So ye ken, it was which o' us should come back first wad be ca'd to find the other twa. I sat brood-broodin', waitin' for aunt and uncle to return. Eatin' an' drinkin' and smokin' (for there was beef an' whisky, and a cold pie o' auntie's making); but I wadna' change my claes till they should gae wi' me to the cliff face.

Before the sun was off the sea I heard a sound of voices outside, and in a minute I had a hand o' Rab and a hand o' Maggie and her mither, an' half a dozen o' our fishers round us who'd known me from a laddie, and then uncle said, "Now let us away to the cliff path before any o' the rest come back frae the wedding. While they think Rab an' Maggie hae gone off on the sly, as indeed they hae, an' are ganging ower to the island in the new boat to Rab's cottie."

"Twas gran' o' ye, Rab, an' o' ye, too, Maggie, to come to see me on your weddin' day," I said. "I'll no forget it when I'm far awa'."

"I would ha' been no gran' not to ha' come," said Rab, "to tell our brither that we stan' against all that daur accuse him o' wrang. Why need ye gae, Sandy? Stay and tak the brunt o' it."

"An' for why, Rab? To bring trouble an' cold looks upon them that I'd as sune die as cause grief to, an that when there's no need o' me to work here. Nae, nae, I'm awa' to sea, Rab; an' when I come hame, only friends need know who 'tis, except, indeed, I should find Rory Smith alive in my travels; and who knows but what I may find puir David Preece, and get my necklace back. "Dinna touch it-dinna touch it! said Aunt Tibbie, shudderin'. So we all went to the cliff, and there, standin' by the stane, in my withered class and puckered shoon, and wi'my whitened face an' all, I told them again; and we men went down to the hole on the cliff side, while the women sat on the stane above, and we shook hands all round. That same evening two boats shot out o' our little bay, the first one a new craft, Rab's ain, wi's gran' flag flying; and carrying him and his bonnie bride hame: Auntic an' Mistress was a man's face peerin' through the | men forward. Behind it was a rowboat, wi' a piper at the prow, playin' the bride hame. In this boat we all went back to Slievochan, except Rab and Maggie; and once more I slept in my old room till mornin'; when, wi' a fit-out o' claes and some money that I was to repay as soon as I could draw my wages, I set out for Eng-

It was when the Polar Expedition of 1827 was getting ready, and I was one o' them that joined it, though ye may not know my name.

I'll no' describe anything o' that voyage, sin' ye will ha' it that I'm repeatin' frae book; but I'm near to the end o' my yarn, now. When we met the last o' the natives near to the Pole, there was a party came out to barter with us, and one man came forward to speak English, which he did sae weel that we lookit hard at him. We had little to barter at that time but presently this fellow pulls out something frae his pouch and holds it up by the end, and ye'll no believe it, but there was the row o' beads that had nigh lost me my life, and had quite lost me my hame, above ten years before! Up to him I strode. "David Preece," I shouted in his ear, "ye can gae back to Slievochan, for 'twas no' you that killit Rory Smith, nor that stole my present meant for Maggie Miller.

'No," said Preece, slowly, after looking round to see whether any of the Esquimaux noticed him; "an' I'll tell you for your comfort that you didn't kill Rory Smith, neither; for when I went to the great American plains, after leaving Scotland and finishing a job in Cornwall, I went across with a party of trappers and Indians, and there was Rory sitting on a mus-tang and looking for all the world like a Mexikin. Veracity of Birds.

"In 1873," says M. de Lautrie, "I took five little sparrow-hawks from a high tower and put them in a cage on the balcony. The parent birds immediately brought them food, and I was not surprised to see that this food consisted of twelve mice, four large lizards and six mole crickets. A meal of like size was brought every day for a month. At one time there were fifteen field mice, two little birds and a young rabbit. Last year I made the same experiment with the same general result, one meal consisting of twelve young nightingales, one lark, three moles and one hedgehog. The parents always ate the heads of their prey, and picked from the bodies of the dead birds some of their feathers. In the case of the hedgehog, the only part not eaten by these voracious little creatures, was the skin of the back. which was too much for their maws. In one month the five baby hawks rid the world, by actual count, of 420

To Save Apple Trees From Mice. Every fall orchardists are reminded that, if they don't do something to prevent it, their apple trees are likely to be spoiled by being gnawed by mice, and among the remedies recommended are tar and oil boiled together and applied to the butt of the trees. If there were no other remedy than this we should let our apple trees take their chances, and, if only one in eight or ten was ruined, should think we were fortunate; for while oil and tar will keep away mice they will greatly check and retard growth of the trees and do more damage than good in a large orchard. Besides. there are cheaper and better ways of protection. When the first snow comes, go into your orchard and stamp the snow down round the butt of each tree, repeat the process until you have six or eight inches of solid snow about them, and your trees will not be troubled by mice. Or, take a peck of common sand and bank each tree; or what is better yet, if you can get ashes, make your banking of these. Mice always work un' the snow and near the ground, anything which will prevent t getting at the lower eight or inches of the tree may be relied save it.

Brine for Butter.

Among the many devices for keeping butter in a manner that will preserve the fresh, rosy flavor of the new, with all its sweetness, is the following from the Duchess Farmer, which is said to be entirely successful: To three gallons of brine strong enough to bear an egg, add a quarter of a pound of nice white sugar, and one tablespoonful of saltpeter. Boil the brine, and when it is cold strain carefully. Make your butter into rolls. and wrap each separately in a clean white muslin cloth, tying up with a string. Pack a large jar full, weighthe butter down, and pour over the brine until all is submerged. This will keep really good butter perfectly sweet and fresh a whole year. Be careful not to put upon ice butter that you wish to keep for any length of time. In summer, when the heat will not admit of butter being made into rolls, pack closely in small jars, and use the same brine, allow it to cover the butter at the depth of at least four inches. This excludes the air, and answers as well as the first method suggested.

Liniment for Horses.

R. S. Steel, Monmouth, N. J., writes to the N. Y. Farmers' Club: "Some time ago I was a good deal worried with a couple of horses which had sore necks. I tried various remedies without success, and was beginning to despair when the following recipo came to my notice: 'The inner bark of white oak boiled down in an iron kettle (never use a brass one) until ih is as black as ink; while boiling drop in a piece of alum about the size of a hen's egg.' This liniment is to be applied with a sponge, and is good for any sore or bruise; in fact is a good thing to keep in one's barn ready to use when occasion requires. As I found this so useful, I venture to send it for the benefit of others who may not be in posession of anything as good. I think it is also an excellent plan in warm weather to clean the collars often with castile

How Can I Raise Oninces?

To this question the Germantown Telegraph says: "They can be raised as easily as apples or pears in the way we shall describe. There is no secret about it. Get the 'Orange' variety; see that they are entirely free from the borer before planting. Set six or eight feet apart in rich soil. Bandage the stem with six or eight wrappings of old muslin, or any kind of cloth, as far down in the ground as possible, as the roots start from near the surface. Let this bandage run six or eight inches above the ground, then pack the soil compactly a couple of inches around the bandage, and renew this every spring. Fine, large, golden quinces, rivaling the largest oranges, will bless you annually."

No plants ever grow without seeds to start from, and no animals come without parentage; we have no spontaneous trees and plants, nor any spontaneous cows, pigs, and geese. The fact that many seeds are minute and inconspicuous, and when mixed with the soil are not seen, and do not germinate until brought up near the surface, has led some superficial observers to think they grow without seed. We know of some plants, the small seeds of which scattered through the soil do not constitute a millionth part of his bulk, when circumstances favor growth, will spring up and cover the whole surface. - Country Gentleman.

I wish to say that twenty years' experience as a farmer in Illinois has learned me that the following is a "Time is money," as a youth sure preventive: For five bushels of said on the fifth occasion of breaking, wheat take one pound of sulphate of his watch. eyrey kernal, sprinkle it over and shovel it till all is wet; then sow any time when you please and you will no-smut.

THE PRIEST SAID I MUST DIE.

Dr. Bowyer, Dear Sir:—Having suffered for years with Rheumatism, and having about five weeks ago had an unusually severe attack, so that I was unable to get up or more without the most exercuciating pain—my physician told me that I must die. I accordingly called in the priest, who also said I must die; but a neighbor told me of your KING of PAIR, and induced me to try it, and it soon relieved me, and in three days I was able to le around, and now am well. I would freely recommend your medicine to all who are afflicted with that painful discase. I believe it to be all, and more than you have recommended it to be. Yours with respect.

LORENZ EGHREINEII, Cleveland Ohio.

Dr. Bowyer, Dear Sir:—About the last of September any family were all taken down with Diphtheria. First my little son Matty, for whom I called in a physician who prescribed for him, but he suffered very much for some time and then died. Afterwards the rest of my children were taken down with the same disease, and were very bad, and heaving throug a friend of your King of PAIN I administored it to them, and it has wonderfully cured them all, for which I am very thankful. I would further say that I have been afflicted with Rheumatism for a long time, for which I used your meticine, and it gave me relief almost instantly.

Frazier's Root Bitters. The Best Blood Purifier and Strengthening Medicine the World Produces. They are now used by Millions of People in America, also have found their way to Foreign Lands. The result is Good Health, Strong Constitutions, and Freedom from Disease.

A CARD FROM Dr. FRAZIER. A GARD FROM Dr. FRAZIER.

Having suffered more or less for years with Weakness of the Lougs, and a recordinus disease which appeared on my face in pimples and blotches, and after detering with the best physicians, and trying many kinds of advertised remedies (including Sarsparilla,) without facing any permanent cure, I experimented by compounding toot, using the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discorered a most wonderful Blood Scarcher or Medical Bitters, which not only gave me great relief, but after a few week's time effected a radical cure. I then prepared a quantity of the Root Bitters, and was in the habit of giving them away to the sick. I found the medicine possessed the most wenderful healing virtues, effecting cures of all discesses originating from bad blood or weakness of the system, as it by magic. Multiplied cures increased the demand, and the name of Frezier's Root laid.

The layerst and shrewfact Jenters in medicines in all creased the demand, and the name of Frezier's Root litters has now become a househeld word all over the land.

The largest and shrewdest dealers in medicines in all the principal cities applied for the agency, and I was induced to establish a labratory for preparing my Rect litters in Gieveland, from which I sam now tending cut in answer to orders from all parts of the Union, the packages which make countless numbers sharers in this great blessing that came to my knowledge through the visitation of disease.

Root lifters are strictly a Medical Preparation, such as was used in the good old days of our ferefathers, when people were cured by some simple root or plant, and when calonel and other poisons of the mineral kingdom were unknown. For Scrofula, Consumption, Eruptions, Rheumatism, File, Heart Disease, Bivziness, Liver Complaint, Kidney and Urinary Diseases, Fever and Ague, Dispersia, Lost Vita.ity, and Broken Down Constitutions, these Root Sitters are universally admitted to be the most wonderful discovery in the world. Their searching, healing properties penetrate every portion of the human trane. For weakly, nervous young men, suffering from lass of memory, etc., caused from abuses in early life, and to delicate females, these Root Bitters are especially recommended. No other medicine will cure Scurvey, Syphila, Salt Rhenn, Boils, Tetter, Ring Worm, White Swellings, Sore Eyes, Running of the Ears, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Catarth, Cancerous Fermations, Dropsy. Erysipelas, Pimples, Flesh Worms, Pustules, Blotches, and all skin Diseases to quickly as the Root Bitters. Root Bitters strike at the very foundation of disease by cleaning the blood, and stroughthening the system; hence they must reach all diseases by purification and nourishment. No me licine ever had such a success. It is my desire that the suffering all over the world should receive the test that the suffering all over the world should receive the besit of my renedy, and particularly such persons as have a found to the content and the process of th guage is read or spoken, they will, for long years, constitute a record of official corruption and crime, such as there is no parallel for in our own history, or in that of any country that I know of. In this hour, if one sentiment of pity, one word of sympathy could find utterance from me, it would be because I feel that the late Senator of War is the proper outgrowth, the true exponent of corruption, extravagance, the misgovernment that has cursed teis land for years past. That being my own reflection, I will discharge my duty best to myself and to the House by demanding the previous question on the adoption of the resolution." After a spirited discussion the previous question was seconded and the House proceeded to vote on the resolutions, and they were unani-

The Senate Postoffice Committee, under the leadership of its chairman, Mr. Hamlin, of Maine, is engaged in an attempt to regain popularity which it lost by the increase of postage on transient mail matter, without repealing that increase, Mr. Hamlin now proposes to change all the other postal rates, but to leave the postage on third-class matter where it stands at present. He proposes to reduce regular letter postage to two cents, and increase all other rates to make up for this reduction. There is certainly no popular demand for such a measure as this, and we think it would work disadvantageously to the interest of the Postoffice Department, without conferring any compensating benefit upon the people. With letter postage at three cents, the Postoffice Department is not a paying institution, and it is universally admitted that, for so large a country, where many letters are carried thousands of nearly as much. The President of the United States has been selected as arbitrator between Paraguay and the Argentine States in relation to the territory between Pilcomego and Rio Verde. John and Anthony Gerberick, of Niles, have been refused a new trial and been sentenced for stealing hogs from the Michigan Central Railroad to ten months each at Jackson, by Judge Coolidge.

Hon. Charles T. Gorham, of Marshall, has been appointed Assistant Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Gorham has long been a well known and influential citizen of this State, and his appointment is considered an excellent one in all respects.

The question of bridging the Dethroit river is now the source of much comment. The railroad interests fayor it strongly, while the marine interests as strongly oppose it. We doubt if the bridge will ever be authorized by Congress. From the Lansing Republican we take the following report of the State Treasury. The balance of cash in the State Treasury Feb. 19 was $1,187,835.58; receipts during the week ending Feb. 26 were $10,529. 67; payments during same time were $28,451.14; balance in Treasury Feb. 26, 1876, $1,160,908.12; decrease for the week $17,927.47. Senator Hamlin has introduced a bill to undo the mischief of which he was the mover in the forty-third Congress. His bill provides a sliding scale of rates, according to distance, the third-class mail matter, beginning at 1 cent for each 2 ounces not exceeding 300 miles; for 800 miles, 2 cents; for 1,500, 3 cents; and for each additional 1,000 miles, 1 cent extra for each 2 ounces. A special and cheaper rate is proposed for transient newspapers and magazines. Dr. Linderman, Director of the Mint at Philadelphia, states, so it is reported, that the United States owns $14,000,000 of silver bullion, and that this amount would coin $16,000,-000 of currency, $12,000,000 of which is already coined and ready for distribution. He further says that the cost of keeping silver money in circulation, beyond the interest on boncs necessary for the purchase of bullion, is less than the expense required to keep the fractional currency affoat.

Mr. Randall recently introduced in the House of Representatives a bill granting immunity to witnesses for the United States. The dispatches state that Senator L. M. Morrill, of Maine, has been tendered the position of Secretary of War by President Grant, but has held the matter under advisement, and will probably decline the office. Should he accept, the Government will secure a man of marked ability and unquestioned integrity, and in all respects a man of high order. His long service as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations has made him entirely familiar with the whole machinery of the War Department. The recent decision of the Supreme Count of the United State in the case of the United States and others against the Union Pacific Railroad Company, holding that the terminal point of the line of said railroad is at Council Bluffs, in Iowa, instead of Omaha, in Nebraska, is not only important to the parties to the suit, the two cities mentioned, but determines many novel and interesting questions of law not hitherto adjudged in any of the courts of this country.

Maine held her local elections on the 6th, and the results fail to show the powerful reaction which was predicted as the result of the War Dopartment exposures. In Portland, k n. Francis Fessender, (Rep.) was elected Mayor by 526 majority in a total vote of 5,949. Last year the city went Democratic by 429 majority. The Republicans were also successful in the election at Saco, Bath, Lewiston, Rockland and Gardineer.

The stamp is represented by a shield, bearing at the top, in a seroll, the words, "U. S. Postage," beneath which is a representation of a mounted postboy, on a groundwork of 200. This year it is Republican by telegraph poles and wires; beneath this is an engine and a postal car, and at the bottom of the shield, within a scroll, are the words "three cents." The dates 1776 and 1876 are at the top and the bottom of the shield respectively. These envelopes will be manufactured and sold in the government building on the Centennial grounds, and will be furnished under velopes without additional cost. A Washington correspondent to the Evening News, under date of March 6th, says: "Senator Sherman, Chairman of the senate conference, has just edlivered a speech on the financial question. He urged standing for the resumptien act, favored contraction of the bank circulation and unlocking the capital locked up therein. He thought the national banks might be efficient aids to resumption. He has no fears for greenbacks and did not think it necessary to contract the present volume much, and said that confidence and time' were more needed than anything else. He thought there was no doubt of the resumption in 1878 under the present law which seemed to be ample. Ho opposed the repeal of the legal tender act. He would not object to funding a small quantity to strengthen the treasury, and was inclined to favor a small tax on tea and coffee only to enlarge the revenue and allow the abolition of oppressive taxes." The Chamber of Commerce of New York, on Thursday last, took theroughly representative and intelligent action on the Bankrupt law question. After discussion it adopted a series of

"That the repeal of the existing Bankrupt law would be highly detrimental to the best interests of the business men of all classes, whether debtors or creditors, throughout the entire country; that the Chamber of Commerce believe these interests will be better promoted by amending the existing law rather than by its total repeal; * * * that to be compelled, by the repeal of the National Bankrupt law, to recur to the thirty-seven different and conflicting systems of bankruptcy existing under State laws, thereby reviving the sharp practices of attachments, assignments, and the preference of creditors, would be most unwise and highly prejudicial to the best interests of the business community throughout the Union; that, in in the opinion of this Chamber, it is the daty of Congress to so modify the present law, in the light of the experience of the past eight years of its operation, as to prevent as far as possible existing abuses under it, by adopting more stringent measures for the treatment of dishonest debtors, by extending the time within which criminal prosecutions for obtaining credit under false representations may be brought, and executions, sales, transfers, mortgages, and preferential judgments may be contested, thereby rendering the system more in consonance whether debtors or creditors." The rebuilding of Hillsdale College, Mich., destroyed by fire about two years ago, is in a promising condition. The plan involves the erection of a group of buildings, one of which, we notice, is to be named "Griffin Hall," after Prof. Charles P. King, youngest daughter of Ezra Convis, known as Gen. Convis, who claims to have never received her share of her father's estate, which consists of several thousand acres of land in some of the best parts of the State, purchased of speculators in 1834 and 1835. Mrs. King was a minor at the time of her father's death, and was not mentioned in any of the transactions connected with the estate, Carbon, Secretary. thio Correspondence. Toleno, O., March 2, 1876. EDITOR RECORD: - Wednesday, February 16th, I turned face towards the east over the Michigan Central. It was a snowy day and as I journeyed east, and inclining towards the north, up through Eaton County, I found still more appearance of winter; more snow and the common aspects which a northern winter bears. Then, as I turned again toward the south, over the Jackson Division of the Michigan Southern, less snow till upon the main line of that road one saw little to remind him of the real season of the year-fields bare, streams open, yards in front of dwellings wearing that semi-green face which speaks of Charlotte, county seat of Eaton County, is a thriving little town, with at least two rail-roads passing through, the Peninsula and the Grand Rapids Division of the Michigan Central. Upon the Peninsula we passed a station marked "Olivet," which I suppose indicates that the seat of Olivet College is near. But, unfortunately, neither town nor college were visible but only timber and newly cleared resolutions reported by Mr. Elliott C. lands. It is interesting to see such educational enterprises leading the way in forming communities and giving tone to society. I have long heard of Olivet as founded in faith and opening its doors with a liberal hand to the culture of the different races and sexes. It seemed a good place to begin. In Toledo we were having dusty streets till the very last days of February when rain and sleet vanished them for the use of sleighs. And March, true to its old instincts, comes in with snow and storm, and this morning the streets are musical with sleigh bells, and all are making haste to enjoy their sleigh-rides before it is have in March made up to us in some tude rarely escapes. It was gratifying to me to see Buchanan holding her own during these hard times, and in some most important respects prospering; to see the churches greatly augmenting their numbers and influence. These things lie at the basis, and while they are strong and healthy other interests and enterprises will be to a good extent. We hope since religion has thus had such added impulse, it will have force enough with all the good graces and self-respect of such a nice town as Buchanan, to dismiss from its midst any attempt to multiply saloons and liquor shops. Of course such can plead no excuse for being there, except to absorb means which, but for them, would go to build up the town and make it better and more inviting to those outside. All citizens must see their interest here. Then, if Gov. Bagley's Proclamation for centennial tree-planting is observed, what a place of beauty it may become and will be in the coming year! It was a felicitous thought in the good Governor of Michigan. We hope the authorities of other states will imitate so thoughtful an example. Yours Truly, J. K. DEERING.

The One Hundredth Anniversary of the birth of this nation renders this a year of peculiar interest to every American citizen. It should be a year long to be remembered not only by our own people but by the entire civilized world; a year in which we should give most satisfactory proof that our existence as a free government, of and-by a free and united people, is a fixed and irrevocable fact -that in every department of national life our growth has been vigorous and healthful—and that our advancement and progress are untrammeled

The Republican party points with pride to its record of the past-a record which is brilliant beyond comparison in purity, fidelity, and a successful administration of national affairs in spite of the malevolent attacks made upon it by its natural enemies and those who it has scourged from its ranks for dishonesty and disloyalty. It feels that its work is by no means complete, and, rising to the emergencies of the hour, stands ready to grapple carnestly with every question of national importance. To this end it cordially invites the support of all high minded and patriotic citizens, regardless of social or party distinc-The Republican County Committee would respectfully urge upon the citizens of this county the necessity of a thorough organization of the party, and would suggest the immediate formation of a Republican Club in each township, for the dissemination of political information and for promotion of constant and friendly interchange of political sentiment. These clubs should be placed in communication with the County Committee, and should become working members of the body politic. An earnest effort is needed to defeat the enemies of the Republic who are again swarming from their hiding places with ill-concealed venom and hate. And the first work, and the best, must be done at the source of all pelitical progress and strength, the township and city ward. The demand is for competent and honest men, and the party must meet it with even more care than usual. With such men as leaders we izen take an active part, and thus ensure faithful and incorrupt representation. By order of the Republican County Committee. JAMES GRAHAM, Chairman. JAMES H. CANFIELD, Secretary.

I was an invalid for over eight years, was treated by cleven Old School Physicians, and five Homopathic. I gave up all hopes of recovcry, and one day my husband saw Dr. Seely's sign and called in to talk with him. The Dr. came to see me and he said he could cure me. My trouble was female weakness, and nervous prostration. He took my case when I was unable to be on my feet one minute at a time, and in ten days I was able to walk across the floor and back without help from anyone. Ladies will find his treatment much more pleasant to undergo than any other form of treatment as he does not torture you or give you any thing that produces suffering. I am now a well woman and have not been sick, excent with colds, since the Dr. cured me six years ago I firmly believe he can cure any case of female weakness that is possible to cure.

The undersigned was afflicted with a derangement of the liver and kidneys. I employed one of our best physicians who attended to my case nearly four months; I lost nearly a summer's work and became very feeble; could scarcely walk about; I was persuaded by a friend to call on Dr. Seely, who took my case in hand and in about four weeks I was able to resume my work, and, with the exception of a very few days, I have enjoyed my usual health; he treated my case over one year ago, and it did not cost me one quarter as much to get well as it cost me to remain sick under the old form of treatment. I cheerfully recommend the Dr. to all those that are afflicted, as I am confident he can cure when others cannot. CHARLES J. RYAN. No. 40 Antoine St., Grand Rapids.

Consumption Cured! An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple Vegetable Remedy, for the speedy and permanent Cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a Positive and Radical Cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send (free of charge) to all who desire, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. A Few Words to the Amieted. As I am asked the question, every few days whether I have any faith in Dr. Seely, or his wife, I will say that I have taken medicine for the last twenty five years, and have been prescribed for by as many different physicians for the following diseases: Scrofula, king's evil, rheumatism, neuralgia, heart, lung, liver and kidney diseases, but obtained no cure. About one year ago, I had almost given up all hopes of obtaining any relief, and must soon pass to the other side, where it is said no traveler ever returns. But my desire to remain with my family as long as possible, persuaded me to call on Dr. Seely and wife, whom I had never seen, Broken Down Constitutions, Pimples on when Mrs. Seely, without asking me the face, and every kind of humor in the any questions, gave a diagnosis of my case better than I had ever had it done by any physician. She said that my brain, spine, lungs, heart, spleen, liver and kidneys were in a very bad condition, causing a severe pain in my hips, running down the sciatic nerve from the small of my back to my knees, and that it was caused from impure blood, but she WALL PAPER! WALL PAPER! at said if I would take magnetic treatbottom cash prices. FROM NEW TROY.

On the 16th day of February, 1876, a large gray wolf was killed on the farm of P. J. Pierce, about one and one half miles east of this village. Mr. Pierce had missed poultry, pigs and sheep, but the sheep were left on the farm generally pretty well eaten by some unknown beast. Isaac N. Slater, a trapper, thought he would try some poison and catch the bird, and had the satisfaction of finding the above mentioned gentry of the forest lying dead a few feet from the poisoned dead sheep. Mr. Slater took the hide of the wolf to Niles and got three dollars for the same; he also expects eight dollars bounty.

Joseph Conely (alias Henry Conely) was brought before Esq. Borden, on complaint of Dr. A. B. Herman, for adultery with Mary A. Herman, wife of complainant. [From the South Bend Tribune.] A woman giving her name as Hariet Baker bought a draft for $5 at the First National Bank, Jan. 20, afterwards raising the amount to $50 and disposing of it to Wilson Bros., shirt dealers of Chicago. The bank here learned of the fraud last month; when making settlement with the bank in Chicago which held the paper, and Mr. Kimball mentioned the circumstance to Mr. Lindsay, teller of the South Bond National Bank. Shortly after, a woman appeared at the latter-institution for a draft for $8, stating that her name was Helen Baker, and the similarity of names arousing suspicion that the two women were one and the same person, the bank on whom the draft was drawn was notified and, sure enough, the draft came in to them raised to $80.

The change had been made by adding the letter "y" to the eight.

A grind-stone about five feet in diameter, in Wm. Jack's department fof the new Oliver Plow Works, burst Monday while making about two hundred revolutions per minute. DY FATHER RYAN. My feet are wearied, and my hands are tired-My soul oppressed— And with desire have I long desired

Tis hard to toil-when toil is almost vain In barren ways:
'Tis hard to sow and never garner grain In harvest days.

Rest-only rest.

The burden of my days is hard to bear—But God knows best; And I have prayed, but vain has been my prayer, For rest—sweet rest.

'Tis hard to plant in spring and never reap
The autumn yield;
'Tis hard to till—and when 'tis tilled to weep
O'er fruitless field.

And so I cry a weak and human cry,

So heart-oppressed; and so I sigh a weak and human sigh For rest—for rest. My way has wound across the desert years, And cares infest

My path; and through the flowing of hot tears I pined for rest. Twas always so; when still a child, I laid On mother's breast
My wearied little head; e'en then I prayed,

As now, for rest. And I am restless still. 'Twill soon be o'er; For, down the west Life's sun is setting, and I see the shore Where I shall rest.

Every year increases the popularitv of this valuable Hair Preparation; which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring Gray or Faded Hair to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPA-RATION for its intended purposes." Sold by all Druggists, and Dealers in Medicines.

Price One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye. FOR THE WHISKERS. As our Renewer in many cases requires too long a time, and too much care, to restore gray or faded Whiskers, we have prepared this dye, in one preparation; which will quickly and effectually accomplish this result. It is easily applied, and produces a color which will neither rub nor wash off. Sold by all Druggists. Price Fifty Cents. Manufactured by R. P. HALL, & CO.,

He was on his knees to her. His face was flushed, his eyes gleamed passionately into hers, he talked rapidly: "Nothing shall separate us evermore, my darling. For your sake I will heard the lion in his den! I will face death on the battle field! I will endure all hardship, all suffering, all misery !" He paused and looked cagerly to her, with his whole soul quivering in his eyes. "Will you do all this for the sake of my love?" said she, gazing cornestly into the burning eyes. "Yes, yes; a thousand times yes!"—"And if we wed," continued she, flushing slightly, "will you get up first and build the fire?" With a shrick of despair he fled. -Danbury News.

Such thoughts as this over-come the susceptible mind of the editor of the Livingston (Ky.) Era: How often have we seen the blooming maiden upon whose face smiles danced like sunbeams upon the bosom of the sea, and whose life gave promise of happiness unalloyed and hope unrequitted, sitting with a huge wad of gumin her mouth, and her beautiful chin rising and falling like a wave upon the ocean, while the meek pastor endeavored to point her to the New Jerusalem.
