THE REATHEN CHINES IN A NEW ROLE.

The Yellow Man with almond eyes Is in disgrace just now; What has he done to be the cause Why do they meet so solemnly His banishment to plan? Simply because he's proved himself To be the Coming Man.

They call him a mere brute compared With their Caucasian race; Then if they can't compete with him,

The deeper their disgrace;
They feet his cunning hand and brain,
That's why they wish to ban
Forever from their envious shores
The Yellow Coming Man.

They want to turn him out because He works for little pay, Saying a white man cannot live On fifty cents a day; We answer, and it has been true Since first the world began, That he who has the fewest wants—

He is the Coming Man.

If white men, claiming finer blood, Of better food have need, Superior heart in them should show They're worthy of their feed. Yet in the finest works of skill, Deny the truth wholeun, The white man is a clumsy beast Beside the Coming Man.

THE COBRA HEAD.

BY JANE G. AUSTEN.

A ride of ten miles before breakfast was as much a religious observance with Max Sheldon, as prostration before the rising sun is with a Parsec, or a courtier; for this young man, without becoming a materialist, worshiped nature and her works, including his own fine and carefully-cultivated physique.

Perfect bodily health, so he argued is the foundation of virtue, success and content; and having attained this condition in his own person, Max Sheldon devoted a considerable portion of his thought and time to retaining it. So far, well; but when the admirer of physical perfection permitted himself to become also a loather of physical misfortune; when he turned, with scarce concealed horror, from the halt, the blind, the maimed, and diseased, co-heirs with himself of the Eternal purpose, then must we grant that Max Sheldon showed but human ished upon him. The last mile of the ten usually brought Mr. Sheldon home through an old fashioned suburb, or rather outskirt of the city, a region of antiquated and neglected houses, lingering gardens, wooden fences, and a general air of decayed respectability, shouldered here and there by some pushing upstart of a new house, high, thin, smart and shemmy. In the quietest part of this quiet locale, Sheldon had often, noticed a sombre building standing in a square, paved court, isolated from its neighbors both in fact and in effect; for from the ironbarred cellared basement windows, to the high balustrade around the roof: from the immovable and cobweb-bound front door to the grim shadows of the court yard, the house expressed repulsion, mystery, and a dogged defiance of intrusion, which none but the bravest or the obtusest could have

Belonging to neither of these class es, Max Sheldon had ridden by the old house day after day, and even year after year, without caring to investigate, though he could not fail to perceive the peculiarity that hung about it, the isolation that surrounded

Still, without thinking, he had, for some reason, felt so sure that nothing young, fresh, or beautiful, could be closed within those four grim walls, that it was with an audible expression of surprise he first greeted the appearance of a young girl standing at an open window in the front of the house, and looking anxiously into the Checking his horse. Sheldon sat for a moment looking in mute surprise at the woman who thus addressed him. She was young, rarely beautiful, with great masses of dusky hair, like gold spun in a cavern underground, dark, still eyes, and a skin clear and pale as a lily. Her voice, sonorous and sweet, had a peculiar listening tone, as if unused to its own sound; and the pure, yet unabashed regard she bent upon the young man, was that of a nun who, for the first time, looks beyoud her convent walls. Her dress, costly yet delicate, was fashioned like that in some old portrait, perhaps of Titan; and, indeed, the whole effect of face, figure, draperies, and even the black background of the interior; and the frame of heavy wood-work was so much more like a picture out of the sixteenth century, than flesh, blood, and belongings of the nineteenth, that Max Sheldon, sitting motionless and mute, staring at the lovely vision, never thought of reply to her request until she repeated, still in that vibrating and unaccustomed voice, "Sir, will you come into the house?

presently found himself waiting before a small, but determined-looking door at the rear of the house, and listening to hear the lock, bolts, and chain, which secured it, successively undone by the weak and unused hands of the young girl, who presently opened the door, and bade him enter. Sheldon made haste to obey, and the girl, pausing to fasten the door with a single bolt, led him through a long, dark passage, up some stairs, and to the door of a chamber at the back of the house. Here she paused, and for the first time showed some signs of ."This is his room," said she, fixing her wistful eyes upon Sheldon's face; "but he never allowed me to enter it. I heard him groaning almost all the night; then he gave one great cry, and was still. That was in the early twilight, and although since that I have knocked and called to him a great many times, he has never answered. He used to rise with the first light, and the least sound disturbed him. I fear he is very ill." "Shall I try to rouse him now? Perhaps he is only sleeping heavily said Sheldon, hesitatingly. "He never sleeps heavily, and he grouned so in the night! I went to him, then, but he would not let me in. I am sure something is wrong," murmured the girl, turning her pleading eyes from Sheldon to the door, and back again. "Very well. I will open the door if you wish, although none but the most serious danger to your father can justify the act," said the young man, placing his hand upon the latch, and waiting for the gesture of affirmation, which the girl immediately

A slight movement of the door convinced Sheldon that it was secured by only an ordinary fastening, and placing his strong shoulder against it, he applied a slow, steady pressure, which soon had the desired effect. The decayed wood and rusty iron parted company with harsh outcries, the door flew open, and, with a grave gesture of encouragement, Sheldon stood aside to allow the young girl to enter first, lingering himself in the passage until a suppress d cry of terror and appeal summoned him, without further regard for observances, to her side. Beside him knelt the girl, anxious, and terrified; and yet, as

Sheldon found time to say to himself, hardly stricken with an orphan's grief. "Was he your father?" asked he. "Yes; and, oh, sir, can you do nothing for him? Is he really—"

"He is gone, I fear; but we will use every possible means for his recovery. Is there no one but ourselves in the house?" "No one. Bunce will not come until noon to day," said the girl, simply. "And shall I leave you here alone while I go for help, or will you go and leave me?" asked Sheldon, who had already convinced himself that no amount of help would ever bring life again to that cold and distorted clay. "You may go, please—I do not know how. I never went out since I can remember," said the girl.

"And you are not afraid to stay?" asked Sheldon, not waiting then to ask explanation of this statement. which yet he found himself repeating beneath his breath as he strode along toward the nearest druggist's shop. "Never out since she remembers! What sort of fairy-princess have I stumbled upon, then?" Medical skill only confirmed the young man's first intuition. The patient had died hours before the examination, so said the physician, of congestion of the brain, with symptoms of accumulative poison, of some unknown description, pervading the entire system. From this physician, as well as from the druggist, to whom he first applied, and from Bunce, who proved to be a char-woman, who daily performed the duties of the little household. Sheldon learned that the deceased had occupied this old house for nearly twenty years; and that, in all that time, no one had ever seen him out of it, or had been admitted within its door, always excepting Mrs.. Bunce, a close mouthed and apparently excessively stupid person, who said that many years before-how many she could not tell-"the master," as she always called him, had bidden her into his house to perform certain menial duties day by day. She had served him ever since, and had, under his orders at first, and since under those of the young mistress, provided the household supplies, and attended to all sorts of commissions, varying from dress materials to drugs, which she had obtained under written directions. sometimes at one large shop, and sometimes at another. Also, she carried er or daughter, or had ever heard any used; and when in gaining the necessary permission for burial, and in settling the affairs of the deceased. Max Sheldon had recourse to those civic and legal records, wherein every man must, perforce, be registered in some manner, he found that the deceased had made his returns, bought his house, made certain investments, and signed his receipts, in the rare cases where these were unavoidable, in the name of A. Person, declining any explanation or addition to this somewhat more than doubtful cognomer, and hardly attempting to conceal behind this slight subterfuge his determined refusal of his own name.

· Perplexed more than satisfied, Max Sheldon returned from his day's inquiry to visit the orphan, of whom he felt himself, in some sort, the guardian. He had already engaged Mrs. Bunce to remain constantly, with her until she should remove from the old house; and had instructed that worthy woman, upon no account, to permit her charge to wander abroad, or to spend over much time in the room, where the body of her father now lav decently prepared for the grave.

"It isn't like she'll be wanting to go abroad now, she that never was abroad in her life; and when she never stayed with the old man alive, why should she take to him, now he is dead?" replied Mrs Bunce. "So the father and daughter were not much together?" asked Max Sheldon, a little curiously. "I've known a week to pass they not see each other once." said Mistress Bunce; adding shrewdly, "but he told me often enough that I was paid to hold my tongue; and there's no knowing when one's safe from them kind of folks. Maybe he'll prudent and sagacious person. The funeral over, Max Sheldon sought an interview with his ward, as he already styled the young girl so strangely thrown upon his care. She received him in a dusky, old-fashioned light threw out her rich, young beauty in startling contrast. She had not altered the color or fashion of her dress, or assumed a sorrow she did er who looks out of his own swee reverie to answer with patience; inthe outer world, and who only awaits the moment of solitude to forget all in grasping again the thread of that broken vision.

Sheldon, feasting his eyes upon the wonderful beauty and grace of the physique, the perfect health and condition of the delicate organization, hardly noticed this absorbed manner, as he went on, in fluent phrase, to invite the orphan to a home in his own house, where, as he told her, his mother and sister were waiting to receive her, and would gladly make her welremain with them.

To this proposition the orphan assented courteously, and with all proper phrase of gratitude, but yet without surprise or particular emotion. This coolness a little piqued the selfstyled guardian, whose intentions and motives were really so generous that he could not but wish them under-

"I have no plans, and thank you for your offer. My name is Flora,' said she, briefly. "But your family name?" half juestioned Sheldon, the more embarassed of the two. "I do not know. I never heard girl; and leaving her, Sheldon went y himself to make the arrangements for taking home his ward, and closing the old house. But when the moment of departure arrived. Flora could with difficulty be persuaded to pass the Flora, when the servant presently arthreshold. The expanse of the outer air terrified her; the glare of the sunshine blinded her; the habit of twenty years fettered her. It was only when the dusk had fallen that Sheldon, with much difficulty and after many entreaties, succeeded in leading her, muffled in a great veil, across the court yard, and into a close carriage in waiting. The difficulty of this passage was enhanced by the young girl's persistence in herself carrying a large flower-pot containing a plant, carefully enveloped in a thick covering, and upon this plant she bestowed such attention and such anxious care. during the whole drive, that Sheldon, half vexed, and half discouraged. withdrew to his own corner of the carriage, and ceased all attempts at lady, left alone, placed the basin of conversation until, as the wheels grated against the curb-stone in front of a handeome house, he said, a little coldly, "We have arrived, Miss Flora. and my mother is waiting for you at the door. Shall I take this flowerpot while you alight?" "No, thank you. I can hold it very well. Your mother is very kind,

Sheldon, following in the footsteps of his ward, watched eagerly to see the effect upon his mother of this strange apparition; but, almost before a look of surprise had risen to the face of the elder lady, Flora, placing the flower-pot upon the floor, and untwisting the veil from her own head, appeared like a star from a cloud, brilliant, smiling and bewitching. "Thank you, madam," said she, frankly, placing her slender hands in those outstretched to receive them. "It is very good of you to make me wolcome—you, who do not know me in the least.' "But who hopes to know you, long

It is too heavy; it is unsuitable," in sisted Sheldon, red with vexation. Flora stood up and fixed her wonderful eyes full upon those of the young man for the first time. A strange thrill ran through his veins, and tin-gled at the roots of his hair. "Dear sir," said she, softly, "cannot you understand that no one-no one, I say, shall ever touch this plant while I am alive. Do not force me to speak of it again, I beg."

She stooped, gathered the flower pot in her arms, and went up the stairs, at whose head Mrs. Sheldon stood, looking back with an uneasy and troubled expression.

"What is it, my dear?" asked she,

as Flora approached. "What is the difficulty? "Nothing, madam-nothing at all. The gentleman did not quite under-

A Man of Sixty Sees a Locomotive for the First Time.

Among the crowd of spectators at the Union Pacific Depot this morning, who gathered there to see the fast transcontinental train, was an old man who had never before seen a name was Camp, and he came from Rhode Island twenty-five years ago, and located in Nebraska, where he has ever since resided, and during which time he has never been twentyfive miles away from his country home, which is far from any railroad. He has often heard of a locomotive, and knew what an engine and a train of cars looked like, as he had occasionally seen pictures of both. He had comprehension, however, of the principles upon which the machine is operated, and the locomotive, which he intently gazed at, was as much an object of curiosity to him as he was to the reporter of the Bee, who interviewed him. He spent all the morning at the depot, viewing the many engines and their workings. He said he was sixty years of age, and was going on a visit to Sarpy county.

We suggest that he be passed free to the Centennial, and exhibited as a curiosity, for he is one of the very few men in this country who have never seen a locomotive until they were sixty years old.

As the Indians would say, the sight of the engine was "good medi-cine" for him.—Omaha Herald.

Why?

as to the origin of the terms "6-penny," "10-penny," etc., as applied to ber to the pound, and in England are still reckoned in that way; that is, a "10-penny" means 1,000 to ten pounds and "6-penny" being 1,000 to six pounds, etc. Instead of the buyer asking for three pounds, six pounds, or ten pounds nails, the English abbreviation of "pun" for pound has been made to stand for penny instead of pound. When it comes to lessthan 1,000 to the pound, such as tacks, etc.; nails are reckoned as 12 oz., 8 oz., 6 oz., etc. In former years a manufacturer who made less than 1,000 nails to 10 pounds for a 10-penny nail was hardly to be found, but nowadays there are only about two-thirds the number of nails found in a pound that there used to be, and yet there is not an equivalent difference in the price.—American Grocer.

It is a curious fact that in the salt mines of Poland and Hungary the galleries are supported by wooden pillars, which are found to last unimpaired for ages, in consequence of being impregnated with salt, while pillars of brick and stone, used for the same purpose, crumble away in a short time by the decay of their mortar. It is also found that wooden piles, driven into the mud of salt flats and marshes, last for an unlimited time. and are used for the foundation of brick and stone edifices; and the practice of docking timber, by immersing it for some time in sea-water, after it has been seasoned, is generally admitted to be promotive of its durability. There are some experiments which appear to show that, after the dry rot has commenced, immersion in salt water effectually checks its progress and preserves the remainder of the timber. Of the oldest known timber, that in the Egyptian temples, 4,000 years old, nothing is said as to the causes of its preservation.

ty: "Ain't that Mary Ann Gibson on the sidewalk?" said one woman to another, in a Broadway car, yesterday. "Oh, yes; that's Mary Ann," was the response, "and that's a nice baby she has, too, isn't it? She has a pleasanter time of it since she married that carpenter than she did when she was a waiter with us at the hotel.".

Well, that's just as people thinks, answered the first speaker scornfully "There's them as thinks: it's pleasant to lug a baby round and have nothin' else on their minds, and maybe it's crops, and generally got good wheat crops following; but had come to the conclusion that it is better to cut the clover and feed to stock, and plow under the roots. By returning manure made by stock to the land, and turning under the roots, he generally got about as good crops as when he turned under the whole plant. Once had a 12 acre piece of sandy, gravelly loam which he sowed to wheat, and only reaped seven bushels to the acre. The land was full of red-root. The next spring he plowed the field sowed it to corn, about 21 bushels to the acre. When the corn was about four or five feet high and locomotive or a railroad train. His about to tassel he turned it under and sowed to wheat again. The crop yielded 24 bushel to the acre. The corn seemed to renovate the soil, and the field bore good crops thereafter. Has plowed under buckwheat and found mechanical effects good on stiff soil, but did not think it afforded much manure. At the same meeting Mr. Allis said that failure from the use of corn and buckwheat resulted from not plowing under long enough beforehand for the green crops to rot. They should be plowed under several weeks before seeding. Buckwheat is often turned in when killed by frost, and does little good. A neighbor sowed corn plowed it under, and sowed wheat immediately, and the wheat was a failure. Several members said that clover as a green crop did best accustomed to feed and fatten a few animals, has recorded a small item of his practice in regard to feeding raw meal against cooked meal. He writes: "My practice in fattening beef and swine, as well as feeding cows for milk, has been to pour boiling water the animal's bowels move too freely, at night and in the morning, when the mash is cool, give it to the sow or pig. In covering the meal with boiling water in this way, the starch of the grain is dissolved and the latent nutritive properties extracted, and the animal get the entire nutriment of the grain. I have for two years passed, fatted two ordinary-sized cows. feeding only hay, and only 300 lbs. each of the former, and each yielded upward of 40 lbs. of rough tallow: Salt was given once a week, and occasionally a tablespoonful of wood ashes. 200 lbs. fed dry." Live stock do not, in eating dry meal, receive more than one half of the goodness of the meal, or there would be to many farmers as he knows who feed from 4 to 8 quarts of meal a day to one beef creature, till they feed from 7 to 10 cwt. of meal to one animal. Those farmers never slaughter an ordinary sized beef that yields upward of 40 lbs. of rough tallow.

-Rural New Yorker: Sore Throat. .

This dangeous and distressing complaint is so prevalent in the spring of the year that a few simple remedies may not come amiss. A few drops of camphor on a teaspoonful of sugar, taken into the mouth and kept there till dissolved, will sometimes cure a very sore throat when taken in season. A most excllent gargle for canker in the throat is one half tenspoonful of Cavenne (red) peper, one teaspoonful of salt, two spoonfuls of vinegar, two spoonfuls of West India molasses and six spoonfuls of boiling water; mix well together and gargle the throat once in 15 or 20 minutes. If the throat be badly swolen, a salt pork rind, cut about eight inches long and three wide, checked off on the soft side, say in half-inch checks, and salt and pepper rubbed into the cuts and bound next to the throat, will generally give immediate relief. Sore throats should not be neglected. A simple remedy, if applied in season, often prevents danger or death. A napkin wrung out from hot water and bound on the Nest-boxes should be movable, so that after hatching and occasionally when used only for laying they may be conveinently cleaned. One way is to whitewash them; but another, preferred by some, is to kindle a fire inside and clear them. This process will effectually destroy vermin and their larvae, and will thoroughly purify the nest by leaving a coating of charcoal inside. This substance is one of the best antiseptics, and a perfect deodorizer. Boxes made of seven-eighths stuff-pine, hemlock, or

THE NOMINATION.

Samuel J. Tilden, of New York was nominated as the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, by the Convention at St. Louis yesterday, on second ballot, receivng 534 votes to Hendricks 60, Thur-han 2, Hancock 59, Bayard 11, Parker 18, and Allen 5.

The platform declares in favor of a gradual, steady and certain return to specie payments, but proposes the repeal of the resumption act of 1875. The Convention has not as vet made a choice for the Vice Presidency. The name of Hendricks was proposed, but he declines occupying the second place on the ticket. Great confusion reigned during announcement of the result, the greenback portion considering themselves as entirely forgotten.

A Washington dispatch to the Chiago Post and Mail, of date June 26, says: "Mr. Blaine's condition excites the gravest apprehensions of his friends. He has not been able to leave his bed for four days. His pulse is feeble, he takes no interest in public affairs, and appears to have all the symptoms of low typhoid fever. He fears the danger of the long journey to Maine, but his physicians say it is absolutely necessary. He will therefore start to-morrow if possible.

Some of our Democratic exchanges having been claiming Bristow on their side since the Cincinnati Convention, but the elequent, manly and forcible speech he made at the grand Republi-can ratification meeting held in Cin-cinnati on Saturday evening last, will convince them that he will cheerfully support Hayes and Wheeler. His speech pays the heartiest tribute to the nominees, and eloquently urges the feasibility of reform within the party. Read it.

Wm. A. Wheeler voted against the back-pay salary-grab at every stage. When the bill passed, he drew his pay under it, converted his money into United States bonds, and turned the bonds over to the United States Treasury, with a request that they be canceled, saying that he would stop so much of the interest on the National debt, at least, beside paying off so much of the principal.

In 1864, Gov. R. B. Hayes was nominated for Congress, while he was at the front in command of a division, and his friends urged him to come home and canvass his district in his own behalf. He answered them in these words:

A bill was recently brought before the Connecticut Legislature prohibiting town, city, or State from giving any aid to railroads, but failed to get the requisite two-thirds vote. It is thought, however, that the measure will again be brought before the House and passed. Experience shows that towns and cities cannot be trusted with unliminted power to contract debts, especially when a railroad corporation is concerned. The municipal debts which are so oppressive to the tax payers of the West were largely contracted to aid railroads. Home rule very often ends in home ruin, as the farmers of Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri have learned

The Republican State Convention of Maine, Thursday, renominated Gov. Connor. He has been a faithful and popular executive. A letter from Mr. Blaine was read, urging the Republicans of Maine to see to it that next September Maine leads off the fall State elections with a rousing Republican majority for Gov. Connor; and the enthusiasm and confidence manifested by the Convention is a good pledge that Maine will do her whole duty this year. The Convention, by a unanimous vote, requested Governor to appoint James G. Blaine to the United States Senate, to succeed Lot M. Morrill, who has been appointed and confirmed Secretary of the Treasury.

Moses W. Field has gone to St. Louis for the purpose of urging his pet plan for the redemption of the country on the soft-money principles. This plan is to hold conferences with the Democratic managers, with a view of getting a man nominated who is known to have soft-money proclivities. In case this shall be accomplished, Mr. Field promises the Iudependent-Greenback-Granger vote for such a candidate. If it cannot be done, the party of which he is one of the leading promoters will push the venerable Peter Cooper, not so much with any definite hope of electing him, but for the purpose of making the result of the fall elections so doubtful as to throw the whole matter into the House of Representatives. When it is once there, Mr. Field has hopes that Peter Cooper will be rewarded with a four-years' residence in the White House. A special to the Chicago Tribune gives an account of the suicide of James A. Moore, of Lafayette, Ind., who managed to chop his own head off in this wise: He attached to the e adopted with little or no opposition, blade of a heavy broad ax a handle nd that the State will vote for the about eight feet long, which was seresident this fall, and be represented | cured to the floor by means of hinges; | 000 of this worthless trash was issued the next Congress. FOURTH OF JULY PROCLAMATION. On Monday, the 26th inst, President Grant issued the following Proclaimation regarding the Fourth of July celebration. A PROCLAMATION.

The Centennial anniversary of the day on which the people of the United States declared their right to a separate and equal station among the powers of the earth, seems to demand an exceptional observance. The founders of the Government at its birth and in its feebleness, invoked the blessings and protections of a Divine Providence, and thirteen colonies and three millions of people have expanded into a nation of strength and numbers commanding the position which then was asserted, and for which fervent prayers were then offered. It seems fitting that on the occurrence of the one hundredth anniversty of our existance as a nation, a grateful acknowledgment should be made to Almighty God for the protection and bounties which He has vouchsafed to our beloved country.

I therefore invite the good people of the United States on the approaching Fourth day of July, in addition to the usual observances with which they are accostomed to greet the return of that day, further, in such manner and at such times in their respective localities and religious associations as may be most convenient, to mark its occurrence by some religious and devout thanksgiving to Almighty God for the blessings which have been bestowed upon us as a nation during the century of our existence-and humbly to invoke a continuance of His favor and His pro-

In witness thereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the scal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington this 26th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1876, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundredth.

(Signed)
By the President. U. S. GRANT. HAMILTON FISH, Sec. of State.

Mr. Wheeler's Views.

On the evening of the 18th Hon. Wm. A. Wheeler, being at Garrisons, N. Y., was serenaded, and in response spoke as follows:

"I thank you, gentlemen, for your congratulations for an honor which probably is as unexpected to you as to myself, and which has certainly not been sought for by me. I was not oblivious that my name had been mentioned by warm friends who desired my success, but I neither looked nor hoped for such an overwhelming evidence of the Convention's favor. But I have been a soldier in the Republican ranks too long and have enjoyed its confidence too much not to be aware of the high responsibility which accompanies that confidence. To be nominated in times like these by the great party which, despite its occasional shortcomings, represents in its fullest extent the intelligence, the patriotism and the conscience of the country is indeed an honor. The socalled tidal-wave of 1874, which swept the Democratic party into power in the lower House of Congress, has resulted in demonstrating to the American people the utter unfitness of that party for every one of the duties required of it. For the past seven months the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives has been on trial before the nation, and the nation is ready to render a verdict. The Democratic party has been false to its promises, false to its duties, false to the opportunities for reform which were presented to it. It is to the Republican party that we are indebted for the privilege of celebrating the one-hundredth anniversary of our independence, and it is to the same noble party, that we intend to consign the Government in the future. Do not doubt, gentlemen, that in the coming canvass we shall achieve a splendid triumph. With that honored soldier and patriotic citizen, Gov. Hayes, at our head, and the entire Republican party, of all shades and opinions, supporting him, we have but to do our duty as honest voters and good citizens and victory is sure. Again, gentlemen, I thank you for this manifestation of your approval of the Convention's work."

From the Cincinnati Enquirer, June 19. Crooked Cash.

Mr. Samuel J. Tilden, it appears, is largely interested in mines near Marquette, and one of them is named the New York Mint in compliments to his State. He owns three-fourths of the stock of the company. In 1863 the New York Mine Company, among others, issued demand notes in payment of its labors and local mine debts. which notes were beautifully engraved, and presented a striking similitude to a greenback note. These mine shinplasters circulated among the people of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan as money, and were soon issued in such vast numbers that they drove legitimate money out of general circulation. In the 10 years in which they had full sway Mr. Finney (the sub-Collector of the Marquette District) estimates that fully $50,000,- was illegal and fraudulent; that the notes were void and incapable of being forged, and that the utterers of them were liable to fine and imprisonment for their enterprise. In the meantime the attention of the Government authorities had been called to the fact that the mining corporations had not paid any of the tax required by law in such cases, and an agent was sent to assist the resident revenue agent in assessing and colcent. on every dollar of this money that had or might issue would be enbetray official trust. [Great applause.] The Convention did not stop to consider, as some would have us do, whether such prosecutions and punishments would be hurtful to the party. | the party, let us once more present to It has given notice that plunderers of the public revenue and corrupt officials, whether Democrats or Republicans, must meet, as they deserve, the rigors of our criminal statutes. The necessity for purity in the public service, and the duty that rests upon us to preserve and perpetuate our form of government, demand strict observance and fulfillment of this pledge. NON-SECTARIAN GOVERNMENT AND ED-UCATION. Recognizing fully the value of popular education, [applause,] and the absolute importance of complete separation of Church and State, [applause] the Convention has declared in favor of a constitutional amendment forever securing public schools against sectarian control or influence. This is no abridgment of religious freedom. It leaves every man free to follow the dictates of his own conscience in matters of religion, but prevents the use of money raised by taxation for building up any sect or denomination. The State must not be brought into subjugation to the Church, nor shall any branch of the Church be put under the fostering care of the State, to the exclusion of other sects. In a word, the standard which the party has carried successfully through four successive national contests has not been lowered, but advanced still higher. The Convention which assembled here last week has shown to the world that it represented a party of progress, ready, willing and able to move forward in the science of Government, and to learn lessons of wisdom in the school of experience.

THE CANDIDATES. Upon this platform it has placed men who bear honored names in our country, the excellence and purity of whose public services and lives furnish a sufficient guarantee that the principles announced will be carried out in letter and spirit. It has selected for its standard bearers, Gov. Hayes, of your own State, [cheers,] and William A. Wheeler, of New York. Gov. Hayes is well known to you. Under leadership you have got into the habit of achieving victory. Three times have you chosen him to occupy the chair of Chief Executive of the great State of Ohio. Not only has he served his State with honor to both the State and himself, but he has nobly and gallantly served his country at a time when his service was of the highest value. Modest in bearing toward his fellow-men, one whose purity of public and private character cannot be gainsaid, intelligent, patriotic and sound in judgment, he will render still higher service as the occupant of the chair of Chief Magistrate of the Nation. The people appreciate and the times demand just such men for public servants, and it cannot be doubted that on an occasion of such grand and imperions necessity as the election of a President in this Centennial year of our National existence, both platforms and candidates will be carefully weighed. Happily for us the Cincinnati Convention has so acted as to challenge the closest and most careful scrutiny of both. The nomination of Gov. Hayes was an act of wisdom, and, if elected, as I do not doubt he will be, he will give the country a wise, patriotic and pure administration. Our nominee for the Vice Presidency has also served his country faithfully and well. As a member of the popular branch of Congress, he has challenged the admiration and won the esteem of all who know him. His character is a tower of strength. He is a man of practical knowledge of public affairs, of unquestioned ability. and in full sympathy with the highest and best principles of the Republican

The principles of the great Republican party have the same living force they have always had, and the prosperity and future glory of the Republic require that our highest officers shall be true to them.

Thursday,

There is no substantial reason why ever man who has at any time acted with the Republican party may not stand under the Cincinnati platform and support the nominees. [Applause.] Whatever cause of difference may have existed heretofore are brushed away by the wise and timely action of the late Convention. Casting aside forever all the petty differences and disaffections that have arisen within the country an unbroken front, and with firm purpose and high resolve move forward to another victory, determined to perpetuate for ourselves and our prosterity all that has been secured in the past and to advance still farther the principles upon which the party was founded. [Applause.] PERSONAL.

Fellow-citizens of Cincinnati, I trust I may be pardoned for speaking of myself [great applause] so far as to express my profound gratitude for the steadfast confidence and unflatering support you have given me. No man ever owed more to any commu nity, none was ever more keenly alive to the obligation. And yet I am not vain enough to suppose that this has arisen from any merit of my own. Cheers. It has been because you have supposed me to be, in some sense, the representative of an idea, a principle which lies near your hearts. [Cheers. Let me beseech you, stand fast to that principle, increase and strongth my obligation to you by carnest, hearty and united support of Hayes and Wheeler, who, as I sincerely believe, represent the cause of good government and all power reforms. [Hearty and repeated applause.]

CAMPAIGN CHICAGO TRIBUNE

For Hayes and Wheeler.

The National Republican party has placed its ticket and platform before the American people. The Presidential Campaign will be one of the most exciting and important that has ever occurred in the United States. The result of the contest will determine the future good or ill of the country for a generation to

The Democratic Confederate alliance is the same in character and spirit as when the one wing resolved that the war for the Union was a "failure," and the other wing tried desper-ately to make it a failure. They are now a harbor of refuge for sectional animosities and pro-slavery sentiments. Since coming into control of the popular branch of Congress they have exhibited no statemanship, no wisdom nor patriotism—nothing but obstructive olitics and destructive themselves incapable of progress or even of comprehending the wants of the country. They only "middle and muddle." With al their promises and pretensions they have prov en utter failures in dealing with question of Taxation, Tariff, Revenue, Currency or Reform. If the Government again passes into the hands of the Democratic-Confederates and they secure possession of the purse and the authority and the law-making power, they will substitute reaction for progress and re-establish a reign of terror and a systom of peonag in the South, and ballot-box stuffing and co ruption in the cities of the North. Prudence admonishes that "the destines of the country in peace should be confided to those who saved it in war."

Accordingly, they framed an act directing the Secretary of the Treasury to settle all claims and penalties against them on the payment of a mere moicty of the amount they owed, and this act they had rushed through the night of the last session of the Forty-third Congress. His Speech at the Cincinnati Ratification Meeting.

The following is the full text of the speech of Hon. Benjamin H. Bristow at the great Republican ratification meeting in Cincinnati Saturday night: The assembling of this vast audience to ratify the work of the national Republican Convention, held in this hall last week, shows that the patriotic people of Cincinnati who responded so nobly to their country's call in the hour of danger and threatened dissolution, are not yet ready to turn that country over to the supreme control of mere professional politicians and peddlers of patronage. It is a hopeful sign of the times to see, in this city of solid wealth and substantial industries, so many of her best citizens taking active interest in the struggle for party supremacy. Since the imposition of internal taxes, made necessary by the late war, Cincirnati has paid into the National Treasury the aggregate sum of $100, 000,000 [applause], to say nothing of the amount paid indirectly through another branch of the revenue. Your great city has paid to the gevernment in this fiscal year one-tent of the entire internal revenue collected from 40,000,000 of people. Why, then, should not the people of this city feel a deep interest in all that concerns the administration of the Government, the collection and disbursement of revenue for its support? You have a right to insist upon the faithful collection in any part of the country of the taxes imposed by law [vast applause], and it is equally your right and duty to demand that every dollar so collected shall be applied to the legitimate purposes of Government, and none other. [Cheers.] To this end it behooves every citizen to see to it that none but competent and faithful men are elected to office. [Applause.] When the people become indifferent to the selection of their public servants, and suffer our popular elections to pass into the control of mere place seekers and professional politicians, then indeed will have come a danger to our common country more insiduous than treason, and more certain than armed rebellion to bring decay and ultimate destruction. WORK OF THE CONVENTION. The great outpouring of the people here to-night testifies to the fact that the National Republican Convention did its work wisely and well. You hour shows how heartily your approvis one upon which every patriotic citizen who loves freedom and justice may and exact justice to all men, liberty and equality in the exercise of all enforced, if need be, by all the power conferred upon the Government by the Constitution. In this declaration is embodied the highest aim of gov-are here for the purpose of ratifying that work, and the enthusiasm of the al is given. The platform of principles securely stand. It declares for equal civil, political and public rights, to be ernment, and without its practical operation no government is really free or worth the support of a free people. Conceding perfect liberty and exact equality to those who sought, by violence, to overthrow the Government it demands the same security and right for the newly enfranchised race which "followed the flag and kept step to the music of the Union." This is but another form of expression for the idea that this government is a Nation

The platform commits the party fully and squarely to the resumption of specie payment [applause], which is demanded alike by the best interest of the people and the solemn pledges of the Government. There must be no step backward, but continuous and steady progress toward resumption and return to the money of the Constitution. Every expedient for the revival of our prostrate industries which falls short of absolute resumption and complete fulfillment of all our National obligations, will prove inadequate and deceptive. The ne-ple and easy method of reforming our civil service, which is neither more nor less than the practical application in public affairs of the rule which works so well in private life, that every man should mind his own business, and leave others to do likewise. > MR. COPELAND, a new comer in this place, in the legal profession, delivered a lively address in support of a sound currency on a specie basis, at the Hayes and Wheeler ratification meeting, on Monday evening last. Mr. Copeland is a fearless and energetic speaker, not afraid to speak his sentiments, which are sound on the much vexed and little understood question of the finances of the country. He received an invitation from the opposition, for a public joint discussion of the question, which, we learn, he has accepted, and by this means we may hear more from him.

> QUITE an enthusiastic crowd assembled on Front street on Saturday evening, to hear Hon. Richard Trevellick discourse on the currency question, but were sorely disappointed by his non-appearance. But to fill the vacancy, Hon. Levi Sparks, who is always ready with a speech, and California Johnson made a few remarks, picturing to the laborers the awful condition that they were in, and giving the resumption act credit for it all. The new aspirant to the office of State Representative, had prepared a couple of songs for the occasion, which were sung, and the crowd dispersed.

Quite a number of cases of petty thieving have occurred in this vicinity lately. A youngster living on Front street, while in the house of F. B. Eaglesfield, last Thursday evening, very dextrously slipped Mr. E.'s pocket book, containing about thirty dollars in money, into his pocket and carried it off, but it was recovered after a dilligent search and some threats of arrest. The day before, some one took about eight dollars from P. F. Estes' coat that was hanging in his room, while he was away. Suspicion rests on some boys about twelve or fourteen years old, who were playing about the house at the time. Some one entered the house of Mr. George Doughty, about five miles south of this place, on Thursday last, while the family were away from the house a few minutes, and took about twentyeight dollars belonging to Mr. Doughty, and a small amount of change belonging to his hired man. THE election of Capt. Millard as Major of the 2d regiment Michigan State troops, the resignation of First Lieutenant Sheehan and Secoed Lieutenant Wilbur necessitated an election by Company F, Niles Light Guards, which was held Saturday nigt, and resulted thus: D. Sheehan was elected Captain, Mort. M. Gragg first Lieutenant. James Harter second Lieutenant. -Evening News.

er ratification meeting was held in the Collins & Weaver Hall, in this place, on Monday evening. Owing to the threatening appearance of the weather, a large number did not attend, who would under more favorable circumstances. The hall was well filled, and a general good feeling for the candidates whose nomination they had met to ratify. Hon. E. M. Plimpton opened the exercises with a stirring speech, giving a short review of the great work of the Republican party during its sixteen years of successful management of the government. He also gave a brief sketch of the eventful life of the nominee, Mr. R. B. Hayes. J. J. Van Riper then followed with a few remarks, touching upon the plainly visible plan of many of the leading Democrats, in pretending to unite with the more unstable of the Republicans in forming a new party, while they in no time intend to do otherwise than follow the dictates of their National Convention at St. Louis, now in session. The next speakers were James A. Kellogg and Or-ville W. Coolidge, of Niles, both of which spoke very encouragingly of the prospect of the sure success of the Republican party in the coming election, in November next. By previous request, the Chairman then introduced Mr. Copeland, who wished to speak upon the currency question in advocacy of a resumption of specie payment,

The Fruits of Weak Digestion. There is no pathological fact more clearascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep — nature's grand catholi-con—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopoia or out of it. [Niles Republican.] A little son of George Harris, when practicing with a pistol on the Island this noon, accidentally shot himself through the hand.....James Anderson was quite seriously hurt on Friday last, by the falling of a scaffold on which he was at work at Lacey's mill. Two other men at work at the same time were slightly injured.

[New Buffalo Independent.]

Our new fire engine arrived yesterday afternoon and after a thorough examination of the machine by the village dads, the suction pipe was let into the water and its force tried, but up to the time of our going to press failed to be a success.....On Friday last the school-house at Lakeside was struck by lightning, which passed down through the ceiling, loosening the plaster, and tore a door off its hinges, the casting off a window, and ploughed a deep furrow through the blackboard, doing over 25 dollars' damage. Fortunately the school had been dismissed, so that no person was injured.

Southern Nebraska before going elsewhere. Mr. E. W. Smith, of Ashland, Saunders county, came to Nebraska in 1870 from Grant Co., Wis., and bought 320 acres of land, at $3 per acre from the B. & M. R. R. Co., now worth $20 per acre. He has 250 acres under the plow, and he finds the country adapted to all kinds of grain and vegetables. The climate he says, is the best, the winters are short, stock can feed among the cornstalks and do well the most of the feeding season. It is the best country I ever saw for raising hogs, and corn can be grown very easily. Near Harvard, in Clay Co., John A.

Bishoff settled in 1871, taking up a quarter section of land. At that time he had only a span of horses and a plow, and very little other means. He has now a house, corn crib and granary, and owns two cows, several head of young stock, and a small herd of hogs. His wheat harvest in 1875 averaged 24 1.4 bushels per acre, 6 1.2 acres in China tea wheat, reaching 30 bushels to the acre. Twenty acres of corn produced 1,400 bushels, or an average of 70 bushels to the acre: 13 acres of barley, 44 bushels per acre; and oats 58 bushels per acre. Mr. Bishoff has a young orchard of apple, peach and cherry trees, and all trees are in thrifty condition. He says, "a man with the same amount of labor, can get a larger yield from Nebraska soil than from the soil of any State east of the Missouri river."

MOORE'S HUB AND BALUSTER MACHINE

Patented December 18, 1874.

In all ages the production of powerful and convenient labor saving machinery has been an object with mankind. Notwithstanding the great variety of improvements and inventions existing, every day brings forth new forms and new combinations of material, to render the efforts of manufacturers more accurate, more speedily and more profitable in the construction of articles of commerce.

Not the least important among recent inventions of this class are the Hul and Multiform Baluster machine, to which I first by own attention. It possesses new and ingenious improvements and combinations, which I have secured by Letters Patent. In the production of this machine as an inventor, I claim to have accomplished a result of the greatest practical importance to owners of numerchantable timber.

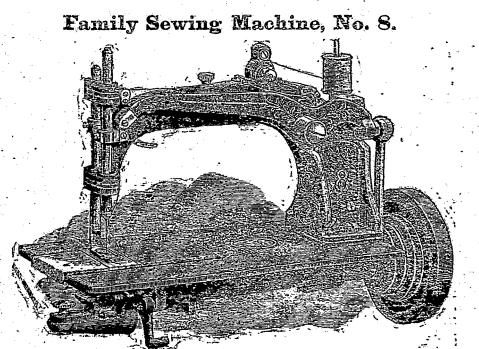

1. It is well known to all practical sawmill men, that every year they operate their mills they have thousands of feet of numerchantable lumber, and for years have feld the want of some device to render this refuse lumber merchantable. It is true a great deal of it can be converted into lath, but competition is so great, that it does not remunerate. With the use of this machine, you can convert your refuse stock of lumber into Balusters and Newelposts, which is a merchantable and steple commodity that commands the cash in any of the large markets; as a bourster machine in this respect other lathes can make no comparison with it. It makes round, square and octagon, and flute the work when required, the knives are so arranged that one set can be adjusted to work almost any design. It has the capacity to make from 600 to 1000 Balusters in ten hours. Its work is accurate, far surpassing the most skilled hand labor in the completeness of its porformance.

2. To parties who are in possession of Hub timber, such timber as Elm, Gum, Locust, Hickory, or second growth Oak, to this item I urge special attention. It is beyond peradventure the most rapid and perfect Hub machine in uso. Two men can aturn and bore 1000 bubs with this machine in ten h TO THE PUBLIC.

Sympathize With Children.

If we enter into their joys, if our eyes sparkle because there is a brighter light than usual in theirs, if our lip answers the smile that is on theirs, if we are tender when they are sad, and if we tune our feelings to accord with theirs, their love and affection will be sure to follow, and on both sides. Some griefs of children may be very trifling, but we should remember that the touch that would be unfelt by an oak makes a deep impression on a rose-leaf-and all young children are human rose-leaves. Then deal gently and very sympathetically with their joys. A very trifling pleasure makes a child's heart run over; so help to fill the tiny cup to the brim, remembering that a joy is only half a joy that is not shared by another, and that it is twice a joy when it lightens two hearts.—Christian Intelligencer.

Fight Your Own Battles.

Fight your own battles. Hoe your own row. Ask no favors of any one and you will succeed a thousand times better than those who are always beseeching some one's patronage. No one will ever help you as you can help yourself, because no one will be so heartily interested in your affairs. The first step will be such a long one carving your own way up the mount ain, you may each one lead to the other and stand firm in that while you chop still another. Men who have made their fortunes are not those who had five thousand dollars given to start with, but started fair with a well earned dollar or two. Men who by their own exertions acquired fame, have not been thrust into popularity by puffs begged or paid for, or given in friendly spirit. They have outstreatched their hands and touched the public heart. Men who win love do their own wooing, and I never knew one to fail so signally as one who had induced his affectionate grandmother to speak a good word for him. Whether you work for fame, for money; for love, or for anything else, work with your hands, heart and brain. Say "I will?" and some day you will conquer. Never let any man have to say "I dragged you up." Too many friends hurt a man more than none at all.

Wild Oats.

The old saying about the "sowing of wild oats," is a very foolish one. It is on a par with other incomprehensible lies, such as that "bad beginings make good endings," and that "married rakes are the best husbands.' People repeat these old sayings as if they were wise, but folly has her proverbs as well as wisdom. Reduce such maxims into practice, knock a hole in the bottom of your ship as you are about to sail, fall and badly bruise yourself as you start on a journey, and take such beginings as fine omens for success, if you can. So is the questions of morals. To stain yourself so that you may become pure, to blot your virgin pages so that it may look white, to throw away your money in order to fill your purse, would be all voted contradictions in terms, and living a youth of folly and sin so that we may indicate old age to wisdow, philosophy, virtue and greatness is plainly no less. He who is resolved to sow wild oats broadcast in his youth may rest assured in the saying, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that also shall he reap."

Wise Saying.

1000 SOLD LAST SEASON

THE ENORMOUS WASTAGE of grain, so inevitable with other styles of Threshers, can be SAVED by this Improved Machine, sufficient, on every job, to more than pay all expenses of threshing.

FLAX, TIMOTHY, MILLET, HUNGARIAN and like seeds are threshed, separated, cleaned and saved as easily and perfectly as Wheat, Oats, Bye or Barley. as easily and perfectly as 'typent, date, type or barrey,
"AN ENTRA PRICE is usually paid for grain and seeds cleaned by this machine, for extra cleanlines.

IN THE WET GRAIN of 1875, these were substantially the ONLY MACHINES that could run with profit or economy, doing fast, thorough and perfect work, when others utterly failed. when others ulterly failed.

ALL GRAIN, TIME and MONEY wasting complications, such as "Endless Aprons," "Raddles," "Beaters," "Pickers," etc., are entirely dispensed with; less than one-half the usual Gears, Belts, Boxes, and Journals; easier managed; more durable; light running; no costly repairs; no dust; no "litterings" to clean up; not troubled by adverse winds, rain or storms. FARMERS and GRAIN RAISERS who are posted in the large saving made by it will not employ inferior and wasteful machines, but will insist on this improved Thresher doing their work.
