THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 16, 1876.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

In the name of the authority of the State of Michigan: I, John J. Bagley, Governor of the State of Michigan, do recommend to this State observance of Thursday, November 30th, as a day of thanksgiving.

GIVEN UNDER MY HAND, and the Great Seal of the State, at Lansing, this fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and of the United States the one hundred and first.

JOHN J. BAGLEY.

By the Governor: E. G. D. HOLDEN, Secretary of State.

President Grant, in reference to the suspected frauds in the count of the votes in the south, utters the sentiments of a true American citizen as follows: "No man worthy of the office of President should be willing to hold it if 'counted in,' or placed there by fraud. Either can afford to be disappointed in the result. The country cannot afford to have the result tainted by a suspicion of illegal or false returns."

On Wednesday, of last week, the Free Press exhibited a fine lot of poultry, eighteen roosters appearing on the first page, but the next day they all disappeared, and Tilden announced as "On the ragged edge."

As we expected: "Brick" Pomerooy, in his last issue, rejoices in the election of Sam. Tilden, whom he has been supporting during the Campaign by whipping around the bush, to drive out as many greenbackers for the Tilden party to gobble up, as possible. The wolf was plainly visible, under the cover of the lambskin.

A text for pious Democrats: "And Samuel arose and went to Eli and said, Here am I, for thou didst call me. And Eli answered, I called not my son; lie down again."—I. Sam. iii: 6.

The Lansing Republican says: "The balance of cash in the State treasury Nov. 4 was $803,760.70; receipts during the week ending Nov. 11 were $28,501.08; payments during same time were $50,642.35; balance in the treasury Nov. 4, 1876, $781,719.43; decrease for the week $22,041.37."

The feeling of Hayes, as expressed to a New York World reporter upon receiving the news of his defeat, Nov. 8th:

"I don't care for myself; for the party—yes, and the country, too—can stand it; but I do care for the poor colored men of the South. I do not fear that business will be greatly affected by Mr. Tilden's election. The government itself has no money, and it will be a long time before they will wear away as soon as they recover from the charge of defeat. Business will, I think, go on as usual. I do not think parties responsible for financial depression. We see the troubles they have had in Germany and Austria. If any part of the country suffers or remains at a standstill, it will be the South under the new regime. Northern men can't live there and will leave; and immigration into the States will cease; but as I said before, I do pity the poor black men of the south. The result will be that the Southern people will practically treat the constitutional amendments as nullities, and then the colored man's fate will be worse than when he was in slavery, with a humane master to look after his interests. This is the only reason I regret that the news is as it is."

WHAT TILDEN SAYS.

"When I shall be officially notified of my success, I will be pleased to let you know my intentions, but not before. Upon being pressed by the reporter, however, Mr. Tilden went on: "My election was due," said he, "to the fact that the people looked more to the issue of the currency than to party restraints. Easy to party to a great extent forgotten. There is no doubt that I received a great number of Republican votes, and when the result is generally known and officially proclaimed, all true citizens, whether Republicans or Democrats, will hail the event as a great National benefit, and indicative of at least one thing, and that is the unity of all sections of the country. This is a very essential decision. The election has also been decided in part upon my record as Governor. It was well scanned and construed in divers ways, and the result has convinced me that I have in that capacity done well enough to satisfy the masses of the people. The closeness of the contest shows conclusively that I have every reason to be well pleased with the result. I did not expect a large majority in the Electoral College. I feel extremely well to-day."

Theodore L. Reynolds, editor of the Lawrence Advertiser, died at Paw Paw, on Monday, the 6th inst., aged about 85 years. The deceased was a victim of that dread disease, lung consumption, having been a sufferer from it for nearly twelve years. He was formerly editor of the St. Joseph Traveler, and was also postmaster at that place. Socially, he was known as one of the most genial of men; and while his death was not unexpected, it yet caused deep sorrow amongst his large circle of friends.—Harford Daily Spring.

THE MAJORITIES FOR REPRESENTATIVES.

The following are the majorities given for Representatives in the several districts of this county:

Table showing majorities for Representatives in the first, second, and third districts of Berrien County. Lists names of candidates and their respective vote counts.

Our Next President as a Civil Magistrate.

Gen. Hayes was inaugurated governor of Ohio Jan. 13, 1868, and continued in office by re-election until January, 1872. In October, 1875, he was the third time elected governor, and the following January resumed the duties of the important office he now fills. He is the only citizen of Ohio, since the origin of its existence as a State, who has had the honor of being chosen chief magistrate for a third time.

These are some of the reforms and improvements which Governor Hayes labored to effect in his State. Here is a part of what he accomplished: He secured the founding of a soldiers' orphans' home. He secured the establishment of a reformatory for girls. He had provision made for the care of the chronic insane. Under his direction important reforms were introduced and instituted. He had the powers of the board of State charities enlarged. He had completed a scientific geological survey of the State. Under his direction the agricultural and mechanical college was put in successful operation.

Through his efforts the St. Clair papers and other valuable historical manuscripts were secured for the State. He recommended and obtained minority representation on election boards.

Under his executive authority the 15th amendment was ratified, and the suffrage amendment of Ohio was adopted. The right to vote of the soldiers in the national asylum at Dayton—taken from them by a Democratic Legislature—was restored. The privilege taken from the college students to vote where attending college was again granted.

The infamous visible admixture law was wiped from the statute-book. Local taxation was diminished and the State debt decreased over $4,000,000 during the five years of his administration. Order and law have reigned everywhere in Ohio.

What the Republican candidate has uttered and what he has done best makes known his character as a civil magistrate. That he possesses executive and administrative abilities of the highest order is a demonstrated fact.—New York Times.

The women of Michigan are certainly contributing their share to the honors of this "Centennial year." One of them in Bay City has just been arrested for the murder of her adopted child. She was ingenious in her methods of maternal discipline. She put the boy's fingers in the crack of the door and shut the door on them. When by this means they tapered sufficiently for the purpose she put them through a wringing machine, which reduced them to the proper size. She shined her head with a club. She bent her back to her taste, by first heating it to the right degree of flexibility on the top of a stove. She fixed over his mouth by inserting a red-hot poker in it, squeezing his lips together at the same time. At this point she would develop the right "tempor" in him by plunging him into a well. This carbonizing process was not interrupted by the neighbors, who appear to have known all about it, because she threatened to melt them into a puddle, or hammer them while red hot into cross-out saws, or make it uncomfortable warm for them in some such way. If they disclosed her domestic blacksmithing.

Another woman near Lansing having married three husbands and experiencing no benefit from it, determined to try another woman's husband. She selected a recent graduate of the State Prison, and seems to have succeeded in getting something that exactly suited her case. Her third husband having leased his farm to her, claiming that she was trying to sell it and elope, went out to his farm on Sunday night with two or three friends and watched proceedings. They did not have to wait long. The woman, at the head of her party, consisting of her son by a former marriage and the brevet husband, charged upon the besiegers. Her husband was killed and one of his party badly injured. Her son was also seriously injured.

If there are any other rights Michigan women want, the Legislature will soon be in session, and they can petition for them.—Detroit Post.

We Think We've Got 'Em.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is not yet decided who is elected President, we think we are safe in saying that the above are the portraits of the statesmen who have been chosen President and Vice President of the United States for the next four years.

The daily papers are teeming with all sorts of rumors, telegrams and guesses concerning the final ending of the strife, some even fearing that another civil war will follow in case either Hayes or Tilden are given the majority of the Electoral votes by the Returning Boards, but we have no fears of such result. Past experience has proven to the people of all sections of this country that civil war is not a paying investment, and is sure to result in disaster to the section undertaking it. We have faith enough to believe that however bitter the pill may seem to the vanquished party, it will be accepted, and our relations move along as smoothly as in the past.

When the final result of the count in the contested States will be given to the people is a matter only of conjecture at present. It may be weeks before the result is officially announced. Yet we think we've got 'em.

The body, as is known, is inclosed in a lead casket. This is surrounded by a cedar case, and the receptacle of these is a marble sarcophagus. The latter had a double lid, the upper one not being as large as the other. Both had been broken out with a chisel or an axe, and somewhat chipped in the operation. The under lid was laid crosswise on the casket, the head-piece on the floor, and the upper lid standing against the wall. The casket itself was pulled out about a foot from the body of the sarcophagus, and a small piece had been taken off on the floor, where lay an ax with the edge full of marble dust, an ordinary chisel, and a pair of nippers. The other tools had evidently been taken away since the lock on the iron-grated door had been sawed off. The damage done is comparatively little. The officers of course were disappointed at not catching the vandals, but they think it is only a question of a little time when they will be apprehended. Only one motive can be attributed to these desecrations of the grave, and that is the hope of a reward for the restoration of the remains.

A Dastardly Attempt to Rob the Tomb of our Martyr President.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—A special to the Tribune, from Springfield, Ill., gives the details of an attempt to rob the tomb of the late President Lincoln. Just how it happened that any suspicion was aroused as to the possibility or probability of such an attempt, no one seems to know, but the dispatch said that L. D. Power, custodian of the Lincoln monument, stated to Robert Lincoln and Leonard Sweet that he had such suspicion. Without believing that there was any ground for the thought, Mr. Sweet wrote to Col. Stewart of Springfield, asking him to station a guard around the monument, determined that the utmost precaution should be taken. Some suspicious circumstances have arisen. Elmer Washburn, ex-chief of the secret service, was requested by Robert Lincoln to go into Springfield and aid detective Tyrrell in any step that might be necessary to prevent the expected attempt. On Tuesday evening Mr. Washburn, Mr. Tyrrell and three other men went to Oakwood and concealed themselves in Memorial hall, inside the monument, to await developments.

One man was posted in the labyrinth in the rear, so called because of the walls running in different directions and making numerous passages ways. His object was to hear the noise made in the vault if any were made. After patiently waiting for nearly three hours, and when about tired out from standing still, the utmost silence being imperative, he heard a grating noise which lasted perhaps five minutes. Then, in a little while, came several successive thuds, as if some one was hammering. The time having arrived for action Mr. Washburn and his men slipped out of the door, with cocked revolvers in their hands, determined to shoot to kill if any resistance was made. Just as they were turning the corner to the left, one of the men accidentally exploded his revolver.

The noise was very loud, so still were the surroundings, and unfortunately it was too loud, for, though there were but about 120 feet to go over, when the officers got to the door of the vault the dastardly villains were gone. They must have had some one watching to give them the signal of danger, or else had come outside for a breath of fresh air and heard the snapping of the cap, and ran into the woods which surround the monument. It is but a short distance, and a man could get within shelter and be unobservable in a quarter of a minute. The men at once scattered, and went in the direction behind the trees; two of them exchanged shots, each mistaking the other for one of the fugitives. After shooting at each other they cried, "Wash," "Wash," the word agreed upon as indicative of a friend in such an emergency, and then they found out their mistake. The bullets whizzed close to both, and it was miraculous that they escaped injury. No traces of the thieves being discovered, the party returned to the catacomb, and there beheld a sight which made them sad.

Voting is not all, perhaps it is not half. Day by day we govern our country by public opinion. Your best hope will and you will live to regret your vote, if, after you have succeeded, you leave bad men to control your party. Encourage criticism of it; if an editor does his duty and rebukes a sin in it uphold him. If bad men buy his approval, ferret out the guilt and condemn it. In any case it is not finishing a political act, but beginning one, when you vote. Gird yourself for the battle of public opinion, and remember that you must fight it every day of the new quadrennium. Last Tuesday you decided who are to govern. After that you will decide how they are to govern. You may start your elected men off with an impetus in the right direction, but that force will be soon spent, and if you do not constantly renew your influence, bad influences will overbear it. There is no discharge in this war.—N. Y. Methodist.

The Republican majority in this State is 24,884.

Amongst these are included 12 sections of the justly celebrated Phoenix column, manufactured at these works. This collection adds to the means of illustration in this department of the University.

Rev. A. C. VanRaalte, D. D. founder of Holland City Michigan, died in that place November 10th. Mr. Hall has an easy style in his writings, which is very pleasing to the reader of poetry, besides an almost unequalled power of description and delineation of character.

BUCHANAN IS unlike any other place we know of in the west. There the board of electors is all Republican and not even a Democratic clerk is allowed upon it. A Democrat stepped up to the polls to vote who had been in the army and was not permitted to. His name was registered before he went in the army and he had voted ever since his return. He could not read well and a Republican handed him a Republican vote stating it was Democratic and then was permitted to hand it in.—Wiles Mirror.

MR. JOHN IRWIN sold a hog to Hodgkin & Bros., last Thursday, which weighed 150 pounds. Mr. Irwin commenced fattening this porker the 20th day of August, and since that time brought it up to the weight mentioned above. Copeland, the professional bigamist, whose portrait adorns the Rogue's Gallery, in New York, and whom the Supreme Court of the United States officially pronounced a forger, complimented the writer and a few other individuals with some of his innocent advice, at the "Reform" meeting, the night before election. As the speaker would not be belied on oath by any one knowing the character of the man, his praise might injure, but his venom is harmless.

ED. RECORD.—One night last week a man, calling himself Charley Van Horn, was detected pilfering the horse of Miss Matilda Mathos, two miles south of this place. Who caught her had a large supply of pork, flour, apples, butter, and other edibles, as well as clothing, supposed to have been stolen from other parties. He is in jail awaiting trial. Mr. Barnhart's clothes line was also robbed at the same time. The thief made his rendezvous with a certain family in Morris, who lived formerly in Bridgman, and were in the habit of taking similar contributions from a certain hired man last winter.

THE election passed off quietly, though every one is anxious to know the result for sure, of the Presidential contest. Saturday evening a report was circulated, or rather a false telegram concocted, to the effect that the Governor of Louisiana and members of the returning body had been assassinated in a workmanlike manner. A speciality made of wagon repairing and horse shoeing.

STAMMERING CURED.—Doe Dr. Woodson has cured my 17 year old son, who has been from his infancy a bad stammerer, by his method of cure. It is a permanent cure. I am most thankful to you for this, and will recommend it to all who are afflicted with this trouble. Yours sincerely, ZACHARY KEAY, Detroit, October 10th, 1876.

DR. BERRINGER has been dangerous in the past week, but the report is that he is all right now. No other sickness in the place to speak of, Bridgman being in a rather healthy location.
