MIDWIFERY!

MRS. MARTA DUTTON. MIDWIFE AND NURSE.

THE OLD DEACON'S LAMENT. . Mrs. E. T. Corbett, in January Harper's.

Poetry.

Yes, I've been deacon of our church Nigh on to fifty year, Walked in the way of dooty, too, And kep' my conscience clear.

I've watched the children growin' up,

But never saw sech doin's yet As those I've seen to-day. This church was built by godly men
To glorify the Lord,
In seventeen hundred eighty-eight;
Folks couldn't then afford Carpets and cushings, and seeh like—
The seats were just plain wood,
Too parrer for the sleepy case.

Too narrer for the sleepy ones; In prayer we allus stood. And when the hymns were given out, I tell you it was grand
To hear our leader start the tunes,
With tuniu'-fork in hand!
Then good old "Ghina," "Mear," and all,
Were heard on Sabbath days,
And men and woman, boys and girls,
Joined in the song of praise.

And that old pulpit was my pride— Jest eight feet from the ground They'd reared it up—on either side A narrer stairs went down; The front and ends were fitly carved

With scripter stories all— Findin' of Moses, Jacob's dream, And sinful Adam's fall. Jest room inside to put a cheer, The Bible on the ledge, I'll own I did get narrous when He shoved it on the edge; There, week by week, the parson stood

The Scripter to expound; There, man and boy, I've sot below, And not a fault was found. Of course I've seen great changes made,
And fought against 'em too;
But first a choir was interdooced,
Then cushions in each pew;
Next, boughten carpet for the floor;
And then, that very year,
We got our new melodeon,
And the big chandyleer.

And the big chandyleer-Well, well I tried to keep things straight-I went to ev'ry meetin'
And voted "No" to all they said,
But found my influence fleetin'. At last the worst misfortin fell-I must blame Deacon Brown; He he'ped the young folks when they said The pulpit should come down.

They laught, at those pious scenes
I'd found so edifyin';
Said, "When the parson rose to preach,
He looked almost like flyin';"
Said that "Elijah's chariot Jest half-way up and tarried;" And Deacon Brown sot by and laughed, And so the p'int was carried.

This was last week. The carpenters Have nearly made an end— Excoose my feeling. Seems to me As ef I'd lost a friend. 'It made their necks ache, lookin' up. Was what the folks did say; More lookin' up would help us all In this degin'rate day.

The church won't never seem the sai (I'm halt afeard) to me, Upon the preachin' of the truth I've ben so used to be. Like any common man. With just a rallin' round his desk-

'BELLE'S BEAUS."

A wide, roomy, picturesque old house, such as one sees nowhere but in country towns, set back from the village street among spacious grounds that stretched to a river -a house that would have delighted an artist, with the broad drive before it shaded by yellowing elms, its piazzas overhung with Virginia creeper and scarlet woodbine, and the gay glimpses of a garden on the right. The haze and color of a superb September afternoon were over everything. Two girls, evidently just from school, stood at the gate, one within, the other leaning on the face to gossip. "What is she going to wear?" the latter was asking, with deep interest. "White silk and pink trimmings." "Won't she look lovely! What shall you wear yourself?" "I? Belle says I shan't come in the room at all. She says I'm only a child. I always have to stay off in the nursery with David, evenings when there's company. I did think I might come in to her birthday party, though;" and the speaker's lip quivered, and tears stood in her eyes. "And she won't let you! what a shame! Why, you're sixteen years old, though you don't look it. If I was you, I'd-Oh, see, Christy!" she finished in a hurried whisper, as a horseman galloped out of the sunlit vistas of the road, and passed them, "there's Charlton Ross, your sister's beau!" Christy looked up in time to catch the momentary glance of a pair of dark cyes. "Why don't you bow?" Christy did not answer for a moment. She was watching the gray horse, and noting the careless grace of the rider as he wheeled and dashed through the stone gateway of the Ross mansion.

"Don't you know him?" "Only just by sight. When he comes to our house I never see him. But sometimes I see him in his grounds. They join ours, you know." Her companion's eyes followed hers to where, at a little distance, a cluster of gray stone chimneys rose high under ancient elms. .

"Is your sister going to marry "I don't know. I don't suppose he's ever asked her. Why?" "Oh, I should think she would if he did, that's all. He's ever so handsome-and rich, I heard Honoria

"I must go, Kate; there's Belle calling me now," and with a hurried good-bye Christy ran up the walk, rushed into the hall, and tossed her books on the table. A voice from the top of the stairs, rather incisive than sweet, stayed her progress. "Bring those books straight up to

"You are the greatest baby." "But it's your party, Belle, right in the house, and I do so love dancing, if it's only to look on. And I'm sixteen years old, and Kate Clap-"Oh, don't quote Kate Clapham, and don't bother me. Wait till it's time for you to go to parties."

"Why, Belle," said a voice from one of the chambers, good-humoredly, "do let the child come down. She won't be in the way, and her dress looks very well. Maria can curl her

"As if she could help being in the way," muttered Belle, turning away with a shrug of the shoulders as she noted Christy's radiant face. "School girls are always awkward and stupid in company."
"Oh, Belle-"

"Come, come," said the good natured voice again, as a portly matron appeared at one of the doors, "don't stay there talking. Come back, Belle, and let me finish your hair."

"Am I to come down?" Christy, breatblessly. There was a hearty "Yes" from her mother, and a sulky one from Belle. Christy waited for no more.

Dropping her books on the stair landing, she ran down and out the rear door into the sunshine, tossing up her flat hat exultingly.
"Ob, my! I almost feel as if I was a young lady!" She did not look much like one, as she raced down to the river, intent on rowing off a little of her excitement. She looked very young indeed, with her slight figure, short dress, and careless curls tied down under the flat hat, as she loosed her boat and pushed out into the stream. And she felt just like a child as she rowed off in the perfect air and sunshine of the autumn day. The ripeness and mistness of September were on the russet fields and painted woods. Warm scents came from sedge blooms and gardens along the banks, and here and there the dark water caught a scarlet reflection from a vivid cardinal flower or a reddened bough. Christy, rowing lazily down with the current, rounded a shady bend in the ously scrubbed the stains off her hands. stream, and came upon a little cove, | Could it be possible that Mr. Rossclimbed over low trees and hung its afar off as she might have done a rare purpling clusters from pendent boughs. Now Christy had an especial liking for wild grapes. She no sooner saw them than, with a deft movement of the oars, the boat was pushed into the cove, and the rower, standing on one of the teetering seats, was trying in vain to reach the lowest tempting cluster. It was out of reach. In vain she jumped for it, at | tiny slippers were quickly donned, a the imminent risk of drowning herself; in vain, forgetting her aspirations after young ladyhood, she wished herself a boy, that she might climb the willow from which it hung. She did not know what a pretty picture she made as she stood there in the rich purple shadows, the richer purple curling hair was pushed back, her checks were flushed, and the sleeves had fallen away from her upraised rounded arms as she stood on tiptoe below the provoking cluster. A voice started her, and brought her eyes back to the shining levels of the river. "Will you allow me to get you the grapes?" If Christy had been a young lady, she would not have turned scarlet and uttered an exclamation of surprise.

Being a school-girl, she did both; for there, beside the boat, was a slender scarlet wherry, the oars lying lengthwise, and the occupant standing within it, cap in hand. "Oh, thank you, I-I do want them. I like grapes.' "Most people do," was the laughing response, as he reached high over Christy's head, and plucked two or three bunches. 'He dropped these in her lap, and reached for more, while she sat, in school-girl fashion, holding the gatherings and stealthily watch ing the gatherer from under her wide hat brim. When he at last looked down at her, having filled the bottom of the boat with grapes, to ask if "Indeed I do. But pray don't do that!" for Christy was eagerly piling fruit clusters into the wherry. "There. isn't room for them and for me too. If you will let me," he added, with a glance at Christy's still flushing face. "I will eat one bunch here in the shadow before rowing down the river."

the nursery. And attend to me, never knew how long-of positive en. they paused, and Mr. Ross how enthusiastically he talked of a hundred things seen in travel, while Christy listened as enthusiastically, with wide eyes and lips, and fingers stained with the purple juice of the grapes!

Mr. Ross must have forgotten about rowing down the river. The sun was very low and the shadows were growing chilly, when at last he said, apologetically, raising himself from his lounging position in the wherry, "I beg your pardon for talking to you so long, and without an introduction, too; but I believe we know each other. You have twice called me my name, so I know you know me; and I know you are my neighbor, the youngest Miss Evarts."

"Christabel Evarts," she said, sim-"You must let me row, or rather tow, you home, to pay for my impoliteness. There is only room for one in the wherry, unfortunately, but if you will let me fasten this chain to the bow of your boat, it will save you rowing up stream." The light of the sunset was on the river, and they seemed to be going straight into the crimson glory. Christy was too much astonished at her position to say much, but Mr. Ross was very merry—"just like any boy," as Christy soliloquized. The latter was still in a state of wonder as she stood again on terra firma, and watched her cavalier fasten the boat and remove the oars. "I always do that myself," she said, taking perforce the last clusters of wild grapes which were imperatively thrust upon her. There was a bow and a smile, and the scarlet wherry shot out into the stream again. Christy turned and went slowly up to the house, a flaming bunch of cardinals in one hand and the remnants of the grapes in the other.

"Where have you been, Miss Christy?" was the cook's rather gross greeting. "Supper's over an hour since. You'll have to take pickings in the pantry." Supper was the last thing Christy thought of. The remembrance of the party came back to her, and after a hurried peep at the decorated parlors, she ran up stairs and began to dress. She was very happy as she industriwhere an adventurous wild grape had | that Mr. Ross whom she had admired young god-had talked to her an away, and she went slowly around the hour and rowed her home? And he was coming to the party to-night, (Christy shrewdly guessed that the party was given for him,) and perhaps he would speak to her again. Maria curled her hair, and pulled it cruelly, but Christy was very serene. Her white muslin dress and few flowers pinned at throat and belt, and she was ready. The parlors were already lighted, and the full moon shone on the piazzas and dewy gardens. There was a subdued bustle in the kitchen, and Belle, a radiant vision of beauty, had already swept down stairs. It seemed as if every one had come. The first strains of music had already sounded, the dance was beginning, and no Mr. Ross yet. Christy was much in demand. So tired was she of fastening sashes and trains and bows, of running for pins and powder, that when at last the dressing-room was empty, she thankfully descended the stairs, and timidly creeping in at the rear door of the parlor, immediately shielded herself behind a lace curtain. They were waltzing. What would poor Christy have given to have been a grown-up young lady!" Her little slippered feet beat the carpet as she enviously watched one gay couple after another whirl past her. And Christy caught her breath suddenly need to glance twice at the close-cut her Mr. Ross waltzing with Belle. jetty hair, the bearded lips, the face | There he was, transformed again to his aristocratic self, dancing with the haughty, indolent grace that Christy her girlish dreams-Belle's beau eous as a prince. The little observer's cheeks burned while she thought of her afternoon's experience, and life of most girls, have come in more how she had reckoned him "just like attractive guise than in the person of a boy." And Belle, whirling in graceful circles, with his arms around her, how beautiful she looked. · Nobody noticed Christy. Two or three dances passed. People chattered and laughed about her, promenaded and whirled past her: Sitting still was becoming a torture, and she was casting longing glances at the stairway; when the strains of her favorite waltz floated through the rooms. In sheer despair of enduring it, Christy sprang to her feet, about to seek refuge up stairs, when some one put the curtain aside. Turning, astonished, she beheld Mr. Ross bending before her and offering his arm. "I have been trying to"find you. Will you do me the honor of waltzing with me?" Waltz with him! Between fright and delight, Christy stood undecided. turning red and white alternately. those were enough, she was betrayed Then, forgetting everything but the music and the dangerously beautiful dark eyes, looking into her own, she put her hand on his arm, and in a moment they were circling down the room. Christy's cheeks burned like fire. Whenever she dared raise her eyes from her partner's broadcloth sleeve, she became aware that she was the focus of all eyes. For a while she was dreadfully conscious of this. Then she forgot everything but motion and music; and the chandsome head There followed a time-Christy bent so near her own. When at last Christy. You're to show the ladies | chantment. How it was that she for | out to the moon-lit piazza, the fright their dressing-room to-night. Maria'll got her awe of the elegant Mr. Ross, came back again, and she nervously withdrew her hand from his arm, and

I-I'm very much obliged to you, but I can't dance again.' The young autocrat in society, whose invitation to dance had never before been refused by any lady, looked at Christy in surprise. "You oughtn't to dance with me: I'm not grown up," said Christy, checking a sob. "They all want you to dance with them:" Mr. Ross would have laughed if his politeness would have allowed. He only said, leaning closer to Christy in the moonlight, and speaking low—"But I want to dance with you."

And Christy, of course, yielded. What a happy evening that was that followed! If people looked amazed at Mr. Ross dancing with a school-girl, it was no matter. He wanted to dance with her, and the thought made her eyes shine and her cheeks glow, as she moved through the quadrille with the prettiest grace in the world. A waltz followed, then a polka, then another quadrille, and still she monopolized the lion of the evening, apparently to the lion's satisfaction.
"And now," he said, as they returned to the piazza, knitting his brows over his dance card-"now I must go and dance with Miss Honoria Clapham. But I shall come back to you. You will give me the rest of the dances after supper, won't you?" "Oh, haven't you any names on your card?"

"Not one. But perhaps you would like to dance with some one else?" "Oh, no; nobody wants to dance with me.

"Then you will wait for me here till after this dance?" he said, hurriedly, as the music sounded. Christy felt as if she were in a dream, as she sat alone, the moonlight falling around her, the music drifting out to her, waiting for Mr. Ross to come back. She had a rude awakening therefrom. A hand grasped her shoulder so harshly that she almost cried out, and Belle's voice said, in a fierce whisper:

"Go straight up stairs to bed, Miss;

and each pause was emphasized with a shake. "Oh, Belle-" "Hush! not a word aloud. You've been making yourself ridiculous, and mamma and I are ashamed of you.

do you hear me? Go this instant;

Go straight round the piazza and up Christy never thought of disobeying. Her rose-colored visions all float house, and up the back way to her room. There she sat down in the moonlight, with wide eyes and burning cheeks. Oh, what had she done?

And finally all her wondering resolved itself in a bitter burst of crying. When Belle came up stairs, after the last guest had gone, and looked in her sister's room, Christy was lying across the foot of the bed, asleep, her pretty dress all crumpled and her cheeks stained with tears. So her indignation did not break upon Christy's head till morning, at the breakfast table, when her piqued pride sought revenge. Poor Christy! before the meal was through she saw herself a forward, pert, bold chit, at whom Mr. Ross had laughed in his sleeve, and of whose simplicity he had made capital. "If you could have seen yourself whirling around with that silly smile, and he playing mock-devotion! "Did he say anything about me,

"Bah! why should he? We had better things to talk about," said her sister, with a little conscious toss of the head.

Why need I tell of the days that followed? Surely every girl will understand the change that came over Christy's school-girl life. Why say that her cheeks grew pale, that she had frequent fits of crying, and that the very mention of Mr. Ross's name brought a guilty flush to her cheeks? She would not have met him for the world, and it would have been hard to calculate how many times she avoided him on the street; yet evening after evening she waited, and hoped he would come. The evening after the party he had come. She heard him ask for her in the hall, and heard Belle say, with a laugh, that "these school-girls were always deep in study evenings." Then, crouched in the dark, after David had been put to bed, she listened to his rare tenor voice as he sang song after song, his notes blending with Belle's, his laugh mingling with hers. What a fool she had been! she thought, as she closed the French grammar, whose leaves were wet with tears, and crept to bed. He was Belle's beau, that was all. But after that evening he did not come, which was strange for Belle's beau. Nay, more; his lady mother mentioned, in the course of a call. that they would return to New York in the middle of October.

"We have stayed in the country much longer than usual this year, she continued, "and I wish I could persuade Charlton to go to the city at once." "He wants to stay on Belle's account," mused Christy; "but I wonder he does not come and see her." One thing was certain-Belle was unusually cross; so cross that Christy was fain to do her studies out of doors or locked in her own room. A little summer-house covered with vines was her favorite retreat, and thither she repaired every afternoon upon returning from school. She had no more river expeditions, for, poor child, she was afraid of meeting the proprietor of the scarlet wherry. But permer house was because, she could see the aforesaid wherry pass and repass, fied to perceive Mr. Ross entering the street gate. Her first impulse was to run away; but knowing that he had seen her, there was nothing for it but to meet him with flaming cheeks and disordered attire. The dark eyes that had haunted her walking and sleeping dreams so long were lit by a merry smile. "Why, Miss Christy, if I had not just shaken hands with you I should have supposed you a myth," he said, with one of his bright laughs.

"What are you going to say to me in excuse for running away a fort-night ago, and keeping away ever since? Do you know you robbed me of five waltzes?" "I-I-Belle-that is, mamma-I mean I couldn't stay. And you danced the waltzes, you know."

"Indeed I didn't. I searched for you. Not finding you I sat still the rest of the evening. Then the next I came over to let you apologize, and you wouldn't come down to see me. I tried to see you on the street, and you always vanished. Now what have I done?" asked the pet of society, looking seriously puzzled. "Did you really not dance?" asked the delighted Christy. "Really no. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, I—I thought—they said—' "Who said?" the young man asked, surprised at the shimmer of tears in Christy's eyes. "Nobody." Mr. Ross, not knowing what to say after this climax, sat silent. Christy desperately attempted to explain her-

"Why, I thought-people thought -you were just dancing with me for fun, and laughed at me because I didn't know how to act, and-" Here Christy broke down and burst into tears.

For a moment Mr. Ross looked confounded, then exclaimed: "Thought I was langhing at you! "I know I'm not grown up, and oughtn't to have gone to a grown-up party. I never had been at one before," sobbed Christy, pitifully.

"Why, my poor little girl, I never thought of laughing at you. You dance like a fairy. Who could have told you such a thing?" he exclaimed, distressed. No answer. All the sorrow of the past weeks seemed to be crowded into the moment, and Christy cried as if her heart would break.

"I'll never go to a dance again till am a young lady.!" Probably if she had been a young lady, Mr. Ross would not have acted just as he did. In a moment he had taken her hand, drawn her down on the settee by his side, and was vainly conjuring her not to cry.

"It is too hard of you," he pleaded. "I have staid two weeks for no reason in the world but to see my little river gypsy again, and now she won't look at me.' She did look at him with wide eyes of wonder. "Staid to see me! Oh, you don' mean so!'' "Why do you say that?" "You're laughing at me again, as if didn't know-" "Well?" was the patient query:

Poor Christy was crimson to the waves of hair on her forehead, but she finished bravely from behind her screen of curls— "As if I didn't know that you are Belle's beau.'' There was a pause. If Christy had dared to look up at the young man's face, she would have seen bewilderment, then amusement, then another expression harder to define, as he said, rather mischievously. "Yes, Bel's beau - Christabel's

Christy uttered a little cry; and hid her face, Mr. Ross began to think he should never see the face again, it was so persistently conceal-

"Won't you look at me? Christy won't you tell me if Toffended you? Silence, till he was fain to ask

"Won't you tell me whether you care for me?" "Oh," was the almost inaudible answer, "you know I do."

"I don't know how I know. I can't see anything but your curls, and I want to see your eyes. Christy, your mother is coming in at the front gate." The last sentence was effectual.

Christy sprang to her feet with the idea of escaping, but found herself "She is not here yet. Stop just one moment and tell me if I may ask your mother if she will let you marry me some day. Christy, may I?"

And Christy, blushing like a rose, answered low: "Yes — some day — when I am a young lady!"

Wanted an Apology.

Early yesterday morning a car on the Cass avenue route encountered a milk wagon driven by a woman about forty years old, and the driver shouted and motioned for her to turn out. She refused to leave the track, and then car and wagon came to a halt.

"Why don't you get off the track?" shouted the driver as he put on his "I don't like your way of hollering at me," she slowly replied. "I'm just as much of a lady as the Queen of England, and you must treat me with just as much courtesy as you would her." "I say get off the track!"

"And I say I won't!"

He left the car to lead her horse off the track, but she had a long whip and she kept him off. He got behind her wagon to lift it off, but the whip cracked about his ears again.

"Will you get off the track!" he demanded. "When you apologize I will!"
He was in a fix. His car was full, the milk woman was stout and full of grit, and he decided to come down. He said he begged her pardon. "That's all I want, and let this be a great moral lesson to you," she replied as she turned off the track. When you see a milk woman on the track speak to her kindly and gently, and don't undertake to bluff."-De troit Free Press.

Stammering.

A gentleman who stammered from childhood almost up to manhood gives a very simple remedy for the misfortune: "Go into a room where you will be quiet and alone, get some book that will interest but not excite you, and sit down and read two hours aloud to yourself, keeping your teeth together. Do the same thing every two or three days, or once a week ifvery tiresome, always taking care to read slowly and distinctly, moving the lips but not the teeth. Then, when conversing with others, try to speak as slowly and distinctly as possible, and make up your mind that you will not stammer. Well, I tried this remedy, not having much faith in it, I must confess, but willing to do almost anything to cure myself of such an annoying difficulty. I read for two hours aloud with my teeth together. The first result was to make my tongue and jaws ache, that is while I was reading, and the next to make mefeel as if something had loosened my talking apparatus, for I could speak with less difficulty immediately. The change was so great that every one who knew me remarked it. I repeated the remedy every five or six days for CATHOLICISM IN MICHIGAN. The question of the supremacy of Church or State is now being agitated in Manistee, in a case of Father Welligan, a Polish Priest of the Roman Catholic Church, who has been performing the rite of marriage without reporting the same to the county clerk, according to law. A special correspondence to the Chicago Trib.

une from that place says:
"Some time since, Mr. James H.
Golden, the County Clerk and Register of Deeds of this county, becoming aware of the fact that the aforesaid priest had solemnized marriages and made no return thereof, called upon the reverend gentleman and requested him to make his returns. The priest refused to do so, upon the ground that the State had no right to make such a demand; or, in other words, that it had no right to meddle with his sacred duties. The Clerk waited Perry L. Anders some time, hoping the priest would reconsider his action; but he did not. and was again notified that the law required him to make his returns. The refusal was persisted in, and, after a lapse of a few weeks, the Clerk again jogged his memory. The reverence gentleman then said he would Frank B. Fox, consult with the higher authorities of the Church and abide by their decision; but, after waiting a reasonable time, there was no change in the situation, and the Clerk has now written Mary A. Bainton, to the Secretary of State to see what Ida M. Beardsley, can be done about it. The law pro- Eda J. Beardsley, vides very plainly what should be Alice C. Black, done. Chap. xvi., Secs. 2 and 6, of Nina E. Papson, The penalty for refusing or neglecting to perform this duty is a fine of $100, the non-payment of which shall subject the defaulter to not less than three months' imprisonment in the county jail, or until such fine is paid. Under these provisions, if the authorities see fit, they can make it rather warm for the Reverend Father.

Seventy-six years ago there was an unsettled Presidential election. Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr had exactly the same number of votes (73). The constitution made a President of him who received the highest number of votes and a Vice President of him who received the next highest number. But nobody was elected. The House of Representatives, being strongly federal and opposed to Jefferson in particular, laid schemes to get control of the counting of the electoral votes. But Jefferson was enough for his opponents. He was then Vice President, and caused a resolution to be adopted by the Senate on Feb. 9, 1801, inviting the House into the Senate-chamber, and empowering himself to appoint a teller on the part of the Senate, who should announce the vote of each State, which should be entered on the iournals; and if a choice appeared to oe made agreeably to the constitution, such entry should be deemed a sufficient declaration thereof. No law or rule is now in force which changes one iota the situation from what it was then. What Thomas Jefferson.

December, 25, 1876. Mr. Editor. - In all probibility there are few who reside in your immediate vicinity who are familiar with the manner in which the people in this locality observe Christmas, it may be of interest.

At about 1 o'clock this morning I was awakened from my slumbers by a report of a large fire-cracker, soon after the melodious notes of a tin horn waived its music to my ears, midst the cotton fields and corn." Horns and fire arms of all discription can be constantly heard. The streets are filled with men full of "forty rod" and "egg-nog." The police are busy, the guard houses are full, the saloons are crowded with men and boys who probably will not go home "till mornin'." To one who is not accustomed to such scenes, it is truly astonishing.

Cotton is moving and business is improving. I am informed that to-day is not as bad as usual, but spare me from such a bedlam as this upon all future Christmas days.

For the past few weeks there has been considerable excitement over the discovery of coal in Aurelius. A shaft, we are told, is being sunk on the farm of Rose Sanders, and parties are trying to lease land between that point and Chapin's Crossing, for the construction of a railroad, in case the amount and quality of the coal are sufficient to warrant such an expense. THE

THE REPRESENTATIVE

The Weekly in 1829 The Daily in 1835.

The close of one of the most exciting and hard-fought political contests known to recent American history finds the Republican party victorious, but under such circumstances, and with such a close result as to call upon it imperatively for the exercise of the greatest circumspection, the highest wisdom, the most sagueious foresight, and the broadest statesmanship. The dissatisfaction of the people with much that has occurred in its administration is unmistakable. Their demand is for a genuine Reform, and it will brook no further evasion or delay. The anarchic condition of the Southern States, the joint result of ignorant suffrage on the one hand and bitter and growing hatred of the equality of all men before the law on the other, demands some adequate remedy which cannot long be withheld with safety. The prostrate business energies of the country must be revived by some stimulus that shall give employment to idle labor and no less idle capital. The problem of readjusting our financial system to the changed condition of the times solution. The use of governmental power for the chief, or even largely incidental, promotion of partisan ends has met with popular condemnation, and must cease.

It is under such circumstances as these that the scepter of rule is once more placed in Republican hands. The high trust is coupled with conditions that must be fulfilled or the certain loss of all that has been gained is only a question of brief time.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE is one of those that believe that these demands made upon the Republican Party-the party of its first choice -can be and must be met. It rejoices still further in the faith that our just-elected President, Rutherford B. Hayes, is governed by pre-cisely the principles, and moved by exactly the determination, that will enable him to rise to the height of the present troubled and compli-cated situation, and to devise such wise meas-ures of relief as shall restore public order and ures of relief as shall restore public order and confidence, abolish existing abuses, and convince the people that the party which carried our country through the dreadful scenes of a civil war, which has struggled earnestly with the exceedingly difficult problems of reconstruction, which has labored seriously, though with little avail as yet, to restore our finances to a normal and healthy condition—that this party is competent to conduct the affairs of our party is competent to conduct the affairs of our great nation in times of peace, and is animated by a spirit of humanity and justice that seeks the well-being of all classes and conditions in the community.

THE TRIBUNE will therefore give its energies and its influence in this crisis to still advogies and its influence in this crisis to still advo-cating Republican principles and upholding the Republican organization in a just, law-abiding and self-respecting maintenance of its rights, seeing in that direction the path plainly marked out by patriotic duty. It will strive to give a broad and intelligent view of political affairs, and will place before its readers the most com-plete and the earliest information obtainable from all authoritative sources. We intend that its regular daily and weekly compendium of po-litical intelligence shall be of the fullest in litical intelligence shall be of the fullest in point of scope and freshest in point of time. In short, The Tribune's readers will be kept fully abreast with the ever moving current o

As to GENERAL NEWS in all its various departments, we propose to furnish a variety that shall meet all needs and tastes, and make THE TRIBUNE a welcome visitor in every office, counting-room, workshop and manufactory, and a doubly-welcome friend at every fireside. Our collection of MICHIGAN NEWS by a large corps of paid correspondents, by means of telegraph and mail, we intendestall remain unrivaled. Our AGRICULTURAL DE-PARTMENT will continue to completely outstrip all others, and form a feature of the paper that will be worth many times its cost to the strip an others, and form a teature of the paper that will be worth many times its cost to the great Agricultural interest of the State. Our MARKET REPORTS will be, as they always have been, prepared with the most conscientious care and pains-taking, so that they may by absolutely relied on as giving the latest and most truthful accounts of the movements and prices of all the great staples of trade in which the people of Michigan are interested. Our LITERARY columns will contain the best stories and choicest poetry that can be gleaned in a very wide range of selections, while our minor items will cover every variety of topic, amusing, instructive and suggestive.
Thus we shall aim to make THE DETROIT TRIBUNE FOR 1877 more complete in all its departments and more valuable in its contents than ever before, and thus continue to win to it an ever-growing constituency of strady and attached supporters and friends, to whose wants and wishes it shall be our pleasure to minister.

Just Published, in a Scaled Envelope, Price six cents.

A lecture on the nature, treatment, and radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spormatorrheea, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Norrous Dobility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &o—By ROBERT J. CULIVERWELL, M. D., author of the "Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be difectually removed without medicine, and without dangerods surgical typerations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may, be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

There is no disease which causes such acute pain or more alarming in its results than when the kidneys fail to secrete from the blood the uric acid, and other polsonous substances, which the blood accumulates in its circulation through the system.

If from any cause the kidneys fail to perform the functions devolving upon them, the cumulations are taken up by the absorbents and the whole system thrown into a state of disease, causing great pain and suffering, and very often immediate death. Hence the importance of keeping the kidneys and blood in a healthy condition, through which all the impurities of the body must pass.

KIDNEY COMPLAINT

PAIN IN THE BACK.

There is no remedy known to medical science which has proved itself more valuable in cases of Kidney Complaints than the VECETINE. It acts directly upon the secretions cleaness and purifies the blood, and restores the whole system to healthy action.

The following extraordinary cure of great sufferors, who had been given up by the best physicians as hopeless cases will speak for themselves, and should challenge the most profound attention of the medical faculty, as well as of those who are suffering from Kidney Complaint.

The Best Medicine.

FAST MARSHTIALD, AUG. 22, 1870.
MR. STEVENS: Dear Sir-I am seventy-one years of age; bave suffered many years with Kidney Complaint, weakness in my back and stomach. I was induced by friends to try your Yearner, and I think it the best medicine for weekness of the Kidneys I ever used. I have tried many remedies for this complaint, and never found so much relief as from the Vegeting. It strengthens and invigorates the whole system. Many of my acquaintances have taken it, and I believe it to be good for all the complaints for which it is recommended. Yours truly.

Pronounced Incurable.

Boston, May 30, 1871.

H. R. Stevens, Esq: Dear Sir—I have been badly afflicted with Kidney Complaint for ten years; have surfered great pain in my back, hips and sido, with great difficulty in passing urine, which was often, and in very small quantities, frequently accompanied with blood and excrutiating paie.

I have faithfully tried most of the popular remedies recommended for my complaint; I have been under the treatment of some of the most skillful physicians in Boston, all of whom pronounced my case incurable. This was my condition when I was advised by a friend to try the Veather, and I could see the good effects from the first dose I took, and from that moment I kept on improving until I was entirely cured, taking in all I should think, about six bottles. It is indeed a valuable medicine and if I should be afflicted again in the same way, I would give a dollar a dose, if I could not get it without.

Respectfully,

J. M. GILE,

361 Third Street, South Boston.

Nearly Blind.

H. R. STEVENS: Dear Sir—In expressing my thanks to you for benefits derived from the use of Veurtine, and to benefit others, I will state:—
When eight or nine years old I was afflicted with Scrofnla, which made its appearance in my eyes, face and head, and I was very near blind for two years. All kinds of operations were performed on my eyes, and all to no good result. Firally the disease principally settled in my body, limbs and feet, and at times in an aggravaed way.

ody and legs. I still used Vegetine and the hun sores one after another disappeared until they were all gone, and I attribute the cure of the two diseases to YEC-TINE as the only reliable remedy.

Once more accept my thanks, and believe me to be, Yery respectfully, AUSTIN PARROTT, Dec. 1, 1872.

Discases of the Kidneys, Bladder, etc., are always unpleasant, and at times they become the most distressing and dangerous diseases that can affect the human system. Most diseases of the Kidneys arise from impurities in the blood, causing homors which settle on these parts. Vigering excels any known remedy in the whole world for cleausing, and purifying the blood, thereby causing a healthy action to all the organs of the body.

Dr. Prico's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with are of experiment and vidence to sustain it, does not tear down, makesisk to make well; no harsh treatment, no trilling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sonse. We invite the sick, no matter what their allment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits maderevaluarly.
