A FARM FOR SALE.

Poetry.

ADA F. PALMER.

An old farm cottage among the trees, Whose branches sway in the gentle breeze, The golden sunlight drifting through, 'Mid leaves of brightest, greenish hue Tossing the shadows here and there, Resting in gleaming patches, where Amid the grass, sweet flowers spring, And sweet-voiced birds their carols sing.

A dear home-place, and I looked again, In the distance I saw the spring grain Waving in billows with the breeze, Like peaceful flowers of summer seas, While the dancing steps of a streamlet's flow, Left a gleaming line 'cross the meadow low, And the bazy hush of a summer day O'er all the quiet landscape lay.

"A farm for sale." Yes, the words were there In great chalk letters that seemed to stare As I gazed at each crooked, straggling line, Marked out upon the rough board sign.
"A. farm for sale." ... Why sell the farm?
Has it need of a father's strong right arm?
Have hands grown tired of plow and sickle,
Or wearied hearts grown cold and fickle?

Has ambition her apple of discord cast
In the midst of a sweet content now past?
Jarred the heart-music with whisperings of gold. Visions of riches, with splendors untold? Has the world's proud show with delusive wings.

Shadowed the joys which the farm life brings:
Why sell the farm? Have dancing feet
Whose pattering sound made music sweet.

Strayed up into life, and, one by one, Passed out at the little gate, to come Again no more, as in days of old. Has e'en the baby—last of the fold— Twined womanhood upon her brow, And taken the holy marriage yow, With the blessing of her love to cheer. And sanctify a home more dear.

Why sell the farm? Is there a grave In that shadowed spot where the willows wave? Has death cut deep through the verdant sod— A spirit winged its flight to God? Has she most blessed, dearest, best-Even the mother lain down to rest?

Has the light from those gentle eyes now fled— The light of that soul—is the mother dead? Ah! how will heads girdled by thorns of care Rest in dreams on the soft moss, where Swept by child curls in the long ago, Comes the echoing sound of the brooklet's

And back from the summit of many years
Will they gaze with eyes that are dimmed with tears And their hearts grow faint and cheeks turn pale, As a vision sweeps by. "A farm for sale."

HIS TWO LOVES.

Two, and Montague Garthorn loved them both. It does not seem possible, nevertheless it is true; and, stranger still, they both loved him. He was not worthy of half the good things the Fates showered on him with such lavish hands; but who in this world ever get their deserts? It is a thoroughly false theory that virtue brings it own reward; long ago it might, but now it certainly does not, or Opal Garthorn's life would have been happier. As long as Opal could remember she had worshiped her cousin Montagua As a child be was her hero, and as she grew up her chief delight was to be noticed by him. When she "came out," and he seemed to take pleasure in being with her, her joy knew no bounds; and at length when he asked her to be his wife, she could hardly realize that the dream of her life had come to pass; and he felt as if he could not do enough to show his love for the beautiful girl who had promis-

Montague Garthorn was well off, and his parents both being dead, he had become a "spoilt child" in all his relations' household, and many a Mistress Garthorn had been anxious to catch this excellent parti for her daughter. Opal's love for him was so unselfish, so womanly (and how much deeper is a woman's love than a man's can possibly be!) When I say she loved him with her whole heart, better than life. my words seem cold and passionless.

When he asked her to marry him soon she would not listen to him, but stipulated for another year of freedom, because "he might see some one he liked better," and with whom he would be more happy. Her delight consisted in seeing him happy, so she said, and so she meant, no doubt; but really she felt such kindness in his entire devotion, and judged him so by her-'self, that she never for a moment real-

her. Montague Garthorn considered that, if he understood one thing thoroughly, that thing was himself; so he was annoyed at her doubting him even prove that no woman of lures and wiles could influence him when he had the assurance of Opal's love.

Opal was standing at the drawingroom window, gazing into the twilight for her lover, while her mother and father chatted together. At last she heard his footstep on the stairs, and they are together.

"Opal, will you go to the theater to-night? I have promised to meet Archer there."

"Must you go, Montie?" "Well, dear, I think I must, but won't you come?"

Opal does not want to go, and she does not want him to go without her; but before she has time to make up her mind what answer to give, her mother settles the question by saying she "cannot allow Opal to go, as she is tired with a day's shopping."

as she threw her arms round his neck. "I don't know what is right to say,' ruminated Mr. Wylde; "only as you have very little pleasure and no mother, perhaps it would not be any harm.' So it was settled that beautiful, bright Nellie, was to make her first from the enchanted chemist's shop. Now came the time to think—to think of what he had done. Of course, it was too late to go to the theater; in fact, everything seemed too late, now that the door of Mr. Wylde's house was shut. What had he done? Promised to take Nellie to a ball, and he was engaged to go to a dinner party with Opal! What should he do? Next morning, Montague knew something must be done; so he got his writing materials, and intended to write to Nellie, to tell her he could not take her to the ball; but directly he began, the vision of those blue eyes filled with tears, and the smiling mouth pouting, was too much for him, so he changed his mind, and wrote briefly to Opal, that unforeseen circumstances prevented him from going out to dinner with her to-morrow. "Opal is so good natured, she won't mind." He thought little of her breaking heart, though he thought so much of tearful blue eyes. Nellie and Mr. Garthorn went to the ball and enjoyed it. form of Montague Garthorn among the crowd of men leaning over the Day after day Mr. Garthorn spent with Opal, and evening after evening with Nellic. Opal was so sweetly kind to him, sang and played for him, declared that something must be wrong, and besought him to have confidence in her and to tell her his trouble. In reply he kissed her, told her not "to worry, and that she was a foolish girt." And directly his duty visit was over, he rushed to Nellie's house, where she met him with bright eyes, merry repartee, kittenlike caresses. She really was very lovable; and it was no wonder that this man, who so loved being made so much of, fancied she was more worthy of such love as he had to give, than the woman who would have died for him.

Things could not last much longer like this. Opal wondered why he did not come of an evening, and asked him to spend the following Monday with her, as she would be alone. He could not refuse; so all day Snnday he spent with Nellie, wandering about Kensington Gardens; then to church with Mr. Wylde, and a delightful Bohemian supper in the shop parlor. Afterwards came the good-night; and Montague told Nellie he could not come the following day, because he had to see a cousin of his; and then he went on to say that these happy days must end, as he was going away for a long time, and would only come once more to say good-bye. The blue eyes filled with tears, the tiny hands rustled up into the air, and with a wild scream she threw herself upon the stairs, sobbing, "Montie, you cannot, shall not leave me!"

"Darling, I must. "But you said you loved me!" "God knows how much, my darling; but I must leave you, for I am in honor bound to marry my cousin

Nellie did not receive this announcement haughtily, with pride, or with despair, but threw herself down at Montague Garthorn's feet, sobbing piteously, "You shall never marry her-the proud lady you showed me in the Park; but me, your own loving Nellie, who worships you with a devotion she can never feel!"

"I do believe you love me best, my golden wig," he exclaimed, as he caught her in his arms and kissed her, promising to call again soon.

Nellie was immediately comforted, and before he had got to the end of the street she was singing to herself as she cleared the supper things away. On Monday, Opal dressed herself in the dress Montague admired, ordered the dishes for dinner he preferred, and made up her mind to try and winhim back, remembering the words of one of our greatest writers, that "revived love is the strongest." He came in determined to make the evening pleasant to Opal, even to confess to her his flirtation with Nellie-to tell her that he had rooted it up, and was ready to come back to her more devoted than ever; but Opal looked so strong in her self-possession, so passionless, so unsympathetic, that the image of Nellie recurred to him as he saw her last in her atitude of worship at his feet. "Montie, why are you so strange? Does anything worry you, dear?"

"Nothing." "But I am sure something does. Have I anything to do with it?"

"Only remember, Montague, if there is anything in the world I can do for you, I will."

"Would you really, Opal?" and: gleam of hope came into his face, and for the moment he felt inclined to tell her all; and then, if she had only come towards him instead of going to the window, he would have made a clean breast of it, and saved Nellie and himself a sorrowful fortnight.

Opal crossed the room, not even looking at him, and, with eyes fixed on the street, said: "Montague, even if you love another woman better than me, I can bear it, and give you up so readily-for your happiness;" and she turned and smiled one of her brightest smiles at him.

"I am but poor company to-night, Opal, so good-bye." And before she could call him back he was gone: "How little she cares for me!" thought, while she was caring for him more than her life. For a fortnight Mr. Garthorn saw neither girl. He was selfishly unhappy; he was in that state of mind that he did not know what to do next. He wished some one would take his destiny from him, and make him do something. Every day he thought more of Nellie and less of Opal. The latter wrote him a kind note, ter, and in one moment Opal saw it all. How Mr. Garthorn had sent her this letter by mistake; how this letter was from some one to him; and she realized that in truth he had found some one whom he loved more, and consequently would make him happier. Her resolution was made. Her love was no use if it was selfish.

Next morning she wrote to Montague, asking for a moment's conversation that afternoon. Then she went to Nellie's home. - She rather wondered at the appearance of the house, but fancied the lady might only be staying there. Blooming, blue-eyed Nell opened the door, and Opal asked for Nellie.

Disease of the Throat.

BY V. CLARENCE PRICE. M. D.

Hundreds throughout the country are suffering from various affections of the throat. Some are only disturbed during the changeable weather of winter and spring, while others are troubled more or less, most of the time. In some instances an affection of the throat will exist for a long time without getting in upon the lungs. Notwithstanding this slow progress in some cases, we do not believe there is one case out of ten that will not, if left alone, gradually grow worse, eventually reach the lungs, and end in consumption.

The symptoms in chronic diseases of the throat are many, and vary according to the nature and locality of the disease. Among the symptoms of this ailment is an alterative of the voice, its tone not as clear as usual, a slight irritation or tickling sensation in the throat with more or less dryness, giving rise to a hacking, bemming, or an endeavor to clear the throat of something which is felt to be an obstacle to full and free utterance. On attempting to speak there will be an inability to produce a proper sound, until the throat has first

In the first stages there is no expectoration. Passing from a warm to a cold atmosphere or room, produces difficulty in breathing, and in advance stages gives rise to more or less cough; the same symptoms follow an exposure to dust, or when walking against the wind. In cold or damp weather, the symptoms are generally more aggravated, the person liable to take cold from the slightest exposure. Sometimes the symptoms disappear entirely, but return again on contracting a cold. It may thus go on disappearing and returning, the patient meanwhile being in comparatively comfortable health, until the disease has made considerable progress. Montague remained a few minutes longer, then rose to take his leave.

"Nonsense!" and with another kiss he was gone, while Opal gazed on him for the last time-at least saw for the last time the man who loved her as he loved no other woman. Mr. Garthorn sauntered leisurely along, intending to take a hansom down to the Strand, when he remembered that as he was alone he might call for Archer at his lodgings. Instead of taking a cab, he resolved to go by train to Gower street, where his friend lived. If Opal only knew what would come of that little railway journey no earthly power would have prevented her going with Montie to the theater. He was thinking it was a bother to go to the play, as it was sure to be hot, and it would have been much cooler in the back drawing-room with Opal.—Here his thoughts were interrupted and the carriage door was opened, and a young girl pushed in.

The Currency. CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—The near approach of the gold premium to par has brought the question of specie resumption prominently before the public again. It is very delusive to deduce from this large decline that we have nothing further to do but to wait quietly for the final drop, which will make all our currency alike in value. Legislation has created an irredeemable currency, and it will remain dethis? preciated to a greater or less extent, and ever continue to fluctuate, until legislation remedies the defect. It is impossible for the natural laws of trade to do it. Favorable circumislative acts, but cannot completely cure the financial disease. In 1873 the gold premium sank to 6, but it afterwards rose to 17, and specie payments looked distant indeed. To-day stances like the present may aid leg- quired to redeem them on the day heavy importations of gold have again reduced the premium through excessive supply, and some people clamor for specie payments in thirty days. The supply of gold has increased, the market is overstocked, the price has become cheapened, and unless some practical method is devised to retain this gold here, beyond its use for custom-house duties and speculative purpose in Wall street, the result will be exportation, a consequent reduction of stock, and rise in price again, and a further remove from specie resumption. If specie bank notes, or present National Bank payments were certain to come within | notes scaled down to gold value. Thus a reasonably short time, even the use can the gauge be quickly and easily for speculative purposses in Wall changed, and the proper rolling-stock street would not be required. THE GREENBACK GAUGE.

For fifteen years we have been running the finances of the country on what might be called the greenback guage; it has been found a defective one, and not in harmony with that of the world; it has been too broad a gauge for best economical results. and therefore too expensive for the labor and industry of the people. When the business of the country contracted its volume after a wild era of speculation and wasteful production, the extensive equipment went lumbering on, too heavy and cumbersome for profitable results; the gauge was too broad, and not economical in working; the roadway was too spongy and too insecure, and the accident of 1873 brought the fact home to the people. War times and its necessities drove us to this broad greenback gauge, with monstrous balloon equipment, when preservation of the nation was more important than economy; and not wasteful governmental expenditure fostering private speculation and gambling is essential to the prosperity of the country, which has been happily saved from dismember-

There is a guage that the great civilized world has adopted, called the goldgauge; it is founded on the best principles of economic science; it runs on a bed which is firm and solid; it is a gague and has long been tested; it is not perfect in all its workings, but no other gauge has given so general satisfaction, nor has any other ever been suggested that seemed able to surmount the difficulties of a practical application. What defects it may have are more readily traced to the mode of operating the line than to the gauge itself; the roadway is solid, but to a high and long-continued pressure of business has often made sad work with the equipment and deranged the traffic of the line, and it remains for the future to devise remedies for the poriodic strains that break down temporarily the best-planned schemes of finance. CHANGE OF GAUGE. To change, however, successfully the present greenback gauge to the gold gauge witout a complete stoppage and a general devastation of the line is the great problem, and one not yet will be completed and Senator satisfactorily solved by our ligislators. financiers, and the public generally. When a great railroad makes a change of gauge it is accomplished almost instanter; thousands of workmen are placed at every point, and at the signal the spikes are drawn, the rails moved, the hammers fall, and with It was only the other day hardly a day's cessation the trains of a thousand men. Now we is required to renew the immense trafic? Only the equipment, the rolling stock, must correspond, and be in readiness for the new order of things.

England. So it is with the currency. First, the THE ADVANTAGES OF THE PIAN. greenback gauge must be changed to gold on a certain fixed day stimultaneously throughout the country, and the sooner that day the better for the prosperity of the country. I do not mean by this the resumption of speciel cy; no violent change in the relations payments by the Government or individuals on past indebtedness, but similarly to settle their old contracts in ply that all new transactions shall be in new dollars of a gold value curreny. 2. The new equipment of gold or paper-money based on the gold-value gold notes made to pass current on a fixed gold value, and thus freed from the evils of fluctuation, must be in readiness to continue the financial trafic of the country.

PARTIAL REPEAL OF THE LEGAL TEN-DER ACT. What legislation is needed to effect

1. The repeal of the Legal-tender act, to the extent that on all new contracts, greenbacks shall only be acceptable at the price as established by law. The Government shall be rethe tender is made. Said repeal to take place March 5, 1877, or as soon after the inaugeration of the new President as necessary to give the country sufficient notice, -a suitable time, and perhaps the best, as not to remote to endanger much the country by further doubt and uncertainty, and in time to take advantage of the present influx of gold. Such an enactment would make all new transact tions, unless otherwise stated, rovable in gold or greenbacks scaled down to gold value, and also by mutual consent, custom paper dellars, having a gold par value, be they the present gold-notes of the National Banks, or a newly-established currency redeemable in gold or Canadian greenback presented, and each month thereafter at & of 1 per cent. advance, equivalent to 1 per cent. every three months, or 4 per cent. per annum, until they are redeemed at par, on and after Jan. 1, 1879, but to the Government shall be accorded this privilege or option, viz: that in place of being obliged to redeem on demand, the Government may elect to pay interest on all notes presented, provided for any delay not exceeding thirty days the rate of interest shall be 5 per cent. per annum; above thirty days and not exceeding sixty, 6 per cent ; above sixty days, and not exceeding ninety days, 7 per cent.; and and above ninety days, 10 per cent. per annum until fully paid, with interest payable in gold. An issue of bonds to be provided to obtain means for redemption of said greenbacks. Although I have no doubt of the ever, in order to guard against any attempted combinations to control the gold of the world and prevent this redemption, and also to allay the fears of those who proclaim a gold redemption impossible, and therefore posed the foregoing safeguard of giving the Government time to obtain gold by its paying a penalty in the way of interest, on the principle that when a debtor requires an extension of his past-due paper he must pay current rates of interest at least, and f the default continues those rates of interest must be increased. While by these provisions the gold in the country is utilized, and its further importation encouraged, there can never be a scarcity of the circulating medium at the outset of the change, because the old currency is available in abundance and cannot be withdrawn until better is forthcoming. While old contracts are to be settled in greenbacks at face value, new ones can be settled in the same currency, but at the rate of 94 prior to July 1, 77, 95 Oct. 1, 96 Jan. 1, 78, 97

par Jan. 1, 1879. NO MORE GOLD SPECULTION.

3. In addition to the means proposed herewith to give the greenbacks fixed determinate value from time to time, until through gradual steps they are brought to par, in accordance as the faith of the nation has been pledged and now ratified by both political parties, it may be necessary to enact that the Government shall sell greenbacks for gold, or offer so to do, at the redeeming price from week to week, thereby preventing too rapid an enhancement in their value and effectually killing gold specalution on the value of greenbacks but provision should be made that all gold in the Treasury above $100,000,000 should be used in purchase or redemption of bonds, and all greenbacks in the Treasury above $50,000,000 should be canceled and destroyed. THE MONEY OF THE FUTURE.

4. A new currency law adapted to the gold gauge. I will only suggest various systems of currency that might be established without advocating any one specially, premising it opens a great field for discussion, and not settled immediately, would not jeopardize the present plan of change of gauge, as gold, national trust gold notes, and present currency scaled down to gold value would be sufficient equipment for a long time to run the financial traffic of the country. (1) Bullion notes on a deposit of gold and silver, but only a legal-tender at their gold value. (2) Gold and silver coins, and no paper under the denomination of ten dollars. (3) Notes redeemable in gold from a sufficient reserve fund, and issued direct by the Government. (4) Notes redeemable n gold, and issued by banks or individually on deposit of Government bonds, with 25 per cent, margin for security and guarantee of redemption. (5) All paper money to be issued by one bank, like the Bank of England to it for the privilege. (6) The Suffolk Bank system of mutual redemption, as formerly existing in New abundant greenbacks, at par or in gold, at a fixed sliding scale of pre-mium. Why should the labor and industry of this country stand stiff while those classes are settling their old differences? "Let the dead bury their dead." It requires no immense accumulation of gold, and derangement of the markets of the world before specie payments can be assured. It forebodes no disastrous shock when smoothly along and gives a fresh start to the suffering labor and industry of the country. It restores confidence to the capitalist, who will use his wealth to develop the great resources of the country. It encourages immigration and foreign capital to flow hither. It enhances prices from their present low point, which is below the gold standard of other nations, when we take into view our high protective tariff. It raises the public credit, and enables us to borrow money cheaply, development. ITS PRACTICAL WORKINGS.

which every new nation needs for its Experience of the past has demontrated to some extent what would be the practical workings of this plan. As it is based on the principle of depreciating the present currency to its real value, "throwing it out," as the expression goes, there is a great similarity the to state of affairs existing in 1861, when Illionis "stump-tail" currency was taken, and passed currnet at what the banks would pay for it. As every bank-note had a different value, it was much more complicated than the proposed system, which establishes by law a fixed price to all bills alike. On and after the passage of the proposed acts, bank deposits would be changed to the new dollar of account, and, through the co-operation of banks, railroad companies, and business men generally, the new order of things would start off at once smoothly, and almost imperceptibly. OBJECTIONS TO THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN. The following objections to the President's plan, promulgated since the above was written, are suggested: First, it would cause too sudden a change in the value of the currency: Any Board of Trade man would think it a very arbitrary act to lower the price of grain 6 per cent. in one day. Apply this reduction to any commodity in the land, to every contract that is about falling due, and the in justice will be found to be very great and burdensome. If the decline of 6 per cent. should be spread over a period of two years, and in accordance with the notice that Congress has given, that Jan. 1, 1879, is the ultimate day when variations in the value of currency will cease, few could complain of any hardships experienced. Second, no positive certainty that 4 the gold premium entirely, and enable gold to circulate freely with paper. Third, want of confidence among legislators and people, that so sudden a return to specie-payment can be carried out. Let us hope that Congress can be kept in session, even after March 4 if necessary, until a measure of finance shall be adopted that will put the gold at once into circulation and start the country on a new era of prosperity. F. R. CHANDLER.

> The Raleigh (N. C.) News, which is the recognized organ of Gov. Vance and the Democratic party of the State, in commenting upon the Oregon decision as virtually awarding the Presidency to Mr Hayes, says: "The South will not suffer under Haves' administration; there is every assurance that he will be both liberal and just to our section." It is only fair to the people of North Carolina to note that this expression represents the average sentiment as expressed by the newspaper press of that State, and presumably the average sentiment of the people. There was always a strong Union feeling in the old "North State," which, during the War, suffered some of the pains of martyrdom, and which is ready to assert itself at any sign of treason or revolution. Some of the Northern Democracy might learn a lesson in patriotism from all this, but perhaps the Northern Democracy does not want the South treated well so much as it does a united South to sustain the Democratic aspiration for spoils.—Chicago Tribune.

There is just one more trick that the Obstructionists will resort to, and. like all that have preceded it, it will fail. They will object to a Wisconsin Elector, and by filibustering motions will seek to prevent the reassembling of the Joint Convention after the two Houses shall have separated for debate. But they forget one important fact-that, once the Wisconsin returns have been opened, and the two Houses have not agreed to the rejection of the votes objected to, the count is complete under the terms of the Electoral law, and the Senate can and will na rode into Matamoras at the go thundering by again. What more by the Government, and paying tax so announce, whether the House joins by the Government, and paying tax so announce, whether the House joins by the Government, and paying tax so announce, whether the House joins by the Government, and paying tax so announce, whether the House joins or not in the closing proceedings or not. The result of the count will have become a matter of record, and if the House should filibuster until doomsday it could not prevent the inauguration of President Hayes and Vice-President Wheeler on Monday *xt. Figures are What is Wanted. Not election majorities, but such as inerest the great army of American producers. Twenty-five years ago the eight counties of Missouri now traversed by the Old Reliable Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad were nearly a wilderness. To day, by a late census, it is discovered that these counties produce over one-fourteenth of the entire wheat crop of the State, over one-twellth of the corn crop, and over one-ninth of the oats. The same growth of country is now being 'repeated in Kansas. Nebraska, Colorado, and New Mexico, and the immortal Greeley had this dentical route and section of country in mind when he breathed those stirring words of wisdom, "Young man, go West." Therefore, it is but natural that parties taking this advice should desire to pass over a road that has done so much for a State, (especially as it offers the best facilities) and see for themselves. By the Hannibal & St. Joseph R. R., through cars are run from Cleveland and Teledo, and through connections made from Cinciunati and Indianapolis, via Quincy, to St. Jo., Atchison and Kansas City, and. from Chicago to Kansas City without change. We are about to issue, in connection with our own, a county map of Colorado and New Mexico, giving valua-

THE Grangers in our place are having some very interesting meetings. Their discussions on farming and other subjects of general interest are quite instructive to those who attend them. RUNAWAY.—Prof. J. A. Jones and wife, with two children, were driving up Day's Avenue, this morning, and when opposite J. M. Boice's blacksmith shop a cow came running out from the alley near S. W. Epley's house, with a man and two dogs after show and commenced to back, cramping the right fore wheel under the the box so as to break the axeltree. By this time the cow was about oposite to the buggy, and the horse started to run the other way, and ran to nearly opposite Mr. Epley's house when the buggy struck a hitching post and upset, throwing the passengers all out onto the side walk. None were seriously hurt unless it be Mr. Jones, who says that the horse kicked him in the chest. The oldest child, a girl about ten or twelve years old, had A correspondent in Galien objects hurt.

B. D. HARPER, Recorder. FROM GALIEN.

ED. RECORD—Dear Sir: In the last weeks' issue of your paper I noticed a couple of items which I wish to correct. First, the notice of the death of Miss Ella Yaw, stating that her sickness was measles. This is a mistake. Her sickness was menigitis, or inflammation of the brain, a disease which almost invariably proves fatal. Second, the item about the social dance in Galien one week ago last Friday evening, saying, "it ended in a social fight, in which all participated." Now, in Galien, four or five parties, who saw fit to disturb a dance, does not mean all. We do not wish to be represented worse than we are, for the Lord knows we are bad enough.

of sickness to-day may, if unattended to, become a serious case in a week. Small ailments should be nipped in the bud before they blossom into full blown maladies. If this advice were attended to, many a heavy bill for medical attendance might be avoided. When the liver is disordered, the stomach foul, the bowels obstructed, or the nerves disturbed, resort should at once be had to that supreme remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a few doses of which will restore healthy action and put the system in perfect order. It is a wise precaution to keep this incomparable preventive in the house, since it checks, with unrivalled promptitude, disorders which breed others far more dangerous,

CONSUMPTIVES TAKE NOTICE. Every moment of delay makes your cure more hopeless, and much depends on the judi-cious choice of a remedy. The amount of tes-timony in favor of Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, as a cure for Consumption, far exceeds all that can be brought to support the pretensions of any other medicine. See Dr. Schenck's Almanac containing the certificates of many persons of the highest respectability, who have been restored to health, after being pronounced incurable by physicians of acknowledged ability. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone has cured many, as these evidences will show; bu the cure is often promoted by the employment of two other remedies which Dr. Schenck pro vides for the purpose. These additional reme dies are Schenck's Sea Weed Toute and Mandrake Pills. By the timely use of these medicines, according to directions, Dr. Schenck cer-tifies that most any case of Consumption may

Mr. H. R. Stevers:

Dear Sir—About one year since I found myself in a feeble condition from general debility. VEGETINE was strongly recommended to me by a friend who had been much benefitted by its use. I procured the article, and after using several bottles, was restored to health and discontinued its use. I feel quite confident that there is no medicine superior to it for those complaints for which it is especially prepared, and would cheerfully recommend it to those who feel that they need something to restore them to perfect health.

Horn-Their Indications. Much may be learned from the set and from the horns of cattle and sheep, as indicative of character. Small, short, slouching horns on a two or three year old ox give a grave and contented aspect to the countenance. Long, slouching horns, as on the long-horn cattle, seem to oppress the head with a constant weight. Horns springing outward from the sides of the head, then rising up and bending backward never fail to impress that their bearer is quick-tem pered, ready to use them offensively, and are set so as to toss up any object with case. Such horns may be seen on the Jersey bull. Horns curving laterally and horizontally forward give a finished appearance to the tap of the head when viewed in front. Such are generally met with in Southern cattle. Long horns ris ing outward, forward, and having points outward, impart a majestic air to the head of the ox. Horns rising outward, and then approaching behind the head, give an idea of malformation. Horns springing outward and then coming straight forward in the points, seem dangerons. Horns springing outward and approaching forward with the points a little elevated and separated, seen sideways seem heavy, but seen in front, ornament the head. A horn thick at the root for its length looks clumsy, and more so when blunted at the point, and both are associated with dull feeders. When springing outward much, and seen turning downward, they are ungraceful. A good horn, however set, is small where it emerges from the head, and tapers gradually to a small point. A white horn looks and being short and curving upward, serve more for ornament than defense. Cattle with spreading horns are better feeders than those with them contracted suddenly in front. Horns indicate the age of cattle. At three years old the horn is uniformly smooth from the root to the tip. Every year after three it has a notch on it, so, counting the notches, and adding three, the age of the animal is ascertained. Tricks are practiced by fraundulent dealers in filing down the old notches, to make the animal appear younger, and the unsophisticated are thereby deceived; but a slight inspection of the horn will easily detect the fraud. The period of calving, whether late or early, affects the notches of the horn, which may give an older or vonnger appearance to the animal than its true age.

As with the cattle the horns of sheep better than a dark-colored and a tip of brown or black, according to the breed, gives a neat finish, though most short horns have entirely white, indicate the age of the animal. The horns are very sensitive organ no part of the body indicating the presence of internal disease more quickly than they do. In pushing directly forward in a fight, horns will bear a great force; yet a single stroke upon them with a cudgel is severely felt by the animal; and a single stroke may even cause the horn to slip off the flint, which, being a vascular bone is full of blood vessels, and bleeds freely. Such an injury may cause inflamation of the brain or lockjaw. When the horns feel death-like cold, inflamation in the body is indicated; when hot, fever. The horns are not liable to disease; only illiterate people, quacks, and cow-leaches imagine that they are subject to an ailment, by them termed "hollow-horn."

Ducklings More Profitable Than

Chickens. The saying often applied to young ducks that "they eat more than they are worth," may be a very unjust one. Several years ago we were speaking with a woman who raised yearly large numbers of ducks and chickens, regarding the comparative amount of food consumed to bring them to their full growth. She stated that "ducks eat less in proportion to their growth than chickens." Our readers may be surprised at this, but upon giving the matter a little thought they will understand the reason. It is because the ducklings reach maturity sooner than the chickens, and, of course, the longer it takes to bring a creature to maturity, the greater the expense, not only of food, but of time and trouble. Experiment has demonstrated the fact that, with the same quantity of food and care, the ducklings, in ninety days from the shell, may be made to weigh nine or ten pounds per pair. Hence the remark quoted at the commencement of this paper, does not apply when ducklings are properly and intelligently managed.—Poul-

Gapes in Poultry. In a recent conversation with an experienced chicken grower, he inormed us that he had been successful conquering that precarious disease his young fowls by the application f air-slaked lime. As soon as a manfestation of gapes in his fowls appears, he confines his chickens in a box, one at a time, sufficiently large to contain he bird, and places a coarse piece of otton or linen cloth over the top. Ipon this he places the pulverized ime to fall through. This lime dust he fowl inhales and causes it to sneeze, nd in a short time the cause of the apes is thrown out in the form of a limy mass or masses of worms, which ad accumulated in the windpipe and maller air vessels. This remedy he onsiders superior to any he has ever ried, and he seldom fails to effect a erfect cure. He has abjured all hose mechanical means by which it is ttempted to dislodge the Entozoans rith instruments made of whalebone, og's bristles, or fine wire alleging hat people are quite as certain to ush the gape worms further down he throat of the fowls as to draw them

Wegetine Is not a vile, nauseous compound, which simply purges the bowels, but a safe, pleasant remedy which is zuro to purify the blood, and thereby restore the health Vegetine

Vegetine Does not deceive invalids into false hopes by purging and creating a fictitious appetite, but assists vature in clearing and purifying the whole system, leading the patient gradually to perfect health.

Was looked upon as an experiment for some time by some of our best physicians, but those most incredulous in regard to its merit are now its most ardent friends

Says a Boston physician. "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures, after all other remedies had failed, I visited the laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is prepared from barks, roots and herbs each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."

Is acknowledged and recommended by physicians and apotheraries to be the best purifier and cleanser of the blood yet discovered, and thousands speak In its praise who have been restored to health.
