I had quite forgotten about this bet and the £20; but the dream set me thinking of what rumors I had heard respecting Staining since I left England, that his money had wasted, that

Staining pulled out | descending upon .him, and he, with from his pocket-book a twenty pound | folded arms, presenting a picture of mute despair. So did I behold Staining. I put my hand upon his shoulder. He sprang from me as though I were a wild beast.

"I did not want to run away," he said, hoarsely, "they knew that. I'll face it-I'll face it," he added, tremulously. "Go on, I'll walk quietly enough - Why - what - ah - surely, can it be-can-"

"Yes, it is Smith, your old companion. Pray be composed. Staining, left abruptly. There are objections my friend, what is all this? Come to standing in the public highway away and confide in me. You know with a bank note in your hand and a you can trust me. If you are in puzzled expression in your face, so trouble, and money can help you, you shall not want." And I took his arm and we went together.

And then I heard poor Staining's confession, and it amounted to this: When he had wasted his money, he obtained a situation in a merchant's office. The pay, poor enough, was sufficient to keep him; but even now nothing could restrain him from gambling on a small scale on horse racing. As a consequence he was soon penni less, and worse-dishonest. He had paid a betting debt out of a twenty pound note, which the day before I met him had been entrusted to him. Discovery had ensued almost instantaneously, and though the luckless man had explained that it was only through the failure of another member of the virtuous fraternity he could not at once replace the money, he had been discharged, and had reason to suppose he would be prosecuted. "Many, many thanks," replied the poor fellow, to the offer I directly made him. "You can see the firm in the morning; but, though they have allowed a day to pass, I doubt whether they will take the money. I believe

He would get money, he must get money. When his young wife and infant child were well nigh starving, what was to be done? Stay, stay, Mr. Blendon, I will complete my story. The money was obtained, sir—Mr. Blendon, you know how. I need not tell you that. But in what way was it repaid ere mischief came, and how was the husband saved—saved from ruin and deg-radation—saved to become a rich and respected merchant? Whose money saved him? Ah! I have often thought since what admirable advantages are a clear head and a calm temper. In the delivery of the foregoing I had worked myself up to a white heat. It was only at the moment when he first saw my drift that my listener manifested any strong emotion. Then he rose from his chair, and his face flushed, but he resumed his seat, and by the time I had finished he was sitting as calmly almost as when I entered. There was a slight pause, and then Mr. Blendon "You have acquired, sir, some knowledge (I will not say whether accurate or not) of an incident in my early life which I am not called upon to discuss. May I ask whether this knowledge is confined, and is intended to be confined, to yourself?" "I believe it to be confined to my self and my informant, and I have no desire it should be otherwise."

Mr. Blendon bowed. "I will not conceal that I shall be glad for it to be an understanding between us that this matter goes no further," (I made a gesture of assent.) "Well, then, on that footing, I will say that Mr. Staining shall be entirely absolved, and I will even aid him if I can. You must, however, excuse me from taking your twenty pounds. . I am obliged to you for coming. Good morning.' I departed, and I must confess I felt the enemy had well covered his retreat, and not left me a morsel more of triumph than he could help. However, my object was accomplished, therefore I hastened to meet Staining. He was not at the appointed place, and after waiting some time I went to his lodgings. It was a shabby house, in a by-street, not easy to find. The landlady told me Mr. Staining had come in an hour ago, and was in his bed room-not very well, she thought. She and I went up together and knocked more than once. Then I went in. Poor Staining was lying on the bed, dead. My first misgivings were happily not confirmed. His enfeebled frame had been unable to withstand the recent wear and tear, and he was now beyoud the reach of his follies and his troubles.

is that railroad men stick so close together," said Sheriff Pressly, talking with a group of friends yesterday afternoon. He then went on to explain that the cause of their clannishness was the hazardous character of their calling. He likened their life to that of soldiers. The latter, when in action, saw comrades shot down all about them, and stuck closer together on account of the ordeals through which they passed. "It is the same thing with railroaders," said Mr. Pressly. "I am an old engineer, and know all about it. When a railroad man leaves home to go to work in the morning, and kisses his wife and little ones and says by-by, he does not know but that it may be for the last time. He does not know but that in a few hours he may be brought back a mangled corpse. It is this risky nature of their calling that makes them stand together like brothers, so that when you attack one railroader you have to fight the whole class."—Indianapolis Journal:

I saw that those assembled there Were those who toiled from year to year. And I had scarcely sat me down, When lo! the melody of sound Filled the room with accents sweet—

The fliocers their places fill With zeal, with candor, and good will. The candidates with willing feef Are led their granger friends to meet.

"And all goes merry as a bell,"
But one sad thing I came to tell.
That noxious weed which many use,
Their tatents and their tastes to abuse, Finds entrance to the grange, although The ladies do detest it so.

Now, brothers, would it not be grand,
When ye it to build a hall demand, And just conclude to lead the way The ladies will respect you more.

Do help to make and keep it pure;
You'll ne'er regret it, I am sure.

His tastes grow finer in selection,
And mankind yet may know the time When he, with sentiment sublime, Will so control this mundane sphere

"Yes, I do; and I shall be extremely annoyed if you make any difficulty. I protested; but presently he said in irritation, "Then be my almoner, and give the money in charity." And he pressed the note back on me and the note was transferred to my pocket, and I went my way pondering, when I was met full tilt by a clergyman whom I very well knew. "Hulloa!" he cried. "Mr. Smith, both you and I seem to have our minds so much occupied to-day that we cannot take care of our bodies." I apologized. No grave matter

A correspondent writes to the Inter Ocean regarding resumption of specie payment favoring the remonetization of silver coin and proposing as an aid to resumption that National Banks be empowered to redeem their circulation in greenbacks in case of a lack of coin for at least twelve months before the time set for resumption and also allowing them to keep greenbacks as a reserve instead of gold, thus preventing a rush of greenbacks upon the Treasury at the first. This, he claims will at once place both the greenbacks and national currency on a par with gold as the three will be made interchangeable and the volume of currency not be lessened, by the act.

When one of his creditors, purchasing at his store, asked a reduction on the article, giving as a reason that he had lost so much money by him, the debtors exclaimed: "Do you think I was such a fool as to go into bankruptcy | the front as soon as it can be suitably for your benefit?" The

The Detroit Evening News, in an article on Savings Banks, recom-mends that the method now in suc cessful operation in England, that of making each post-office a savings banks, be adopted in this country. We quote the latter portion of its

. "With a large share of the savings. banks of the country wiped out of existence, and public confidence in the rest weakened, what better time could there be for the inauguration of a post-office savings bank system such as has for twelve or fifteen years past worked so well in England? There every post-office is an agency for the receiving and paying small savings deposits, for the absolute safety of which the government is responsible. Small villages have thus all the advantages in this respect that under our system only large cities enjoy, and the aggregate of deposits is enormons. So long as the United States is so large a borrower, there is no good reason why the laborers and artisans of the country should not be in the advantages of lending to the government, now monopolized exclusively by the more wealthy. With a system of post-office savings banks the government might retire many millions of its bonds now held abroad, and for the payment of interest on which millions of dollars are sent out of the country each year, and, in stead, pay the same to our own citizen, whose savings, except in the more densely populated localities, are now alsolutely lying idle. There would then be no more losses by failure, no more disastrous "runs" on the banks. The subject is really worth the serious attention of congress at its approaching session. It is gest, some fifteen years' trial in England having fully demonstrated its success. In that country upon the first opening of the post-office banks to purchase all the telegraph lines of the country. Singularly enough the demand for government savings banks in this country occurs stimultaneously with the threatening action of the telegraph companies, which call loudly for the establishment of a postal telegraph system here. Nothing could be more opportune. The savings of the country will at once afford the means for the government to purchase, at a fair valuation, all the existing wires, and make such additions to them as may be necessary, and, instead of increasing, the rates for transmitting dispatches may even be reduced. We commend the whole subject to our delegation in congress."

SALT LAKE, Sept. 3.—The written nstructions which Brigham Young left, dated in 1873, and read yesterday, during the obsequies, contained the wish that his body be made clean and kept from one to four days; that the coffin be of red-wood, two inches longer than his body, and three inches wider, with a canopy-top, giving the appearance of his being able to turn over if he desired; that he rest on cotton, and be dressed in temple robes; that the females of his family buy no black to wear at the funeral, but that they could wear such if they had it, and that the males wear no crape; that the services consist of singing and prayer, and, if the friends desired to speak a few words, they be at liberty to do so; the body be carried on a bier to the south-east corner of the private burying ground on the hill, east of the Lion House, and deposited in a cut-stone vault, covered with slabs and earth, then roofed over, and there he desired to rest until the day of resurrection. He desired no one to cry or exhibit signs of grief. If he lived until the Saints went to Jackson county, Missouri, he wished to go with them and be buried there, -otherwise, as above. These instructions were signed and ordered to be read at the funeral. The bugbear of specie resumption is likely to disappear entirely, if congress does not legislate adversely.— When the resumption act was passed in March, 1875, gold bore a premium of 141 per cent as compared with greenbacks. The premium to-day 4 @41 per cent. Thus 10 per cent or more than two thirds of the premium has disappeared. The paper dollar is worth within four cents as much as the gold dollar,—a position it has never enjoyed since July, 1862. The flexibility of the national banking act has led to such a retirement of paper currency as the diminished business of the country permitted without direct interference by the government. This is the English system, under which no panic for the last 50 years has destroyed the exchangeable value of her paper currency for gold. Capital will never again be freely invested in this country so long as a man who puts a dollar into business is uncertain what number of cents he will get out of it. The greenback has been worth all the way from 35 to 96 cents on the dollar in the gold, and it is now so near par that the short remaining step can be smoothly taken by the appointed time (16 months hence), if congress does not block the way.—Lansing

Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with ars of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, makesick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trilling, no lattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their aliment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. MR H.R. STEVENS.

In 1872 your Vegetien was recommended to me; and yielding to the persuasions of a friend, I commenced to try it. At the time I was suffering from general debility and nervous prostration, superinduced by overwork and irregular habits. Its wonderful strengthning and curative properties seemed to affect my debilitated system from the first dose; and under its persistent med I rapidly recovered, gaining more than usual health and good leeling. Since then I have not healthed to give Vegetien my most unqualified indorsement as being a safe, sure, and powerful agent in prometing health and restoring the wasted system to new life and energy. Vegetien is the only medicine I use, and as long as I live I never expect to find a botter.

MR. R. H. STEVENS.

DSUT Sir,—About ten years ago my health failed through the depleting effects of dyspepsia; nearly a year later I was attacked by typhold tever in its worst form, its settled in my back, and took the form of a large deep-seated abscess, which was fifteen months in gathering. I had two surgical operations by the best skill in the State, but received no permanent cure. I suffered great pain at times, and was constantly weakened by a profuse discharge. Matters ran on thus about seven years, till May. 1874, when a friend recommended me to go to your office, and talk with you of the virtue of Veortine. I did so, and by your kindness passed through your manufactory, noting the ingredients, &c, by which your remedy is produced

By what I saw and heard I gained some confidence in VEOTTINE.

I commenced taking it soon after, but felt worse from its effects; still I persevered, and soon felt it was benefitting me in other respects. Yet I did not set the results I desired till I had taken it taithfully for a little more than a year, when the difficulty in the back was cured; and for nine months I have enjoyed the best of health.

I have in that time gained twenty-five pounds of flesh, being heavier than ever before in my life, and I was never more able to perform labor than now

During the past fe v weeks I had a scrofulous swelling as large as my flat gather on another part of my body.
