The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years successful practice, that the damming consequences of selfabuse may be radically cured without the dangarous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

"I'm after axin, Biddy dear—"
And here he paused awhile
To fringe his words the merest mite
With something of a smile,
A smile that found its image
In a face of beauteous mold,
Whose liquid eyes were peeping
From a broidery of gold.

"I've come to ax ye, Biddy dear,
I'—" then he stopped again,
As if his heart had bubbled o'er
And overflowed his brains;
His lips were twitching nervously
O'er what they had to tell,
And timed their quavers with the eyes
That gently rose and fell.

"I've come—" and then he took her hands And held them in his own,
"To ax—" and then he watched the buds That on her cheek had blown,
"Me putty dear—" and then he heard The throbing of her heart,
That told how love had entered in And claimed its every part-

"Och! don't be tazing me;" said she,
With just the faintest sigh;
"I've sinse enough to see you've come,
But what's the rayson why?"

"To ax—" and once again the tongue Forebore its sweets to tell,

"To ax—if Mrs. Mulligan Has any pigs to sell!"

Story. A HOLIDAY DIVERSION.

And so all I had to do was to go into the country and enjoy myself for six weeks-that is what it came to. Why, if any one had struck me with a feather at the moment the doctor uttered his verdict I should certainly have been knocked down; fortunately no such atrocity was attempted, so I maintained as creet a posture as my enfeebled health would allow until the eminent licentiate of the College of Physicians, whom I was consulting, begged me to resume my seat.

"You are utterly smoke dried," he

"London or tobacco?" I inquired. "Both," he answered. "No physic; fresh air is all you want—mountain air if possible; perfect rest and quiet; absteminous habits, early hours, and no tobacco."

"But," I feebly protested, "I don't was a me care about the country; how am I to arrived."

Fish, | me; and I was a little disappointed sketch, idle, read poetry and light to find, when early the following afnovels; go and steep yourself in ternoon, a lull in the weather enabled greenery, refresh your senses with me to go down to my favorite rocky rural sights and sounds; go and look | haunt, that there was very little perat trees and fields, listen to the birds and the music of running waters; follow this out, and you will be a different man in six weeks.' "And then?" I blankly inquired. "Then? O, then," he answered, "get married and settle down."

It certainly was fortunate I was not standing up at that moment. for it would not have needed a touch of the aforesaid feather to have laid me low. As it was I sank back in my chair aghast. "Get married!" I thought: I who was utterly insensible to female attractions, and who had been always taught to have an eve to main chance. and regard matrimony as a clog, unless associated with a great heiress. I get married on a salary of £300 a year? Whew!

I left Saville row with scarce another word, convinced that for real. downright, impractical men there were none to compare with doctors.

Thus I took the plunge, and within five days found myself at a snug little inn in North Wales, hard by a celebrated spot known as the "Devil's Bridge," a few miles inland from aborystwith.

I confess at once to having been a little astonished and pleased at the beauty of the scenery. The unexpected novelty, I felt, would keep me going for some time.

The change soon refreshed me. I was astonished at feeling neither dull nor lonely—for the tourist season had hardly set in, and I had the little inn well nigh to myself. So I wandered about and gazed wonderingly on all I saw. especially at the deep, craggy, wooded gorge or mountain river-bed across-which his Satanic Majesty's engineering skill was supposed to have been displayed.

As I stood looking down upon it from the bridge near the inn, it certainly seemed to me a wondrously romantic spot. Steep rock-bound banks, crowned with trees, hemmed in the rushing, foaming river, its channel becoming irregularly narrower and more precipitous as it reached the head of the valley in the depths of which it lay. Here there was a waterfall, as then thought, of stupendous magnitude, and yet a little higher up, a second, still larger. As I made my way down to the river by a well-worn nath through a wood, the sound of the descending waters, as, wafted on the soft summer breeze, it rose and fell in liquid cadence, fascinated me from the very first. At a distance it was but a murmur; but as I drew nearer I seemed to fancy that melodies innumerable were growing out of it—wild, unequal melodies, that touched chords in my nature of the existence of which I had hitherto been ignorant. I had cared no more for music than for any other of the refining, softening influences of life, and now there seemed to be awakening in

Then. after advancing a little to increase the strength of tone, I would retreat so that the delicate decline of power should be made to add another charm. At last there was a sudden change of wind. Heavy clouds swept over the landscape, burying in mist or occasional showers all forms save those close at hand.

"Regular Welsh weather, sir!" said a fresh-colored elderly gentlemanlike man in a tourist's suit, whom I found the next morning in the coffeeroom. "My party will be house-bound for a couple of days at least, if I know anything of this country; shocking place for weather. Been here long, sir?"

I told him how long, and that I had not had a drop of rain the whole time. "Disadvantage in that, too," he went on; "mountainous scenery wants mist and rain to drift round the peaks, fill up the torrents and bring out the waterfalls. This one here will present a fine sight after another four-and-twenty hours of such weather; it was a mere dribble last night when we care about the country; how am I to fill up my time?"

"Nonsense; you know nothing of it, from your own showing; and as to occupation, anything will do, so that occupation, anything will do, so that occupation, anything will do, so that occupation was a little disappointed.

I was consoled by this gentleman's tong. There, lean against that tree works on the inn for help; I wont be one, I were sensation then yet in store for the day indoors; there was a little disappointed.

ceptible difference in the volume of water coming over the fall. So here I sat, I suppose, for more than an hour, in my accustomed state of placid enjoyment. With my eyes half shut I was saying over to myself the first few lines of Southey's "Lodore," and trying to make "the music of the waters" fit into them as an accompaniment, when there suddenly sounded in my ears a roar so loud, and increasing so rapidly in volume, that I started, and looking up perceived that now indeed the fall had become grandly augmented. I stood up quite excited, but not even then for one moment dreaming of danger. Town-bred idiot that I was, quite unacquainted with the terrific force of the elements when once unloosed, I never imagined for a second, that I could be placed in peril by a fact so to my estimate of these natural wonders, I thought I was gazing at a harmless Niagara; I had never seen which accompanied it was such a new phase of my favorite music that I ascent. stood spell-bound with a sort of wild delight. Helpless and scared, I stood irresoute vet a moment longer. I recollect in this dire emergency suddenly observing a still further increase in the volume of the fall, and almost simultaneously with it feeling my legs slip from under me as the brown water gurgled in my ears and glistened in my eyes. Then there was a choking, helpless, tumbling pressure forward, several sharp blows upon my legs and arm, an effort to strike out, met by coming in contact with more rocks, and then a whirl and a twirl and a spinning around as if I had been a cork. I made a hopeless grab at the smooth and slippery surface, much as the drowning man catches at the proverbial" straw, for I was by this time getting exhausted and suffocated by the constant rolling over which the torrent gave me. Then a soft, firm hand is held out to me, and taking it I finally, by one supreme effort, pull myself well up among the underwood and twisted roots at the top of the cliff.

Too exhausted to speak or think, I threw myself down upon the steep hillside among the long grass and ferns between the trees. Then I think

I did really lose consciousness for a while, for I do not remember seeing the pretty graceful girl who had saved my life until I found her kneeling at my side, endeavoring to raise my head, as she wiped the streaming water from my forehead and hair. "Wait here," she said, "and I will run to the inn for help; I won't be ly very much obliged to you." "Oh, never mind that," she answered brightly; "if you can walk, so much the better. Get up, and come along at once; you must get your wet clothes off."

I rose and shook myself, feeling very bewildered, sick and scared. "Here-up this way," she cried. "I think we can get through the wood this way; follow me." I had scarcely started after her, as with a firm, light step she sprang up the slope among the trees, when heard from the top a cry of, "Hilly-o! Lucy, hilly-o! where are you?" "Here I am," she cried, "all right Come down, papa, and give this gentleman a hand. I have just helped him out of the water. He was nearly

"O, papa, do come up quick; Lucy has fainted." She was just beginning to tell us all about it, when in a moment she went quite off. Whereupon, revived by the stimulant, I hastened up the remainder of the slope, in company with my new friends, to find the brave girl quite insensible, her head rosting on the lap of a lady, evidently her mother. Then the cheery gentleman put the whisky flask to his daughter's lips, and all solicitude, very properly, was turned from me to her; but she soon revived, and then, but not till then, I allowed myself to be hurried off to theinn to get dry clothes. There absolutely appeared a chance of my taking to the idea, and of so carrying out his prescription to the letter. What a wonderful and beneficent effect it was working! "Why, there she is in the garden at this moment, and how beautiful she looks! Now that I have made myself presentable," I thought, "I will go down immediately and thank her, like a coherent being and a gentleman."

She was sitting in a little arbor at the end of the inn garden. As I approached, a blush, the more evident from the paleness which her undue exertion and subsequent faintness had left, overspread her sweet face—that angel face, which I had first thought a dream, and which to me now, with newly-awakened poetical sensibilities, scarcely seemed a reality.

I cannot describe it. Why should I? Other people would not see it with my eyes; there were hundreds and hundreds of faces in the world doubtless far more beautiful.

that if I was to be of any use there was no time to be lost. Please don't say any more about it.' "Oh, but indeed I must; you must tell me how you saw me and how you were able to reach me." "Oh, I had merely gone down to look at the water-fall—I knew it would be very much swollen-and the moment I came upon it, to my horror and surprise I saw you standing upon that rock in the middle of the river. I felt sure that you would be drowned; it was that made me do it, but I ran along through the wood by the side of the river as fast as I could. I don't suppose I thought of being able to save you, but it all seemed so dreadful; and then I lost sight of you. the second fall, and got close down to try if I could see you; the trees were so thick up above that I was obliged to get close to the edge. I was looking all about for you, when I suddenly saw you just underneath where I was standing, and trying to reach that bough. Well, then, I pushed it down to you-that's all." "All, indeed !" I cried, "Can . ever repay you for that 'all?' You simply saved my life; I should never have got out but for you." "Hope you are not much the worse

The war between Turkey and Russia has become one of the most bloody on record. During the first part of. the war, the appearance was that Russia would make an easy conquest in the overthrow of her opponent, and had gained victory after victory, their armies occupying the greater part of Turkey in Europe. At the first battle at Plevna the table was turned. however, and the victory was awarded the Turks, their enemy losing over 10,000 men in the conflict. This seemed to inspire the Turkish armies, and since that time they have fought several battles and in nearly all have been victorious. The Russians have a strong force now at work about Pleyna, which is still held by the Turks, and is considered nearly impregnable. Russia has by this time come to the conclusion that their undertaking to whip Turkey is a little more than a three months' job, and is now making plans for spending the winter in Bulgaria, with special fortifications for the accommodation of

Probably the best organized gang of robbers in this State, has been broken up at Reed City, on the Flint and Pere Marquette Railroad. All of the gang but one have been captured and with them has been recovered $4,000 or $5,000 worth of property. Nearly every store has suffered from their depredations, as well as a host of other persons, who, of course, feel rejoiced at the capture. It is expected that others will yet be implicated, as hints are thrown out that some of the supposed best men in the place have helped in the robberies.

THE END NOT YET REACHED.

Judge Huntington, of the Ann Arbor Circuit, has rendered his descision in the celebrated Douglas-Rose University suit. The Judge's decision is a very lengthy document, and it is needless to say does not prove satisfactory to the friends of Dr. Rose, while Prof. Douglas and his friends express satisfaction. In fact, Dr. Rose's adherents feel so indignant that they have called a public meeting to give expression to their feeliogs upon what they term "the partisan and one-sided decision of Judge Huntington." Beal, who has already spent thousands of dollars in defense of Rose, is especially active, and does not propose to let the matter rest, but if necessary will spend his 'last dollar' in defense of his friend. The decision divides the responsibility of the defalcations between Douglas and Rose, but does not say what amounts are represented by each, that being left to a commissioner to figure up under instructions given in the decision, said commissioner to be hereafter appointed.

The Silver Dollar. At one of the night sessions o the Bank Convention in New York last week, Mr. Moss, a banker from Ohio offered a resolution declaring that, if silver is to be remonetized, the coins should be made of such weight as to render them interchangeable with gold coins of the same denomination, and the meeting adopted the resolution. We shall assume that the Convention did not understand or take in the full bearing of the resolution. The United States have had several adjustments of the weight of the coins. The only coin that has undergone no change in the weight of pure metal is the old silver dollar. The dollar of 3711 grains of pure silver had long preceded the American Union. It was the familiar coin from the earliest Colonial days, and it was but natural that in establishing a system of national coinage this silver dollar should be perpetuated. The old Spanish dollar, so long the standard money of the continent, was therefore perpetuated in the first American Coinage act, and remained the unite of values of the American coinage until surreptitiously abolished in 1873. The weight of pure silver in this dollar was never changed. When it was attempted to make the weights of the gold and silver dollar conform, the change was made in the gold coin; the latter was reduced in weight and value, and, being the inferior and cheaper coin, became for that reason the one in general use. When the silver dollar was abolished, it was worth 103 in gold. At that time silver was worth 61 pence per ounce in London. Silver declined to 58 pence, then to 55 pence, and eventually sank to 47 pence per ounce. The causes for this have frequently been explained. Silver as coin lost no part of its purchasing power when it was The State Fair commenced at Jack Germany, and Germany had only | cent per annum for their use. - Even-

The silver already Saginaw: J. Q. A. Burrington, Tuscola; J. Webster Childs, Washtenaw. sold by Germany has found its way to India, as will the silver yet to be sold by that Government. Then it is probable the two metals will resume their old relative values, a result which will be largely hastened by the remonetization of silver in this country, thereby creating a new and great demand for that metal. The absurdity of the resolution proposed by the Ohio banker becomes apparent when these changes in the value of the two metals are considered. If the weight of the silver coin should be changed to meet the fluctuations in the relative values of gold and silver, we would soon have a most varied currency. When silver reaches 61 pence per ounce, the old dollar of 3711 grains of silver would have to be reduced; and then every time that silver falls, or raises from 50 pence to 61 pence per ounce, the weight of silver in the dollar will have to be changed. As these changes frequently take place as often as four times a week, we will have dollars issued on Monday weighing more than dollars would have to be considerably their army in the meantime. reduced. In the course of a month the mint would turn out dollars having a dozen or more different weights, and each issued according to the quotations of silver on the day before in London. The United States began the business of coinage by making the silver dollar the unit of value. Whatever changes have become necessary, because of the rise or fall of the other metal, have been made in the gold coin. That has been reduc-

Dissatisfied Railroaders.

COLLINGOOD, Ohio, Sept. 18.-Great dissatisfaction continues to prevail among the former strikers of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, and there is no telling when another strike may be inaugurated. Not long ago the men complained to General Manager Newell, stating that his agreement with them was not being carried out, particularly as to overtime and the amount of work on the Erie and Buffalo divisions to be considered a day. Newell went to New York to hold a consultation with Vanderbilt, it is claimed, and reported to James Hannon, the late boss striker, that the company would, under no circumstances, do differently from its present course. Hannon presented a statement to-night at a gathering of the men of the various divisions, held here, and the question ofanother strike was talked of, but was postponed for consideration at a future meeting. The strong feeling manifested itself in the remark of a railroader after the meeting: "There will be h-l to pay before long. When the strike will ensue is a mooted question, but it is the opinion of railroad officials that another will probably occur before many weeks, unless there is a complete change in the present phase of affairs.

One of the most recent arguments of the greenback party against resumption is that the banks and capitalists generally withhold their money from business, to the ruin of industry, tempted by the increasing value of it and certain of drawing interest on it merely by its final advancement to par when specie payment is resumed by government. This is as shallow as the rest of their arguments, and falls to pieces with equal readiness on the slightest examination. The class who will profit most by the appreciation of our paper money to par, are the thrifty poor, who have about 1,-300 million paper dollars in the savings banks of this country, where it was deposited in the shape of greenbacks and national bills, worth from 89 to 96 cents on the dollar. These paper dollars have already advanced to a fraction over 97 cents each, resulting in a profit to the depositors of from one to eight per cent. The grasping capitalist, besides paying them regular interest of from four to six per cent per annum, will finally have to pay them their principal in dollars worth fully 100 cents each, or from four to eleven cents more than the socalled dollars they deposited. The national banks will also lose money by resumption, for that, instead of paying their notes in depreciated paper which they can buy now for 97 few short years ago for 50 cents, they france. will have to pay them at 100 cents on the dollar. It is a silly error to imagine that any capitalist has hidden and nourishment has been made. reenbacks, and is letting them lie idle in vaults merely on account of their prospective increase in the coin of the country, except in the purchase of gold. The robbers first took possession of the station at the Springs, destroying the telegraph wires and instruments, and compelled the agent to hang out a red light. When the train stopped the robbers took possession, putting the train men and passengers under guard. The express car was broken into and the safe robbed of about $75,000. The passengers were also robbed of what amount is not yet ascertained. To delay the train in reaching the next station and prevent an alarm being given, the fire in the locomotive was wet down. A freight train overtaking the express, its engine was immediately sent to Ogallala, from where the report of the robbery was made. The robbers are believed to have gone north. The racrossle company offers a reward of $5,000 for the arrest of the thieves.

The two then compared notes on jumping and found that Pike was ahead on a single jump, but far behind on the hop, step and jump. No bets were made. Several others ran and jumped but these two were the center of attraction. In the evening the sport was continued by A. H. Upham and J. R. > The Tribune takes pleasure in announcing that the queen of the turf, Goldsmith Maid, will positively appear on the trotting park in this city in an attempt to beat her best time on a half-mile track, 2:18, on Saturday, September 29th, for a purse of $1,000. This very gratifying state of affairs was brought about by that keen appreciator of the fine points of a horse, Mr. J. F. Studebaker, who has been quietly working to accomplish it for a long time. Some time ago the owner of the Maid, the celebrated Budd Doble, promised Mr. Studebaker that as soon as occasion should offer he would bring the mare here and give an exhibition of her speed. The two gentlemen met in Chicago yesterday, and the subject coming up, Doble promised to drop two engagements to be here with the mare as above announced. Goldsmith Maid is now in her twenty third year and is trotting faster than ever; and as this is probably the last year of campaign work for her, this opportunity afforded of seeing her and witnessing her wonderful speed, in this vicinity, will probaly be the last. Arrangements will be made for special trains from all surrounding points .- South Bend Trib.

A Result of Obstructed Digestion. Among the hurtful consequences of obstructed digestion, is the impoverishment of the blood, and since a deteriative condition of the vital fluid not only produces dangerous organic weakness, but, according to the best medical authorities, sometimes causes asphyxia, it is apparent that to improve the quality of the blood by promoting digestion and assimilation, is a wise precaution. Every Man to His Calling "Stick to your trade," or rather, confine your energies to the occupation you have learned in early life. and to which you are fitted, and you will be successful, is an old maxim, and a true one. in the general rule of I fe. It is difficult to help feeling when we see men ambitious and capalde in a line of life to which they have been educated, leave that and ettempt some other, of which in principle and theory they know nothing. We often see men, good judges of shoes and their manufacture, men whose knowledge of leather is undeniable, attempt to guide the formation of public parks and private grounds. We see men, who, having had good successand made money in the methodical line of selling sugars and teas, think they know how to manage a railroad, and while they swim for a time with the tide, they soon founder. Farmers should head this old maxim of "Stick to your trade."-F. R. Elliot in Country Gentleman.

Probably no where in the world has there been seen more of this restless desire for a change or have more been ruined by this practice than in our country.

In England, a man who fails or breaks down in business does not think of throwing away all the education, training and experience he may have acquired in one business, and going into a new calling to which he has not been trained and where he must contend with competition and experience. He "sticks to his trade." But in this country a successful brickmaker thinks he can be an able banker, and a wealthy man who has succeeded in one line of business apt to imagine he knows every branch. Thus we see banks, railroads, factories, life insurance companies and like institutions, when the tide turns, collapse, and then it dawns upon the mind of the public, if not upon the Managers themselves, that because a man has good fortune in one line, it does not follow that he possesses the elements of success in any other venture .- Portsmouth Journal.

A Cheap Smoke-House.

Such readers as have no such convenience as a regularly constructed smoke-house, may supply the deficiency in the following manner: Dig a narrow pit 12 inches deep, throwing the earth all out on one side. From near the bottom of this pit dig a trench of the length of one or two joints of stovepipe at such an angle as will bring the end away from the pit to the surface of the ground. Over the end of this pipe set a common flour barrel or large cask, as may be needed, and having removed both heads, bank up all around it with the loose earth so that no smoke can escape at the bottom. Hang in the hams, shoulders, etc., using something like a broom handle to run through the strings. Putting a cover on top of the sticks will leave space enough for draught, to let the smoke pass freely. Build a smoke fire of corn cobs, damp hard wood, sawdust or fine chips, and you will have a cheap, safe, and efficient smoke house with very little trouble. — Moore's

The Benefit of Fairs.

We observe in some of our exchanges a disposition to denounce agricultural fairs. We have seen the statement made that they are useless to the farmer. I'his is a very great mistake: Even a poor fair is of vast benefit to the agricultural interests. With all the improvements constantly being made in machinery, in stock, and in the methods of working a farm, it is impossible for the farmer to attend a fair and go away without learning something. The manufac-turers of farm machinery will exhibit their animals for a similar purpose, and pride and the hope of a premium prompts the exhibition of the productions of the farm. Thus the farmer has an oportunity of seeing what his neighbors and the world are doing, and to profit by their knowledge and also by their mistakes. — Western Rural.

Flatirons.

In damp weather flatirons, unless kept on the stove, are apt to gather moisture, get rough, and sometimes rusty, and it is not well to keep them hot all the time for a good many reasons.—they are liable to get knocked off and broken, and after awhile do not retain the heat as well, and they are in the way. If you occasionally wax the smooth surface with a bit of bees-wax rubbed over the surface, and then rub on a piece of cloth, they will never get rough or rusty, and will always keep bright and smooth, which is most desirable for them. If they do ever happen to get wet, and so rust, lay a little fine salt upon a smooth board and rub them over it quickly while hot. A nice smooth is a great help, and a little care is a great deal better than hard work. Time, strength, and patience, are all saved by attention to this little item. - Country Gentleman.

To plant and harvest crops is attended with much care and expense, and most farmers exhibit commenda-Lle industry up to this point, but when those crops are to be fed out, many of them do it with the greatest recklessness. Corn is thrown to the hogs in muddy, slushy yards; hay is. scattered upon the ground, to be trampled in the manure by the cattle; and the cleanly sheep receive their the cattle; and the cleanly sheep receive their -Colman's Rural. .

Two yards of mosquito bar or netting can be bought for twenty-five cents, and if placed over children or persons sleeping in fly-time during the day, it will save a vast amount of annoyance. Try it, mothers. Take three small, smooth sticks, three feet long, notch one end of each and tie them together, and extend the other ends around baby to keep the netting from the face. This will serve the purpose well, unless you have something better. ___

The Great Shonshonees Remedy Is an Indian vegetable compound, composed of the juices of a variety of remarkable medicinal plants and herbs; the various properties of these different ingredients, when combined, is so constituted as to act simultaneously upon the Blood, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, Nervous System, &c., restoring their functions to healthy action. This medicine is decided benefit in all, and a permanent cure in a large majority of diseases of the blood, such as Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Can ker, Pimples, &s. In prescribing this medicine we do not claim that it always performs cures: but this we do say, that it aways puriies and enriches the blood, permanently curing a large majority of diseases arising from its impurites. It stands far ahead and unequalled mong the hundreds of competing medicines of the day. It has stood the test of ten years, and is to-day more popular than ever. As a mnimer restorative it stands unrivaled; it enables the system to bear up against the constant drain to which it is subjected by a high temperature. Persons who are subject to Bilious Colic, Dysentery, Indigestion, &c., should take the Shonshonees Remedy. Price of the Remedy in pint bottles, $1; Pills, 25 cents a box.
