TO THE MEMORY OF THE LATE BRIG. MAJ. YOUNG.

One more polymath, Short in the breath, Frigidly vigorous, Gone to his death.

Think of his fathers-in-law, Two hundred brothers-in-law, Three hundred sisters-in-law, Fifty old mothers-in-law, All in one family, Left polygamy, Think of their daily life, Full of domestic strife, Think of the tears and cries, Then turn to Ann Eliza, Married so much.

Think of the weekly dues, And of the baby shoes, And stockings unnumbered; Think of the payments large, Think of a daily charge, Of an unused six hundred.

Oh, turn not away from him, Go nearer and think of him Married so much. Oh! this is pitiful! A cry with widows full, Old bachelor think of it; Go near to the brink of it, Now, if you dare.

Still for his bigamy And muddy polygamy Leave him as rest; Cross his hands humbly, As if praying dumbly, Over his breast.

CO-PARTNERSHIP. The Runseller's Proposal to the Devil.

DEAR SIR: I have opened apartments, fitted up with all the enticements of luxury, for the sale of rum, brandy, gin, wine, beer, and all their compounds.

Bring me the child, and I will dash to the earth the dearest hopes of the father and mother.

Bring me the father and mother, and I will plant discord between them, and make them a curse and a reproach to their children.

Bring me the young man, and I will ruin his character, destroy his health, shorten his life, and blot out the highest and purest hopes of youth.

Bring me the mechanic or the laborer and his own money—the hard-earned fruits of his toil shall be made to plant poverty, vice and ignorance in his once happy home.

Bring me the warm-hearted sailor, and I will send him on a lee-shore, and make shipwreck of all fond hopes forevermore.

Bring me the professed followers of Christ, and I will blight and wither every devotional feeling of the heart. I will corrupt the ministers of religion, and defile the purity of the Church.

tended their efforts, My minions always made some mistake, or too soon showed the cloven foot. I sent out the demon Murderer, and slew a few thousand, most generally the helpless and innocent. Men turned away with loathing from him, and his mission was comparatively a failure.

I had my servant Lust go forth.— He led innocent youths and beautiful maidens in chains—destroying virtue, wrecking happiness, blasting characters, and causing untimely deaths and dishonored graves. But even then many of his victims escaped through the power of God, my enemy.

I sent out Avarice, and in his golden chains some were bound, but men learned to hate him for his meanness, and comparatively few fell by him.

The twin brothers Pestilence and War went forth, and famine stood behind them, but these three indiscriminately slew the old and the young, men women and children, the good as well as the bad, and Heaven received as many assassinations as Hell.

In sadness my Satanic heart mourned over the probable loss of my crown and kingdom, as I contemplated the tremendous strides which the Gospel of Jesus was making in saving men from my clutches. But when I received your kind letter, I shouted until the welkin of Heil echoed the shout, "Eureka! Eureka!"

"I have found it!" Yes my dear friend, I could have embraced you a thousand times, and I have given orders to reserve for you a place nearest my person, the most honorable seat in my kingdom. In you are combined all the qualifications of just such a friend and partner as I have long wished for, and in your business are all the elements of success.

Now shall my throne be forever established. Only carry out your designs and you shall have money, though it be wrung from the broken hearts of helpless women and from the mouths of innocent, perishing children. Though you fill the jails workhouses and poor-houses, though you crowd the insane asylum, though you make murder, incest and arson to abound, and erect scaffolds and gallows in every village, town and city, you shall have money. I will also harden your heart so that your conscience shall never trouble you. You shall look upon blood and even shed it, without shame or anguish. You shall think yourself a gentleman, though men and women, your victims, shall call you a demon.

You shall be devoid of the fear of God, the horrors of the grave, and the solemnities of eternity; and when you come to me your works shall produce a reward forever. All I claim is the souls of the victims.

Yours to the very last, DIABOLUS.

Dressing the Baby. Man's Mien and Woman's ways—You Know How 'Tis Yourself.

When a woman goes to work to dress a two year old child, she does it in a systematic, business-like manner, and without any noise or fuss; and before you know it the youngster is slid out of her hands with his face washed and hair combed, his clothing in ship-shape order, and a ten dollar chrome under his arm.

This all comes from knowing how. With a man it is different. He makes elaborate preparations and puts on the airs of one who is getting an eighty-four gun ship ready for a four years cruise.— He collects the youngster's duds together in a heap, gathering them up from pretty much all over the house, and after a good deal of bawling for this, and sharp snapping inquiries for that, and a unlimited amount of getting down on his knees and looking under the furniture for the other (all of which comes from his having undressed the child the night before) he at length sits resigned down on a chair and, with a feeble attempt at good nature, says:

"Come, Freddy, come to papa, and have your coes on."

The child, who is just then traveling around in his night dress, and playing with damp towels and a stove wrench, makes a bee-line for the door, full of the desire to escape into the next room.

"Come, Freddy, come to papa, like a good boy," says the father, with a brave attempt at patience. The child keeps on his course. "Fred!"

This sounds so much like business that the youngster stops, turns, and, bearing slowly up the new starched cord parent, gradually gets within reach, when a sudden grab of his arm brings him into position where the damp towel slips around on the father's clean shirt front, and the stove wrench plumps solidly down on the very top of his foot.

"Immortal Julius!" he screams in agony, nursing his foot with one hand, and shaking the poor innocent with the other; whereupon the innocent sets up an accompanying yell.

A voice from below, where the wife and mother is busied with getting breakfast joins in the chorus: "Oinstad! Mollison, what on earth are you doing to the child?"

"Or you be darned!" goes back the quick reply, in a short angry, desperate growl! that silences further inquiry.

"Can't you keep still?" "Where's that other skirt?" "Shut up!" "Get go!" "Blas't that button!" "Now, where in blazes is that pin?" "Stand up!" "There's by thunder!" "Why don't you fall down and be done with it?"

"Stop your howling!" "Stop!" "Oouch! Devil take the pin!" "Let that be?" "Behave!" "Great scot!" "Say, why don't you have four or five thousand more buttons on your clothes?"

"Now, where's that stocking?" "Keep your foot still!" "Say, keep your foot—still!" "By Jove in Jerusalem!" "Get me the other foot!" "No, the other!"

"Sanctified Solomon! What do you want to spread your tail out for? How do you suppose I'm put your stocking on with your foot in that shape?"

"Stop!" "Stop it, I say!" "Who stuck that pin in that way?" "You, of course," says a cold, thin, cutting voice; and he glanced up and sees his wife looking down on him in a taunting, exasperating sort of way.

"I'd be ashamed of myself," she continued, "to go on in that way and get so out of patience with a little bit of a baby. You've have been making noise enough to wake the dead, and his clothes look as if they had been thrown on with a pitchfork. Gimme him."

And he gets up sheepishly and un-lively, and after slapping and stamping around the house after the liniment bottle, and banging doors and making as big a noise as he can, he works himself up into such a state of mortification that to spite himself he goes off down town without his breakfast.

Philadelphia World.

Nepoleon's First Marriage. Among the victims of the "Terror" had been a General Beaumais. He had left a widow and two children; and while Bonaparte was General of the Army of the Interior, his son, a fine boy of twelve years old, came to him one day to beg that his father's sword might be returned to him.

Bonaparte complied with the request, the very character of which commended it to his favor, and spoke to the child with such encouraging kindness that his mother visited him a few days afterward to thank him for his notice of her boy.

Madame Beaumais was handsome and preeminently graceful and attractive. She had shared her husband's prison, but had been released at the fall of Robespierre; since which event she had been on terms of the closest intimacy with Barras.

Her grace now made a very deep impression on the young general, whose previous circumstances had not thrown him much into the society of ladies of high breeding. After a short acquaintance he sought her in marriage. She hesitated.

Some of those who envied him had fixed on him the nickname of General Vendemiarre, as if the only triumph which he was qualified to gain were over citizen soldiers. And there were not wanting friends of her own to ridicule his somewhat wild appearance; his meagre face, and long hair hanging down on his shoulders; and, what was a greater objection still, his evident poverty.

But she, too, was ambitious; he had an enthusiastic way of talking which persuaded her that he was capable of great deeds; and Barras promised her that, if she would consent to marry him, he would procure for him as her husband the command of the army of Italy. His argument prevailed; she consented; the Director kept his promise; the marriage took place on March 19, 1796, and two days afterward, the young commander-in-chief quitted his bride's arms to commence a campaign which was to lead the attainment of a loftier destiny than either of them had as yet ventured to expect.

Nearing the Climax. Detroit grocers, not satisfied with advertising, putting out circulars, and mailing cards to private houses, have struck a new idea. A man calls from house to house and offers to take orders for even a bar of soap or a box of matches, and bring the goods to the house. Strange things happen in this strange world.

Five years hence a gentleman may drive around after a pair of white horses, call at a house, pull off his white kid gloves, touch his hat and politely remark: "Mr. Rush has established a new grocery store on Woodward avenue. If you want anything in our line I shall be happy to sell it to you at half cost, wait six months for pay, and then take it in old boots, broken flower-pots, and rusty gate hinges."

The consumer won't have to keep pace with the times, and he will hesitate. The agent will go on: "We are determined to rush off these goods. Our object is to oblige the public not to make money. Therefore, write down a list of what you want and the goods will be sent you with a receipted bill."

If the consumer still hesitates the agent will go on: "We must keep goods moving. Make out your list, and I'll not only send the bill, but you will draw, as prizes, a nice chronograph, a coach-god, an annual pass on some street car line, a pair of new boots, and a marble bust of Andrew Jackson, life-size."

And when all these things have been received, the consumer will yet feel as if he could have done better by dealing with some other house. Detroit Free Press.

Abducted by an Orang-Outang. In 1864 a young fellow by the name of Tubu was missing from one of the Bornean villages. His people began to fear that some terrible accident had befallen him, and concluded to ferret out the mystery.

Having armed themselves, they accordingly started out and searched through the jungle for four days without finding any trace of the lost. On the fifth day they came to the Sakarang river, where every one of them went in bathing.

They went down the river a short distance, when one of the number fortunately discovered some clothing on the nearest bank, which, an examination, proved to be that of their missing friend.

Close beside it lay the sumpian, or blow-pipe, and the short sword he always carried with him. A little later the party heard a voice, and after dressing they set out in search: They followed a narrow ravine which led back from the river, scanning every nook and hole, searching under covers of leaves, and under fallen branches, but in vain.

They were on the point of retracing their steps when they again heard the voice. It was the voice of Tubu, and strange as it may appear, he was soon discovered high in a tree naked, and a large orang-outang was his companion.

A rifle shot brought the animal to the ground, where they finished her with knives. Then the young man came down and told the story of his singular adventure. He had been out hunting, he said, and late in the afternoon had gone into the water of the Sakarang to bathe. On returning to the bank to dress, he was seized by the arms by an orang-outang, who made him follow her into a ravine. They arrived at the foot of a tall tree, which the youth was forced to ascend until he had reached the animal's nest, where he found himself prisoner in comfortable lodgings.

Day after day he remained there, the orang-outang graciously supplying him with fresh fruit and vegetables, and even bringing him water in a cocoa-nut.

A Household Scene. The Burlington Hawkees says: His mother left him home to take care of the baby while she went out shopping. He knew where there was some cherry pie and sardines in the pantry, and if there was anything in the world he is fond of is sardines and cherry pie.

He sat the baby on the floor, and then got up on the back of a chair and reached in to get the sardines in one hand and the cherry pie in the other, and the baby tipped the chair over. As he was coming down to meet the baby he grabbed the knife-box. The baby was evidently not expecting him, and she hadn't things fixed to receive him. The knife-box reached the baby first and as he came down he sat on the sharp edge of it. He didn't stay on it long, and shifted over to the baby's back. The oil from the sardine box paid the baby a visit, and it was evident that sardines didn't agree with little Jerusha. The juice from the little trickled down from shelf to shelf, when mamma came the pantry floor looked like a slaughter-house on killing day. Baby is getting better slowly, and the doctor says if Johnny don't take cold he thinks he can get the stitches out of his back in about a week. It took all the wind out of two fellows to get the baby in good breathing order again, and a splinted-out of the knife-box, as big as a full-grown tooth-pick, is wandering about in her little body yet.

Newspapers. Gen. Jackson, when President, said to one of his fiercest newspaper opponents, "Send me your newspaper. I know that you are opposed to me, but then I should like to see your paper every day. I want to see how many lies you can tell me."

The general said the editor, "I think I do right in opposing you, and I shall continue to do so with all the ability of which I am master." Here was a man after Jackson's own heart, and he replied, with an oath, "Sir, send me your paper; for, aside from your abuse of me, your paper is a good one. Besides, I never saw a newspaper in which I could not find something worth reading." Just so. No man can pick up any newspaper without finding something of interest.

You may take the paper and tear it into fragments, and in each fragment you will see something to amuse or instruct you.

We have always contended that Saginaw whisky contained a sufficient proportion of muriatic acid to eat a hole through a tin-can; but on Sunday last we saw a man from there, formerly a clergyman, who had been eaten out of house, furniture, library, wife, children, clothes, money, and work, in less than four years. He escaped with his life (one out of four), but it "snatched him bald-headed." Let this be a warning to Lansing men who have business at "the Saginaws."

Lansing Republican.

He who betrays another's secret because he has quarreled with it, was never worthy of the sacred name of friend; a breach of kindness will not justify a breach of trust.

A warning to advertisers—The foreman of a Worcester paper, it is said, has been sent to the Lunatic asylum, his brain having been turned in the endeavor to put every man's advertisement at the head of the column.

Berrien Co. Record. JOHN G. HOLMES, Editor. THURSDAY MORNING, DEC. 6, 1877.

THE ANNUAL MESSAGE. President Hayes has issued his Annual Message to Congress for their consideration during the regular session which commenced Monday, December 4th.

Among the other subjects of great and general importance to the people of this country I cannot be mistaken, I think, in regarding as pre-eminent the policy and measures which are designed to restore the restoration of the currency to that normal and healthful condition in which, by the resumption of specie payments, or internal trade and foreign commerce may be brought into harmony with the system of exchange which is based upon the precious metals as the intrinsic money of the world.

It was the great merit of the act of March, 1869, to strengthen the public faith, and to restore to all the people as to the purpose of the United States to pay their bonded debt in coin.

That act was accepted as a pledge of the public faith. The Government has derived great benefit from it in the progress thus far made in refunding the public debt at low rates of interest.

Close connection with this general subject of the resumption of specie payments, is one of subordinate, but still of grave importance. I mean the readjustment of our coinage system by the removal of the silver dollar as an element in our specie currency.

public faith transcends all questions of profit or public advantage or other wise. Its unquestionable maintenance is the dictate as well of the highest expediency as of the most necessary duty, and will be carefully guarded by Congress and the people alike.

ABOUT twenty-five couples met in Collins & Weaver's Hall, Thanksgiving night, to shake the fantastic foot, and had a good time, of course.

MR. ALEXANDER has made some very acceptable improvements in the arrangements of the post office since his advent to the office.

THE Evening News dates a special from St. Joseph "Nov. 31." We didn't know before that this was Leap year.

E. A. PERKINS, of St. Joseph, overseer of the poor of that section of the county, died at his home, on Friday last, aged 70 years.

THERE are 259 news papers published in the Lower Peninsula of this State. This includes only political and local papers.

CHARLES MILLS of Kalamazoo, was sentenced on Monday last, to four years in State prison, for horse stealing.

ONE dealer says a four line local in the RECORD sold for him over $40 worth of goods of one kind in two days. Does it pay to advertise?

DR. McLIN will commence next week in the practice of a specialty in which he is said by those he has treated to be an expert, knowing no such thing as ill. For full particulars see his bills.

ATTENTION is called to Lapierre & Brown's local advertising. If you want jewelry of any kind there is the place to go to get it. They do their own manufacturing and know what is in the goods they offer.

THERE is a call by the township board for a special election to fill vacancies now existing in the board. For particulars see notice in another column.

WHOOPEE! This town is still able to kick. The Kennard house will be opened for business before soon. The prospective landlord's name is Boyd, and he hails from Burr Oak, St. Joseph county, Michigan.

BUSINESS CHANGE.—The Rough Brothers have bought a portion of Geo. Churchill's stock of hardware, and intend refitting the room and continuing the business. What Geo. will do will be better known hereafter.

THERE were probably more hogs sold in this place last Monday than all the Fall before. They were coming to town from all directions at all times of day. The ruling price was $4 per cwt.

QUERY.—Why may one place of business be kept open for work or trade on Sunday, while others are forbidden the privilege. Is not one just as good as another so far as this goes?

At a temperance meeting held in the Collins & Weaver hall, Monday evening the Red Ribbon club was re-organized, a new set of officers elected and thirty-nine new names added to the list. It is hoped that the club will become active in the work of temperance, once more.

MASONIC.—The regular annual meeting of Summit Lodge No. 192, E. & A. M., for the election of officers for the ensuing year, will be held on Monday evening, Dec. 17, 1877. Other business of importance will come before the meeting, and a full attendance is requested.

By order of the W. M. B. D. HARPER, Sec.

The job printer of the Berrien Springs Journal office has been sending out some very finely executed printing in three colors. It is a very good job, but it looks as if job work was scarce in that office or he would not find time to bother with anything of that sort.

The agent for the Detroit Evening Telegraph secured fifty-six subscribers for that paper while here. He appointed Frank Beardley agent for the place. This, in connection with the thirty or forty copies of the Evening News and a few of the Chicago Daily News, will give Frank a pretty good bundle of papers to distribute each morning.

NOT being content with losing all their hogs from cholera, the farmers of Niles township, south of Berrien Springs, have now to commence doctoring their hens for the same named complaint.

The Michigan State Agricultural College has one student from Rudkjobing, Denmark. Please do not try to pronounce that name unless your jaw is insured against all breakage.

The report of the shipping company of the Benton Harbor, for the month commencing April 7 and ending November 25, 1877, show that during that time 285,008 baskets of peaches, and of other fruits in crates and baskets, 190,588 were shipped out.

NILES was a little disappointed, last Saturday, by being beat out of an entertainment, "Romeo and Juliet," that was billed for that place and reserved tickets all sold. The Company met there, but did not stay to meet their engagements. A joke on the ticket holders.

GEORGE DREWY, editor of the Hastings Republican Banner, was in this place Saturday afternoon. He will be remembered by those who were here in 1856 as teacher of the Buchanan school at that time.

MR. A. H. HERRON, agent for the Evening Telegraph, was in town, last Saturday and Monday, canvassing for that paper, and the news boy will now carry it. The Telegraph Company propose to make it warm for the Evening News, but they will have to stoop to do it—Cassopolis Democrat.

MR. JOHN C. BICKFORD, living on the Berrien road, about four miles north of town, had about twenty bushels of wheat stolen from his granary, a short time since.

A MAN by the name of High, claims to sell furs lower than anyone else in Buchanan. Maybe, but they will have to stoop to do it—Cassopolis Democrat.

Mrs. J. I. McCoy, of Cassopolis, daughter of George Witter, of Warren township, Ind., died on Saturday morning last, after a long sickness. The funeral was held at Mount Pleasant, Tuesday afternoon. This is the second daughter Mr. Witter has buried within two weeks.

A QUITE brisk bit of sleighing came in good play last Saturday. Some did not think to depart from the old way, and came to town with their wagons or carriages. This winter opens very similar to last, the first sleighing being but one day later. We trust the similarity may continue two or three months.

WE learn from the Benton Harbor papers, that the schooner Kate L. Bruce, that has for some time past been engaged in shipping ore from Escanaba to St. Joseph, has not been heard from for some time, and it is feared she has come down on Lake Huron with all on board. She was last seen near Chaboygan. The wreck of a yawl with the name of the lost schooner on it, together with part of a deck and some broken spars, drifted ashore near Thunder Bay, which is securing evidence that she is lost. Mr. West, the first mate, was a resident of St. Joseph, where his wife and infant child now are.—Hartford Day Spring.

Great Failure of Voigt, Herpolsheimer & Co.

We understand that there is a general rumor that we have failed and made an assignment. We take great pleasure in stating that we are doing business on a most substantial basis. There is no one carrying us. We will pay double the face of any overdue account that can be found against us anywhere, either at Grand Rapids or Michigan City stores, or any other business in which we are connected. We attributed the great success of our business here and elsewhere to the following:

First, the liberal patronage we have received from our many customers in and out of the city, which we hope to merit; second, the honest and straightforward system of doing business.

We started in business in the fall of 1865 at Michigan City, with a very fair cash capital, which we so increased that we were able to start a branch store at Grand Rapids in 1870, with ample means, and now the branch has outgrown the parent stem.

We are happy to say that we feel and believe, with a certain degree of right, that we call ourselves one of the permanent establishments of Grand Rapids. We have gone through the hard times with capital enough so that we are able to pay exclusively for cash, taking on nearly all of our purchases the fullest discount in ten and thirty days. We are, therefore, able to sell goods at such low prices that no one can undersell us, either in new goods or bankrupt stocks that are badly selected or purchased at too high prices.

Many thanks for past favors from our many patrons. Very respectfully, VOIGT, HERPOLSHEIMER & CO.

From the Coldwater, Mich. Republican.

"That Dr. Price is a thorough and competent physician, is evident from the fact that not only a great number of the citizens of this place, but people of the 'surrounding country,' regularly call upon him for medical advice, every time he visits our city, and all of his patients unite in testifying that they have been greatly benefited by his mode of treatment.

It is a well known fact, to the people of this vicinity, that Dr. Price has cured many cases that had been pronounced incurable by other physicians, and we would earnestly recommend any of our friends who are suffering with diseases of the lungs, heart, liver, or any other chronic disease, to consult him, and feel assured that they will not be imposed upon.
