MORE THAN HER MATCH.

Long shafts of moonlight were shooting down through what seemed an almost impenetrable wood and quivering on the green mosses. A aint wind dallied with the foliage. Wild flowers flecked the ground.

Here, in this sylvan retreat, sat Miss Barron, and she was very much out of humor, for every now and then she drove the point of her parasol into the unoffending mosses. She looked and was downright disgusted with everything and everybody. The belle of three seasons, during which she had escaped heart-whole, she was now 'caught," and all because of a three weeks sojourn at a country villa.

To be sure, moonlight, sifting through vines over a rustic porch, has something more intoxicating than the glare of gas-jets; a wandering, scented wind, just off from the meadows, has rather a finer appeal than air vitiated by cut flowers and gas; drives over grass-grown roads that are fledged with wild vines and overhung with branches are just a trifle different in effect from the London parks in landau or phaeton; and that animal, man, who, in town, is so carefully dressed, is, in the country, where one would suppose zoological specimens would thrive better, something more human, in tweed and felt hat. At any rate, Madge had found it so. Madge had never been off her guard pefore. Hitherto she had visited fashionable watering places, but this year she had come to a quieter place, and had met Lyndhurst Barrington. She did not, yet know, however, she was

She only knew she was cross and lonesome; and so she sat punching the little blossoms and pouting. She thought Barrington exceedingly companionable, and that the other four gentlemen stopping at the villa were ittle better than wooden men. As for downright, earnest love, why, her intentions for three years had been never to venture her heart at sea, but only to glide about the shore, flirting, safe to disembark at any time. Yet she was now thinking of Lyndhurst Barrington in a way many would have termed love. But she would not admit this to herself. He was a delightful summer friend, that was all. she said. She liked summer, and flowers, and birds, and hazy atmost pheres, and a quiet flirtation, but when these went the coming season brought new enjoyments and fresh flirtations, and Barrington could go with them. Were there not others, pray, who could read Tennyson and sing tenor? But now, just this moment, it was rather lonesome. If he only would come!

. He had gone to town the morning previous, promising to return in the evening. She had walked with him through this wood path, on his way to the station. He had lingered a was whistling, and I was doing noth under the oaks; and you shall give moment at the stile beyond to tell her | ing in particular; so if you will strike | me a true answer." how beautiful she looked—how the off a stave of anything, I will demure-

Then he caught her hand in a quick way, thought a moment, bounded over the stile, and hastened down the path, turning often to look back at the pretty picture she made, listlessly leaning on the stile, with a tinge of regret in her face. At a turn where she would soon be hid from sight he would soon be hid from sight he had nown been alien and make him abject in his efforts to reinstate himself with her. She did not want a climax reached with this man. Her heart had told her it would she would soon be hid from sight he had dared to wave her a kiss.

Madge was now waiting, according to appointment, and she had taken care to concoct a most ravishing toilet.

But all her little preparations were wasted. Lyndhurst Barrington did not come. Still she waited. It seemed so unreasonable, so cruel, to disappoint her. Perhaps he was only trying to tease her, had got out unseen, and would surprise her directly by his appearance.

Madge was now waiting, according before. To avoid this now, she would begin with railery.

"Really, Mr. Barrington," she said, "you must be hungry or over-tired, to make such a statement. A well-spread table, steaming viands, comfort, and a wife, must have shot through your brain. I can assure you a delightful supper now awaits you.

"Miss Barron," he began, frowning.

A doleful sough of wind coming from the dark recesses of the wood, a sudden shutting down of night, made Miss Barron feel something like fear, and she started nervously to return. As it grew darker her dread became terror; she fancied strange noises were about; her feet scarcely touched the ground; she skimmed on, fluttering at heart like some low-flying bird belated from its nest.

What wonder that she vowed that night, as she brushed out her hair, never to forgive Mr. Barrington?
What wonder that a harmless little bunch of violets, which he had gathered for her the day previous and which she had treasured in a vase on her dressing case she now found fad. her dressing case, she now found faded, disagreeable and odorless, and that she tossed them pettishly out into the darkness from her window?

"I detest him and his violets," she cried. "He may stop in town till doomsday, for aught I care."

Miss Barron did not sleep well, and rose in the morning with a little dull weight on her feelings. "Perhaps," she thought, "he will not come even As she dressed for breakfast he was constantly in her mind.

"If you think you can wake me on time, go ahead."

The Hens were all charmed—but the very next day

MORAL.

Let the ladies who seek for the ballot reflect!
They're electors more potent than those who enough, and not even piqued, when

Still, as the day wore on, Madge found the ladies of the company provoking and the gentlemen more uninteresting than ever. Mechanically, toward evening, she donned the same toilet as on the night previous, and took a circuitous route through the garden, that none might be cognizant of her movements. Emerging out of sight; she struck straight for the wood path; and here we find her again listening for the roar of the train, notwithstanding all her angry vows of the night before.

Beautiful, cross, unreasonable girl! "I will not go to the stile," she wassaying to herself, "and that will be a disappointment to him." She was somewhat unsettled, however, for fear she might be in just the same predicament as on the preceding evening, and have to return through the gloomy wood alone. She had seven-eighths of a mind to go back, even yet. But she remained after all, so perverse is woman.

At last, with a sudden screech, the engine came steaming along. Miss Barron began to trace figures on the ground with her parasol, and put on a most expectant air, her features sinking into a repose, and unconcern benign enough to befit a saint. She saw Lyndhurst Barrington descend from the train and come striding on joyously till he came in sight of the stile; for, though hidden herself, she could observe all his move-

He came on, eagerly looking to the right and left for her, and almost stumbled over Miss Barron. "Oh, Madge!" he cried; as he threw himself at her feet, "you did forgive me, and have come to meet me!" "Forgive you, Mr. Barrington?" Nothing could be more icy cold. "Pray, what has been your fault?" She looked, as she spoke, straight before her, but with an air of surprise which was exceedingly well counterfeited.

He looked up eagerly into her face as he answered, "Why, I was buttonholed to death in town yesterday. It heard, through the topen swindows, seemed as if a conspiracy had been laughter ring out and gay songs being entered into, and that every fellow I knew had left his summer haunt to go up to town to detain me. into his face. "Let us stop bickering, and begin where we left off yesterday. "Very well," she replied. "I be- coolly, "Suppose we talk and walk. lieve the point at which you left off I'll say, under the stars, what I said how beautiful she looked—how the fresh morning air had brightened the color on her cheeke.

"Miss Barron," he began, frowning, without apparent notice of her words, and rising to his feet, "three weeks ago I did not know you; but in that time all my life now seems to have been crowded. I never stopped to question your actions. It seemed as if there was no need of asking for yows, they would denote a commencement of love. I wanted it to be as if

"Very well," she said, "let it be so; no yowe, no commencement. You see

"As you please," she laughed, shrugging her shoulders. "I can pick my way through this bog without

"I hope I am not wanting in gentle behavior; but before I or you stir a step further," he said, stepping in front of her and barring the way, "I want a simple answer to a simple question—plain yes or no." Do you love me, Madge?"

"If I cannot say 'yes,' perhaps I cannot say 'no." I think friendship does not justify an abrupt 'no." I—"

"I don't want equivocation," he broke in... "If you loved, eyes, lips, voice acts, all would blend into 'yes." It must be 'yes—or 'no, I say."

Madge had never met any man so masterful. But she answered; nevertheless, "Then, no, since you force me to be unladylike."

"I do not say you are. I asked you for your love. It was a straightforward question. I wanted a straight-"I hope I am not wanting in gentle

And thus walking, assisting her over every trifling inequality ground, they went on to the villa. Miss Barron was exceedingly gay that evening. Lyndhurst loved her. Of course, she was not going into any prosy engagement. She could not hedge herself in by marriage. But they could live the delightful life they had lived this last three weeks always. He had nothing in particular to do. Why could he not, when they should return to London, visit her every day? She could, she thought, flirt, all the same, when he was not by; and his attentions, therefore, would be just so much gained. Her life was not to be altered an iota. She did not profess to love the man. He must not, however, scatter his attentions. He must concentrate all his admiration on her. But toward the close of the evening, when Madge found he had not sought her once, a shadow of thought passed through her mind that perhaps he was not a poodle-dog, after all, to be led about in this way by a string.

She had sung, thinking to bring him to her side, but he had lounged away-a thing he had never done before when she was at the piano. She had taken a garden stroll with a rival, Mr. Oakley, and Lyndhurst had carelessly drawn up his outstretched legs, as he sat lazily on the veranda steps, to let them pass down, without other notice of their presence. He had, she decided, fairly ill-treated her, a lady, and she would not tolerate rudeness. She would teach him what was due to her.

But days passed. A week wore on. She found no possible chance to visit her anger on him. He never joined her. He was always civil and well-bred, but that was all. She was downright perplexed. She scarcely ever methin, even at table, much less of an evening. He went fishing by sunrise, rode on horseback half the day; and at night asked the gentlemen up to his chamber; the ladies, sitting lonely in the parlor, sung. It was getting maddening.

One evening Madge coulded herself up on a sofa and looked at the matter it had signally failed. Now she would try a dash of "giving in," even though seemed tame. Then she resolved to go into the library and read, but books were so wearying.

"I would play," she said, pettishly,
"if that big-headed masculine was not monopolizing the piano."

Just at this point she burst into tears. Crying, usually, to Miss Barron, consisted of a couple of tears mopped up by a bit of lace. She had never before thrown herself down in never before thrown herself down in such a limp shape, and got herself into such a thorough tempest of weeping as now. She was an hour at it. Gradually she got calmer. She sat up, and began to consider what was next best to do.

She tried to think of going home as a pleasure soon at hand. Home!

as a pleasure soon at hand. Home! What had she there? Only an old aunt, who dozed in a lace cap, with a cup of chocolate at her elbow half the time. The memory of the pleasant days spent here would drive her wild in that gloomy house. Then she acknowledged that it would be terrible anywhere without—without—

She jumped to her feet.
"He will drive me wild," she said,
"banging in that way on the piano."
She passed into the hall and looked into the drawing-room, where he sat placidly playing.
"Poor fellow!" she thought. "How can I call it obstinacy? It looks like misery written all over his features. And isn't he superb looking? Why, no one else has ever approached him. And he will be mine if I say it."
Suddenly—can you comprehend it? she walked straight into the parlor and stole up behind him, put her arms about his neck, and pressed her cheek about his neck, and pressed her cheek against his.

Not a word was said for some moments; but his fingers fell from the keys, his arms dropped listlessly at his sides, his head sunk lower and lower on his breast, and Madge felt a mist gathering in her eyes, a mist of

The Senate came to a vote on the Stanley Matthews resolutions, declaring that all debts, both public and private, were justly payable in silver dellars of 4121 grains, and that the bonds may be paid either in ailver or gold, where coin is expressed. The resolutions were passed by a vote of 43 to 22. This, if made a law, will tend to raise the value of silver to a par with gold.

The following are the terms of peace offered in Turkey, as given in special cable dispatches to the New York Herald:

Russia is to hold Batoum, Kars and Erzeroum until a war indemnity of £20,000,000 is paid in money, territory, or otherwise; the Dardanelles to be open to Russian men-of-war. Bulgarian autonomy is to be conceded, rather on the principle of the Lebanon than on the plan of the Constantinople conference, and Turkey is to nominate a Christian Governor for a long term of years, subject to ratification by the Powers; Bulgaria is not understood to include Thrace, but only to extend to the line of the Balkans.

The question of the Dardanelles to be reserved for the consideration of the European Powers. The last article virtually squelches

The train as we crossed the bridge, looking more like a Philadelphia street car "to the Centennial," than anything else. After a good 30 minutes wait and another half hour en route, we are landed in the depot in Omaha, a trifle cross from our crumpling. Here a rush is made for sleeping-car berths, and taking a place in line, the obliging (?) official chalks you for a berth, be it upper or lower, in the middle of the car or elsewhere; we remonstrate, acquaintances are told "not so many sections adjoining left, etc." Then comes the rechecking of baggage; you take your position, where, as the baggage is landed and the numbers called, you watch your checks and sieze on your trunks, when they are weighed and rechecked for "Frisco." This occupied two hours and a quarter, during which time ladies with children, as well as gentlemen without incumbrance, were bliged to stand and watch. But at last we are off for Ogden. Our first impressions of Nebraska, as we ascend the Platte valley, are, I think, those of disappointment. For a hundred miles or more, we pass up the valley the valley below looks more like a over low, flat land that looks too low and swampy for agricultural purposes and is yet too wild for grass.

We are told that up over the hills there are fine farming lands, well improved, yet we cannot help regretting that we do not even get a glimpse of them. The time from Omaha to Ogden is 54 hours. The road bed is very good. Track in excellent condition. Esting houses furnish very so often described I will not attempt Bosnia and the Herzegovnia to be it. Our pace seems to increase and be-comes almost reckless until, as we descend, we cannot help the thought that if all goes well we will surely go to the—devil's gate, but the least atom of an accident would send us into the river and yawning chasm below, in which case our destination is but a matter of prediction. However, we pass the gate in eafety, darkness shuts out further view, and after an hour's patient waiting we are at Ogden, the terminus of the Union and the commencement of the Central Pacific railroad. Here the best meal of the route awaits us. I need not say that the esting house is well kept. I sim-

THE CENTRAL PACIFIC. Leaving Ogden we also leave the Pullman cars having instead the "Silver Palace" cars of the Central Pacific R. R. I do not see much difference in the three national lines, the Wagner, Pullman or Silver Palace. They have the same general internal and external arrangements for comfort and exconvenience, and I have yet to travel by a sleeping car line that does not employ a porter who will fish your boots from your night-shirt pocket, faithfully add a fresh coat of Mason's shine'um and imperiously look upon you as no gentleman, if the half dolar each morning is not forthcoming. There is one difference in favor of the Silver Palace cars owned and controlled by the Central Pacific R. R., the services of the ubiquitous sleeping car conductor are dispensed with. The train conductor performing the duties of both. The sensitive passenger is thus relieved from witnessing the ex-cruciating agonies of the S. C. > NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—A dispatch from the United States Vice Consul at Shanghai asking for funds, says:

Thursday, Michigan, Senator Beck, of Kentucky, finds that the United States has reduced the National debt two hundred and fifty millions more than it was absolutely obliged to do by contract. This rapid reduction of the debt has raised our credit abroad and at home, so that we have been able to fund our debt in bonds bearing a lower rate of interest, thereby saving much taxation annually. It has also helped bring our greenbacks nearly up to par. But Mr. Beck objects to this. He wants to keep the United States in debt, and in all the financial troubles and perils which spring from our debts, as long as possible. ifence he has introduced a bill in the Senate to put a stop to paying off the National debt. He puts it on the plea of diminishing taxation. It is true that ceasing to pay off the National debt rapidly may diminish the taxation on whisky, tobacco, etc., at present; but we should have to pay more in the long run. Mr. Book, and others of his way of thinking, seem to consider debt a blessing, to keep on hand as long as possible, instead of a curse, to get rid of as soon as possible. His idea of economy is to pay only as fast as you are absolutely compelled to pay, and so pay interest money more years than is necessary, instead of paying as fast as you conveniently can, and to stop paying interest, and become free from the bondage of debt at the earliest practicable moment. There are, doubtless, a good many of his way of thinking; hence

The nickname of "butcher" will be fastened as tightly to Senator M. C. Butler as was that of "bully" to his relative, Preston S. Brooks, over twenty years ago. The Washington correspondent of the Detroit Post & Tribune has seen the advance sheets of the Senate Investigating Committee's report relative to the massacre at Hamburg in July, 1876, and has sent to that paper a carefully prepared abstract which fills about four columns. According to Butler's own story, he began a quarrel with the negro officers, and encouraged the white ruffians of Augusta, Georgia, to cross the river and make an attack. It has been proved that none but Republicans were assaulted or assassinated; that the houses of Republicans only were broken upon and pillaged; and that the fury of this disciplined mob was directed solely against the local leaders of the Republicans white and black. Both the words and acts of the white men proclaim it to be a political butchery, managed under Butler's connivance if not his direction, with the purpose of striking awe in the hearts of the Republican voters of South Carolina. says that "Butler is fitter for the gallows than he is for the Senate." It is now an acknowledged fact that Convery great number of cases (some of them ap parently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone, and in others by the same medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, one or both, accord ing to the requirements of the case. The old supposition that "Consumption is in curable", for many years deterred Physicians from attempting to find a remedy for that dis ease, and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without an effort being sidered inevitable.

Dr. Schenck himself was supposed at one time to be at the very gate of death, his physicians to be at the very gate of death, his physicians having pronounced his case hopeless and abandoned him to his fate; he was cured by the aforesaid medicines and afterward enjoyed uninterrupted good health for more than forty years. Thousands of people have used Dr. Schenck's preparations with the same remarkable success Schenck's Almanac, containing a thorough treatise on Consumption, Liver Complaint, Dys-pepsia, &c., can be had graffs of any druggist, or of J. DIED .- We are called upon this week to chronicle the death of another old resident of this vicinity, that of | 25 Ed. Harper, Mr. David Fisk, which took place at | 26 Emma Harper, his home on Tuesday morning, at | 27 Elma Glover, eleven o'clock, after a sickness of 28 Gharles Wilson, about two months. Mr. Fisk was born in the town of Stafford, in Western Vermont, Oct. 24, 1814, which would make him, at the time of his death, 63 years, 3 months and 5 days of age. He came to the west in 1836, settling in Bertrand village, where he resided until May 1st, 1840, when he settled in Niles township, and some years later removed to Buchanan township, which he made his home until his death. Mr. Fisk has held a number of offices in his township for a number of years, the duties of which he discharged with fidelity and to the satisfaction of the people who elented was for the welfare of the people of ELDER MORRISON'S friends will six children, besides a large circle of meet at his residence on Wednesday acquaintances, to mourn his loss. His funeral, which took place to day, was largely attended.

> ACCIDENT .- Frank Dunbar met with rather a painful accident last Saturday, while at a shooting match on Wycoff's meadow, in Warren township, Ind. He was trying to take the cap from one of the cartridges that had failed to explode while in the gun, and in doing so struck the cartridge against the stock of the gun, when the cartridge exploded in his hand. The forefinger of the right hand was le joints, and the flesh somewhat torn at the same place, besides filling his face with powder and perhaps a shot or two. Frank Wells, who was near, also received a goodly allowance of powder and a few shots in his face. Dr. Dodd dressed Mr. Dunbar's wounds, and he is doing well now, although he was pretty badly frightened. The old rule, that children should never play with edged tools, will apply as well to fire arms. Proceedings of the Common Council of the Village of Buchanan. A regular meeting of the Common Counci A regular meeting of the Common Council of the Village of Buchanan was held at the Council Room, in Engine House No. 1, on Friday evening, Dec. 28, 1877.

Among the Dead Fallures

Of the past, how many bogus nostrums may be numbered! Beginning their careers with a tremendous flourish of trumpets, blazoned for a time in the public prints and on flaming posters, soon, but not too soon, were they relegated to the limbo of things lost on earth. But Hos-tetters Stomach Bitters is a living and thriving remedy. It goes on, curing and to cure. Neither underhand nor open competition affect it. On the contrary, contrast with inferior rival preparations, only increases its popularity. It has been repeatedly imitated, but without success. Counterfeits of it have been surreptitiously introduced, but have fallen flat. Every where it intrenches itself in the confidence of the people; and well it may, for it is a thoroughly reliable invigorant of the feeble, banishes dyspepsia and constipation, braces the nerves, cures rhoumatic ail ments and kidney complaints, and eradicates and prevents intermittent and re-

Pear and Twig Blight. A correspondent of the Gurman-town Telegraph, Mr. S. Folsom, thus discusses pear and twig blight:

Myself and one of my neighbors, with the aid of Prof. T. B. Lovell, of the Attica Collegiate Institute, and his magnifying glasses, have brought to light one unmistakable cause of deadly blight in pear-trees. It is poison from an insect that bores through the bark and from one quarter to one-half inch into the wood of the trunk of the trees. The hole made is about the size of a small. common pin. As the sap rises and descends the poison discolors the wood a foot or more above and half; as far below. If not checked, this poison will destroy the entire branch. if in a branch, and the entire tree; if in the trunk. Slitting the bark with a sharp knife, through the bore and each side of it, so as to connect above and below, is the remedy. And any gnarl or imperfection in the bark on the trunk should thus be slit. I have thus saved trees where the outer bark was utterly dead and produced new bark thereby. Twigs and branches showing blight must be cut off close. The assersion that the twig blight re sults from the work of an insect at the base of the twig we find from careful inspection to be a hasty con-clusion, with no insect and no trace of an insect to warrant it. The hole or vacancy at the junction of the twig with the limb is caused by the shrinkage of the pith in the twig by Blind Staggers in Swine. Hogs, like horses, are subject to the blind staggers. They are suddenly taken blind and staggering, and in a short time go into spasms. These spasms or fits last but a short time only, but recur at short intervals, and in one of these fits the sufferer usually dies. This disease makes sure havoc among swine where it prevails, and no farmer should be ignorant of a remedy to apply when needed. Cold water frequently dashed on the head, the administration of cathartics and injections of turpintine and oil is one kind of treatment recommended, and we know of no better. .. But treating the disease particular attention must be given to the dieting of the animals -a mild, lexative diet being required for some time after the subject begins to recover and regains an appetite for food.-Factory and Farmer.

FARM "SHORTS."-Corn is cheap. Fatten and sell all poor and old cows and get better ones for feeding and for milk.—We ought to whitewash our yard-fences and out-buildings more, and our public officers and great men less.-There are some things it never pays to doctors If you have a sick fruit tree of any kind dig it up at once, and in so doing dig a big hole ready for a thrifty tree next spring.-If you want to keep your hogs, horses, cattle, and sheep healthy, give them salt regularly. There is no better vermifuge than salt. Much of the so-called hog cholara is due to intestinal worms, which salt would prevent. - Golden

Four years ago my barn was regularly infested with rats; they were so numerous that I had great fears of my whole grain being destroyed by them, after it was housed; but having two acres of wild peppermint that grew in a field of wheat, after the wheat was harvested, the mint was cut and bound with it, and drove the rats from my premises. I have not been troubled with one since, nor am I at present, while my neighbors have any quantity of them. I feel confident that any person who is troubled with these pests, could easily get-rid of them by gathering a good supply of mint and placing it around the walls or base of their barns .- Canada Farmer.

Maderia Vines.

If you want success and comfort with Maderia vines, start them in the living room at any time from the present time to the first of March, giving each plant a five inch pot. Provide a trellis upon which the plants may climb, but keep them well pinched back to induce internal growth, and prevent them running as much as possible. About the first of June turn them out of the pots, where they are to grow, with the balls of earth entire, and they will run ten to fifteen feet high over a porch or other suitable place, and throw out laterals liberally; this from the middle of August until killed by frost, and will, besides their shade during the summer, bloom profusely .- Prairie Farmer.

Packing for Plants.

A correspondent of the London Garden, relative to packing for plants for transportation, says: "I havereceived a great many packages. of plants from distant parts of the country lately. Some of them were on the road for eight or nine days. Both rooted plants and cuttings always come in very much betbet condition in dry packing than in-moist.

The latter soon ferments and causes the plants to rot, and it should never be used where it has to be in contact with the plants for more than twelve

Putting a Bull to the Test. They had a discussion over at Miller's, the other day, about bulls. Mr. Miller said it was all nonsense to talk about a bull being excited and made furious by a red rag. He said he had an ugly tempered Devon bull over in the next field who would take it like a lamb if you would shake the flags of all nations in his tace. Dr. Robinson said that Miller daren't try it, and then Miller bet Robinson that he would. So Miller went into the house and loaded himself up with a red flannel undershirt, and we all walked out to the field. The bull was there, looking as calm as a summer morning. Miller climed the fence, and went toward the animal, keeping the shirt behind him. As he came close to the bull he suddenly produced the shirt and flirted it in the bull's face. The beast jumped back a yard or two in astonishment, and kent his eyes on Miller, while Miller waved the old vermillion garment vigorously. Then the bull shook his head several times as if he declined to have anvthing to do with the business; and Miller turned toward us and put his thumb to his nose and wagged his fingers. While he was making his signal of victory, an idea seemed to strike the bull. He put his head down and moved swiftly forward. Miller at first thought there had been an earthquake. He was hurled up twenty feet, and, when he struck the ground, he made another ascension. Upon this descent he thought he would run, but a Devon short horn was inserted in his trousers, and again he went up high enough to take a bird's-eye view of the surrounding country. On the twenty-fifth descent he fell on the other side of the fence from the bull, and we picked him up. His clothes were in ribbons. His ose was furled and bloody, and his mouth was full of grass and mud.

We asked him how he felt, but he id nothing. We inquired concern ng the condition of his bones, but he made no reply. We asked if his views about bulls had undergone any change, but he walked silently along. We wanted to know how he enjoyed the scenery the last time he went up, but he would not say. He merely went into the house, filled up both barrels of his gun with old nails and screws and scraps of iron, and then he went out to interview that bull. The animal was a corpse in ten minutes, and then Miller peeled his undershirt and went upstairs to bed. We know what his views are now, although he doesn't express them free-

The undersigned desires to call the attention of all persons who were noncommissioned officers and musicians of the 5th, 6th, and 7th, Regiments Michigan Infantry in camp of instruction at Fort Wayne, near Detroit, during the month of August, 1861, to the face, that by joint resolution, No. 5, of the session of 1877, amending joint resolution, No. 37, of the same session of 1875, the board of State Auditors were authorized and empowered, to audit and pay all claims for services rendered at that time. by said non-commissioned officers and musi-

That to facilitate the payment of the same, blanks have been prepared, by the Secretary of State, to assist such claimants in making their proof of service.

These blanks will be sent, on request, to any person, asking for them, whose name appears upon the Adjutant General's lists of the above named regiments, as entitled to such pay; which lists have been made and filed in the State Department.

The undersigned requests all persons seeing this notice, who are entitled to pay as above, to write to the Secretary of State, stating what regiment they belonged to. They will receive prompt attention. There is no need of consulting claim agents or attorneys. The amounts due them are small at best, and may be received direct from the State Department, by following instructions here given .--Upon application, if the claimant's name appears upon the proper lists, blanks will be sent at once, which the claimant will fill up, make oath to, and return to the Secretary of State. The claim is then ready to be taken up and acted upon by the board of State Auditors, whose regular sessions are held on the last Wednesday of each month.

If there is any class of citizens to whom the State and Nation owe their thanks, and kindly remembrance;—
if there is any class, who are entitled to the last dollar of compensation thus earned, it is the noble, unselfish men, who stood at the front through a long and terrible struggle for nation life. Over 90,000 such men went out from Michigan. We can never forget them; to do so would be to deserve contempt, and mark the era of the death of patriotism. Many of these men have not yet received their full pay and the undersigned trusts that every newspaper publisher in the State, who sympathizes with them, and glories in the result of their work, will give this notice free insertion, that it may be brought at once to the attention of as many as possible. This will save the Department a large amount of correspondence, prevent delay, and greatly aid worthy men in the collection of their just dues.

Very sincerely yours always. E. G. D. HOLDEN, Secretary of State.

Aquens. A gentleman of this city lately received, from a lady friend who formerly resided here, the following query: When is a woman any wetter than when she has waves in her hair, a waterfall on the back of her head, a cataract in her eye, a creek in her back, and forty springs in her hoopskirt?" To which he replied: "If a woman has her head encompassed with bays with a nocean inside of it, flowing hair (waves are not seasonable in January, the style now is friz), a young squirt in herceye, cdrops pend ant from her cars, is coccasionally rip-pled, has a strait back, keeps well, wears pumps, can hold the rains, and get her dues until her final dissolution, I can't see water man could be think-ing of who would seek anything wet-ter."—Lansing Republican.

IMPORTANT LETTER

From a Distinguished Physician. No single disease has entailed more suffering or hastited the breaking up of the constitution than Catarrh. The sense of smell, of taste, of sight, of hearing, the human voice, the mind, one or more and sometimes all yield to its destructive inducate. The poison it distributes throughout the system atacks overy vitin force, and breaks up the most robust of constitutions. Ignored because but little understood by most physicians, impotently assalled by quacks and charlatans, those authoring from it have little here to be lieded of it this side of the grave. It is time then, that the popular treatment of this terrible disease by remedies within the reach of all passed into hands at once competent and trustworthy. The new and hitherto intrioum though adopted by Dr. Sanford in the preparation of his Radical Cork has won my hearty approval. I believe it likely to succeed when all the usual remedies fall, because it strikes at the root of the disease, viz., the acidified blood, while it heals the ulcerated membrane by direct application to the nasal passages. It action is based on certain fixed rules, and unless the vital forces are too far exhausted, must, in the great majority of cases, effect a cure.

GEO. BEARD, M. D. Nobsoott Block, So. Frammingham, Oct. 1, 1871.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE AT AY safely claim to be one of the few popular remedial dies receiving the approval of medical gentlemen, who, in private, not only freely recommend it but use it in their families in preference to any of the preparations usually prescribed by physicians. "Yourse aware," said a distinguished city physician, "that my obligations to the Mass. Medical Society are such that i cannot publicly recommend or prescribe the liadical Cure; but since I received so much relief from the use of it myself, after a thorough trial of the usual remedies, I have privately advised its use, and presume I have sent to your slore no less than one hundred of my patients for it."

UNIVERSAL SATISFACTION. CENTLEMEN, — We have sold Sanford's Radical CURE for nearly one year, and can say candidly that we never sold a similar preparation that gave such universal satisfaction. We have to learn the first comuniversal satisfaction. We may to learn the first complaint yet.

We are not in the habit of recommending patent medicines, but your preparation meets the wants of thousands, and we think those afflicted should be convinced of its great merit so that their suffering will be relieved. We have been in the drug Jusiness for the past twolve years constantly, and sold everything for Catarrh, but yours leads all the rest. If you see proper you can use this letter or any part of it that you wish. Very truly yours.

ELECTRICITY

As a grand curative and restorative agent is not equalled by any element or medicine in the history of the healing art. Unless the vital spark has fled the body, restoration by means of electricity is possible. It is the last resort of all physicians and surgeons, and has rescued thousands, apparently dead, from an untimely grave, when no other human agency could have succeeded. This is the leading curative element in this Plaster. Balsam and Pine.

The healing properties of our own fragrant balsam and pine and the guins of the East are too well known to require description. Their grateful, healing, soothing, and strengthening properties are known to thousands. When combined in accordance with late and important discoveries in pharmacy, their healing and strengthening properties are increased tenfold. In this respect our Plaster is the best in use without the aid of electricity.

TWO IN ONE. Thus combined we have two grand medical agents in one, each of which performs its function and unitedly produces more cures than any liniment, lotion, wash or plaster ever before compounded in the history of medicine. Try one. PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Ma. R. R. Strevess

Dear Siy.—Three years ago I was suffering terribly with inflammatory Rheumatism. Our minister's wife advised me to take Vegetine. After taking one bottle, I was entirely relieved. This year, feeling a return of the disease, I again commenced taking it, and am being benefited greatly. It also greatly improves my digestion.

Respectfully. MRS. A. BALLARD.

In 1872 your Vegetine was recommended to me; and, yielding to the persuations of a friend, I consented to try it. At the time I was suffering from general debility and nervous prostration, superinduced by overwork and frregular habits. Its wonderful strengthening and curative proporties soemed to affect my debilitated system from the first doe; and under its persistent use I rapidly recovered, gaining more than usual health and good feeling. Since then I have not hesifated to give Vegetine my most unqualified indorsement as being a safe, sure, and powerful agent in promoting health and restoring the wasted system to new life and energy. Vegetine is the only medicine I use, and as long as I live I never expect to find a better.

Yours truly, W. H. CLARK, 120 Monterey Street, Alleghany, Penn.

VECETIME. The following letter from Rev. G. W. Mansfield, formerly pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Hydo Parke, and at present settled in Lowell, must convince a cry one who reads his letter of the wonderful curative qualities of Vegetine as a thorough cleanser and purifier of the blood.

Dear Sir.,—About ten years ago my health failed through the depleting effects of dyspepsia; nearly a year later I was attacked by typhoid fever in its worst form. It settled in my back, and took the form of a large deep-scated abscess, which was fifteen months in gathering. Thad two surgical operations by the best skill in the State, but received no permanent enre. I suffered great pains at times, and was constantly weakened by a profuse discharge. I also lost small pieces of bone at different times.

Matters run on thus about soven years, till May, 1874, when a friend recommended me to go to your office, and talk with you of the virtues of Vegetine. I did so, and by your kindness passed through your manufactory, noting the ingredicule, &c., by which your remedy is produced.

By what I saw and heard I gained some confidence in Vegetine.

I commenced taking it soon after, but felt worse from its effects; still I persevered, and soon felt it was benefiting me in other respects. Yet I did not see the results I desired till I had taken I faithfully for a little more than a year, when the difficulty in the back was cured; and for nine months I ha e enjoyed the best of health.

I ha o in that time gained t enty-fice pounds of itesh, being hea ier than e er before in my life, and I was ne er more able to perform labor than now.

During the past few ecks I had a scrofulous

I took Vegetine fulthfully, and it removed it le el with the surface in a month. I think I should have been cured of my main trouble sooner if I had taken larger doses, after having become account on the officers. become accustomed to its offects.

Let your patrons troubled ith scrofula or kidney disease understand that it takes time to cure thronic diseases; and, if they ill patiently use Vegetine, it will, in my judgment, cure them. With great obligations I am
