OUELLING A MUTINY

"I will tell you of an adventure I had once in the South Pacific, when I was first put in charge of the old Panther. It was a trading trip among the ratives inhabiting the numerous islands, and the entire proceedings are fresh and vivid in my memory, although many a long year has been spun off the reel of time since then."

The speaker was an old, retired ship-master, whose chief delight in life was to gather a number of his neighbors around his hospital hearth of a winters' evening, and while they sipped the old sailor's punch he would entertain them with some episode connected with his past career.

Clearing his throat with a generous allowance of hot punch of his own brewing, and listening a moment to the howling of the gale, which dashed the snow violently against the window panes, he began as follows: "We had been hove to for three days in the South Pacific, during which time the old Panther had pitch ed and rolled until all thoughts of comfort had departed from my mind.

I had a smart young fellow for mate —a New Yorker, Gregory by name— Jack Gregory—and I imagine that I can see him now standing, with his feet well apart; his tall athletic form cased in oil cloths; his handsome sun-burnt face shaded by the broad flaps of his sou'-wester as he peeped at times into the binnacle. He's under hatches now, poor fellow. Went down in a ship he commanded during a terrible typhoon.

"It was close upon midnight when I came on deck and noticed a lull in the gale. I rubbed my hands with satisfaction at the prospect. Told Gregory that the gale was breaking, and that by morning the sun would be shining merrily.

"'Give me a call at daylight!' I exclaimed, as I dove down below, followed by the opinion of Gregory that the worst of the storm was yet to come; and that it was only a lull for relief with a fresh hand to the bellows. But I thought the mate for once was mistaken, and, turning in, slept

"It appears that the mate, after I left the deck, had the pumps well sounded, took a look at the watch, and putting in a fresh quid, regained the poop, when he proceeded to scan the black, lowering horizon. 'A cloud darker than any he had noticed before had obscured the firmanent, and his eyes had been fixed upon it but a few seconds when a vivid gleam of blood-red lightening shot across its entire expanse. Another and another followed, while the wind lulled, then with a howl it tore through the rigging with redoubled force, and amid the roll of the heavy thunder the Panther was again enveloped in mist and spray.

"The lightening now played in rapid forks followed instantaneously by the reverberating thunder, which was sufficient proof that the squall was close upon the ship. The rain descended in torrents, the wind with a lull shifted three points, the close-reefed maintopsail and main spencer tugged and slatted with the force of a giant, while the ship rocked to and fro in the trough of the sea, and the darkness became suddenly intense.

"Then it was that I was awakened by the noise and confusion on deck. I heard the mate roar out for one hand to jump below and call the captain, but I was already groping my way through the wet, dark cabin.

"Owing to the intensity of the darkness, the deluge of rain which blinded them, and the difficulty of keeping their feet, the men were delayed in obeying the orders of the mate. "Just as I reached the deck, the gale suddenly burst forth afresh upon the poor old Panther, and from the quarter directly opposite to the one from which it had been blowing, taking the ship all aback, and throwing her on her beam ends, while the man at wheel was thrown aside as if he had been a feather. The men with the mate were hurled into the lee-scup. pers, up to their waists in water, and for a few moments I did not know whether the old craft was sinking or for it, and it formed no small portion of the outfit of a South Sea trader.

"It was just in the gray of the dawn as I ordered the mate to hoist one out of the main hatch, and so have it put in the cabin. It was a difficult task and somewhat risky, the ship was rolling so heavily; but I managed it, and all hands were called aft to splice the main-brace.

"The last man had filed out of the cabin, and I was on the point of asking the mate to join me in a stiff glass when a sharp cry of alarm caused me to hurry on deck to ascertain the

"I found the men clustering aft in a body, while at their head stood the carpenter with a sounding line and rod in his hand. Terror and dismay were plainly discernable in the countenances of the men, and the cause was but too

"It's no use struggling, sir!' exclaimed the carpenter, who by the way hailed from New Foundland. 'Fate is against us, and the ship is sinking. There is six feet of water in the hold. We are bound for Davy Jones' locker, and we may as well die happy. A short life and a merry one. Eh, boys? "And the man turned to the crew, who, with a hoarse roar, echoed the sentiments of the rascal.

"Well, neighbors, I felt that the situation was a desperate one, and upon my firmness depended the lives of all on board. What would I have given at that moment to have had a pistol, or a weapon of any kind, in my passession; but it was too late to call upon the stewart. The men, their eyes glaring with a terrible excitement, were crowding upon me for the purpose of gaining access to the cabin, where the infernal barrel of brandy held forth allurements which aroused their worst passions. "Snatching up a capstan bar which had been washed from its rack, I cleared a space about me. In language sharp, and to the point, I exhorted them to be men, and not give up the struggle while hope remained. I ordered them to man the pumps to test the strength of the leak, and they wavered, undecided which course to pursue.

"The sea was rolling after us with undiminished fury, but the gale had lulled, the heavy clouds had broken asunder, the bright, cheering rays of the morning sun pouring down with an inspiriting vigor. The mist rapidly dispelled, and a loud joyous shout I recognized trom forward, in which the mate's voice proclaiming that land was in sight.

"Do you hear that, boys, land in sight, and we running on to a lee shore with this sinking hulk. Hooray for the brandy, and d-n the odds!' The carpenter waved his hand aloft. I felt his strong hands clasping my throat as I swung my weapon about me. A rush, a confused roar, a sharp sensation of pain, and I remembered no more of the affair.

"When I again regained my senses, it was with a consciousness of a dull pain in my head, and raising my hand, I found that it had been bandaged. My eyes, too felt weak; but, although my state-room was dark, I made out the form of the mate seated besides me. There was no motion to the ship, the surging of the gale through the top-hamper had died away, and a strange, and I may say an oppressive silence, reigned throughout the ship. "'Well, sir, how do you find yourself?' and Jack Gregory bent over me as tender as a woman would have done. "A little pain, sir, and somewhat weak,' I replied, as a dull glimmering of what had occurred dawned upon me. But tell me, Mr. Gregory, how fares the ship? How much longer will she float, and the crew-'

"'Keep cool, captain, it won't do to get excited with that sore head of yours. The ship is all right, so rest easy on that score. We are riding snugly at anchor in as pretty a bay as you ever saw, and the men, well, I reckon, they are quiet enough for the present. But let me take up the yarn for you at the point where you lost your reckoning. When I was forward, just after reporting land, I heard the dis-turbance aft. I saw the men clustering about ye, and before I could reach your side the carpenter commenced business. Well, I lost no time in getting aft, picking up a belaying pin or two, which I expended to the best advantage, but too late to help the clip which palled your capstan. However, the man that crept astern of ye got all he deserved, and the remainder with the carpenter retreated to the forecastle, while I run the old craft in shore, rounded a projecting part of the land which forms a part of the bay, and here we are.

"As soon as I could I looked after you, and when I left the deck I took the precaution to barricade the cabin door, with the stewart's help, who is as true as steel. I worked upon ye the better portion of the day, but finally fell asleep from exhaustion, and I reckon that the stewart must have taken a long wink also, for when I attempted to go out on deck, I found that both of the forward doors and after companion way had been fastened from the outside. I thought of the skylight, but a mass of old rubbish had been piled upon it. Well, a sharp ax soon solved the problem, and I found that the crew had hoisted the. horrible darkness, prevented me from working rapidly.

"With a crash that made me shiver, the mizzen-mast went over the side; the main-topmast had been snapped short off, and was pounding about aloft; but it all tended to right the old Panther, who, as she fell off before the wind; sped on the wings of the gale at a tremendous rate. We soon cut loose from the wreck of the spars pounding her beam ends. There, sir, you have it all in a nut shell. We are all right here, with plenty of time to fit out and repair damages before proceeding on a plan that will soon bring them to their senses. Only you keep quiet and nurse your head gear. I'll attend to the rest, with the stewart to lend a helping hand.' "Gregory you are worth your weight in gold!' and I grasped the mate's hand with a warm pressure. But for you and your cool head I would have been food for the fishes. I feel better already, and if the stewart will get me something to eat, I think I can take a hand in carrying out your plan. What is it?"

"I refrained from asking any further questions, although I must confess, neighbors, I did not clearly fashion what the bold fellow was up to. "It was close upon dusk when I walked out on the deck, but light enough for me to view the beauties of the little island, covered with its luxuriant verdure and foliage. The waters of the bay were clear as the depths of a spring, the anchor of the old Panther being plainly discernible on the "Close to the beach, and directly opposite the vessel, the mutineers had erected a tent, by the side of which a hugh fire was brightly burning, and hauled well up above high water mark was the long-boat. It was the only one the Panther boasted, and as I listened to their drunken shouts, or watched them reeling up and down the beach, my heart sickened. "Suddenly a man walked down to the very edge of the water and hailed the ship. It was the carpenter .-With the impulse of the moment I answered, asking him what he wanted. "Want!' shouted the half drunken wretch. 'Want your heart's blood and after that all the money and treasure you've got stored away in the cabin. We've got you, old fellow, and when these fools are sober enough, I'm coming aboard to make you walk the plank!' and a hourse triumphant laugh echoed across the waters.

"I reckon we will have to commence operations a little sooner than I expected, said a low voice at my elbow. It was the mate who had gained my side unprecieved. "What do you mean, Gregory?"

"I must go ashore."
"How will you go when there is no boat? Look there, it will never do to think of swimming, and I pointed to the dorsal fin of a hugh shark which was gliding swiftly by, leaving a phosphorescent wake behind him.

"Look here, sir,' and leading me to the off shore side, he showed me a small, rude, but effective raft, which he had constructed. "With that, I reckon I'll bring them galoots to their senses, and may be save our lives from the drunken trenzy of the ring-leader.'

"Every dollar I had in the world, neighbors, was invested in the cargo of the old Panther, and I had no idea of losing either life or property in that out of the way place if I could possibly prevent it. "It was dark when the mate, stew ard and myself glided over the ship's side and cautiously pulled the raft to shore. The eddying tide assisted us, and by keeping well in the shadows cast by the lofty palm trees, we succeeded in reaching the pebbly beach without having been discovered. "The drunken shouts of the men had died away, the blazing fire had sunk to a few insignificant embers, as we stole caustiously forward, and save the wash of the sea on the shelving shore, not a sound was to be heard. "We gained the long-boat, and took survey of the tent around which the men were stretched sleeping the sleep of intoxication. There was no danger to be apprehended from them, and without further ado we launched the heavy boat. "The mate, with a vigorous kick, stove in the head of the brandy barrel, allowing the contents to run out upon the sand which greedily drank up the liquor. The provision and water were then placed in the boat, the carpenter was bound, together with his comrades, and, considerably elated by our success, we pulled off to the ship. "Well, neighbors, I do not know as it is necessary for me to spin this yarn out to any great length, but I can assure you that when those rascals began to come to themselves they were penitent enough. The carpenter alone gave us trouble. By some means he contrived to clear himself of the rope yarns that held him, and, cutting the others clear, he called upon them to follow him, board the ship, and win back what had been lost. But the fellow had not taken a dozen strokes from the shore before the shriek of mortal agony was heard to issue from his lips. A slight struggle was perceptible, blood discolored the water, and the mutineer sank, a victim to a ground shark. "The accident was sufficient to dishearten the crew, and with one accord they promised submission. I gave them a trial, refited the old craft and completed a trip which pecuniarily, turned out highly advantageous to all From observations made on speci-

Michigan, called upon us to-day in company with Hon. Wm. Welch, one of the Fish Board of Wisconsin. Mr. Kellogg is visiting the State in the interests of the Michigan Board, and is also authorized to speak for Ohio. His mission is to create a public sentiment in the States bordering upon the Great Lakes, and in Canada, "Starvation,' was the laconic reply. against the wholesale destruction of white fish which is now going on, and to endeavor to secure legislative action in the stoppage of the same.

Mr. Kellogg says that the State of Michigan has been four years in the business of propagating and distrib-uting white fish, and has placed in the lakes surrounding her over 50 millions of that variety; Canada has placed in the Detroit river alone, in the past two years, over 40,000,000, and is doing more along the lakes than all the States put together. Wisconsin, Mr. Welch assures us, has put in Lake Michigan and Green Bay upwards of 25,000,000 in the last two years, while other States are aiding fairly in the great work: But the labors of the various State and Dominion commissions are set at naught, Mr. Kellogg affirms, by the wholesale destruction which ensues through the using of the present close-meshed nets by the fishermen all along the shores; the nets are so fine that two-year-old white fish are caught, and as they do not spawn so early in life, the result is a constant diminuition of what should be future

The desire is to pass laws regulating the mesh of the nets, the seasons in which they shall be cast, and also naming days in every week when they shall be shut off, and the fish allowed to go up streams to their spawning grounds unrestricted. Unless these arbitrary laws are passed Mr. Kellogg predicts that in ten years a white fish in the Great Lakes will be a genuine curiosity, and the occu-pation of thousands of families and large cash capitals will be gone. There are single establishments in Michigan devoted to the culture, care and transportation of white fish formerly did a business of from $10,-000 to $12,000 per annum, but are not now paying expenses—the cause, the destruction by close nets of the young fish. In Milwaukee alone. there is capital to the extent of $75,-000 employed in this single branch of the fish interest; in Grand Haven, Michigan, twice that amount, and large establishments at Racine; while along the shores of Lake Michigan, thousands of families derive their em-

The iron hook is lowered, grasped the hook below, and steadily rose the fiery treasure. "Steady!" cried Militor, and the crucible, with its precious, bubling fluid was raised up and landed on the iron platform. The mould was ready, and the seething vessel was gradually worked to it, tipped over, and the molten mass poured in. When half full the mould cracked like a rifle shot, but the pouring continued until the last drop was drained from the crucible. In a few minutes the brick was tossed on the floor, grasped by tongs, tumbled into a tank of water, which boiled, hissed and foamed over and around the mammoth brick. Bucket after bucket was poured in and soon the the monster was cooled. Thus was cast the largest gold brick that we are aware of in the world, all from a mine as yet unsurprised in richness. The brick weighed 3389.96 ounces, value at $54,262. It is 18x6 inches on the top, and 31 inches deep, representing 586.9375 cubic inches of solid metal Resumption and Reissuc.

Berrien

County

The President having signed the Fort Currency bill, prohibiting the further retirement and cancellation of green backs, the Sherman scheme of resumption is practically adopted. The Resumption act is unchanged in every respect, and it is understood that al parties have agreed to let it remain undisturbed. As the law now stands. it will be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem greenbacks that are presented to him in sums of $50 and upwards on and after Jan. 1 next; but it will also be his duty to reissue the greenbacks thus redeemed, instead of destroying them. It is noticeable that the very same newspapers in New England and the East which opposed the remonetization of silver now contend that this interpretation of the law will render the Resumption act inoperative. "It will be, in effect," says the New York Times, "to let the Resumption act stand as it is, but to prohibit its execution." The theory is that the greenbacks once redeemed will be reissued, and immediately presented again for redemption, and that, when the Treasury shall be drained of its coin resources, the Government will he forced to buy gold at a premium, or sell bonds at a discount for gold, wherewith to continue this endless system of redemption and reissue. The strict constructionists who insist that resumption means not merely redemption on demand, but the complete destruction of the redeemed notes, pretend not to be able to comprehend how the notes once redeemed can be got out again. "There can be no re-issue of a legal tender after it is redeemed," says the New York Com-mercial and Financial Chronicle, "unless in payment of some specified demand against the Government since all current demands are otherwise provided for,-receipts from taxes covering all Government expenses, and State. And are ye not satisfied with bond subscriptions meeting bond re-demptions." All of which simply shows that the Eastern newspapers discussing this question are using as little judgment as they used in the discussion of the silver question, and be relieved of the necessity of sustain-that their predictions will prove as false in this case as they have already proved in the other. An endless system of redemption and reissue of greenbacks, by which it is meant that greenbacks will no sooner come out of one door of the Treasury than they will be presented at another door for coin, is contrary to all experience. If this were the natural or commercial operation of notes of issue on a specie basis, then there would be no bank-notes, no checks or drafts in circulation, no bills passed about from hand to hand without indorsement and without recourse serving in the function of money. The fact is ignored that the Government a paper currency convertible into coin is constantly redeeming its greenbacks at the will of the holder, so that the by receiving them for taxes. Now and them for all dues except the payment of England and France, throughout of duties; on and after resumption, the civilized world; so that the curren- it will take them for duties also. What purpose, therefore, will any man or set of men have in accumulating greenbacks for presentation at the Treasury in exchange for specie? What exclusive function or special value will specie have that greenbacks will not possess; the Americans are too busy a people to spend their time in exchanging greenbacks for gold for the mere fun of the thing. They are too wise a people to draw the gold for the purpose of hoarding it at their own risk and letting it lie idle. They are too economical and practical a people to insist upon transacting all their business with actual specie, which involves delay, personal inconvenience, and greater cost of handling and transportation. They trust private persons and banking corporations by recognizing and using notes of issue secured by a proper reserve. They will scarcely refuse to trust the Government, whose resources are much vaster and whose credit is much more comprehensive, when the Government shall comply with the same prudent conditions. Greenbacks, secured by the proper specie reserve and redeemable on presentation, will not flow into the Treasury for exchange

in gold and silver,—they will be needed for active circulation and the ordinary business uses. The very difficulty suggested by the strict constructionists—that of reissuing greenbacks that shall have been redeemed, and those which represent the excess of Government receipts over Government expenses will furnish the Government with the means for increasing and constantly maintaining its specie supplies. "How are these greenbacks to be reissued?" Simply by means of exchange for gold and silver. After resumption, with greenbacks serving all the uses of gold and silver, gold and silver will flow intolthe United States Treasury to be exchanged for the surplus greenbacks: Why? Simply because the greenbacks, with an equal value, will be more desirable for commercial purposes; they will be more convenient, more easily passed from hand to hand, less costly to transport from one place to another, and better assured against loss by theft. The preference for Government coin-notes will be so marked that home bondholders who use the interest they draw will take greenbacks rather than gold in exchange for coupons. There will be an annual accumulation of from $80,-000,000 to $100,000,000 of gold and silver product, so long as it shall not be necessary to export bullion in exchange for foreign products; and, while a part of this accumulation will be kept in circulation, the bulk of it will seek the Government vaults as the safest and cheapest place of security. LETTERS OF E. C. BEARDSLEY.

The capital of the colony of New South Wales is beautifully situated on the southern shore of Port Jackson, one of the finest harbors in the world, in 33 degrees, 51 minutes S. latitude, and 151 degrees, 11 minutes E. longitude. It was founded January 26th 1788, by Capt. Phillips with a fleet of convict and store ships, and is thus the parent city of Australia. Capt. Phillips had previously landed in Botany Bay, a few miles to the south of Port Jackson, but finding that place wholly unsuitable for the projected penal settlement, wisely selected Port Jackson instead. On learning this another of my early cherished romances was ruthlessly exploded. I had read story after story in my younger days of the transportation of felons to Botony Bay, and now to learn that there never was a penal colony at shake my belief in those blood curdling romances.

Sydney is picturesquely situated near the head of the bay about four miles from the ocean entrance, which is over a mile in width. In many of its features Sydney can best be described by saying that it has an "old-fashioned look," some of its streets being tortuous and narrow and the houses built in all shapes and of all sizes, regardless of architectural appearances; in fact even in the more modern structures solidity seems to be more sought after than beauty, although some of the business premises recently erected in Pitt, George and York streets are of a high order of architecture, and the post office building, treasury, law department and town hall are equal if not superior to those in Melbourne, which I described

The greater majority of the suburban villages are on the north shore of the bay, across which over thirty ferry boats ply at frequent intervals. The parks are numerous and easily accessble to the citizens. Hyde Park is a beautiful plateau of forty acres, nearly in the center of the city. The Domain, a charming expanse of parkland of 138 acres immediately adjoining the parliament buildings, but one block removed from the busiest street in the city. The Botanical gardens embrace 38 acres, and are the finest I saw in the colonies; as the semi-tropical climate permits the easy growing of exotics from every clime, and the locality, one of great beauty, encircling the waters of Farm Cove, where men-of-war belonging to the Australian station are anchored. Then there are other smaller parks and Moor Park, a tract of 600 acres, near the south-east points. The Circular Quay, at the head of Sydney Cove, is the principle wharf, 1,300 feet long, available for the largest vessels. Woolloomooloo wharf, to the east, is 1,200 feet long. Darling harbor, which skirts the western side of the city, has its frontage entirely occupied with wharves and quays. On the north, from Miller's Point to Dawe's Point, which includes all one end of the city, and from thence round the largest headland of the port, the weterside is fully taken up by commerce. There are several large dry-docks, one of which has work shops covering five acres, is provided with the largest, most powerful and recently improved machinery, and employs 700 hands. Numerous factories are at work in different parts of the city. The leather works of Messrs. Alderson & Sons, covering three and one-third acres

quarter being in the east end of the city and the suburban localities stretching beyond along the shore, overlooking the harbor. Many of them have been erected at enormous cost, and for extent, internal gran are not equaled by any private resi dences on either side of the equator. But all things must end, and on the afternoon of Feb. 28th, the Royal Mail Steamship Zealandia steamed out of Port Jackson with the writer as a passenger, home ward bound, and as we passed down this most charming ding adieu to friends on board by a last flutter of cambric handkerchiefs. the wave of the bat, and cheer after cheer; it seemed difficult to realize all the joyousness of the words "homeward bound," but when twenty-eight weary, monotonous days, covering an expanse of 7,200 miles of water was passed and foot was once more set apon land in San Francisco, and the languid, "take your seat gentlemen," of the colonial railway guard, had given away to the go ahead, energetic shout, "all aboard" of the Central Pacific conductor, it seemed that we were really homeward bound.

In view of the many inaccuracies of the older lexicographers, as Webster, Worcester, and the compilers of the various encyclopedias in common use at the present day, and their violent partizan bias, prejudiced as they plainly are in favor of a metallic basis for currency, it has been found necessary to prepare and publish an entirely new national work, fully up to the times. The "National Greenback party of Michigan," as it styles itself, might have gone farther and fared worse in its selection of a candidate for governor. There is this to be said of Mayor Smith: That he has been a successful business man in this community and is esteemed as an honest man and upright citizen. Certain it is that in his private business he would tolerate no such financial dishonesty as is involved in the demands of the "National" party platform. Were a man owing him a considerable number of small debts, and, though abundantly able to pay with reasonable time, should refuse to pay him interest, or to give even a square note setting the time of payment, Mr. Smith would characterize such a man as dishonest, and would not be mealy-mouthed about it either. And if Mr. Smith held a mortgage bond against John Roe for $1,000, drawing ten per cent or even four per cent. interest, and John Roe should undertake to compel him to deliver up that bond and take therefor 1,000 duebills for a dollar each, payable at no time or never, and drawing no interest, Mr. Smith would not pick about for soft words to describe John Roe's rascality. How he reconciles his private character for integrity and square business principles with his now public position as the representative standard-bearer for a set of principles involving public meanness and national dishonor, must remain for him to explain.—Grand Rapids Eagle.

A SPECIAL in the Galveston, Texas News, et June 6th, says:

"The north-bound passenger train on the Texas Central was thrown from the track by a broken joint, two miles south of McKinley this morning. The ladies' car steeper rolled down the embankment of twenty-five feet, killing the Rev. Knowles Shaw, the evangelist, and seriously wounding, J. Todd Miller, G. W. Henry and wife, and G. G. Mountcastle, and two children. Twelve others were painfully but not dangerously wounded." Rev. Mr. Shaw will be remembered by our readers as having conducted the most successful religious rivival ever known in this place, three years since.

urday last. Our mail carrier got up a corner on eggs in La Porte last week. Success to him in the egg trade.

E. K. Warren has purchased Mr. H. Cookson's farm. Mr. C. intends moving away. By the trade we lose one of our best citizens.

Whitman Savage talks of coming home from Kansas. Mr. Edward Lazelier, our efficient railroad agent, is about to leave us to He was arraigned before Esquire act as agent at Augusta, Mich. We will also lose another good citizen, tion, and in default of bail was sent | Mr. O. C. Bostwick, telegraph operaup to await action by the Circuit tor. S. W. Baily, who has been in the employ of the railroad company here, goes to Buchanan to work at his trade, harness making. His family will remain here. The completion of the double track causes the changes. The Methodist social last Friday evening was a success, quite a number were present. It was an enjoyable occasion. I understand that they realized about $12.00.

Levi Morrow is terrible afflicted with the rheumatism. Quite a number of villagers and farmers visited the lake last week to try their luck at fishing. It is quite a pleasant trip for people in this vicinity to take. This village had the honor of furnishing the presidents of the two county conventions last week.

Ex-Treasurer Samuel Hess and lady were thrown from their buggy twice at the Old Settlers' convention. The horse ran away three times that day. The third time an expert had the lines but he was soon landed in in the road. Mr. and Mrs. Hess were badly bruised but no bones broken. Mrs. Hess was thrown out on her face, and her face was badly bruised. I have had conversation with a number of tramps lately and when the proper times arrives (as I think it will by late revelations) I shall publish the conversation. No tramps have been buried in the "tramp's cemetery" very

I wrote you in my last letter that we needed a flour mill at Three Oaks, now if any one desires to go into that business here I presume that Tramp's monument might be bought or rented for a chimney for the mill; it is about 80 feet high.

H. R. Pike succeeded in getting one tramp to promise to chop wood for him. Mr. P. gave him his supper. After supper the tramp requested the loan of "tin cints to get a wa drap of bitters." He said that it would be impossible for him to stay ters. Exit tramp.

Several of our citizens, ladies and gentlemen, are engaged in Sabbath school work in the country. Dr. Swerenger and C. C. Brown are managing a Sunday school at the school house two miles west of here; and E. K. Warren and J. H. Hatfield have charge of one two miles south. L. S. Boynton, late editor of the late Three Oaks Echo called on us last week. He was happy and satisfied with the amount of business now on hand. He edits a paper at Union City, Mich., called Union City Passport. I presume he will retain the above name for his paper wherever he may go, as it is appropriate, for he often passes from one port to another. His motto is "greenbacks and equal rights to every laboring man." I noticed in the Passport an article copied from the Terre Haute Express in possession of Harvey Blimpky and | which the following occurs: "Out of the other two with Adam Greenwalt, the terrible oppression of the French each taking the number he found. people was born 'communism'; out of Mr. Bronson described the man as the almost equal oppression of the Council proceedings in another col- being of medium size, about forty- American people by the money power umn, the water-works are to be put in | five years old and a little grey. Michgan, writer then states: "and in case of defeat, should that day ever come, it will be an evil one for America. Then communism will show itself in carnest. It cannot be expected that three or four millions of men will be willing always to follow Mr. Beecher's advice which was given gratuitously to working men, viz: 'To live on bread and water." The above is a sentiment that many of the National papers now advocate-that if the Nationals do not succeed the sequel will be communism. I'he element is in the party, notwithstanding resolutions are passed at National conventions that "communism" is foreign to the National party.

Another article similar to the above can be found in the Three Oaks Inde pendent, May 30th, on the patent side, headed "Communism vs. National Banks," to which the editor refers as an able article. Let the voters of Berrien county read the article and I imagine that they will not take much stock in a party that advocates such principles. The article in the Independent states: "The birth of christianity was the birth of communism." "Communism in France was the first practical assertion of the political rights of the people," &c. They prate about "double interest and no God but usury." I imagine there are not five Nationals in Berrien counyears' old, wearing a new bell, with new strap 12 inches wide, strayed to but who would take 10, 15, or 25 from my premises May 22. system, in which certain mysterious processes are constantly going on. These result in the production of that wonderful vigifying agent the blood, which in a state of health rushes laden with the elements of vitality to the remote parts of the system. But when the stomach is semiparalyized by dyspepsia, blood manufac-ture is carried on imperfectly, the circula-tion grows thin and sluggish, and the system suffers in consequence. Moreover, indigestion reacts upon the liver and bowels, rendering the first sluggish and the latter constipated. The brain also suffers by sympathy, and sick headaches, sleeplessness and nervous symptoms are engendered. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters reforms this state of things, gives permanent tone and regularity to the stomach and its associate organs, the bowels and liver, and ensures complete nourishment and increased vigor of the system. It is the most popular as well as the most efficient anti-dyspeptic and tonic in America. Crown Teas, at Dodd's.

RADICAL CURE

For CATARRH

INSTANTLY relieves and permanently cares this I loathsome disease in all its varying stages. It possesses the soothing and healing properties of plants, herbs and barks in their essential form, free from every fibrous contamination, and in this respect differs from overy other known remedy. In one short year it has found its way from the Atlantic to the Pacific coat, and wherever known has become the standard remedy for the treatment of Catarrh. The proprietors have been waited upon by gentlemen of national reputation who have been cured by this remedy, and who have, at considerable expense and personal trouble, spread the good news throughout the circles in which they move. When you hear a wealthy gentleman of intelligence and refinement say, "I owe my life to Sanford's Kadien Cure," you may feel assured that it is an article of great value, and worthy to be classed among the standard medical specifics of the day.

THE benefit I derive from its daily use is to me in-valuable.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with arts of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, makesich to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no gness work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common senso. We invite the sick, no matter what their silment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Abolish the "Parlor."

What horrible associations crowd into our mind when the word "parlor" is mentioned. We immediately picture to our imagination the terrible oppressivenesss of the best room, where the sun is never allowed to shine for fear of fading carpet and furniture, where the chairs have all a stately, polished and stiff look about them, where the children are never allowed to enter, where what little air there is may never be allowed to change, where the smell is something akin to that of a family tomb. This is the best room, and it is too sacred for the use of the family, and is only kept for purposes of ceremony and for the convenience of those people for whom we do not care a rush. People whom we like and with whom we are on familiar terms come right into the living room and have a good chat in a familiar way, but the ceremonious visitor, whose departure gives us relief, is ushered into the parlor. The principle upon which this room is founded is all wrong. Let us have no such room in our house. Open the shutters and windows. Admit the sunlight and air. If the carpets and furniture fade let us enjoy their use in that condition. Let us not have any tomb in our house, where all should be cheerfullness and brightness. Abolish the "parlor" and enjoy the home. - Rural New Yorker.

How to Make Cows Give Milk. A writer in the Southern Farmer says that his cow gives all the milk that is wanted in a family of eight, and that from it after taking all that is required for other purposes, 260 pounds of butter were made this year. This is in part his treatment of the

"If you desire to get a large yield of rich milk, give your cow every day water slightly warm and slightly salted, in which bran has been stirred at the rate of one quart to two gallons of water. You will find that, if you have not tried this daily practice, that your cow will give twenty-five per cent. more milk immediatly under the effects of it, and she will become so attached to the diet as to refuse to drink clear water unless very thirsty. But this mess she will drink any time and ask for more. The amount of this drink necessry is an ordinary water pailful at a time, morning, noon and night.

Hornets as Parlor Pets.

"In the middle of my parlor I have, you may remember, a curious republic of industrious hornets; their nest hangs to the ceiling by the same twig it was so admirably built and contrived in the woods. Its removal did not displease them, for they find in my house plenty of food; and I have left a hole open in one of the panes of the window, which answers all their purposes. By this kind usage, they are becoming quite harmless; they live on the flies, which are very troublesome to us through the summer. They are constantly busy in catching them, even on the eyelids of my children. By their assistance I am but very little troubled with flies. All my family are so accustomed with their strong buzzing that no one takes any notice of them; and though they are fierce and vindictive, yet kindness and hospitality has made them useful and harmless." - Farmers' Letters,

A plan for improving the aroma of butter, in use in many parts of Switzerland, noted for good milk and butter is as follows: The milk, as soon as drawn, and while yet warm, is filtered through a sprig of washed fir tips, the stem of which is inserted loosely and upright in the hole of the funnel. The milk deposits hair, skins, clots, or gelatinous sliminess on the leaves. It has imparted it a most agreeable odor, and does not readily turn sour. A fresh sprig should be used each time.—Scientific American.

The power of the breeder in controlling size is well shown in the breeds of poultry, which have all, undoubtedly, descended from a single stock, the wild jungle fowl. Thus the Sebright Bantam, a recognized artificial breed (for we have the history of its origin), weighs but sixteen ounces (the hen). The Light Brahma hen Vesa, owned by Sturtevant Bros., weighed thirteen and one-fourth lbs., or two hundred and twelve ounces.-Scientific Farmer.

To CURE A FELON.—The London Lancet suggests the following simple treatment for felons: As soon as the disease is felt, put directly upon the spot a fly-blister about the size of your thumb nail, and let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister, may be seen the felon, which can instantly be taken out with the point of a needle or a lancet.

The destruction of weeds should be constantly attended to, for, like insect pests, they multiply enormously. A weed plucked before it goes to seed will prevent the growth of hundreds the following year, or here the old adage is uncommonly true, that 'one year's seeding causes fifteen years' weeding.

CURIOUS FOODS.—The Mono Lake Indians of California eat soup made of angle-worms thickened with grass-seed flour. They also gather bats from caves and roast them in hot ashes without removing either feathers (?) or entrails. Wasps' nests are roasted and eaten; the more young they contain the better are they relished.—Dr. Edward Palmer in American Naturalist Colman's Rural World publishes a reliable account of a three-fourths Jersey cow giving birth to two calves. one on March 11th, the other on the 20th; or nine days apart. Such instances are rare.—Scientific Farmer.

LEVI JONES, Markham, says: I had a severe attack of Bronchitis. I was so bad I could hardly get my breath. I sought for a quick remedy, and seeing the Shoshonees Remedy so highly recommended, I procured, and am happy to say that, by the time it was taken, I was entirely well and remained so, although I was

CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS.

FOR THE CURE OF Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint. DYSPBISIA AND SICK HEADACHE

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. DAIN in the right side, under the edge I of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side: the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax: the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him. yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLane's Liver Pills, in CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. The genuine are never sugar coated. Every box has a red wax seal on the lid,

A Mystery Solvec. James McNaster wore a thoughtful look as he sauntered into position before the desk.
