reading our evening chapter in the Bible and I listened to the regular breathing of little Edith, I remarked half-laughingly, that the white woman was rocking her cradle with more than usual emphasis, for in the occasional lulls in the storm without the monotonous sound from the cham-ber in the unoccupied portion of the house

"Perhaps," said Harry, dreamily, with the strange, far-off look that I always no-tice when he falls into his legendary mood, "it is because this is the anniversary of the night that wicked Sir Harry

Just then, in the hall below, came, as clearly and distinctly as though it had been in our room, the ting-a-ling of a bell—not regular, but quick and hasty, as though whover or whatever rung it was in a great hurry.

Poor Harry turned white as marble, and I, affecting a coolness which I by no means felt. said:

I knew in my heart that the last conjecture was the height of absurdity Ting-a-ling! came the clear and strange sound, again repeated, and unmistakably from the bell of which I have spoken this time even more hastily rang than before.

Now Harry's war record—for he was three times promoted for personal bravery in action-is conclusive evidence enough that it was not physical fear that so wrought upon him that he sat as if paralyzed for the moment, until I took nis revolver from over the mantel and walked toward the door, saying, though inwardly I was quaking with an indefin-

Of course I didn't mind him, but snatched baby from the crib and ran swiftly down-stairs, to find the dining-room full of smoke, and Harry dashing water on the floor and wainscot which was now smouldering, and in a few moments—thanks to there being three tubs of water in the kitchen in readiness for the wash-day—the fire was entirely ex-

"A coal must have snapped from the fireplace in some way," said Harry as he wiped his smoked-grimed face, "and caught the dry oak floor." This was the only way we could account for it, and it was a mercy that we were not burned alive in our beds, for, as Harry said, the old house was as dry as headway, to have extinguished it. Of course, conjecture as to the warning of the bell was simply futile. There was no one but ourselves in the house-not even a sagacious dog—and as rats are not in the habit of taking a bell from the upper shelf of a remote closet, opening a heavy oak door and kindly notifying the inmates of a house that it is on fire—I, at least, was completely nonplussed, and as for Harry, why, I couldn't get a word out of him on the subject.

I took the trouble next day to look at the bell, though I confess I didn't touch it, and there it was exactly as I had left it, while the ugly little face on the carved handle seemed to leer at me in such an impish manner that I turned away with

The Mother of Peter the Great. Natalie Narischkin, the mother of Peter the Great, was a lovely, highly gifted woman, though of humble origin. Alexis, her husband, was a prince of unusual energy and intelligence. He encouraged agriculture, established silk and linen manufactories, responsibled the army compiled to tories, reorganized the army, compiled a law code which is in use at the present day, and did all which lay in his power to improve both the social and moral condition of his people. When he became a widower he resolved to marry a second time to please himself.

With this object in view, he went through the country in various disguises, seeking to penetrate into the inner circle of homes blessed with daughters. Sometimes he would go dressed as an apothe-cary in search of healing plants, sometimes as a merchant or a traveling pro-

In this way he became more thoroughly acquainted with his country and its inhabitants, with their desires and cares, duties and trials, than would have been possible otherwise. As he was one day walking through the suburbs of Moscow, he met one Matwerf, with whom he had often talked concerning the ignorance of the Russian poor and the best way of remedying it.

Matwerf invited the czar to sup with him and introduced him as a merchant from Kusan. The busy, bustling house-wife received her guest with true Russian hospitality, but the czar's glance passed over her short, round figure, to rest upon that of a tall slender girl who stood be-hind her. It was Natalie, a poor orphan whom the Matwerfs had taken to their home through pity.

She wore the simple national costume of the olden time. Upon her soft hair was a black velvet cap; around her neck hung a triple row of pearls, from which suspended an image of the holy Saint Nicholas. The remainder of her outfit consisted of a short overskirt, a bright colored underskirt, blue stocking and low

Supper was served by the ladies, and though the kind hostess urged Alexis to do honor to her honeycakes and meal, he ate but little, so absorbed was he in listening to the praise which she gave her adopted child.

"She reads and writes well enough to be the first secretary of the czar (the holy Saint Nicholas protect him,) and yet no girl far or near can spin faster or better han she. From early to late she helps me, and then in the evening she reads to Matwerf, because the lamplight pains his eyes. She is indeed the blessing of our The czar's eyes rested with pleasure on the blushing face of the lovely maiden, and with reluctance he took his leave, only to repeat his visit soon and often. Finally he declared his love, and won her promise to be his bride. The emperor of all the Russias never regretted having taken to his heart and home the poor orphan girl. With her tender devotion and bright intelligence, she soothed and cheered the hours he spent away from the affairs of state; she sympathized with him and aided him in his efforts to elevate the tone of his

In examining the papers of their de-ceased father, J. N. Gaunal, Messrs. A. and F. Gaunal found one which purported to be a copy of a memoir presented by him to the Paris Academy of Sciences in 1828, and which gave an account of a process for the artificial production of diamonds. The Academy simply buried the communication in its archives, and never mentioned it in any way. The substance of the document is now published in "Le Monde de Science de l'Industrie," from which we take the following particulars: Equal weights of carbon sulphide and of phosphorus, both as pure as possible, are put in a flask and a little water added which floats on the top and prevents the sulphide from turning to vapor and from taking fire. The whole having been placed in some situation where it will not be disturbed, the sulphur of the sulphides combines with the phosphorus and releases the carbon, which falls to the bottom and assumes a crystalline form. This result takes place slowly, and not till after the lance of six months was M. Gaunal able to obtain diamonds the size of a grain of millet-seed. As for the purity of these small diamonds it was proved by the strictest test, and that not only by M. Gaunel but also by others. The experiment was repeated several times in the course of many years by M. Gaunal, and always with the same result. The artificial diamonds consist of pure carbon in dodecahedral crystals, and they scratch steel like the natural diamond.

Intellectual Test of Nations. So far as the general ability of the people of a nation to read and write is a proof of their superior enlightenment, the Americans have no rivals in all the world. As enders we lead all nations. We are 42,-000,000. The population of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland is 33,000,000 of France, 36,000,000, of Germany 42,-In 1870 there were published in the United States 574 daily, 4,295 weekly and 1,002 other papers and periodicals. In 1877 the figures were: dailies, 709; weeklies, 6,231; all others, 1,014; total, 7,944. England has but 2,252, Germany but 1,985, France but 1559, and Italy but 935. The total for the four nations, embracing an aggregate population of 137,000,000, is but 6,731, or 1,213 less than supplies the American population of 42,000,000. The distribution of our daily and weekly papers among the several States is instructive. They are not by any means apportioned according to pop-ulation, though New York is always first. It appears that New York has 97 dailies. Pennsylvania comes next, with 76; Illinois third, with 47; and, curiously enough California fourth, with 43. In that State of less than 850,000 of the European race they have 4 more daily papers than Ohio, with her 3,000,000, 15 more than Massa-chusetts or Indiana, 17 more than Missouri, 20 more than Iowa, as many lacking one as Wisconsin, Virginia and Georgia conbined, and more than eight times is many as either Minnesota, Delaware or Oregon. If, then, the reading of current publications is an irrefragable test of the superior instruction of a community, generally, the population of California stands at the very summit of modern civilization, so says a California Exchange. --- special benefit alone, though it would be just like him to have it printed. The Fruit of the Fig Tree. The fruit of the fig tree, or what we call the "fig," is very singular. In its carliest stage it is not unlike some other fruits, but during the course of its development it undergoes a strange modification. In its incipient state it is an aggregation of numberless flower buds, which in ordinary course would be developed on a long branch; but in the case of the fig the branch, instead of developing into a woody, limb bearing flowers, grows up around the multitude of flowers, enclosing them in a particular segretation and forming asucculentfruit; inside of a woody branch. The fig that we cat; then, is not a fruit at all, properly so-called; but a succuleut branch. The real fruits are what are usually taken rior seeds, and each of which was the product of a separate regular flower. This kind of fructification was called by the botanist Mirbel, a syconus, which signifies in Greek "a fig garden."—Scientific American.

are some singular records in history. It seems that a great nation cannot turn on its axis more than once in 400 or 500 years. Some of the old States lie outside the bounds of history, but those inside these bounds show great uniformity in making the time of radical changes in dynasty. Egypt was under shepherd Kings about 500 years. Her golden age, when she so flourished in art, spread over 300 years: The Hebrew Republic ran from Moses to King David,—500 years; and then came the Empire to enter upon 500 or 600 years of success. The glory of Greek liberty covered about 500 years. Rome enjoyed all the splendor of a Republic for the same strange period, 482 years. Thus, between Cincinnatus, the farmer President, and the overthrow of the Republic by Casar and Antony, there intervene the magical five centuries. Spain, and France, and Germany, formed out of new centuries which followed the breaking up of the Western Empire, are now living well and happy in the 400th year of their separate lives. These statements are sufficiently truthful at least to assure us that those great stars which we call 'nations' can neither be placed in the sky in a day, nor in a day be blotted from the galaxy. Behold through what turmoils France has come! The Atheist and Communist assailed her. Napoleon drained her of men and money by wars of ambition. Other revolutions came. Then came the usurpation of Napoleon, then the German war with defeat and a fine of a thousand million dollars; and yet today France comes out of those commo-

Au Artificial Larynx. Dr. Foulis, of Glasgow, has made the remarkable application of an artificial larynx to a cloth-worker, James Houston, twenty-nine years of age, who was afflicted with a malignant tumor in his larynx, which obstructed respiration. The tumor had twice been removed by opening the larynx and taking it out, but it had recurred, and, from its malignant character, would have produced death if the opera-tion which Dr. Foulis described had not been performed. The larynx has been entirely taken out and an artificial one substituted. This is the first time the opera-tion has been performed in England, al-though it has been tried ten times on the continent with varying success. Care was taken to introduce a tube into the windpipe as soon as it was cut across and below the seat of disease, so that no blood could get into the lungs during the fur-ther steps of the operation. Dr. Foulis thus had ample time to thoroughly accomplish the removal of the larynx. The whole operation occupied two and a half hours the patient being under the influence of chloroform. Recovery has been uninterrupted, and there is no appearance whatever of recurrence. The man is quite fit for light office work. The artificial larynx consists of two tubes, one of which goes downward to the trachea, and the other upward to the mouth. tient can talk in a whisper without these tubes, but when a reed-plate is slip-ped into a groove in the lower tube, a res-onant sound is produced, which is modulated into letters and words by the mouth. The articulation, with or without reeds, is perfect. The voice is a monotone vary-

The Marscillaise Hymn. The Marseillaise Hymn has been formally recognized as the national anthem of France. M. Tallandier having urged a fortnight ago official action in relation to the decree of 1795, Gen. Gresley, the minaster of war, replied that it was his intention to put the edict in force, and the motion was consequently withdrawn. The Marseillaise will be played at all reviews, and on all occasions of public festivity. The first time it was publicly sang in the army was by a battalion which had for its standard a golden eagle—in fact, an Imperial bird. The other celebrated songs of the First Revolution were the 'Chant du Depart," the "Canira," and the "Carmagnole," none of which would be suitable for the Republic of to-day. The First Empire produced nothing more effective than "Veillons sur la Salut de l' Empire." The Restoration endowed France with "Vive Henry IV." Under Louis Philippe loyal subjects sang "La-Parisienne" and "Les Trois Couleurs." The Republic of 1848 produced the "Chant des Girondins," and the Second Empire "Partant pour la Syrie," which was writ-ten under the First Empire by the Queen Hortense, the mother of Napoleon III. The Third Republic goes back to the song of Rouget de l'Isle, the man who narrowly escaped the guillotine and then turned Royalist.

Perfumes. Liquid perfumes, says the Boston Transcript, are not usually the products of distillation, although lavender and one or two other flowers yield more of their perfume by that process than any other. The method called by the French enfleurage, a word for which absorption is the inadequate synonym, is used with most blossoms, and gives those pomades which are so highly esteened and so valuable. are so highly esteemed and so valuable. The great French perfumers at Grasse Cannes, and Nice employ hundreds of women, whose business is to tend the great frames thinly spread with layers of clarified grease strewn with flower petals, renewed every day. When the season is over, the grease is treated with alcohol, which takes up the essential oil containing the perfume, but leaves the fixed oil of the grease free. Heliotrope, cassia, or acacia blossoms, jasmine, and many other, flowers are all treated in this way. As yet this method of extracting the odor of flowers is not used to any extent in America, but it probably will be as soon as Florida takes the place which it should occupy as a vast flower farm. There is no reason why this coral peninsula with its perfect climate should not rival southern France, and produce neroli by the hundred-weight, to say nothing of the ct to of rose and magnelia pomade.

Ramie. Soon after the close of the late civil war, says the New York Herald, the attention of certain planters in the South, especially Louisiana, was directed to a new fiber known as ramie, whichit was alleged would, in its production to the acre-be more profitable than cotton, and in its use as a textile supply the place of jute, hemp, flax, and other similar materials. Experiments were made, and still continue in various portions of the South, and the results generally are described, as favorable. Thus far, however, it appears that our inventors have not been successful in making machinery, wherebyethe various productions of the fiber as, for instance, in the construction of paper coarse cloth carpet and bagging! can be economically utilized. The concurrent, testimony is to the effect that ramie is a hardy, easily grown plant, and under certain conditions casily imanipulated; that its imost important uses are in the germ, and are only, avaiting the developments of experience, art and science to be made available art and science to be made available anions the larger industrial resources: of the United States; I leit be true; that from twenty-eight to thirty; millions of dollars are annually, expended, by us for foreign fibers, and that we have within our grasp an equivalent of these-materials, reurely the country that produced the cotton gin will not be long in finding a way to add value to a new product, and make for it a market. -

Va., have thereby replaced fortunes lost. Comparison of the best grade of peanuts now in the markets with samples of the best grades of ten or twelve years ago shows great improvement in the quality of the nuts. The samples of the old crops are of various sizes, imperfectly filled, and have rusty shells. The new crops are bright, smooth, and even in size, and the shells are well filled with meat. Scarcely any improvements have been made in the appliances for raising them, but they are now cleaned by improved machines of great capacity. The best quality of nuts come from Virginia, where also the greatest increase in the crops from year to year has been shown. Five years ago the peanut crop of Tennessee was not far from 175,000 bushels; that of was not far from 175,000 bushels; that of North Carolina, 60,000 bushels; that of Virginia, 225,000 bushels. The estimated crop for the present season is: Tennessee, 400,000 bushels; North Carolina, 90,000 bushels; Virginia, 1,000,000 bushels. The quality of the present season's crop is fully up to the average, and in consequence of the large supply prices are likely to be somewhat lower and poor grades will less rapidly find a market. From ninety cents to $1.25 per bushel of twenty-two pounds is the range of prices at present. Grades poorer than those selling at the lower figures are shelled and sent north in packages of 200 pounds for confectioners' uses. They are shelled by the negroes before roasting. It is estimated that 4,000 packages will be required in this city this season, or about four times as many as have been received. four times as many as have been received any other year. At the close of the last crop year the old crop was very nearly exhausted, so that the new nuts will have almost a clear field. One of the most no-ticeable features of this season's trade is the wide distribution of the crop, the or-cipal depot for the sale of peanuts in New York was at the corner of Chatham and Mulberry streets, says the New York Sun. This was known as the "old Chatham street peanut-stand," and was kept by N.

A. Sutton, from whose measures the bulk of the peanuts sold in New York went into the pockets of purchasers. Such a thing as a wholesale peanut house was then unknown. Since those days the trade has increased probably two thousand fold. Then and for many succeeding years a large proportion of the peanuts sold came from Africa; now the African nuts are sent to Marseilles and used for making "olive oil," which is sold in American markets for a fine imported quality of the genuine article. In those days, too, peanuts were grown in America only in small quantities, chiefly by the negroes of Virginia, North Carolina and

Tennessee, in the patches of land around their huts, and were sold to provide themselves with "spending money." Now the immense production of American peanuts together with their superior quality, has nearly cut off the importation of the African nut. Since the rebellion the planters of portions of the Southern States

above mentioned have turned their attention to peanut culture, and many of them especially in the district around Norfolk

New Anecdotes of Lamb.

The following new and characteristic anecdotes of Charles Lamb, says Macmillan's Magazine, are well worth preservation. They formed a part of the ample recollections of the late Mr. John Cham bers, of Lee, Kent: 1. Lamb, at the solicitation of a city acquaintance, was induced to go to a public dinner, but stipulated that the latter was to see him safely home. When the banquet was over, Lamb reminded his friend of their agreement. "But where do you live?" asked the latter. "That's your affair," said Lamb; "you undertook to see me home, and I hold you to the bargain." His friend, not liking to leave Lamb to find his way alone, had no choice but to take a hackey coach, drive to Islington, where he had a vague notion that Lamb resided, and trust to inquiry to discover his house. This he accom-plished, but only after some hours had been thus spent, during which Lamb dryly and persistently refused to give the slightest clew of information in aid of his

2. Lamb was one of the most punctual of men, although he never carried a watch. A friend, observing the absence of this usual adjunct of a business man's attire, presented him with a new gold watch which he accepted and carried for one day only. A colleague asked Lamb what had become of it. "Pawned," wes the reply. He had actually pawned the watch, find-

3. On one occasion Lamb arrived at the office at the usual time, but omitted to sign the attendance book. About mid day he suddenly paused in his work, and, slapping his forehead as though illuminated by returning recollection, exclaimed loudly, "Lamb! Lamb! I have it!" and rushing to the attendance-book interpolat-

4. On one occasion Lamb was observed to enter the office hastily, and in an excited manner, assumed no doubt for the occasion, and to leave by an opposite door. He appeared no more that day. He stated the next morning, in explanation, that as he was passing through Leadenhall market on his way to the office he accidentally trod on a butcher's heel. "I apologized," said Lamb, "to the butcher, but the latter retorted: 'Yes, but your excuses won't cure my broken heel, and — me, said he, seizing his knife, I'll have it out of you.'" Lamb fled from the butcher, and in dread of his pursuit dared not remain for the rest of the day at the India House. This story was ac-at the India House. This story was accepted as a humorous excuse for taking a holiday without leave.

5. An unpopular head of a department came to Lamb one day and inquired: "Pray, Mr. Lamb, what are you about?" "Forty, next birth-day," said Lamb, "I don't like your answer," said the chief. "Nor I your question," was Lamb's reply.

Proud Baby Princes.

A Rome letter to the Philadelphia Telegraph says the young Prince of Naples is a frank, manly boy of ten years of age. He is not a handsome child. He has small light eyes, the heavy features of the present Savoy house, and his bristly light hair rises up above his forehead, but his face is intelligent and bright, and it has a simple, childlike, naive expression; his sharp little eyes have the keen, inquiring look of his father's. He is very fond of court ceremonies and court display. When he was between two and three years of age he was sent one summer to England to consult a specialist about a weakness he had then in the feet and ankles. As be went through Paris his attendants noticed that he was discontented and even irritable. His governess asked him what ailed him. "Why does not the guard here salute me?" he replied, with fierce childish passion. Not bad that for a Royal youngster of four years old. It recalls a story once told by a friend—who was a Prussian Court Lady of Honor—of one of the sons of the Imperial Crown Prince. When he was a little tot under four years of age, they had great trouble to make him wear his gloves when he went out driving. At last they told him the guards had orders to march away before he came down to the carriage, so as to avoid giving him the Royal salute, which they could not do if he did not year gloves. This ended the trouble instantly. Every day when the hour of driving came, the boy ran to his nurse and begged her to help him pull on the gloves. Then he would rush to the pal-ace window, thrust out his two little gloved hands, shaking them cagerly, and crying in his baby voice, Don't go away! See! I have the gloves on!"

We claim that there is greater certainty and uniformity in the production of good bread biscuits etc. in the use of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, and that the articles made with it are, more, wholesome, and, digestible then if made by any other kind. Test it by the most reliable and tiuthful test—in the oven.

And when I tell you that the house, with its live oak frame, was built almost two hundred years ago by "wicked Sir Harry Hazeltine"—so the family record calls him-that there is one chamber with the ceiling, where Sir Harry hung himself, and another, in the unused part of the house, where somebody rocks a cradle and croons a weird lullaby on stormy nights, you will at once see that anybody troubled with weak nerves, or naturally timid, would be in perfect misery to live

No. What I'm going to here record for Frank's special benefit, concerns a bell —a quaint-looking affair of solid silver, with an chony handle—on which is carved a horribly evil face, that even I don't care very much to look at; as the Scotch say, it doesn't look "canny." You see, after we moved in, and had got fairly set to rights, the first thing I did was to send for Mrs. Kelly, and institute such a house-cleaning as I'll venture to say the place hasn't known for a century at least; and such quantities upon quantities of rubbish as were unearthedwhy, Harry says that an antiquarian would go wild over some of the things.

I remember there was a musket and an old calvary saber in one closet, with "Colonel George Hazeltine, from his wife, A. D. 1770," on the scabbard, and Harry, who is a perfect epitome of genealogy, told me a beautiful story about this ancestor of his; but I haven't time to tell it here, or to speck at length of the moth-caten regimentals, the brocade silk dresses, the toilet fixings, and I don't know what all, that we unearthed; and do you believe that the silly fellow wouldn't have a thing destroyed, but had them all packed away in an old chest in the attic. We take pleasure in announcing that we have made arrangements with the publisher of the Curcago Weektx News which enable us to obth that paper with the Record at the very low price of $2.00 per year, a tribe over the regular price of the Record alone. This is beyond question the first time that a metropolitan weekly has been brought within the reach of subscribors at so small an additional price.

For the comparatively small amount our readers can place themselves in command of the whole situation. All events of interest, local, national and foreign, will be presented completely and promptly, by one or the other of those publications. The single feature of full and trustworthy Ohicago market quotations will be worth, to many of our readers, more than the additional amount involved in the clubbing arrangement. To those who are not familiar with the character of the Chucago News, we would say that it is the best representative of independent journalism in the weet. The Weekly News is a large eight column folio, "cram full?" of tolograph and general news, short and juilty editorials on the topics of the day, written in a familiar yet incisive style, and in all its departments ovidently aims to give facts in few words, without the verbiago and fine writing which render so many of the metropolitan journals "a wearlness to the flash." Facts, not words, appears to be its motto.

We trust that all our readers will avail themselves of this unusual opportunity of securing a Chicago weekly paper at so triffing a cost.

Sample copies the Concaco Weekly News can be seen at this office. Geo. Wyman & Co., 93 and 95 Michigan Street, business. Resolved, That we invite in this election the co-operation of all men of whatever former party affiliation who are in favor of financial honesty and a safe and sound basis for the business of the country.

The appointment of Hon. E. W. Keightly of this district to the third auditorship of the treasury is said to be a certainty. He is fully competent for the position.

The Mosher Prohibitory Liquor bill now before our Legislature is the grandest scheme for stock jobbery and corruption in office that has ever been projected in this State, and we trust that our Senator and Representatives will use their influence to kill the bill.

Prof. Denslow has a long lecture on the property side of communism. He advocates the principle that govern British politics: That property and suffrage should go together, and no man who does not pay taxes be allowed a vote on the expenditure of public funds. The Cass county Democratic Committee has joined the Greenback party, and issued a notice and invitation to those who have been taught to vote by instinct to follow them. They further declare that "this union will be permanent and will be carried into the contest of 1880." This is a delicious morsel for Republicans who have joined that faction when it had the semblance of honesty of purpose. It is amusing to see the fusion parties perform in the different parts of the State. Where either of them are strong enough to make them confident of an election they go on with their straight nominations and let the other support it or not as they see fit, and it " usually ends in two tickets. But where neither has much strength they join forces, but it will be of no avail. Mixing Democracy and Greenbackism does not seem to work as well in any place as in Lansing. The attempt was made in Detroit, Port Huron and Bay City but ended in putting two tickets in the field. In Detroit both conventions came near ending in a row and the police were called in to keep the mob quiet. The Ohio Democrats are following the example of their Michigan brethren, and are coquetting with the Greenbackers with a view to coalition, and have accordingly called their convention, when they expect some such love feast as was enacted at Lansing, and will work just about as it does in Mich-

The bill to reduce the test for kerosene to 120 degrees passed the House and in the Senate was amended so as to retain the chill test for parafine. The office of deputy inspector was abolished and the Governor empowered to appoint one or more inspectors for each Congressional district. The Allegan Democrat, a Greenback organ, says: "Victory for the Union ticket this spring will be a Greenback victory, and will be so heralded over the country. It will cheer our brethren all over the country. Let us be vigilant and faithful for the sake of our principles." Democratic papers are equally anxious to claim the spoils in case of a victory. There will be no great use of quarreling about it, for victory will not be that way. The Democratic candidate from the Ninth District of Iowa, defeated at the election last fall, now comes into Congress with a petition to have his opponent rejected, and himself placed in the Iowa seat. His excuse is there was some irregularity in the election. He doesn't seem to have much confidence in his success, but tries the experiment for luck, basing his success on the probabilities of the confederate Congress being in his favor. The Legislature has under consideration what is known as the Mosher bill to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors. It provides that no intoxicating liquors shall be sold but for medical, mechanical or manufacturing purposes, and then only by officers of the village, township or city, appointed by the local board for that purpose, and that he shall buy only of a State Commissioner. The bill has several objectionable points, and should be considerably amended before it is allowed

Prof. Edison recently made a successful test of his new electric light, giving fourteen lights of eighteen or twenty candle brilliancy from one machine of three horse power. He estimates the cost of this light at about fifteen cents per thousand feet less than the present price paid for gas. This will make a scattering among the gas companies.

The Legislature has under consideration a bill to prevent quackery and regulate the practice of medicine, which requires all practicing physicians to obtain a diploma from the State Board of Health, and prohibits the Board from granting a license or diploma to any physician who advertises, no matter what his qualifications. Whether the bill is intended for a left handed cuff at newspapers, or was gotten up by some second-class quack, it is evident that the author

The Increase of our Debt. There seems to be a chronic complaint among the Greenback papers to be continually harping about the increase of the national debt, for which they are not to be blamed if they would also give the complete statements showing the manner and cause of the apparent increase as shown by the monthly statements of the treasurer. One of these articles from the Michiigan Sun, of Detroit, has been sent by the Post and Tribune to Sccretary Sherman for an explanation, which he gives in the following letter published in the Post and Tribune:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12, '79. Editor of the Post and Tribune. Your note of the Sth instant enclosng an article from a newspaper in regard to the public debt, is at hand. You seem to be somewhat out of humor because there is a person in the State of Michigan so dull that he cannot understand the process of refunding the debt, and so ignorant of the condition of the debt as to believe there has been no reduction in its amount. It is true that the last debt statement shows an apparent increase of $312,128,200 of the bonded debt of the government over the amount shown on the statement of March, 1877, the month in which I assumed the duties of my present office. Of this apparent increase $95,500,000 are 4 and 41/2 per cent. bonds, the proceeds of which is now held in the Treasury in gold coin and, with the surplus revenue, constitute the fund set apart by law for the maintainance of specie payments. The remainder, $216,628,200, is 4 per cent. bonds sold since the first of January, this year, for the purpose of paying an equal amount of 6 per cent. called bonds, and it is so stated in the debt statement. By the law under which these bonds were sold notice must be given to the holders of the 6 per cent. bonds that they will be paid at the end of three months. In the meantime the money is lying in the national bank depositories subject to call, and its payment amply secured by an equa amount of bonds in the hands of the Treasurer of the United States. In April and May next these 6 per cent. bonds will be paid and thus we shall save for all time one-third of the interest on that amount of the public debt and have lost by operation only the interest on the 4 per cent. bonds for three months. In verification of this explanation I send you herewith debt statements for March, 1877, and February, 1879, from which please note as follows:

which is the precise amount entered on the last debt statement as "called bonds not matured for which 4 per cent. bonds have been issued," and explain-Again, the whole of the public debt, less cash in the Treasury, as shown by the debt statement of March, 1877, was $2,088,781,143.04; by statement of February, 1879, $1,026,267,541.66, a decrease

573,601,38, Since January of this year the Government has sold of 4 per cent. bonds, with which to retire 6 per cent., $260,-158,440, saving thereby in interest each year for all time 2 per cent. of the amount, or $5,203,169. If the writer of the article inclosed by you cannot see from this that there has been a decrease of the entire debt, and that refunding is a beneficial operation, no effort on your part can instruct him. For his information, however, I will add that his statement of the bonded debt on June 30, 1877, taken from the finance report for 1877, page 44, is wrong in the following particulars: The table did not purport to be for that date, and it was, in fact, made for November, 1877; and, being made to show only the saving of interest by refunding 6 per cent. into 4 per cent. bonds, the amount of 4 per cent. bonds already issued was not taken into account, so the total bonded debt was not shown; and he also makes a blunder of $10,000,000 in stating the debt for March 1, 1879. These three errors, made in four lines of his statement, can be best explained by himself. I also notice that he says that our ne inquires what it can mean.

then Secretary of the Treasury, reported the bonded debt of the United States to be $2,382,783,294.96, and the was $150,977,697.87. On March 31, 1877, the amount of bonded debt was $1,702,143,700, and it has been increased since only by the bonds sold for resumption and the temporary increase caused by the refunding operations, which will disappear as soon as those EDITOR RECORD: This has been the Black Friday for our city. An excited crowd of people have been upon the streets surrounding the court house where was erected the gallows upon which two fine looking young men paid the extreme penalty of the law. They were executed at half past two P. M. The two men met their fate as heroically as could be expected. One of them made a long speech on the gallows, saying that he had been a leader of a desperate band of, out-laws and murderers in California. Said that he came to Oregon as a new field to make a raise and that he intended to murder when he entered the pawn shop last August-of which I told you, and intended to kill the officer when he shot the young man. He also spoke of his poor old mother. He implored all to shun crime. He sang two songs, one of them entitled "James Rogers," in which the chorus runs: "Come all ye tender hearted christians." He sang in a clear voice and considerable dramatic effect. They both stepped upon the fatal drop, bid good-bye to all, shook hands, and then the fatal noose was placed around their necks, their hands and arms bound tight, the black cloth drawn over their faces and they stood motionless during a short prayer by Rev. Chatlin, and when the last amen was said the drop was sprung. Johnson's neck was broken and his pulse ceased to beat in seven minutes. Brown died from strangulation and his pulse beat for twenty minutes. The bodies were cut down and delivered to their friends, who buried them Saturday at 2 o'clock, P. M. We are having beautiful weatherthe grass is green, the flowers are in bloom and the trees are putting forth their foliage. The President's veto of the Chinese Restriction bill caused great indignation here, not only among "hoodlum" element but among our very best men. Large meetings were held in this State and California, presided over by the Governors, expressing the public disapproval of his act, and his effigy was burned in this city and in many other places on this coast. I did not attend any of the meetings as I do not believe

I recognize the fact that the overshadowing question now is whether the fruits of the triumph of the North in the rebellion are to be lost and the Government turned over to the control of those who so recently tried to destroy it, or whether all necessary reforms will not be brought about by the great party that saved the Republic and iberated and enfranchised the slave. With many other Republicans, here and elsewhere, I believe the Republican party made mistakes in financial legislation, and in this position on the financial question I stand with William D. Kelley, the oldest Republican member of the House of Representatives, but I do not hesitate to say at this juncture I prefer to trust to the lovalty and intelligence of the masses in the Republican party, rather than

FROM THREE OAKS. EDITOR RECORD:-I see in your last issue a small article concerning the Methodist Society of Three Oaks, in regardito not taking care of Father Mc-Gee, and signed "Itemizer." Who this "Itemizer" is, I know not, but I will guarantee he is a man that has a low forehead and a small intellect, so we cannot expect any more from a man of that description. In regard to the case of Father McGee, if he has suffered for help it has not been made known. The brethren have, as a general thing, been good to attend and watch over him. It is true he has been sick for a long time-ever since last Christmas-which makes it very hard both for his friends and for him, and I suppose for Mr. Itemizer also. One would think so, at least. It is true that Father McGee gave very liberally for the M. E. Church, in this place, for which he receives many thanks. As for Mr. Itemizer, I do not know that he gave one cent toward the church, and he is considerable of a property holder here, too, perhaps.

Domestic. Custard for Cake.—The juice of four lemons, two eggs, one teacupful of water, two tablespoonfuls of corn starch, mix all together and set the dish in boiling water till it thickens, spread the same as jelly

Lemon Custard Cake.—Four cupsful of flour, six eggs, itwo cupsful of sugar, one teaspoonful of cream-of-fartar, one teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of butter, and one cupful of sweet milk, bake the same as jelly-cake.

Coffee and Egg for Sick Persons.—I have found that a sick person wanting nourishment and having lost appetite, could often be sustained by the following, when nothing else would be taken: Make a strong cup of coffee, adding boiling with person only sweetening rather milk as usual, only sweetening rather more; take an egg and beat the white and yolk together thoroughly; boil the coffee milk and sugar, and pour it over the beat-en egg in the cup you are going to serve

Tea Biscuit.—One quart of sifted flour, one heaping teaspoonful lard, one level teaspoonful salt; milk and water mixed, half each, about two-thirds of a pint; two teaspoonsful yeast powder; Mixthe flour and salt and powder together, then rub the lard well in until no lard can be seen; add the mixed milk and water, stirring all together with a spoon; knead until smooth, roll out about half an inch thick, cut with a cutter and bake in a quick oven.

It is stated that, newly ground coffee, sprinkled over game, will keep it sweet and fresh for several days. Clean the game—that is, wipe off the blood, cover the wounded parts with absorbent paper, wrap up the heads, and then sprinkle ground coffee over and among the feathers or fur as the case may be, pack up carefully, and the game will be preserved fresh and sweet in the most uniavorable weather. Game sent loose, cannot, of weather. Game sent loose, cannot, of course, be thus treated, but, it packed in boxes or hampers, a feaspointful of coffee is enough for a brace of birds, and in this proportion for larger game. A lump of charcoal inserted in the cavity of a drawn bird is very desirable.

Bleeding at the Nose.—There are two little arteries which supply the whole face with blood, one on each side; these branch off from the main arteries on each side of the windpipe, and running upward toward the eyes, pass over the out-side of the jaw-bone, about two-thirds of the way back from the chin to the angle of the jaw, under the ear. Each of these arteries, of course, supplies just one-half of the face, the nose being the dividing line; the left nostril is supplied by blood from the left artery, and the right nostril by the right artery. Now suppose your nose bleeds by the right nostril, with the end of the fore-finger feel along the outer edge of the right jaw until you feel the beating of the artery directly under your finger, the same as the pulse in your wrist; then press the finger hard, upon it, thus getting the little fellow in a tight place between your finger and the jaw-bone; the result will be that not a drop of blood. goes into that side of your face while the pressure continues; hence the nose instantly stops bleeding for want of blood to flow; continue the pressure for five or ten minutes, and the ruptured vessels in the nose will by that time probably con-fract so that when you let the blood into them they will not leak. Bleeding from a cut or wound anywhere about the face may be stopped in the same way. Those in the back of the head, arms and legs are all arranged very conveniently for being controlled in like manner. ing controlled in like manner.

Burnt Clay as a Fertilizer.

A Georgia correspondent of the Rural

New Yorker writes: The stiff, yellow-clay sub-soil of our lands, full of iron-ore, is poisonous to plants and vegetation. But it should be remembered that for thousands of years this same sub-soil has been the grave and repository of countless millions of reptiles, worms and insects, and that into it have been washed down the inorganic remains of both birds and beasts. How, then, can these inorganic elements be utilized, so as in a cheap and effective way to permanently increase the fertility of the sail! By burning. In England I have frequently used burnt clay, and always with the most beneficial effects, particularly on wheat, clover and grass; and among what I might, perhaps, style suc-cessful and scientific farmers the practice is largely followed. The following is the method of performing the operation: In very dry weather let a furrow be furned over as deeply as possible by a three-horse plow. Let this same furrow be again plowed up by a following three horse plow. By these means great blocks of hard, stiff clay are thrown up, some of them nearly one hundred nounds in weight. Let these lumps be collected and built in circles of, say, ten feet in diameter and several feet high. Build up the inte-ior of each with brush, old roots, stumps, etc., so disposed as to ignite easily, and cover the whole with lumps of dry clay. After having set fire to the heap let the mass burn for three or four days, care being taken to, supply freshiclay, so: as to prevent the fire from burning too furious-ly. By these means the stones in the clay will be completely pulverized; the silica of the soil will, to a large extent, be rendered soluble, and the carbonic acid en-tirely expelled from the carbonates of lime and magnesia in the rocks.

wheat and oats are apt to lie down on rich lands, and why they refuse to fill with seed the heads of grain.

They also know that lime and magnesiaas carbonates do not enrich the soil; whereas when rid of the carbonic acid they are of great value both directly as plant food, and indirectly as supplying it, by decomposing and thus rendering soluble other unavailable constituents of the soil. This burnt clay is absorbent and filtrative, and has a tendency, to sink into the sub-soil and amalgamate with it, causing it to work more easily, and thus increasing the fertility of the soil. Heavy land can thus be cheaply and easily aerated and enriched, and a good part of the hitherto dormnant chemicals contained in the great repository of nature rendered fit for food for sustaining and stimulating vegetable life. From ten to twenty tons per acre of this burnt clay will permanently enrich the land, and farmers will find it much cheaper and more efficacious than the commercial fertilizers that now throng

All practical farmers are aware that the lack of soluble silica is the cause why

Health.

F Individual peculiarities should be studied, and kind consideration and allowance made for them, says Mrs., Jane B. Moore Bristor. I brought up my little ones to fear nothing, to go to sleep in the dark and alone, in their rooms, but my youngest child as he grew older developed differently, and attacks of what is popularly known as "nightmare" showed me the necessity in his case of allaying all-causes of fear, and letting him feet and know that some one was near when he slept to protect and care for him in these distressing alarms. Simple oatmeal suppers; taken some time before retiring, and avoidance of unpleasant subjects of conversation with plenty of out door exercise, were my remedies. Bronchial and catarrhal affections should be noticed, and the constitution early strengthened against. them. If a child has a rasping in his throat as if trying to bring up; phlem as an habitual thing, it shows a predisposition of this kind. Pure cod liver oil is an excellent remedy. Consumption is often warded off by its use and its fatal progress delayed. Orange-peel chewed after it re-moves the unpleasant taste better than anything Tknow of but children do not usually object much to the oil, if something they like is given them after it.

Replacing Extracted Teeth.

Nearly sixty years since, Delabarre, the noted French dentist and writer on dental topics, believed it possible to textract an unhealthy tooth, remove the unsound part, and put it back in the socket, and that it would grow into its old place. Experiment after experiment proved him to be right. Since then the matter has received very little attention, and, in truth seemed forgotten, despite its importance, until Magitot, another Paris physician, has lately taken it up. He has made a long and serious study of it, and divides the grafting of the dental organs into the extracting tveth and putting them back after a certain time, and drawing teeth from one person and placing them in the mouth of another. Toothache arises from abscess at the root, decay of the bone, inflammation of the surrounding membrane, disease of the gums, or other causes. Magitot has repeatedly done what Delabarre had done before. Out of sixty-two operations, he has succeeded completely in filty-seven—a proportion of about 92 per cent. While reintegration is going on some local reaction is caused, but not enough to affect to any degree the general system. Small boils or abcesses form on the gums, and when they have run their course leave the healing and restoring process complete within a week or a fortnight. If the attempt fail, inflammation ejects the tooth in a day or two. The age of the patient is said to have no effect on the result, and teeth of every kind may be drawn and replaced.

A New Steam Wagon. A new style of road vehicle, designed to be propelled by mechanical power, has made its appearance in London, England. The carriage closely resembles an ordinary dog-cart; the shafts are very short, and incline together, meeting two feet in front of the dashboard; between them there is a third wheel, working upon an upright shaft, which could be turned by a handle placed the same as that of a bicycle, this handle is worked by reins, in the hands of the driver. The motive power is obtained by the combustion of benzoline, a small jet of which is admitted into the burner. It is then set on fire, and is completely consumed by a current of air, which, until the machine is in action, is produced by turning the small handle already alluded to. The burner, about the size of an ordinary chimneypot hat, and quite as elegant, is lined by coils of a copper tube containing water; this tube is calculated to bear 2,000 pounds on the square inch, and in working only receives sixty pounds; so that practically it is not likely to burst, and, if such an accident did occur, the results would not be serious, as the whole tube only contains a pound of water.

The Bust of Swedenborg.

The bust of Emanuel Swedenborg, just finished by Preston Powers, and on exhibition in his studio, is attracting the at-tention and admiration of the many. visitors to that shrine of art, particularly of those interested in the new church, says a private letter from Florence. It is thought by all to bear an exact resemblance to the portrait from which it was taken, and which is as strongly character-istic as one would expect to find the face of so remarkable a man. As a specimen of Preston Power's workmanship, the bust is said, by those best able to judge, to show those delicate touches in its elaborate finish that ever characterized the works of his father, the late Hiram Powors. This peculiarity we may attribute not solely to transmitted talent, but in a great measure to the fact that the son was a pupil and constant companion of his father's during the last six years of his

He frequently worked upon the drapery of his father's busts, etc. under his instruction, thus assisting him in his labors. Even as a child his father's studio was in a degre his play-house, where, at the age of ten or twelve, he used to amuse him-self in modeling little animals, madonnas, etc. One memorable day, to the great delight of the child, Preston, his father sold one of his six-inch madonnas for five francs, a sum which, in the eyes of the little artist, was enormous riches.

Elihu Burritt.

Elihu Burritt's capacity for hard work is illustrated by this extract from a letter written five years ago to decline an invitation to lecture: "I feel that I am played out as a lecturer especially before American audiences. Then I expect to go to England next summer to see old friends once more, and to look after my books, new and old. I have just sent to London my Sarskrit Grammar and Read ing Lessons, which will probably be put to press about the first of July, and I must be on hand to correct proofs, etc. Then I am deeply in my phillological work. I have finished the Sanskrit, Hindostance, and Persian series, and am about half way through with the Turkish, in the end expecting the four languages will be issued in one large volume, but in parts at first. Then I intend to take up the emitic family, or Arabic, Hebrew, Syrriac and Ethiopic and do the same by them. Thus, you see, I am beginning a work which should occupy a long life, and I am in the evening hours."

Taxation in Russia. In Russia taxes are collected in this was: A peasant, representative of a district, comprising several villages, is charged with the duty of collecting a certain amount of money, and it is the business of the people to distribute the taxes among themselves as they like best. For the prompt collection, in the first place, the representative is responsible, and in case of tardiness he is imprisoned for a week with common criminals, and furnished with food at the cost of 3 cents a day. *A district is obliged to pay for all its members, whether they are actual residents, or have gone elsewhere, or are in the army. In case a fax-collector is unable to do his duty, he reports to the authorities; then the police appears armed with rods, and if the rods do not secure the desired result, the property of delinquent is sold at auction.

French Lawyers.

A French lawyer is reported in a separation case to have pleaded very warmly for his client, who, he said, was literally dying of hunger, and who had two small children. He demanded the immediate aid of 2,000 francs, in the name of humanity and the name of justice, and, full of confidence, he threw himself on the equity of the Court. A few days later his client received the following letter: "Madame: I am happy to say we have succeeded in obtaining the provision of 2,000 francs. I have handed 1,000 francs to your attorney, who has given me a re-ccipt, and I am much obliged to you for the surplus in settlement of fe g ".

· A woman's wit rarely fails her when she needs to exercise it. Madame Thierret, a popular French actress, was once traveling to Baden in a first-class carriage although only provided with a second class ticket. At Kehl her ticket was de manded by a German employee of the company. A scene ensued, the actress pretending not to understand the man "If you gabble for two hours," said she, "it will be all the same." The German took her by the arm for the purpose of ejecting her from the carriage, receiving a box on the cars that sent him reeling to the other side of the platform. This brought up a commissary, who inquired why she had struck the man. "Because he was insolent. He said all sorts of impertinent things to me," replied the act-ress. The officer thought he had caught her nicely, and grimly demanded how she knew that, since she pretended not to understand German. "Nonsense!" answer ed ready Madame Thierret; "when a dog wants to bite you, you understand it very well, although you do not talk doggerel." And the commissary wisely gave in.

READ WHAT HE SAYS: DR. Turr;—Dear Sir; For ten years I have been a martyr to Dyspepsia, Constipation and Piles. Last Spring your Pills were recommended to me; I used them (but with little faith). I am nowa well man, have good appetite, digestion perfect, regular stools, piles gone; and I have gained forty pounds solid flesh. They are worth their weight in gold.

REV. R. L. SIMPSON, Louisville, Ky. A TORPID LIVER is the fruitful source of many diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dysen-tery, Billous Fever, Ague and Fever, Jaundice, Piles, Theumatism, Kidney Complaint, Colic, etc.

Tutt's Pills exert a powerful influence on the Liver, and will with certainty relieve that impor-tant organ from disease, and restore its normal functions. The rapidity with which persons take on flesh, while under the influence of these pills, of itself indicates their adaptability to nourish the body, hence their efficacy in curing nervous debility; dyspepsia, wasting of the muscles, sluggishness of the liver, chronic constipation, and imparting health and strength to the system.

CONSTIPATION. Only with regularity of the bowels can perfect health be enjoyed. When the constipation is of recent date, a single dose of TUTT'S PILLS will suffice, but if it has become habitual, one pill should be tak in every night, gradually lessening the frequency of the dose until a regular daily movement is obtained, which will soon follow. But the doubly plighted damsel's mother found a way out of the difficulty. She sent out her second daughter in her sister's place. "The two girls," said she, "are as like as two blades of grass, and it will be all one to him which he gets for a wife!"
