The Vacant Chair.

Nay, chide not my tears which are falling so My spirit must bend lest it break to the blast; For a shadow has fallen upon our hearth, And hushed the voices of music and mirth. Oh, then, chide me not in my deep despair-By our hearthstone stands a "vacant chair!"

The Spring is here with its birds and flowers, But sad to me are its soft sunny hours; Ye may not know the grief we have felt, Unless by a brother's grave ye have knelt-Unless ye have mourned for the young and fair, Who have left by your hearthstone a "vacant

My father is treading the down-hill of years, And soon he'll be leaving this dark vale of tears; Oh, gladly to hope we'd his spirit beguile, But we know when he smiles it's a sorrowfu For the grief of his soul to our hearts is laid

And her step grows heavier day by day; Oft' tear stains rest on her thin pale cheek, Which tell the anguish she cares not to speak Oh mournful the shade that her face doth wear As her mild eyes rest on that "vacant chair!" And often try sorrowing heart is pressed To a broth r's fond and faithful breast, While he gently strives to soothe my grief, And tells no that "Heaven can give relief!"

But I know his own woe is all he can bear

As he silen. ; looks on that "vacant chair!"

As sadly he looks on that "vacant chair!"

My mother's dark hair is silvering with gray,

When the cartain of twilight is down over the And the stars look down with their angel eyes, We sisters well gather -a loving band-And speak dame . he spirit land. But, alas! our gare is resting there, Through fast falling tears on that "vacant

Alas, alas, for the shadows which fall 'Like on peasant's cot and on prince's hall! Alas for the hearts which are yearning to gaze On the loved and the lost of earlier days! Heaven alone can help those their grief to bear, By whose hearthstone stands a "vacant chair!" -[By Winnie Willis.

ONE ARRIT.

BY GODWIN GERMAINE.

"Whow! It's colder than ever. 'Twill be a terrible night," I said, drawing instinctively nearer to the blazing fire. "Yes, it will be cold-a reg'lar nor'easter, I'm afraid," said the cheery voice of our host of the "Worcester arms."-"I'm sorry I have no horse and sleigh for ye, Master Godwin, but ye see that that thar 'straw-ride' party took every deuced one in the village that they could git thar "Well it can't be helped, Bill," I said, "so I guess I shall walk it."

Bill lifted his hands in surprise "What! ye don't mean ter say yer gein to walk way to Brookdale? Why agein' to walk 'way to Brookdale? Why young man, yer crazy! Why, just think on the snow—the wind—the cold—why, don't I tell yer we're goin' to have a bad "Can't help it Bill," I said, buttoning up my great-coat and pulling on my warm gloves. "I must get there at ten o'clock to-morrow morning! So good-"Good-night, Master 'Win, I hope you will reach your destination in safety." And holding up the lamp, he held the door open until I passed out of sight. I was going to Brookdale, to relieve our dear old homstead from the mortgage old Lawyer Simes had held over our heads like the sword of Damocles since father had been dead. "We boys" had after many weary years of toil and untold hardships, saved up the money. I had volunteered to go over to Brookdale and pay oil the mortgage. We had been putting off the old lawyer for the past six months, until at last he registered a solemn vow that if the money was not paid him by ten o'clock on Friday morning, at his office, he would foreclose. He went so far as to say that even if we had

He had some object in this; and my suspicions turned out to be true, as you will Mother's last words were: "Make Bill give you his best horse and sleigh, Godwin, and God speed you!" Bill, as is known, had loaned both his horses for the "straw-ride," and it was, of course, impossible to get one elsewhere. Here was a predicament, but one which was quickly put to flight by my determination to walk to Brookdale. Every minute the wind was rising higher and higher, the snow falling faster and faster, and the cold increasing in intensity. It was indeed a terrible night-but with a buoyant heart, filled with the thoughts of the morrow's fruits, what cared I for the blustering, fierce wind, the hurrying snow-flakes, or Jack Frost?

But soon his influence was beginning to tell on me; my whole body was chilled to the marrow. But again I thought of the next day, and that, with the determination to reach Brookdale made me push

When I had gone what I thought to be about five miles the wind abated; the snow fell straight to the earth, showing me that not a breath of air was stirring; the moon which, while the wind was sporting had been secured behind a cluster of storm-clouds, now appeared and shed her soft, silvery beams upon the spotted snow. As much as I was suffering from the cold, I could not help admiring the splendor of the scene. The tall, dignified hemlocks looked so strange in that place. The snow which hung so tenaciously to their branches in spite of the wind which had tried so hard to shake it off, contrasted so oddly with the dark green leaves of the hemlocks. Afar off could be seen the hoary head of C-, the tallest mountain in the county. The forest was as still as the grave, except now and then a decayed branch, overburdened with its load of chaste snow, fell to terra firma with a crash.

But I could no longer think of the glories of nature, for the cold was terrible.

My limbs were tingling with a horrible pleasant sensatson; a drowsiness came over me, and I seemed to be in dream-land. I shook off that terrible lethargy with an awful shudder, for I knew-oh, so well! that if I once fell fully into its clutches I should never awake. On I plodded, breathing an inward prayer that I might reach some friendly habitation where I could rest and warm myself. I knew I could easily finish the

FOR TRAPE.—160 acres. 160 acres. Did my cyes mislead me? Was it But what was that? A long, wailing howl awoke the echoes of the slumber ing forest, followed by another and another, prolonged on the still biering night air, with a fearful intensity. Great Heaven! the truth came over me quick as a vivid flash of lightning—it was a pack of gray wolves! To this day I know not where they came from, as they had, years before, left for more uninhabited places; but they were there! I could fell by their distant cries that they were yet far off, but at each moment their howling benot as each moment that are the came more distinct.

Not a second was to be lost, and throwing off my great-coat, with feverish hatter.

I bounded forward like a fugitive deer.

Despair nerved my soul and lent me coated fiends were coming faster than the swiftest horse. But I was nearing my goal, and the twinkling star had now grown to what I supposed, and what I could now plainly see, was a light from a cabin window.

Suddenly I thought of my pistol, which I had placed safely in my pocket before leaving home. As I did so, the wolves burst into view. Stopping short I hurriedly threw off my gloves and drew and cocked my sole weapon of delense. The wolves sent forth fresh howls of fierce glee at seeing me stop and came on faster than ever. But I ran on determined to make sure of my shot. When they were alarmingly near I stopped, taking careful aim at the foremost one, their leader, evidently, and pulled the trigger. Over he rolled; though not killed, he was so severely wounded as to be unable to defend himself, for which he had just cause, too, for, to my joy, his followers immediately fell upon him. Again I ran on, but I had gone but a little distance before the wolves were again pursuing me, for they had devoured the wounded one, even to his gray coat, leaving only his white bones to glisten in the mounlight. The wolves were within fifteen feet of me, and I halloed at the top of my voice for help. My cry was answered just as an enormous wolf snapped at my heels, for I remember hearing a door open, the report of two muskets, some one taking me roughly by the shoulder and dragging me into the cottage, some hurried words like, "Close the door, quick!" and that is all!

All my readers are, no doubt, wearied with an old man's narrative, but when I tell them it occurred to me in my younger days, it may awaken an interest in this "o'er true tale."

As the first gray streaks of dawn were beginning to light up the scene, I set out again for Brookdale. If you could have seen old Simes' visage as I quietly walked into his office and laid down the money, it would have paid you the perusal of this

"Will you please give me a receipt for this, Mr. Simes, and cry 'quits' forever? My suspicion was correct. He told me that he had been offered three times the amount of the mortgage for our farm.—
No wonder he was vexed. But, of course, he finally signed the receipt, and I procured a horse and sleigh and rode home with a feeling which must have animated the breast of William Tell when Switzerland was liberated-a spirit of freedom. I am now nigh onto four-score years, but I shall never forget my adventure with those gray wolves. My head has turned the color of the snow I ran upon that memorable night; my quivering form seeks support on that of my noble boy; and I know that the taper of life is flickering, and my career on earth nearly at an end; but to my dying day I shall ever recollect that one night. Hearts Overworked. No organ in the body is so liable to be overworked as the heart. When every other part of the body sleeps, it keeps on its perpetual motion. Every increased effort or action demands from the heart more force. Aman runs to catch a train, and his heart beats audibly. He drinks wine, and the blood rushes through its reservoir faster than ever was intended by nature. His pulse rises after each course at dinner. A telegram arrives, and his out any one except her intimate friends heart knocks at his side. And, when any one of these "excitements" is over, he is having the slightest idea that the slim and beardless youth was a woman in disone of these "excitements" is over, he is conscious of a corresponding depression—a sinking or emptiness as it is called. The healthy action of all the members of guise. Besides, she did not go to theatres alone, but accompanied and protected by her friends. It will thus be seen our frame depends upon the supply of blood received from the central fountain. When the heart's action is arrested, the stomach, which requires from it a large supply of blood, becomes enfeebled. The brain, also waiting for the blood, is inactive. The heart is a very willing member, but if it be made to fetch and carry incessantly-if it be "put upon," as the unselfish member of a family often is—it undergoes a disorganization which is equivalent to its rupture. And this disorganization begins too often nowadays in the hearts of very young children. Parents know that if their sons are to succeed at any of these competitive exami-nations which have now become so exigent high pressure is employed. Hence young persons are stimulated to overwork by rewards and punishments. The sight of a clever boy who is being trained for competition is truly a sad one. The precocious coached-up, children are never, well. Their mental excitement keeps up a flush which, like the excitement caused by strong drink in older children, looks like health, but has no relation to it; in a word, the intemperance of education is overstraining and breaking their young hearts. If, in the school-room some hearts are broken from, mental strain, in the play-ground and in the gymnasium others succumb to physical strain. "It is no object of mine," says Dr. Richardson, "to underrate the advantages of physical exercise for the young; but I can scarcely overrate, the danger of those fierce competitive exercises which the world in general seems determined to applied. I general seems determined to applaud. I had the opportunity once in my life of living near a rower. He was a patient of mine, suffering from the very form of in-duced heart disease of which I am now speaking, and het gave met ample means of studying the conditions of many of those whom he trained both for running and rowing. I found occasion, certainly, to admire the physique to which his trained men were brought; the strength of muscle they attained; the force of their heart; but the admiration was qualified by the stern fact of the results." But, indeed, it is not by overwork so much as by worry and anxiety that our hearts are disprganized.) "Laborious mental exercise is healthy, unless it be made anxious by necessary difficulties." Regular mental labor is best carried on by introducing into it some variety.", Business and pro-fessional men wear out their hearts by ac-quiring, habits of express train hasts,

George Sand. M. Leopold Katscher who has long had in preparation an elaborate life of George Sand, contributes an article concerning her in two parts, the first part appearing in the International Review for July: "At the early age of twelve years her head was filled with "Corambe mon grand roman inedit, over which she pondered day and night. Corambe, as she remarks was the God of her idolatry, the form of her religious ideal. For years she continued developing this romance in her mind, living herself into it as it were, until at last she felt an irresistible desire to provide this religion of her own, with a form of worship also of her own. She erected an altar to Corambe; and for this purpose she sought out a lonely spot, which she appropriated and adorned, visiting it clandestinely, and there sacrificing to her god. She worshipped, as she herself says, 'the great spirit of civil and religious liberty. length her frequent absence began to be observed, and one day she was followed to her grotto where her secret was discovered. These innocent proceedings met with no objection; but Aurore, considering her temple as desecrated, destroyed "In 1831, then, pursuant to this arrangement, Aurore Dudevant-Dupin proceeded to Paris, accompanied by her lit-tle daughter. The wish of the young wife to be to a certain extent independent was now fulfilled. Along with Jules Sandeau she hired three small rooms on the Quai St. Michel, at a yearly rental of 300 francs. It need not excite our surprise that in her autobiography she scarcely ever mentions Sandeau's name. It was inconvenient certainly, and disagreeable to climb to the fifth floor; but then the rent was moderate. Her victuals she got from a restaurant near by, and in order to save the expense of a servant she performed all the house duties herself, even to washing her own and her child's linen. In order to save the cost of fuel in winter, she left her daughter to the care of a friendly neighbor when she went out, for, as she had no books, she went to the Bibliotheque Nationale, where she could have both books and warmth for nothing. In order to become acquainted with the subjects, ideas, and etiquette of the time, she desired to divest herself of every provincial attribute; and to do this something more than reading was required. She had an intense love for the theatre, but with her means such costly entertainments were not to be thought of, and it was a puzzle to her how her friends whose means were also small were able to participate in every object in which young people of refinement and education usually take an interest. At last, she thought she saw her way out of the dilemma. Dressed as a woman, she would not have been admitted to the pit of the theatres; but it occurred to her that in her childhood had frequently gone about dressed as a boy. Her mind was at once made up, and she proceeded forthwith to carry her plan into execution: she ordered a gray cloth suit, of stout and durable materials and when to this was added a woolen cravat, boots, and a gray hat, she looked for all the world, like a young student in his first term. In this way she was able to go about anywhere, and in all sorts of weather. She could go into the pit in theatres, into museums, libraries and even hotels, returning home at any hour, with-that it was not a passion for scandal, or a desire to appear singular, which first of all induced our authoress to wear man's apparel, but that she was urged to it from motives of economy and prudence. "Stimulated by the success of her first work, before returning a second time to Nohant, she conferred with Sandeau respecting a new romance, and it was arranged that half should be written by one, and half by the other, the whole to be completed by the time she returned to Paris. But she knew that her colleague was a sluggard who was fonder of sleeping than of working; and, trusting to herself alone, she wrote the whole of 'Indiana' during her three months residence at the Castle. She had removed from the Quai St. Michel to the Quai Malaquais, and on her return there she found that her friend had not written a word. Then tossing him her manuscript, she said, 'Read that.' And he read and read, and admired, and was spell-bound. He declared the new work to be such a masterpiece that he could not comply with her wish to revise it. The publisher of 'Rose et Blanche,' as well as Madame Dudevant, would have retained the nom de plume of 'J. Sand,' but Sandeau, who had no hand in the work would not hear of it. Then Delatouch was appealed to, and he advised her to select for a Christian name that of the patron saint of the day, which happened to be George. Such is the origin of George Sand,—a title which our authoress never once laid aside. * * * "The first work she wrote in this frame of mind, 'Lelia' (1833), bore such evident traces of these influences that she herself styles it the product of a disordered brain. 'Lelia' is an inscrutible poem; it is a'so a dangerous romance, which none but strong-minded people ought to read. It is the most terrific outcry of scepticism that ever issued from human breast. It overpowers the mind, and in spite of all its wild frenzy, at which the reader is often staggered, there is a sincerity about it which goes straight to the heart. The authoress herself confesses it is destitute of common sense, and, indeed, judged by this standard, it is one of the most unconnected, foolish, morbid and useless books imaginable, nevertheless, as the offspring of spontaneous inspiration, it has occupied the attention of the artistic world in a remarkable degree. Regarded as from an historical point of view, it is a daring and superb embodiment of the fideas prevalent in France at that time, a picture of society in a state of dissolution, in which family ties are rent asunder, women turned into prostitutes, and God is either disowned, or enjoys the privilege of blessing the most vicious and teeble fools. Coarseness of ideas and unrestrained freedom of speech go hand inhand."

Lady Hamilton's Portraits.

Among the 650 portraits which Mme. Lebrun painted, one of the best known, says the New York Tribune, is of Lady. Hamilton as a Bacchante, reposing on the sea-shore and holding in her hand a cup. It was made in Naples, at which Court Sir William was then the English Ambassador, and whither Mme. Lebrun had gone after her flight from Paris after the outbreak of the French Revolution in 1879. She painted it for Sir William himself, "but I must mention," she says in her "Souvenirs," "that he frequently sold his pictures when he found that he could make money on them." It seems that he bargained a long time for the por-trait, and finally got her to do it for 2,400 francs, and afterward sold it in Londonfor 8,000 francs.

At another time she painted a portrait of Lady Hamilton for a French noblesman, and as Sir William liked it she made a copy of the head as a present to him this he "sold without Hesitation." Madame Lebrun remarks that Lady Hamilton was not at all witty; she was very sarcastic and ill-natured, and these two daults were the moving springs of her conversation. "She was very crafty and succeeded in getting married by exercising all her cunning; she had no style; and dressed exceedingly bad as a rule." Lord. Nelson's correspondence with her is described as "most tender." One morning, on calling, Madam Lebrun found her "radiant with joy and wearing a rose in her hair," and asked why slie had placed it there. Lady Hamilton replied: "It is because I have just received at letter from Lord Nelson." In 1802, shortly after Sir William died, Madame, Lebrum visited her in London, and says she "found this Andronache enormous; for she had become horribly fat." - to corelianting and area mainte

The Chinese physicians imagine a multitude of odd connections between the viscers of the human body and the elements, the seasons of the year, the star, colors, etc. The heart, they say, is analogous to fire, to the planet Mars, to summer, to Mint, and be proclaimed on the first day of January by the Secretary of the Treasury," the following list has been published: spring, and to southern climes. It comes from the liver, begets the spicen and the stomach, is antipathic with the kidney, and receives no injurious influence from its contact with the lungs. During the springtime the pulse is like a tense cord; in summer it is more developed and becomes exuberant; in aux tumn it appears as if floating; in winter they think that the spirits and the blood, both vehicles of heat and humidity, run through all parts of the body in twenty-four hours. This daily circulation they say commences in the lungs at 3 o'clock in the morning, and ceases next day at the same place and at the same instant.

Chinese Physicians.

According to the National Medical Review, when the Chinese physicians examines the pulse, he places the arm of his patient on a cushion; then he applies the index, the middle and ring fingers on the anterior face of the wrist in such a way that the index finger may be nearest the arm, and the ring finger nearest to the hand. The physician then elevates and depresses each finger, alternately, with more or less force, like one playing on an organ. They examine, also, dur-

The Buddhist Priesthood.

The ranks of the Buddhist priesthood in China are generally recruited by children, purchased from their parents or from kidnappers, says the Cornhill Magazine. It is only in times of great distress that the poorer Chinese will sell even their daughters, still less the valued son on whom may possibly devolve the paramount duty of conducting the ancestral worship; kidnapping, however, is by no means an uncommon crime, albeit the punishment on detection is a speedy and ignominious death. Occasionally parents dedicate a child to Buddha, perhaps in fulfillment of a vow, and the victim is there and then formally made over to the church by deeds signed, sealed, and de-livered. From this step there is no with-drawal. The child's head is completely shaved; he is made to live on vegetable diet and to forego the use of wines. He is taught to chant the Buddhist liturgies, without understanding a word of them, and, after a required novitiate, proves his constancy to the faith by standing unmoved while several pastiles burn down into his scalp, leaving the ineradicable scars which testify to the fact that he has put away forever the things of this world, and has been regularly ordained as a priest. He has now "left his home" in good earnest, and all that remains to him in this world is a life of celibacy and dull routine. Criminals fleeing from justice not unfrequently seek refuge in a relitheir heads and the subsequent discomforts of cloister existence rather than fall into the meshes of Chinese law. Sometimes, too, unsuccessful mandarins throw themselves into a monastery and take the vows, driven to such a step by dread of the Imperial frown. It is said that the toolish officer who, during the war of 1841-42 laid at the foot of the throne his discovery of the secret of foreign steamers, and forthwith produced a vessel with two huge paddle-wheels to be turned by coolies inside, is even now languishing in one of the numerous monasteries on the celebrated Lofou Hill, in the Province of Kuang-tung, whither he retired after the failure of his scheme, covered with ignominy and shame.

A statement on good authority, has re-cently been made to the effect that during the last two years the consumption of opium by the working classes has considerably increased, and an explanation has been advanced that this increased consumption has been induced by the re-striction of the sale of intoxicating liquors by the early closing of public houses under the act, says the London Lancet. That the sale of narcotic drugs has of late greatly increased we fear there is but little reason to doubt, but that the explanation offered is the correct one we reel bound to demur to. It is rather to the hardness of the times than to any restraint in the sale of the drink that the increased consumption of opium by the working classes is to be attributed. Opium is cheaper than alcohol, and twopence expended on the former will give more present ease than sixpennyworth of the latter. Nor when first commenced does its use produce such unpleasant after-effects as an intoxicating dose of alcohol It is sad to learn that the sale of opium is extending among the lower classes, and we hope, if the evil be found to be gain-ing ground with the rapidity stated,—and from facts before us we cannot doubt the accuracy of the report in the main—that government will take action in the matter, and place severe restrictions on the sale of all narcotic drugs. The free em-ployment of narcotic drugs has wrought individual evil enough among, the upper and middle classes of society, but it would be a national disaster if their use continued to extend among our working classes.

By reason of this ascendency the peo-prominent by this extra session. First,

it was boldly announced by Blackburn party to repeal all statutes of the last

18 years offensive to Democratic taste, and to accomplish this work by withholding supplies and coercing the execappropriation bill was loaded with political riders, providing for the repeal of the national election laws,

with political legislation which strip-

A negro exodus is setting in in North Carolina. The first lot of negroes from there passed through Washington on Saturday. They represent that an oppression worse than slavery exists in North Carolina. Where the negroes make contracts for raising crops, these agreements are broken by the land owners after the crops become matured, and other means are used to deprive them of their share. Where they cannot be bribed into voting the democratic ticket they are threatened and driven from their homes. If they own any property a heavy assessment is made against it, from which they cannot get released unless they vote the Democratic ticket. The exodus will assume formidable proportions, and is alarming the Democrats south.

The Negro Exodus.

WASHINGTON, July 21. - Ex-Congressman Jere Haralson, of Alabama is here advising with prominent Republicans as to the exodus movement of blacks which, he says, will set in this fall, with an earnestness and wholesale sweep not now dreamed of. He says that not less than 15,000 will leave his district alone, this fall, to say nothing of other parts of the State The same rate from the other districts will take 100,000 from Alabama alone. Mr. Haralson describes himself as not much of an exodus man; that is, he believes it is a remedy which should be used with great caution. He says however, that his people are infatuated with the idea of going North this fall, and no earthly power can prevent them, no matter if they have to walk and beg bread, they are going, he says. It is as useless to argue with them about it as to debate with the east wind. The black man who speaks against it is called a traitor to his race, and loses influence. If they will go Haralson does not believe they should go to Kansas, being enough there already for a timberless country. He favors Southern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, where they can scatter out and get work from the whites. To-day he had a long talk with General Raum, Commissioner of Internal Revenue who lives in Southern Illinois. Upon this subject, General Raum thinks four or five hundred familes can get work and make a living in three or four counties of Southern Illinois and be welcomed by farmers, especially about potato-digging time. Haralson said that if the men could make from $8 to $12 monthly they could live on it, even though the females could not get work.

THE FOOLS WHO LET THE PESTI-LENCE LOOSE.—The yellow fever outbreak in Memphis has been traced to its cause. The wife of the shoemaker who was first attacked with the disease, and who died from it, lost severrelative scourge, and thereupon came into pos session of their effects, such as clothing, and even bedding from the deathbeds. These effects were packed away in boxes last winter, and when reopened this summer, the grim monster, armed with pestilence, leaped out and began his work.

Mining Journal. A keg of powder containing 25 pounds exploded in a pit in the Jackson iron mine at Negaunee on the 16th, severely burning a miner named Thos. Prout. From the waist up, the flesh of his hands, arms and breast was fairly cooked. He wore a very heavy beard, which, it is thought, served as a protector and saved his eyesight. When taken to his home his finger nails were fully burned to a crisp and displaced, while the skin and portions of the flesh slipped off freely.

A careless young man named Handy, of Williamston, was shooting at a mark with a revolver on the 14th, when he cocked the revolver and handed it to a boy to shoot, with the muzzle pointing toward his own breast. THE CHICAGO WERKLY NEW!

The Berrien Co. Record FOR $2.00 PER YEAR.

AND

We take pleasure in announcing that we have made arrangements with the publisher of the Chicago Week-ty News which enable us to club that paper with the Record at the very low price of $2.00 per year, a trifle ever the regular price of the Record alone. This is beyond question the first time that a metropolitan weekly has been brought within the reach of subscribers at so small an additional price.

For the comparatively small amount our readers can place themselves in command of the whole situation. All events of interest, local, national and foreign, will be presented completely and promptly, by one or the All events of interest, local, national and foreign, win be presented completely and promptly, by one or the other of these publications. The single feature of full and trustworthy Chicago market quotations will be worth, to many of our readers, more than the addi-tional amount involved in the clubbing arrangement. To those who are not familiar with the character of the Chicago Naws, we would say that it is the best representative of independent journalism in the west. the Chicago News, we would say that it is the best representative of independent journalism in the west. The Weekly News is a large eight column folio. "cram full" of telegraph and general news, short and pithy editorials on the topics of the day, written in a familiar yet incisive style, and in all its departments evidently aims to give facts in few words, without the verbiage and fine writing which render so many of the metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh." Facts, not words, appears to be its motto.

DR C. G. MOCKE, N. V.:

Dear Sir—Upon receipt of the Pilules, I gave two boxes to Mr. Frank Collins, who lives in a small bont on the Walash river. Him and his boy had the chills during eighteen mouths, and tried all medicine recommended, and all doctors, to no purpose. Mr. Collins had given up all hope, said nothing short of death would relieve him, but after Mr Collins and his boy had taken the two-boxes they felt much better; I then gave him one more box, which they took, and it on tirely cured them. It is now live months since they commenced using the Pilules, and the chills have not yet returned. Their condition was not changed as a they are still living on the beat.

I frequently have calls for the Pilules; send me three dozen boxes by mail.

Yours truly

THE new wheat crop is coming from the threshing machines at a rapid rate, and starts out at a good fair price. The prospects are that the price will be somewhat higher during the year, although a rise is quite uncertain as it depends upon the foreign demand, for American wheat, which is estimated will be greater than ever before.

A feeling prevails among the fruit growers of the Lake Shore that they will be bothered no more by the yellows. Nearly all of the old orehards have been destroyed, and many of the growers think that by the time they can raise new trees, they can go on with their business unmolested as before the trouble with this disease.

Another foot race took place on the Second Street course last evening. This time between Nix Osborn and James Revoir. It was a very close run. Nix coming out ahead, but for some reason or other Revoir "squealed" about giving up the stakes, and the race will probably be run again.

The seventh registration report con cerning the Vital Statistics of Michi gan for 1867 to 1873, has just been is sued from the office of the Secretary of the State. It shows for this county, during the last named year, 329 marriages, 821 births and 461 deaths.

THE wagon factory failed to join the chorus of whistles Monday morning. The work to be done by Day & Rough is completed so far as the use of machinery is concerned, and before it is started again by the new proprietors the machinery is to be overhauled and placed in good working order, which is now being done. Some repairs to the building will be made. 'The new firm will take possession August 1 when we expect the factory will be run steadily and to its full capacity.

FIRE ALARM.—Saturday afternoon the dread alarm of the fire bell startled this place. The fire department was promptly on hand and had the engine out, but luckily the fire, which was in Tourie & Waner's smoke-house, near the rear of their meat-market, was extinguished and no damage done The wind was directly in the south. and it was promptness alone that saved the two wooden buildings next to that point. We have been expecting a fire from this source for some time, and the RECORD has called attention to it one or more times, and we trust now with this warning the proprietors will not wait to be asked to remove the building, or at least to build no more fires in it.

A TABULATED statement of the number of acres and number of bushels of wheat raised in 981 townships, by counties, of the 1041 in this State in 1878, prepared by the secretary of the State, shows that Berrien county ranks twentieth in number of bushels raised, her portion being 633,805 bushels from 44,322 acres, or 14.3 bushels per acre The greatest number of bushels raised by any one county was by Ionia, which had 1,571,470 bushels from 64,788 acres, or 24.26 bushels per acre, and the least was by Mackinaw county, which had for the State was 29,450,126 bushels from 1.571,926 acres, or 18.74 bushels per acre. AT the last session of Congress a law was passed providing for the erection of head-stones at the unmarked graves of Union soldiers. A Lansing man recently wrote to Capt. A. F. Rockwell, Washington, who has charge of the national cemeteries, asking in regard to the scope of the law, and received the reply to the effect that "the law in regard to head-stones applies to all unmarked graves of soldiers and sailors in private village and city cemeteries, who served in the army or navy of the United States during the war for the Union, whether they die in the service or since their muster out or discharge. The head-stones will be furnished and erected at the graves without expense to the friends or relatives of the deceased." There are several graves in Oak Ridge cemetery that should be attended to in this way by the friends who may be acquainted with the proper statistics.

In our issue of June 7, we said, "Several county-papers copied the apportionment of primary school and library fund from the Journal, and forgot to give credit, or to put it plainer, stole it." The St. Joseph Herald plead guilty and said we was another. Now comes, at this late day, the Buchanan RECORD, with its "back up" about it. As the RECORD properly credited us with it, we are at a loss to known what it is mad about.—Berrien Springs Journal.

You singled out the RECORD as one who stole your item when we did nothing of the kind, and we dislike to be lied about in any such manner.

LAST week Mr. D. A. Cuthbert, of Galien, was arrested for assault and battery, the trial to come off July 16. A day or two previous to the time he came to this place and had a warrant issued for the arrest of the complaining witness, Mrs. Miles, intending to themselves and some friends who are | have it served at about the time of the trial in Galien, so she could not appear against him. When the roast is filled in this way pack tightly in a jar and cover with vinegar. Let stand two days, turning twice in that time. To cook it, put but ter and pork in a pot, lay in the meat, add a little water to prevent burning. Cover closely, and let it roast on the back of the stove for three hours; season again with pepper and salt and one pulverized laurel leaf, and dish when nicely browned.

Verbena Tea.-The well-known fragrant garden favorite, the sweet scented lemon verbens, seems to have other qualities to recommend it than those of the fragrance for which it is usually cultivated. In Spain it is regarded as a fine stomachic and cordial. It is used either in the form of a cold desoction sweetened, or five or six leaves are put into a teacup and hot tea poured over them. It is said that the flavor of the tea thus prepared is delicious, and that any one who has ever used it in this way will never again drink his tea without a sprig of lemon verbena. And it is further stated that if the herb is used as has been described, one need "never be made nervous or old maidish, never have cholera, diarrhea or loss of Boiled Frosting.—Whites of two eggs beaten to a froth, one and a half-pounds of white sugar; add enough water to the sugar to dissolve it. Set it on the stove in a tin dish, and boil until by dropping in cold water you can take it in the fingers, like soft candy. Have your eggs ready in a good-sized dish, and pour this boiling sugar on the eggs. Beat until cold. If it seems too thing add a little pulverized sugar; if too thick, a little cold water. If you wish to make chocolatecake, add six tablespoonsful of chocolate just before removing from the fire. If cocoanut, add the cocoanut while beating it. Vary the quantity in like proportions, for more or less, as you desire. The critical part is in the boiling, and requires practice to be perfectly successful. Place a rim of stiff paper about the cake to retain the frosting in place until it stiffens.

Housework.

Our girls must be taught and must practice housework not necessarily as a rule that they should go out to service, but that they should be able to manage in a sensible, prudent and pleasant way an establishment of their own. To manage, that is to say, through knowing just what should be done, and when and how. It is not the cost of a dinner which renders it attractive and nourishing because digestible; it is the proper cooking of it. Many a man spends enough to live well, who rarely has a table tastefully set, or a dinner varied and palatable.

There are a good many other things which go to making up good housekeeping. As every young woman expects some day to be mistress of a house, one would naturally expect on her part some special preparation for so important a privilege and duty. How many of al our girls are put in the way of doing, it need be, or of superintending, if that is only what is required, the various duties which their mothers, or at least their grandmothers, knew so well how to perform. And are not the fathers and the mothers more to blame than the children? Making all allowances for the transition state in our social and domestic relations, are we living up to our light in this mat-tar of educating our girls?

Provide Pure Water, and Plenty of it. The water supply on every farm should be as convenient, as ample, as accessible and as trustworthy as the supply of food. Not only water of good quality and suf-ficient be insured to the household, but to cattle, hog and poultry yard. When the water is supplied by wells the ground for a distance around should be kept scrupulously clean and so drained that no refuse by any possibility can find its way to the water. If each well is provided with a good pump much labor in raising the water will be saved.

In hilly and rolling countries where the supply of water is procured from adfacent springs, pipes laid so as to bring the water to the very spots where it is to be consumed will pay for the expense and time employed in time and labor gained, especially if the pipes are laid at seasons when farm work is not pressing. Pipes of bored sapplings or other wood will serve well when tile is not to be obtained without too great expense. Rain water from the roofs of buildings may be utilized by arranging for it to run through covered troughs or leaders to the cistern built either above or below ground. Water passing through filters placed at the entrance of the cistern or insided the cist tern will insure the purity of water so desirable. Causes of impurity of water, whether in well or cistern should be searched out and removed before disease

The difference between "sweet-mesh" whisky and "sour-mash;" sweet-mash is a popular kind of Bourbon that is quickly made, and in large quantities. The materials are corn, rye or barley, or both, in shape of malt and yeast. The ground corn-meal with the other ingredients is placed in large vats and thoroughly mixed with the assistance of hot water, and after cooling the "mash," as it is called is allowed to ferment for forty-eight hours. It is then "scalded" with hot water, and the escaping steam artificially condensed, is run off into the "still" and boiled again or "doubled," and having been re-condensed and cooled, is run into barrels and denominated sweet-mash Bourbon whisky. Sour-mash is made in the same way, except that the "mash" is scalded with the "slop" evolved from the first process, and is fermented seventy-two hours, without the assistance of yeast, and allowed to cool naturally, instead of running through pipes submerged in cold water, as is the custom in making "sweetmash." Hand-made sour or sweet-mash is a product similar to above, made in small tubs, and agitated during the pro-cess of fermentation by hand, and is longer and more tedious than the other way. but virtually the same.

Pagre is in India a population of about 250,000,000, ever increasing, while the production of food shows little development. The margin beyond the wants of the country is narrow; large populations, particularly in Bengal, subsisting, even in good years, on the coarsest grains, and in dry seasons, not famine years, on roots and wild fruits. This necessarily weaks ens the stamina of the people, and makes them unable to resist the effects of such fearful visitations as those through which they have lately passed. Jessrs. J. O. Bosworth & Co., Denver: Gentlemen,

—I take pleasure in recommending SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH to all who are afflicted with this disease. I was greatly afflicted with it for a long time, and cured it with two bottless of tho above CURE. About a year afterwards I was again taken with Catarrh quite severely, and immediately sent for another bottle, which fixed me all right, giving me rollef from the first dose, I am confident that this remedy will do all that is olaimed for it, and more too. Wishing you success in its introduction, I am very truly yours, could bear, put a double fold of flannel on the painful part; and move the iron to and iro on the flannel. I was cured as if by enchantment. My doctor told me that some time since a professor in one of our colleges, after suffering some days with neuralgia in the head, which he himself had tried to cure, sent for the former, who prescribed a hot flat, iron. The next time the doctor saw the professor the latter exclaimed, "I had no sooner applied the heated iron to my head than instantly all pain had vanished." My physician was summoned recently to the bedside of a summoned recently to the bedside of a woman who had neuralgia in both sides, and so violently that she alarmed the whole neighborhood by the screams which her intolerable anguish wrung from her. She was taken from her bed and borne near the fire. In such severe cases a heated iron is not energetic enough. He has an iron rod fastened to an ivory handle. He heats this rod to a white heat (which causes less pain than red heat) and applies it very slightly to the seat of the pain, first in longitudinal then in latitudinal lines. The application is so slight that no trace is left but red lines on the epidermis, which are soon effaced. In twenty minutes she walked back to bed, and the third day afterward quitted it entirely, freed from neuralgia. This instrument is not to be intrusted to awkward hands. Intelligent Animals. Various stories are told of the reason ing power of animals, all more or less interesting. Our narrator knows a terrier who will not only ring the bell for the servant when told to do so, but, what is more remarkable, declines to obey the order when the servant is in the room, and therefore does not need to be called-another is acquainted with a kitten when shut out of the house, jumps up and gives a single rap at the knocker in order to obtain admittance. If the rap is not successful the kitten knocks twice, and if a third trial is required, plays a regular volley upon the instrument. But even this reat is outdone by another cat of remarkable intelligence. He has never been taught the use of the knocker like the animal in the last case. The knowledge of the uses and properties of this useful appendage to the street door has grown in his foline mind spontaneously -and being a cat of extraordinary powers of observation he has found out an excellent way of getting the door opened. This cat undoubtedly has noticed that the summons most promptly attended to is that given by the postman, and accordigly when he wants the door opened, he climbs up to the knocker and performs a rapid solo like that in which the letter-carrier excels. It I were the possessor of a cat like this I should certainly indulge him with a latch-key. Still another instance given is that of a donkey which at the proper time in the evening always opened a field gate to allow the cows to pass through on their way to be milked, and carefully put down the latch when the precession had gone.

One of the secrets of the prosperity of the French people, and their ability to bear even the heaviest burdens without giving way under them, is the extraordinary thoroughness with which they cultivate their farms, vineyards and orchards, and the profits which they contrive to obtain from the smallest and seemingly insignificant products. We find a fresh exemplification of this in figures lately published in an Exchange, exhibiting the extent and profits of chicken-raising. There are in France about 40,000,000 hens, valued at $20,000,000. One-fifth are marketed yearly for the table, bringing about $4,000,000. The annual production of chickens is 80,000,000 worth in the city markets $24,000,000, and $2,000,000 are added for the extra value of capons and fatted hens. The production of eggs is estimated at 40,000,000, making the total value of eggs, chickens, capons and hens annually sold, about $80,000,000, 2.22 to every man, woman, and child in France. The power to make much out of a little, and to live frugally on small means, and with limited resources to fall back on, is the distinguished trait of the French people, and one well worth emulating.

How Many Eggs Can a Hen Lay. There has been so much loose talk about the total number of eggs a hen is capable of laying, and her yearly yield under fairly good treatment, that it is a satisfaction to come across something beyond guess-work or mere inference on the matter. The foundation of science is accurate observation, and when a scientist publishes a statement, it is presumable that it is based on this foundation. Its accuracy, too, is confirmed, if it is quoted with approval by other men with wide experience and knowledge on the subject involved in it. Now, Geyelin says, and Prof. Miles, in his excellent work on stock breeding, quotes him with approv al: "It has been ascertained that the ovarium of a fewl is composed of 600 ovales or eggs; therefore a hen, during the whole of her life, cannot possibly lay more eggs than 600, which, in a natural course, are distributed over nine years in the following proportion. 1st year after birth.....

Inasmuch as experience demonstrates that some breeds of hens are vastly more prolific than others, this statement, of course, can be applicable only to the average of poultry. - Rural New Yorker.

A wasp uses a kind of blue gray paper in making her house, and she makes the paper herself. No one taught her; she does not need to learn her trade, or even see another do it. She carries her tools with her all the time, and when she finds a piece of soft wood she can set to work if she pleases. She cuts off bits of wood about the tenth part of an inch long, and as fine as hair. These she lays into a little bundle, and when she has enough, she works it up with her feet into a soft ball. Then, with teeth and tongue and feet, she spreads this ball out into thin leaves, as thin as the finest paper. But this is not strong, so she puts on layer after layer until there are fifteen or sixteen sheets all in one. Now it is strong enough to use in building the wasp's house, and will last a

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.

BALSAMEA, or Balm of Gilead.

PRICES 50 CENTS AND $1 PER BOTTLE. Great saving to buy large size. "Pike's Toothache Drops" Cure in 1 Minute.

A Decided Cure. A Local Remedy. Harmless, Effectual, Simple.

The effect is truly magical, giving instant relief, and as a curative, is in advance of anything now before the public.

The disagreeable operation of forcing a quart of liquid through the nose, and the use of snuffs that only excite and give temporary relief, are already being discarded and condemned.

Oream Balm has the property of reducing local irritation. Sores in the masal passages are healed up in a few days. Headache, the effect of Clatarrh, is dissipated in an almost magical manner. Expectoration is made easy. Sense of taste or smell is more or less restored. Bad taste in the mouth and unpleasant breath, where it results from Catarrh, is overcome. The masal passages, which have been closed up for years, are made free.

Great and beneficial results are realized in a few applications of the Balm, but a thorough use of it, in every instance, will be attended with most happy results, and generally a decided cure.

Fifty cents will buy a bottle, and if satisfaction is not given, on application the proprietors will cheer fully refund, the money. Trial size, 10c. Ask your druggist for it.
