Poe's Raven.

An answer to Edgar Allan Poe's poem, "The Raven," by B. A. ULRICH.

FROM "THE RAVEN," "Prophet!" cried he, "thing of evil, prophet still if bird or devil, Whether tempter sent, or tempest tossed thee

A LIFE FOR LOVE.

"Hands by the halliards! Clew up royals and to'-gallant sails!" shouted Capt. Burit, of the ship Reindeer, as a heavy gale, which for many hours had been seen brewing to windward, came driving down toward the vessel. "Shall we have a bad storm, papa?"

inquired Winnie Melton—a beautiful young girl of 17-as she shrank closely to the side of her father, Mr. Melton, who stood with her on the quarter-deck of the ship. The two had taken passage aboard the Reindeer at the Sandwich Islands, where Mr. Melton, with Winnie, his only child, had been to visit an agent on business. He had taken his daughter with him because she had expressed a wish to go, and he had thought the trip would do her good. "Better for me had I never seen that girl," muttered the poor sailing-master, Warren Gove, as he stood on the quarterdeck, watching a French vessel to windward, which had been spoken a few hours before. "As soon as the storm passes I will tell the captain I wish to leave his vessel and go aboard yonder ship. Better I should tear myselfaway from the girl at once than remain to be tormented by the sight of one whom I can never hope to make Warren had lately received an honorable discharge from the Chilian sloop-of-war St. May, and had taken passage for home. He was a fine look ing young fellow, with clear, gray eyes, sun-browned face and a form inured to hardship; for he had led a wild, roving sort of life from his youth. This fondness for wandering and adventure had kept him poor, and that was why he thought it was better he had never seen Winnie Melton, whom he loved at first sight. The rich brunette complexion, the round, plump form, the lithe, willowy waist, the musical, unaffected voice were irresistible; but it was the dark eye under her arching brows, with their varied expression, now bright, merry, sparkling, now shy and soft as a gazelle's; at one moment uplifted, the next hidden by the long, silky lashes—that caught poor Warren's heart so promptly.

He had spoken to Mr. Melton, who liked him, and was pleased to hear him relate some of his adventures. Winnie, however, seemed to treat him rather coldly. She would some-times stand and listen to his conversation, with her father, but whenever he spoke to her she would answer briefly, and even seemed a little vexed. In fact, she avoided him so sedulously that he at last concluded she disliked him, and resolved to speak to her no more, the conviction forcing itself on his mind that she thought he was a mere fortune-hunter, and was attracted by her wealth. There was one person, however, with whom she often conversed; a rich young man, named Walker Fitzberg, who was a passenger aboard the Reindeer, and whom Mr. Melton had known before. "Ay, he will marry her," thought Warren, "and I shall continue to be a wanderer. I had intended to 'settle down,' but I could never rest were she to become the wife of another." With intense interest Warren watched the seamen, as they sprang to execute the order to take in sail. As Winnie put her timid question, he could not help giving her a reassuring glance, as her father replied: "Yes, Winnie, I think we shall have a severe storm, but the Reindeer is a good ship, and we will brave it!"

The vessel was soon under reefed mainsail, close reefed maintopsail, and el the storm pounced upon her. The masts bent and snapped, the rigging bellied in whistling, ropes and sheets writhed and slatted about, the ship was whirled down on her beam ends, and sent driving along through the mad waters in a perfect cloud of spray humining thunder. Standing on tip-toe, clutching her father's arm, Winnie was a pretty picture to look at. The lips were half parted and trembling with anxiety, the dark curls drawn loose about the shoulders, the red mantle fluttered on the wind, the form was drawn up so that the beautiful outline of the waist was distinctly revealed. The captain was about advising his passengers to go below, when a tremendous shock went through the ship.

"We are going down!" with white lips shricked the carpenter. He had just been in the hold, and reported that a whale, or some other sea monster, had come into contact with the ship's bottom, and had stove in a hole. "Clear away the boats!" shouted the captain, in a clear voice. Warren sprang to assist. The quarter-boat and the long-boat were soon cleared away and lowered. Ere they could be well provisioned, an ominous roaring sound was heard. It was the rushing of the water into the hold!-Fitzberg, losing all control of himself, sprang for the boat, in his haste almost knocking Winnie down. The two boats were soon manned, but ere Winnie could be helped into them by Warren Gove and her father, the ship lifted her bows and lurched heavily, preparatory to going down. This parted the boat-warps. Mr. Melton had just sprung into the long-boat, and with several sailors stood ready to main chains was endeavoring to pass to the boat. The lurch frightened the girl, who slipped back on deck from Warren's grasp, while he, thus losing his balance, fell into the boat: "My child! Oh, God! my child!" screamed Mr. Melton, holding out his hands, his gray hair streaming in the

Warren compressed his lips made one tremendous spring and clutched the parted boat-warp, dangling over the ship's side. By this he drew himself to the deck of the sinking vessel. She was plunging down. The young man clutched Winnie, and endeavored to strike out for the boats; but the mad whirlpool of waters drew him and the girl down into the cabin.-Down—lower—went the fated ship.— The cataract of waters poured round the young people and filled the cabin. Winnie gasped and trembled; her gurgling smote upon Warren's ears.— He endeavored to keep on the surface of the water, which owing to the in-clination of the ship had not reached the upper beams of the cabin. The rumbling thunder and gurgle of the incoming seas filled the whole ship. Warren gained 'the surface of the water, and another sheeted cataract poured in, and the cabin was full to the beams. The young man was strangling; but he did not lose his self-possession. He caught at a beam above him, and with a tremendous effort of strength drew himself and his burden to the upper cabin window, which had been burst open by the pressure of the water. For a moment the suction force held him motionless here, but the next, the ship now being full of water, the bubbles began to break, and with them and his precious burden were sent shooting to the surface of the sea. The crew of the longboat picked them up. Fortunately there was not yet much of a sea, notwithstanding the force of the gale, so that both boats could be easily worked. Mr. Melton clasped his half-senseless daughter in his arms. She was not at all injured, for Warren had contrived to shield her person with his own form, so as to receive the full force of the shock when dashed into the cabin. He was badly bruised and lay nearly lifeless in the bottom of the boat. In his excitement and anxiety to save Winnie, he had previously scarcely felt his injuries. "My noble fellow!" said the captain, taking a brandy-flask from his pocket. "I have saved her—let me die!" said

Warren Gove. "No, no!" eried Winnie, sobbing and moaning over the prostrate man.— "You must not die! You shall live, and may you be happy with her-the young lady in London who you intend to wed."

"I wed?" stammered Gove. "I know no young lady in London. Who told you that?" "Mr. Fitzberg." The latter colored and muttered something about "all being fair in love

"It was false!" said Gove. Then he leaned back and his eyes closed.
"He is dead!" cried Winnie now impulsively throwing her arms around his! neck. But he was not dead. In half an hour the castaways were all picked up by the French ship, which had borne down on them, and Gove was able to sit up in the berth where he had been conveyed, Winnie and her father were at his side, the girl holding his hand. She proved a tender nurse, and what might have been expected, followed. They were united a few months later. Gove obtained a remunerative employment in the merchant firm of his uncle, and is now a partner. Winnie and he are indeed happy -made so by that accident to the Reindeer—as otherwise Gove would have left the ship, never, perhaps, to meet the young girl whose coldness toward him, caused by Fitzberg's artful falsehood, would thus have remained unexplained.

How to Avoid Sudden Death. A correspondent of the Belfast News Letter says:-Permit me, pro bono publico, to state that very few of the sudden deaths which are said to arise from disease of the heart do really arise from that cause. To ascertain the real origin of sudden deaths, the experiment has been tried in Europe, and reported to a scientific congress held at Strasburg. Sixty-six cases of sudden death were made the subject of a thorough post mortem examination: in these cases only two were found who had died from disease of the heart. Nine out of the sixty-six died of apoplexy, while there were fiftyfive cases of congestion of the lungs that is, the lungs were so full of blood they could not work, there not being room enough for a sufficient quantity of air to enter to support life. The causes that produce congestion of the lungs are—cold feet, tight clothing, costive bowels, sitting still until chilled after being warmed with labor or a rapid walk, going too sud-denly from a close, heated room into the air, especially after speaking, and sudden, depressing news operating on the blood. These causes of sudden death being known, an avoidance of them may serve to lengthen many val-uable lives, which would otherwise be lost under the verdict of heart complaint. That disease is supposed to be inevitable and incurable; hence many may not take the pains they would to avoid sudden death, if they knew it lav in their power.

The Figaro has just published a further installment of Count de Setopmast staysail. With a howl and a melle's report of his travels in Central Africa. He was highly delighted with the Sultan Amrou, who resides in a fortified city, and who can place in the field 50,000 horsemen and 100,-000 foot soldiers. The great portion of this force, however, is only armed with bows and arrows, the rest having flint muskets. The Sultan, says the Count, exercises absolute power, and treats travelers with the greatest hospitality. Theft is almost unknown in this country, probably owing to the manner in which it is punished. The accused are brought before the Sultan in presence of the people, and the person found guilty of a first of fence has his hand cut off and is paraded through the empire; a second offence is followed by gouging out the left eye; and a third entails the pain of death without sepulture.

"Teddy, the Ferret."

As one of the most promising young burglars of San Francisco was walking out of court the other day, just after having secured an acquittal regarding his latest job by a prompt and business-like "divvy" with the powers that be, at the usual rates, a well-to-do but anxious-looking stranger touched his arm and beckoned him into a door-way.

"You are "Teddy, the Ferret,' aren't you," asked the gentleman, "the man who was tried to-day for safe-cracking?"
"Well, wot of it?" replied the housebreaker.

"Why, just this—you'll excuse my speaking so low, but the fact is, I've come all the way from San Joaquin to look up a party in your line of busi-

"Have, eh?" "Yes_I-well, I've a little propoition to make to you."

"Exactly," said the Ferret, calmly 'You're a bank cashier down in the foot-hills." "How do you know that?" stammered the gentleman, much amazed.
"And your cash and accounts are to be gone over by the directors on the 1st, and as you can't realize on your stocks, you want me to gag you some time next week, shoot your hat full of holes, find the combination in your breast pocketbook, and go through the safe in the regular way.' "Great heavens, man, how did you find all that out?" "Why, I guessed it. It's the regular thing, you know. Got three orders to attend to ahead of yours now. Lemme see. Can't do anything for you next week, but might give you Wednesday and Thursday of the week after. How'll that suit you?" The cashier said he thought he could make that do, and in less than five minutes they had struck a bargain and arranged the whole affair.

A Boy With a Heart.

New York Graphic. The other day a bit of a boy called at the side door of a good looking farm residence, and told such a sorrowful story that the lady of the house was not stingy in throwing provision into his basket. Happening to look into the front yard a few minutes after, she saw the strange boy mixed up with her three or four children, and she called out:

"Boy, what are you doing here?"
"Feed'n these half-starved children!" ne promptly replied.

But those are my children!" she indignantly exclaimed. •
"Makes no difference to me," he said, as he broke off another piece of cake. "When I find a young 'un crying for bread, and ready to swear that he hasn't tasted pie for over a year, I'm going to stop business and brace him Havn't vou got a clean waist which I could put on this dirty little She looked up and down to see if any canvassers for the poor heathen

Harper's Bazaar. It is not every one who asks himself this question, because, strangely enough, it is the belief of most persons that their lives will be exceptionally lengthly. However, life-assurance companies are aware of the credulous weaknesses of those whose lives they assure, and have therefore compiled numerous tables of expectancy of life for their own guidance, which are carefully referred to before a policy is granted. The following is one of these well-authenticated tables in use among London assurance companies, showing the average length of life at various ages. In the first column we have the present ages of persons of average health, and in the second column we are enabled to peep, as it were, behind the scenes of an assurance office, and gather from their table the number of years they will give us to live. This table has been the result of careful calculation, and seldom proves misleading. Of course, sudden and premature deaths, as well as lives unusually extended, occasionally occur, but this is life of an ordinary man or woman:

a table of the average expectancy of Our readers will easily gather from the above tabulated statement the number of years to which their lives reasonably be expected to extend.

The End of a Famous Mill. English papers announce the total destruction by fire of the famous Heathcoat Mill at Loughborough. The founder, Mr. Heathcoat, in 1809 invented an improved twist lace machine that virtually revolutionized the industry. The introduction of these labor-saving machines led to the Luddite outrages, and in 1816 a gang from Nottingham, armed with pistols, hatchets, and axes, attacked Heath-coat's mill, overpowered the armed watchmen, shot and injured one of them named Asher, destroyed fifty-five costly frames, cut and burnt the lace, and did damage to the amount of more than £10,000. Some accomplices in the outrage gave evidence against their companions, and at Leicester Assizes six men were sentenced to death on a charge of shooting with intent to murder. They were executed at the New Bridewell in Leicester, and it is a noteworthy fact that at those Assizes twenty-three men were condemned to the punishment of death. The six Luddites were hung up with a man whose crime was that of setting fire to a stack of oats. The action of the Luddites drove the manufacture from Loughborough to Tiverton, where Mr. Heathcoat amassed a princely fortune.

It is not often that a subject ventures to challenge his sovereign; but this was recently done by the Swed-ish poet Bjornson. King Oscar, who has a considerable reputation as an author, takes a strong interest in con-temporary Swedish literature, and is sometimes rather free in his criticisms of well-known writers. He lately passed an unfavorable judgment on a new work by Bjornson, expressing at the same time some contempt for the general character of his work. The indignant poet at once wrote to his Majesty demanding that he should either apologize for the insult or grant the only satisfaction that would be accepted by a man of honor. The King was prosaic enough to hand the letter to the police authorities of Stockholm, who forthwith instituted proceedings against the writer. Bjornson suddenly discovered that a change of air would suit him, and has now ample leisure to consider whether a King should have the right to express a literary opinion only at the risk of his life. -

Bir Boyle Roche.

Chamber's Journal. The most notorious bull-perpetra-tor was Sir Boyle Roche, who was elected member for Tralee in 1775. He had a regular blundering reputation. He was known on one occasion, after a withering exposure or patriotic denunciation of government, to say, with solemn gravity: "Mr. Speaker, it is the duty of every true lover of the country to give his last guinea to save the remainder of his fortunes!" Or, if the subject of debate was some national calamity, he would deliver him-self thus "Sir, single misfortunes never come alone, and the greatest of all national calamities is generally followed by one much greater."

Sir Boyle Roche belonged to the ancient family of De La Russe, of Lermoy; he was created a baronet in 1782 and was married to the eldest daughter of Sir James Caldwell, but had no heir. He used to account for his lack of progeny by saying "that it was hereditary in his family to have no children." Another of his blunders was made when speaking of the fish hawkers. "They go down to Ring-send," he observed. "buy the herrings for half nothing, and sell them for twice as much." A letter supposed to have been written by Sir Boyle Roche during the Irish rebellion of 1798, gives an amusing collection of his various blunders. Perhaps he never put so many on paper at a time but his peculiar turn for "bulls" is here shown at one view.

The letter was first printed in the Kerry Magazine, now out of print: "DEAR SIR:—Having now a little peace and quiet. I sit down to inform you of the bustle and confusion we are n from the blood-thirsty rebels, many of whom are now, thank God, killed and dispersed. We are in a pretty mess; can get nothing to eat and no wine to drink except whiskey. When we sit down to our dinner we are obliged to keep both hands armed. While I write this letter I have my sword in one hand and my pistol in the other. I concluded from the beginning that this would be the end; and I am right, for it is not half over yet. At present there are such goings on that everything is at a standstill. should have answered your letter a fortnight ago, but I only received it this morning; indeed, hardly a mail arrives safe without being robbed. "No longer ago than yesterday the mail-coach was robbed near this town; the bags had been very judiciously left behind for fear of accidents, and by great good luck, there was nothing in the coach, except two outside passengers, who had nothing for the thieves to take. Last Thursday an alarm was given that a gang of rebels in full retreat from Drogheda were advancing under the French standard, but they had no colors nor any drums except bagpipes, immediately every and children, ran out to meet them. We soon found our force a great deal too little, and were far too near to think of retreating. Death was in every face; and to it we went. By the time half our party were killed we began to be all alive. "Fortunately, the rebels had no guns except pistols, cutlasses, and pikes, and we had plenty of muskets and ammunition. We put them all to the sword; not a soul of them escaped except some that were drowned in an adjoining bog. In fact, in a short time nothing was heard except silence. Their uniforms were all different chiefly green. After the action was over we went to rummage their camp. All we found was a few pikes without heads, a parcel of empty bottles filled with water, and a bundle of blank French commissions, filled up with Irish names. Troops are now stationed round, which exactly squares with my ideas of security. Adieu. I have only time to add that I am yours in the Original. Mr. J. H. Liddons, who knew Charles Dickens from boyhood, says that he found himself very late one night at a railway station near Norwich. "Scarcely had I set foot on the platform," he writes, "when I was accosted by a tall young man of the yeoman type, who had come to fetch the letter bag. you wish for a bed, sir?' asked he, 'or are you going on?' I told him that I was bound for Norwich, two miles

"'You cannot get there, sir, till later in the morning. I will drive you there, as I go with the mail bag at 8 o'clock.' Accordingly, I concluded to accept a bed, and a supper if possible, at the hostelry close at hand. I entered the kitchen, where a bright fire was burning, and sat myself before it. There was a kettle on the hob singing a duet with a chirping cricket. A large wiry terrier came and crouched at my feet. There was nothing strange in this. But presently I heard 'clock, clock,' behind me, and turning round, I beheld Tilly Slowboy in a pair of wooden clogs! "The idea dawned upon me that I was among some of the dramatis personæ of the 'Cricket on the Hearth.' Supposition soon grew into conviction, for in a few minutes a pretty little round woman came in and informed me that my supper was ready in an adjoining parlor. Dot, by Jove!' I more than muttered. I ate my supper and went to bed. My host roused me at 7:30, gave me a cup of coffee and bore me off in his little chaise to Nor-"On the way we passed a fine old-fashioned house, 'Who lives there?' I asked. 'That, sir,' was John Peerybingle's reply, belongs to Mr. Hogarth, a musical gentleman. 'Hogarth! Why he must be Mr. Dickens' father-in-law.' He is, sir, and Mr. Dickens do often come down here; and he has been and took off me and all my family and put us into a Christmas story, which he do call the 'Cricket on the Hearth;' but it ain't all true, for there's no blind toy-maker in these parts, and Dot and me never had a dispute about her brother."

His Honor made some inquiries and wrote out the warrant, and, when the witness had sworn to it, he asked: "Now, as I understand this thing, the Constable will arrest this fiendish lefendant?"

"Yes, sir." "And the case will be tried?" "Doubtless." "And the jury will give me a verdict?"

"That remains to be seen." "Well, what I was going to say was this: In case I do get a verdict, I'd like to have them give it in my wife's name, as I'm somewhat in debt, and don't want to be garnisheed!"

is the physiology of recreation. It may have struck some readers as a curious question, why some actions or pursuits should present what I may call a recreative character, and others not. For it is evident that this character is by no means determined by the relief from labor, which these actions or pursuits secure. A week on the moors requires more genuine hard work than does a week in the mines, and a game of chess may require as much effort of thought as a problem in high mathematics. Moreover the same action or pursuit may vary in its recreative quality with different individuals. Rowing which is the favorite recreation of the undergraduate is serious work to the bargeman; and we never find a gardener to resemble his master in showing a partiality to digging for digging's sake. If it is suggested that it is the need of bodily exercise which renders muscular activity beneficial to the one class and not to the other, I answer, no doubt it is so partly but not wholly. Why is it that man of science should find recreation in reading history while a historian finds recreation in the pursuit of science, or why is it that a London tradesman should find a beneficial holiday in the country while a country tradesman finds a no less beneficial holiday in London? The truth seems to me to be that the only principle which will serve to explain the recreative qualities in all cases is what I may call the physiological necessity

London Truth. I have long had as an idea the crea tion of a girl's school which shall be organized on exactly the same plan as public schools for boys,—Eton, for instance. The girls should reside by twenties in the houses of married masters, whose wives would act as "dames;" and there should in each be a resident governess to discharge the functions of monitors. The girls should each have their own private room, where they might take breakfast and tea singly or in messes of two and three, as they might prefer, and they should dine and sup at their tutor's and dame's tables. The classes should be held in the school-rooms of the college under the direction of male or female professors; and the girls should attend services all together in their college chapel. As for recreation, such a college as I propose would become a little township, having its walks and parks where the pupils would have liberty to roam and play as they pleased under certain restrictions as to hours of lock-up. If in a college of this kind music and drawing were treated as extras, and the general education was confined to the three R's, modern languages, history, geography, and sewing, I am convinced that school would turn out very creditable pupils indeed, and, what is equally to the purpose, would render the school-life of the girls happy, which it seldom is at present. I hope to see this idea carried out some day by a group of paterfamilies having money to embark in an enterprise which would ultimately pay well in more senses than one.

A Cow Whips an Alligator. A few days since a man living at Dooley, Ga., was looking for some hogs, and was nearing the river when he heard a cow bellowing. Upon going to the bank of the river he saw on a sand bar an alligator, a cow and a young calf. The alligator was between the cow and calf and the river. The alligator made a dart toward the calf, when the cow rushed between them and a fearful fight ensued.— While this was raging the calf got into the wood and faced about, bleating plaintively. The alligator was not more than seven feet long, and struck at the cow furiously with its tail .-The cow avoided as many of the blows as possible, but received a number, one of which knocked her rolling over for about ten feet. The alligator rushed upon her with open mouth and tried to seize her by the nose, but she was up in time to horn the alligator under the throat and throw it over backward, and before it could strike another blow or defend itself, she was on it. The cow tossed the saurian high in the air, and it fell into the water with a splash, and did not venture to the land again. The cow, after rushing around looking for her enemy, ran to her calf, and made tracks through the woods for home, looking back occasionally to see wheth-

the worst enemy of the Ivy, to be seen on its first appearance and removed by the use of an old tooth brush. Dust.-When sweeping is being done the plants ought to be covered with a cloth or newspapers, to keep off the dust. Otherwise the freshness and beauty of the foliage will soon be lost. The sponging of the smooth and thick leaved plants (see under Ivy), will add to their health and beauty. Watering.—A few winters ago, a Doctor complained to us that his plants were in a bad way, they not only did not grow, but by dropping their leaves, were actually diminishing in size, in spite of the fact that he watered them regularly every day."

At his request we went to see the plants; they were at a cool window in his office, in porcelain, and other glazed, and very handsome pots, and the earth in each was in a state of mud. Probably about as many plants, in rooms, are killed by excess of water, as by the lack of it. Glazed pots especially ought to be so drained, that all excess of water will pass off, and the potting soil should be so "open," that it will not retain water to excess A little observation will show when a plant needs water, and it should be given, not by any rule, but according to the requirements of the plant.

An Old Preacher's Retort.

A correspondent of the Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer, relates the following anecdote: "I am reminded of another anecdote told many years ago, of the father of your present Governor, Walter T. Colquitt, and the celebrated James Rockmore, both of whom I knew well. The former was a lawyer and Methodist preacher and the latter a minister of the Primitive Baptist persuasion, and quite as much of an oracle among his brethren as was Mr. Colquitt. Mr. Colquitt, going to his appointment to preach on Sunday, stopped by the wayside and went into an orchard to eat some peaches, having permission from the owner. Rockmore rode by on his way to his meeting, and bawled out: "Never mind, Colquitt; I'll bear witness in heaven against you for stealing those peachs.' 'Hold on,' said Colquitt, drawing a blank-book and pencil from his pocket, let me take your interrogatories; you won't be there." THURSDAY, JAN. 15, 1880.

At latest accounts, Maine is in the very peculiar predicament of having two organized legislatures, one all Republicans and containing more than the number necessary for a quorum, and the other of the fusionists, and lacking the number for a quorum. The former contains the members elected and counted out on technical reasons, and propose to leave the question of the validity of the election of these members and the legality of the organization to the decision of the supreme court, and abide thereby, while the other body takes upon themselves the power and duty to decide these questions. The fusionists have attempted to proclaim Lamson, the President of their Senate, Governor, while the Republicans, with General Chamberlain in charge of the State property, by special order of Governor Garcelon, previous to the expiration of his term of office, await the further decision of the supreme court.

MY DREAM.

Written for the Berrieu Centre Temerance Advocate.

BY ERASTUS MURPHY.

It was early in the month of November, 1879. I had worked very hard all day upon my farm, and it was not until my day's work was done that I discovered that I was unusually fatigued. My evening chores were soon done, and I entered my little dwelling for the first time since leaving at one o'clock that afternoon. A smile from a loving wife, a warm supper upon the table, and the usual reception by the children. I almost forgot that I was tired, and as I took a seat at the table with my loved ones around me, to partake of that which willing hands had provided. I thought of the hundreds of bright children, who that night would go to their cold beds, too hung to sleep, and I wondered what could be the cause of this difference, and a voice seemed to say, "Intemperance." Supper being over, I found myself in a better condition for retiring to bed than for any other undertaking, and was soon there, and as soon had forgotten my day's work, and all things which surrounded me, when the conductor called out. "All aboard!" I had just taken my seat in the car when two or three young men entered and took seats near me; and when I heard them cursing Berrien Centre, as the train left the depot, I gently asked them what the trouble was, and who had ill treated them. They told me they had been all over the world and never before had they failed to get their bottles filled with whatever they called for, and continued by saying that they had been in every business place in the whole town of Berrien Centre. and could not find a drop. looked as sympathetic as possible, leaned back in my seat and enjoyed a real healthy smile; and as the conductor called on me for my fare, he asked me what was the cause of the passion which those fellows were in, and I whispered in his ear. "Intemperance and Disappointment." Time flew rapidly, and so did the train: and as we were entering a large city. I saw scores of children returning from school. Some were elegantly dressed, and as they marched along they threw from their baskets large pieces of bread and cake, and as I looked far behind I saw bright looking children, who were too poorly clad to attend school, eagerly picking up and eating that which had just been thrown away. I called on the mayor of the city, told him what I of all these things. He took me by the hand and replied, "Intemperance," I found a hotel, and after supper resolved to see a part of the city by gas light. About eight o'clock I noticed that nearly all places of business had closed, except in such buildings as wore the name "Saloon," and they were numerous, and all full of noisy, drunken men: and I noticed children in those saloons, begging their fathers to come home. As they were driven away from the door I recognized them as the same children I had previously seen gathering crumbs from the street. As was paying my bill the next morning. the landlord asked me why I was go-had just seen, and asked him the causing to leave the city so soon, and I replied "Intemperance." I had a desire to go farther west, and took the first and fastest train, and at two o'clock was in another larger city, world. I respectfully requested the buss-driver to take me to some place where whisky was not sold, and after giving me a look of surprise and astonishment he replied that he knew of only one place of that kind on earth, and that was a town in Michigan by the name of Berrien Centre: and when I told him that Berrien Centre was my place of residence, he drove directly to the mayor of the city, to whom I was introduced, and the entire programme for Gen. Grant's reception was so changed as to include us both. The General soon arrived and our meeting took place at the mayor's residence, and as he congratulated me highly upon being a resident of a town which was soon to become a flourishing city, he drew from his pocket a case of cigars and tendered me one of them. What were I to do? I had never smoked in my life: but to decline under the circumstances would not do at all. I knew the grand reception, in which I was to be as conspicuous as the General himself, was to take place in one hour; and as I lit my cigar and endeavored to appear accustomed to cigar was reduced to a stub. My cigar was one which Gen. Grant had purchased in Japan, and fortunately for me. was very mild and harmless. Long before we had finished smoking, the news had reached every and all parts of the city, that a resident of Berrien Center was with the General at the hotel; and the multitude which gathered around manifested a greater desire to see a man whose home was in a town where no intoxicating liquors were sold, than to see him who had been a brave general in the late war, had twice been President of the United States, and had sailed around the During the afternoon, and while the reception was in progress, I heard many business men declare their intentions to move their business to Berrien Centre. After remaining in the city several years I became somewhat homesick, and resolved to see my home and family as soon as possible. and commenced the journey by taking the afternoon train. I had scarcely taken my seat when a newshoy entered the car, and as he held up a neat looking eight page newspaper, he called out, "Berrien Centre Temperance Advocate. Thrilling news! Published in a city which has neither a saloon nor a calaboose." This created an excitement which made it very difficult to purchase one of the papers; but I suc-

eeded, and began to read with such interest as I had never before taken in a newspaper. The number of local advertisements which appeared in its columns was evidence of the fact, that Berrien Centre was no longer a small town, but a flourishing city.

The next day about two o'clock. while I was yet engaged in reading the Advocate, the train entered a large, well-built city, which I supposed to be Chicago; and as the train halted in the depot the conductor called out, "Berrien Centre," and as I stepped from the train amid the throng of boot-blacks and peanut venders, Schuyler Wyman, with whip in one hand and reins in the other, called out, "Free Buss to the Robinson House, Will H. Robinson, Proprietor." I had a draft upon the First National Bank of Berrien Centre, and wished to go there first; and upon entering the door was met by the President of the Bank, Mr. Thomas Mars, and the money which my draft demanded was politely counted out to me by the cashier, Benona Wheeler. While on my way down Commercial Avenue from the Bank to the Robinson House, I noticed a few of the signs which hung out of the different places of business, as follows: 1st, Douglas Clemens, At-torney and Counselor at law; 2d, J. H. Crall & Martin Becker, Dealers in ready made clothing; 3d, boots and shoes made to order by A. H. Linawaver: 4th, Geo. W. Wyman, wholesale dry goods and general merchandise, established in 1876; 5th, Samuel Brenner, physician and surgeon; 6th, J. K. next thing will be a pension for all | McIntire, dentist, teeth extracted withwho were engaged in the confederate out pain; 7th, Ella Crall & Genie Mars, millinery and dress making. Here I noticed a very neat looking barber sign hanging from a four-story marble front, and as I looked in I saw the proprietor, Isaac Hess, shaving a healthy looking customer, whom I afterward learned was S. W. Becker, mayor of the city. By this time I had reached the post office, and purchased a few stamps of Norman Nims, post-master. I visited the Temperance Advocate office, and had a very pleasant chat with the editor, H. S. Robinson. He told me many interesting things about Berrien Centre-that its rapid growth was due to a good temperance organization; that Capt. and Mrs. Bradley still had charge of the county farm, and were giving entire satisfaction; and that the Union school, under the supervision of Miss Toot Bradley, Fannie Butler, Adaline Becker and Minnie Light, was very successfully conducted.

Linquired after Homer Hess and Ettie McIntire, and learned that they were married six years ago, and now resided at 264 Washington street. Just opposite the Advocate office was a large and magnificent residence under construction, with Calvin Light as foreman. This he said was to be occupied by Myron Peck; and while we were noticing the industry of the mechanics, a short, chunky Irishman be gan slowly to ascend a long ladder, with a hod of mortar on his shoulder This he said was Pat Murphy. On my way to the street-car station

I met J. J. Murphy, in police uniform. I wondered at this, and asked him if he ever had any police duty to perform. He said not, except when people from abroad came to the city intoxicated. I took a street-car for home, which soon halted in front of my residence, No. 182, and as I stepped from the car I received a severe blow from a mule attached to a delivery wagon, of the firm of Palmer & Linawaver, and fell full length on the floor in my own bedroom. I was once more wide awake, and the foot from which I received the blow wears a No. 4 shoe; and a voice as familiar to me as my own dinner bell, came down in an unmistakable and is even more beautiful, in some respects, than the January one. The double-size colored fashion plate; the illustrated story, "Alice Gray's Trial;" and some new and exquisite designs in When you are in South Bend will you call and see a Japanese embroidery, including a colored pattern, are among these. The stories are all remarkably good. Mrs. Burnett's "Fair Barbarian," is continued, and is brighter than ever. "Lost," by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, is the best gros grain silk and fringe, for 5.00 novel even she has written for years. We have so often praised "Peterson that it is almost useless to do it again We can imagine nothing better in the way of a lady's magazine. When we remember that it contains, every year, about 1,000 pages, 14 superb steel engravings; 12 double-sized colored steel fashion plates; 12 Berlin, or other colored patterns; and some 900 wood engravings, the wonder is how so much. and of such excellence, can be given for only two dollars a year. And to clubs the prices are even lower. Premiums, too, are given to persons for getting up clubs. Every lady ought to take this magazine, no matter what else she takes; it seems to us it must be indispensable. Now is the time to subscribe. Specimens are sent, gratis, to those wishing to get up clubs. Back numbers from January can always be supplied. Address, Chas. J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Why Are You Bilious?

Because you have allowed your bowels to become costive, and liver torpid. Use Kidney-Wort to produce a free state of the bowels, and it will stimulate the liver to proper action, cleanses the skin of its yellowness, cures bilious headache, and causes new life in the blood. Druggists have it.

Rochester Physician's Experience R. Caulkins, M. D., of Rochester, N. Y., certifies Oct. 6th, 1879, that he has used the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure in his practice for diseases of the kidneys and liver, and the result has been satisfactory in the extreme. He says: "I would now prescribe the same remedy to all similarly afflicted, and you are at liberty to so state in your testimonials."

Answer This.

Did you ever know any person to be ll. without inaction of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, or did you ever know one who was well when either was obstructed or inactive? and did you ever know or hear of any case of the kind that Hop Bitters would not cure? Ask your neighbor this same question.-

High Priced Butter.

Buyers pay the highest price for 'gilt-edged butter," but want every tub to be of an even, bright color. They recommend their patrons to use only Wells, Richardson & Co.'s Perfected Butter Color, as it is the most reliable known, and will give a perfect color. It received the only award at the In ternational Dairy Fair for "superior purity, strength, perfection of color and permanence.

MRS. G. B. HUNTOON, of Coloma, in this county, has been taken to the asylum for the insane, at Kalamazoo, for treatment. Her insanity is caused by religious excitement.

A FIRE was built under the boiler at the wagon factory this morning, the first time since the proprietors comnenced the repairs. The boiler is now about as good as new once more. THE Berrien County Agricultural Society has decided to hold two fairs this year. One in May and the other in September. This is a step in the right direction, if properly managed. REAL estate in this place is changeral years, and the demand for houses and lots to buy is on the increase. This denotes prosperity. CHARLEY SIMONDS has secured the first papers toward the patent on his new shoe holder for boxes. This is a handy little device, and we see no reason why Charley should not make a good stake from it. ARRANGEMENTS are being made for building a road across the cranberry marsh north of Oliver Dalrymple's farm, on the east side of Teirre Coupee prairie. This will shorten that road some, but it will be some time before that can be made passable. Don't forget the entertainment in Kinyon's hall next Wednesday evening. The two ladies who have charge of this entertainment have a reputation, throughout the country, for their ability and the class of their work. ARRANGEMENTS have been made to have four sessions of the Farmers' Institute in this place. Two afternoon and two evening sessions. This is an extra arrangement brought about by the committee appointed to prepare for the institute. See the Bargains he Offers MR. J. W. FANCHER was held in durance vile last Saturday. He went into the town clerk's office to get a book and was locked in for an hour or so. AT the recent meeting of the Board of Supervisors the salary of the Prosecuting Attorney was fixed at $1,500 per year instead of $1,000. This is about $300 cheaper to the county than under the fee system, for then the county paid for all aid it was necessary for the attorney to have, and now he pays for that out of his own salary.

It is Jay Glover that can kick twice over his head with both feet, and not get either of them off the ground. The immediate cause of this agility is the arrival of a fine looking boy at his house Wednesday morning. The one he has been expecting these ten years.

Keep out of his way. SEVERAL persons have been subpœnaed to appear as witnesses in the case of the heirs of Jacob Lear, who are trying to break the will of Mr. Lear. The case is being tried in Goshen. Mrs. Amos Evans, of this place, has already received about $3,000 from the estate, and expects another handful when the affair is settled. LUCKY AGAIN .-- If reports be true Mrs. Jadwin, of this place, will soon be the recipient of an interest in a $15,-000,000 estate of an old bachelor uncle, named Leonard Case, who recently died in Cleveland. "There's many a slip," however, and the estate is not divided yet. MR. GEORGE MCNEIL bought what has been known as the Redden property, on Front street, advertised in these columns a few weeks since, of N.O. Fansler, for the sum of $1,250. Mr. McNeil gets a beautiful home in the most pleasant part of town, at a very McLin, formerly of this place?

MR. JOSEPH TAYLOR has moved his shop on to Mr. J. D. Ross' lot, directly opposite the RECORD building, painted and otherwise improved it, and is now ready for business again. The insurance companies thought be was rather too close to Dr. Roe's building for their best interest. Hence the change.

LAST Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Stephens, of this place, by the aid of a house full of invited friends, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding day. The evening was engaged for a concert in Kinyon's hall | spent in a most enjoyable manner, and | all seemed well pleased with the entertainment, and only wished that fifteenth anniversaries came oftener. The presents of glassware were numerous, and many of them quite valuable.

> DAMON AND PYTHIAS.—This is the title of the play a company from Mishawaka, Ind., tried to play in Rough's hall Friday evening, but made a miserable failure of it. The hall was well filled, but before the play was through it lacked considerable of it. We don't have to send away from home to get them all about the streets.

What a splendid predicament Berrien county would be in to have the county seat in Watervliet or Coloma, giving those who live in this part of the county a distance of nearly one hundred miles to travel to reach the county seat by rail. To move it to Niles will place those who live in the north part of the county in the same predicament.

A NEW orchestra was organized in this place last week, with the following members: Al. Hunt, first violing A. C. Harger, second violin; Frank-Brown, clarionet; Chas. Wiggin, cornet, and John Hamilton, bass. Tliese are all good players, and we may expect to hear some good music when ing hands more, recently than for sev- they get in full operation.

IT was expected that court would resume business again next Monday, but last evening the Prosecuting Attorney received a letter from the Attorney General, stating that the objection of Mr. Clapp should be sustained, and this now places the matter with the decision of the Judge, with the probability that nothing will be done before another regular term. Mr. Van Riper has gone to have a conference with Judge Smith regarding the matter, and will know after that what is to be done.

In Michigan we are obliged to either burn oil that will give but little better light than a good quality of well water or pay 30 or 35 cents a gallon for good oil. In the south side of the state line a good quality of oil is sold for 20 cents. No blame can be given the local dealers for this, but the wholesale dealers have formed such a habit of swindling Michigan people on oil that it is hard for them to quit.

THE body of Billy Young, who was recently murdered in Cass county, has been exhumed and a second post mortem examination held, which revealed the fact that death was not caused by a gun shot, as was at first supposed. but by three blows from some blunt instrument, breaking the skull. No clue to the perpetrator of the deed has been discovered. The board of supervisors offer a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of the criminal. JUST why Benton Harbor people are in favor of the move to place the county seat at Niles, does not appear. It will give them about 150 miles to travel to go to the county seat and return, and they will pay enough in fare and grumbling about the poor accommodations, to pay for the new buildings in five years. If the proposition had been to place it at New Buffalo, where it should be, we can see why the people in that vicinity might favor the move; but that is not the question before the

IT is understood that the resolution to remove the county seat to Niles was passed by the Board of Supervisors as a joke, and that the contest came in the adoption of the minutes of the meeting, which did not require a twothirds vote, but was carried by a vote of 11 to 9. Now if our Board of Supervisors do not know any better than to perpetrate such "jokes," the sooner they resign the better, and an effort will be made to elect men who know better than to joke in public business. Sometime last summer a man named Oden, a preacher in Benton Harbor, shot at some boys that he thought were trespassing on his property, and was arrested for assault with intent to kill. And now comes a petition to the Prosecuting Attorney, signed by thirty-two of the citizens of that place, asking that the case be nolle prosiqued, because they think he is not guilty. The Prosecuting Attorney, however, has sense enough to listen to no such nonsense, and it will be determined in the regular way whether Oden is guilty or

THE question "Resolved, That the question of removal of the county seat be submitted to the people at the Spring election, and that the point designated be the city of Niles," was brought before the Board of Supervisors, at their meeting last week, and passed by a vote of 11 to 9, and the question of Niles for a county seat will be voted upon accordingly. So far as the RECORD's influence goes it will be

A NEW FACTORY.—Mr. Charles S. Black has commenced the erection of a new building at the side of his hill, near the mouth of the creek, for the manufacture of furniture and such other articles as may be in demand when the machinery is in operating condition. Mr. Fred Schray will be connected with him in the business, and it is probable that something will be done by them in the manufacture of organs. When Mr. Black's former factory was burned it was feared that Buchanan had lost one of her most prominent factories, but the unflinching energy of Mr. Black will renew the up a better troupe than that. Find enterprise, and the quota will be full once more.

Ar the meeting of the Board of Supervisors, last week, the old question of county vs. township poor came up again, and this time was carried in favor of each township caring for its own paupers. The funds already appropriated for the poor fund will be distributed among the township pro rata. It has ever been the practice of the class of people who depend on public assistance to flock to the cities and villages during the winter instead of staying in the country where they belong, and in many cases moving to an adjoining township. This arrangement will have the tendency to send such people about as straight back to their starting point as is possible for them to go. That is a pretty rich arrangement tor townships containing no villages, and will undoubtedly nake trouble when the first pauper family moves to town and is informed that they are not at all welcome.

As the yarn goes, it is not a very commendable caper that was played on Mrs. Metz, of this township, last week, by a collector for a lightning rod firm. It seems that before his death Mr. Metz had given a note for $40 in payment for a lightning rod, and that the note had been allowed to outlaw, when this fellow was sent here to collect it, and in order to renew the note went there and staved over night, and then endorsed on the note one dollar, then demanding a mortgage on their home, and by considerable flourish of a revolver frightened the woman into giving a mortgage. He however lost the mortgage from his pocket before he left the premises, and is now obliged to resort to the county to recover pay for his note, or resort to another bit of scaring. Those who are best acquainted with the case would like to see him wait until the common judgment day for his money.

Our account of the receipts from outter from Mr. Riley Wray's cows, brings forth the following from Mr. J. M. Platts: He sold butter from the milk of three cows, one of them a twoyears-old heifer, 290 pounds, besides making for family use an average of four pounds per week during the year, making in all 490 pounds, which at the average market price, during the year, of fifteen cents per pound, would amount to $73.50. He also states that he started the year 1879 with seventy hens; sold during the year, eggs and chickens to the amount of $54; used in family and setting, 200 dozen eggs and fifty chickens, and has seventy-five chickens left. At the average price for eggs during the year, of 101/2 cents, those used would amount to $21, and of 20 cents each for the chickens used, $10, making in all $85, or nearly $1.25 each on the start, and kept the stock more than good by five chickens.

can all get good from it. Sincerely your co-workers, GEORGE PARSONS, Pres. S. S. A. Watervliet, Mich. EDWARD K. WARREN, Secretary, Three Oaks, Mich.

power has no more use for it. Now the one who knows this, knows just how to manage a tree that has been injured by frost, or by transplanting. He never allows a twig or branch that is probably going to die, or is ac--tually dead, to remain on the tree, be-cause it helps to kill the living parts of the trees by evaporation. A living branch does not lose much water by evaporation, but a dead one does; and thus it is draining the tree of its juices and throwing into the atmosphere just what the living ones need, so long as it remains on. So if he plant a tree at this season, and has the remotest idea that the twigs or top shoots will be killed he does not wait for the event, but cuts them off at once. Thousands of trees are saved every year by the one who knows this much of botany, while hundreds of thousands die every year under the hands of those who think they can raise potatoes or grow apple trees without "botherin' their heads about this stuff."

> Fall Plowing Country Gentleman.

There is this against early fall plowing, that it favors the springing up of grass and weeds, which necessitates re-plowing in the spring. The fall rains, should they be heavy, will pack the surface of clay soil, which the frost that follows does not always relieve, and never if pressed by a deep snow. This not only compels plowing in the spring, but the soil then turns up rough, and generally too wet and sticky, and also it is necessarily done late in the season; so that fall plowing instead of benefitting, hurts it, and the crop for the season is lost or seriously affected—the land showing it for a year or two more.

If late fall plowing is an advantage, better still if it can be done in winter or early spring, so as to be followed by freezing and thawing. My best success has been obtained by winter and early spring plowing. But it can-not always be done, especially on clay. Yet there is hardly a year in which one of the three seasonseither late in the fall, during the winter, or early in the spring-is not available. To make as sure as possible, do the work in the fall, if the ground will admit, but avoid making mortar. The same applies to winter and early spring.

Some soils especially sand and the leachy shales, have less to fear from they are also little benefitted by the frost. They are the soils, therefore, that may be left unplowed till spring. One of the difficulties with spring plowing is that it does not allow of the winter application of manure, should manure be required: though with an early spring and favorable weather, this may be done without interfering much with the work which usually requires all the time. The aim should be to get the plowing done as near to winter (or in it) as possible, so as to get the benefit of the freezing and thawing, and avoid the packing of the heavy rains.

Care of the Feet of Sheep.

American Agriculturist. Sheep that have been pasturing in low meadows or on soft, turfy pastures, may be found to have overgrown hoofs. The hoof of a sheep has a peculiar manner of growth. If neglected, the horn of the hoof grows over the sole, turns under at the side and up at the toes; in turning under, the horn gathers under it sand, gravel dung, or other foreign and injurious matter. The horn of the sole thus covered is kept moist, grows soft, decays, and in its decay carries poisonous matter into the vascular tissues of the foot. Inflammation occurs, and the pus caused by it, being bound in the foot by the diseased hoof, can not escape, and the inflammation spreads through the tissues, until the entire foot is involved, and sometimes drops off. When this condition happens, the matter secreted is highly poisonous and may be communicated by the soil to the feet of healthy sheep; or at least those, which by neglect offer a breeding place for the intectious matter. This is a malignant Foot-Rot, and it is the inevitable result of the foregoing sequence of neglect. By timely care this evil may be avoided. Every sheep should be closely examined. Surplus or loose horn should be pared off, and the toes, if too long, shortened by the use of a pair of toenippers, or a pair of common, carpenter's nippers with the blades sharpened. If any diseased horn is found that should be scraped away until the unhealthy granulations under it are exposed, the foot washed with Car-bolic Soap, and dressed with a paste made of Pine Tar and powdered Sulphate of Copper (Blue Vitrol). The affected sheep should be kept separated from the healthy ones, and the feet should be dressed at least once a day. If they are kept on a clean board or clay floor, and this sprinkled with air-slacked quicklime, the improvement will be the more rapid. But no recovery need be expected if the feet are exposed to mud or filth in wet yards or unclean sheds and stables.

Meat for Poultry.

Cor. Francier's Weekly. Some time since I noticed among other useful hints the advice to feed meat to the poultry, and lambs' plucks, as cheap and good, were recommended. I have used them a number of years, as I think I got more good with less trouble from them than from anything else I can feed in the shape of animal food. They do not have to be prepared in any way. having no skin or bone, and if there is no time to chop them up they are so tender when boiled that I have no doubt but that the fowls could pick them to pieces very easily.

When I boiled a pluck for my chickens I put in a few onions, all the scraps of bread in the house—they having been saved for this purpose—plenty of black pepper and a little salt, a tablespoonful of salt is about right for one pluck; I think there should always be about the same quantity of salt cooked or scalded for poultry, as we would use in preparing the same quantity of food for the table. When the pluck is cooked I take it out of the pot and thicken the water containing the onions, bread, etc., with coarse meal, feed - the meal warm, and the pluck when I get ready.

A lamb's head is also good; it may be skinned, but that is not necessary; when boiled it may be split open and fastened in a place convenient for the fowls and they will take care of all that is on the bones. The brains alone form quite a quantity of food. 'These things I consider preferable to scraps—do not cost much more, but perhaps make trouble. Stealing a $10 horse cost a Colorado man his life, although he had been

NO single—"sease has entailed more suffering or IN hastened the breaking up of the constitution than Catarth. The sease of smell, of taste, of sight, of hearing, the human voice, the mind, one or more and sometimes all yield to its destructive influence. The poison it distributes throughout the system atoks every vital force, and breaks up the most robust of constitutions. Ignored because but little understood by mysthysicians, impotently assilled by quacks and chariatans, these suffering from it have little hepe to be relieved of it this side of the grave. It is true, then, that the popular treatment of this trible disease by remedies within the reach of all passed into hands at once competent and trustworthy. The new and hitherto untried method adopted by Dr. Sanford in the preparation of his Radiocal Circh has won my hearty approval. I believe it likely to succeed when all the usual remedies fall, because it strikes at the root of the disease, v.z., the acidifical blood, while it heals the ulcerated membrane by Greet application to the masal passages. As a grand curative and restorative agent is not equalled by any element or medicine in the history of the healing art. Unless the vital spark has fled the body, restoration by means of electricity is possible. It is the last resort of all physicians and surgoous, and has resort of all physicians and surgoous, and has resort of thousands, apparently dead, from an untimely grave, when no other human arency could have succeeded. This is the leading curative element in this Plaster. BALSAM AND PINE.

The healing properties of our own fragrant bal-sam and pine and the gams of the Fast arctoo well known to require description. Their grateful, healing, soething, and strengthening properties are known to thousands. When combined in accord-ance with late and imperiant discoveries in phar-macy, their healing and strengthening properties are increased tenfold. In this respect our Plaster is the best in use without the aid of electricity. two in one.

Thus combined we have two grand medical agents in one, each of which performs its function and unitedly produce more cures than any liniment, letton, wash, or plaster ever before compounded in the history of medicine. Try one, Putcr, 25 Cents.

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope; make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Bee Ranching in California.

Sunday Afternoon. This is a famous country for bees and the making of honey, and at many a breakfast table in distant Europe today, the waffle is spread with the sweets that have been filched from the hearts of a thousand California flowers. In the mouth of almost every canon there is a bee ranch or apiary, whose owner grows indolent and pros-perous from the labors of his indus-trious subjects. Here there is no long winter with dearth of flowers, through which the patient workers must be nursed and fed in order that they may live until the opening of the next field season.

These bee ranches are models of neatness and domestic comfort, and the profession of bee-keeping is rapidly pecoming popular among persons of little physical strength or small financial capital, or both; such as maiden ladies, broken down ministers, bachelor students, and those dilettante farmers who fancy that the royal road to bucolic happiness lies through the flowery beds of a bee pasture. Their expenses are as light as those of a hermit in his cave, and what stores of honey are laid up are so much clear gain, as the bees board themselves while they work, and work unceasingly for the preparation of the winter, which never comes. When the hive is full, the cakes of comb are removed, the liquid is extracted from the cells, and the empty cups are replaced to be filled again and again. This economical process prevents a waste of labor and time in the gathering of wax and the building of new bins in the store-house. Walking out in the morning in the green brush-wood of these canyons, you hear a loud and continuous buzzing of wings, and, although there may not be a flower in sight, it is as ceaseless and strong as in a buckwheat patch or clover field at home. This humming of bees is nature's tenor voice, as the roaring of the water is her These are cures for homesickbass. ness in the bees' monotone even though the authors thereof be perfectly wild, as, indeed, many of these are. In such a country you cannot feel utterly lonesome and lost.

Apple Sago Pudding.

I make such a pudding with tapioca instead of sago, and think it much nicer. For a dish holding two quarts, take a cup of tapioca, put it in a pan with cold water, let it heat and cook gradually, adding hot water if necessary, and a little salt. In the meantime pare apples enough to fill the dish, remove the cores, and fill the holes with sugar, and a little nutmeg if you like. Put a little water in the dish and partially bake them, then take the dish from the oven and pour the tapioca over the apples, return it to the oven and bake till the apples are soft. Eat with sugar and cream. It improves by being taken from the oven half an hour or more before eating, I consider it one of my best pud-

Why Skidd Didn't Dine With Him. The editor of the Fort Plain Register has his office and residence connected by telephone. The other day Mr. Skidd, of Little Falls, an old friend, called on the editor and expected to remain for dinner. The editor hurried to the telephone and shouted to his wife: "Mr. Skidd will be up with me to dinner; lay an extra plate." "Now." said the editor. "Mr. Skidd, you may converse with her." As the gentleman was about to approach the instrument these words were plainly heard: "You tell Mr. Skidd we don't keep a hotel on washday." Mr. Skidd excused himself for a few moments and was next seen eating fried clams in the Rainbow saloon on the corner.

A Forgetful Man.

The poet Gray speaks of those that "are to dumb forgetfulness a prey," and the corporal of marines in an English vessel off the coast of Africa, who wrote to his wife that he was greatly surprised to hear from her, for he had forgotten that he was married and indeed had entirely forgotten her, may be considered as included in the poet's remark. He wants her to do the best she can for herself, and, if possible, get married again. She ought to be above applying to a poor marine for help, he thinks; he will never trouble her again, and intends staying in the service for the next sixteen years, as he is very comfortable in it.

To Make Meat Tender.

If the fact can be demonstrated to a cook that tough meat may be made tender by softening the fibres with the action of a little vinegar, there will be no reason why she should thereafter send a tough steak to the table. If she can be convinced that it is better to turn it over on a plate containing a little vinegar, salad oil and pepper, four or five times in a couple of hours, instead of trying to make it tender by battering it with a rolling pin or cleaver, and so forcing out all its juices she must be obstinate indeed if she prefers the latter method, and the sooner her services are dispensed with the better for the temper and stomach

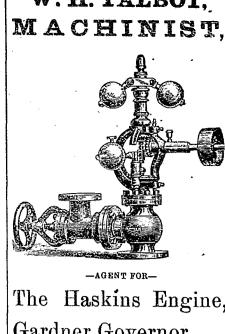

A well-known liberal clergyman reates that lately, talking to some youngsters on the coming vacation and the necessity of kindness to animals, he incidentally remarked: "Boys are often cruel to frogs and toads. I remember a boy wickedly filling up a frog with fire-crackers and then lighting the slow match." He was horrified to see this remark received with the liveliest emotions of interest and delight and utterly prostrated as he passed out at hearing one urchin say to another, "By jingo, that's a new racket. Won't we have fun blowing up the bull-paddies down in the med-

A teacher in one of the public schools was startled the other day at an answer she got from one bright little fellow. On the blackboard was the picture of an ostrich, and the teacher described its great strength and powers of endurance, closing by saying that it was the only bird on which a man could ride. "I know another," spoke up a little chap. "Well, what is it?" "A lark." Unsuspectingly, the teacher asked, "How can you prove that, Johnny?" "All I know about it," said the boy, "is that mother says every little while that father's off on a lark, and when he gets home he looks as if he rode awful

The clergy and the school trustees at Rushford, Wis., are at loggerheads, because the latter provided a keg of beer at the raising bee for a new school house. The ministers all preached on the immorality of the act, and the trustees published a card defending it on the ground of economy, arguing that $3 worth of beer accomplished more than could have been done with Send $1.50 for the RECORD one year. $50 in regular pay.
