siding in California recalls a romantic episode connected with the writer. The lady, a school teacher in this county, estimable and well-educated, who had passed out of her twenties, but was of a very romantic and imaginative disposition, about two years ago, while on a visit to Franklin, Pa., formed the acquaintance of a lady who had a brother, a bachelor, residing in California. This brother had written to his sister to procure him a lady correspondent in the East. The sister showed this letter to tained her promise that if he would write to her she would reply. Soon after her return home she received a letter, and this was the beginning of a very animated correspondence. graphs were exchanged, and, finally, the gentleman proposed and was accepted by the lady. But now came the startling proposition for her to join him in San Francisco, where they would be married. To this the lady demurred, but, after a good deal of pleading upon his part, and the plea that his business interests would not allow him to come East for some time, she consented, and he sent her money to defray the expenses of the journey, and about a year after the correspondence began she set out alone to meet her unseen lover. After a pleasant trip she arrived in San Francisco, where Mr. C. met her. It was a case of mutual love at first sight, and neither had any wish to secede from the contract. A carriage was procured, and they were driven to the residence of a relative, where they were speedily united, and at once proceeded to Mr. C.'s residence, about twenty miles from San Francisco, where he had a home prepared for his bride, and now, after the lapse of a year, the incident is revived by the letter referred to, in which the lady writes that she has had no reason to regret that she threw up the ferule in Jefferson county and set out

A Roadmaster Who Understood His Busi-

[Saratoga Letter.]
A gentleman who had long been selling the stock of the New York Central and other railroads, but had no personal knowledge of their executive management, told me that he had seen one of the most extraordinary pieces of executive dispatch in his life on Vanderbilt's railroad.

River road," he said, "two or three

"A Zissie or Twa." There is an old naive Scottish song. in which an elderly spinster expresses her perfect willingness to alter her condition, and of which this is the last verse.

Now, lads, an there's ony amang ye Wad like just upon me to ca', Ve'll find me no ill to be courted, For shyness I hae put awa'.
And if ye should want a bit wife
Ye'll ken to what quarter to draw;
And e'en should we no mak' a bargain We'll aye get a kissie or twa.

This chancing to be recited or sung one evening in company when the poet Campbell was present, he laughingly observed that the last sentiment was not without its parallel out of the world of song. He had heard a lady of distinguished beauty and rank defend Sir Thomas Lawrence from the charge of having been culpable in paying atten-tion to ladies without intending to follow them up by an offer of his hand. To this lady a gentleman had remarked that he thought in this, one of the few errors that could be laid to his charge, Sir Thomas was highly blamable "No," replied the lady, who was said to have been herself the temporary object of the great painter's attention; no, not exactly—not so much to blame," said the lady, musingly. "What!" exclaimed the gentleman; "you astonish me; not to blame for such conduct!" "No, not so much," was still the lady's musing response. "Can you really, madam," said the gentleman again, "defend such behavior as desertion—" Why, sir," interrupted the lady, "to confess the truth, I am firmly of opinion that the majority of women would rather be courted and jilted than not courted at all!" Brides' Dresses. The richest bridal dresses worn re-ently have been made of white satin, trimmed with lace. Cut in the Princess style, the overdress of lace, or lace arranged as scarfs, forms the entire drapery. The garniture consists of flowers in masses and trailing fringes. The prettiest bridal dress of the season was of rich, white satin, covered with myriads of rows of finely plaited Breton lace, and garnitured with natural rosebuds and orange blossoms. No artificial flowers were used. The veil was attached to a full, close wreath of the small flowers, but the bouquet was composed entirely of white rosebuds. The effect of Breton lace is particularly soft and foamy, much more becoming to youthful brides than heavy point lace. A very pretty and much more simple bridal dress is of white barege, trimmed also with quantities of delicately plaited Breton lack. The garniture of this dress is white satin ribbon. No flowers used except a great bunch of natural lilies of the valley and white rosebuds at the front of the corsage. Artificial flowers are not now considered distingue as a gar-immense crushed roses. Best Eusbands in the World.

A correspondent writes from Brookville. Pa.: A letter from a lady re-Miss S., and, after some persuasion and warm praise of the absent brother, ob-toward the setting sun to seek her fortune. She speaks in glowing terms of

"I was coming down the Hudson

by a wreck near Hudson. A freight train had been thrown off the track. The engine was lying imbedded in a hole, one car was lying across the track, another had lost its trucks and was flat on the track, and the tender of the locomotive was also deeply imbedded. We had waited there an hour and a half or two hours, and twenty trains had been stopped. They had yanked one of the cars up on jack-screws, as if to run trucks under it and then get it out of the way. It looked as if we were going to stay until night, and we began to think about finding a steamboat or buggy or something to get on to New York, when all at once an engine and wrecking-car heaved in sight. Before the engine had come to a stop, we could hear the Roadmaster's voice ring out, giving his orders before he had seen the situation. He seemed to be as familiar with every thing on the spot at if he had been there all night. There was an engine off at some distance, but doing nothing. He called out to the engineer to come up and make fast to the buried locomotive. In half a minute the engine was attached and pulling to get the other out of the hole, and at the second effort the great mass of iron came up sullenly and was hauled out of the road. 'Pass that rope over the top of that car and make it fast to that tree yonder,' he cried. It was done. 'Now five hundred of you lay hold of that rope,' he shouted. The entire little army, under the inspiration of that voice, laid hold of the rope, using the tree for a purchase, and they pulled the car across the track square out of the way by main strength. Then the rails which had been bent were straightened with heavy hammers and nailed down. 'Come on here with that engine,' he cried again, 'and make fast to this truck.' With another tremendous pull the whole thing came out of the ground, like a tree by the roots, and was rushed off. 'Now start that first than I ever had before," said the gen-train,' cried the man. In less than ten minutes from the time of his arrival what looked to be a week's job was out of the way, and the passengers went on. I formed a higher idea then of

A Pioneer's Big Lift. An old pioneer was hugging the historic stove in Judge Knox's court-room, last evening, and, as usual with the oldtimers who visit that temple of justice, was in a reminiscent frame of mind. Though poor now, he had, as a matter of course, been once rich. "I was a leadin' citizen of Muckallamy hill in '52," he said. "In them days I was in the dustbuying business. I had my sign out 'S. Compra Oro Acqui, up stairs,' you know. and all that sort of thing. I tell ye it takes a smart man to get along in that 'ere trade. Jenkins & Co. was the boss at it when I first went into it at Muckallamy hill, but it wasn't six months afore I'd took half their trade away. I had to tussle to do it. You see the boys was allus very anxious to do well, an' the first that offered the coin made the riffle. Jenkins & Co. was pretty high-toned, an' used to wait every night fur that man to go down the hill to the express office an' bring up their money in a handcart. I saw my chance an' used to be on hand when the stage came in, an' just shouldered my own coin when the driver throwed it off. Nick Monkins was the driver in them days. He was afterward killed by road agents. Many's the time Nick's throwed me down my sack with a clean $400,000 in gold coin in it, and I've chucked her across my shoulder an' trotted up that there old hill and had every bit o' dust bought up afore Jenkins & Co.'s handcart arrived.

"How much did you say you packed up the hill on your shoulder?" asked Judge Knox's clerk. "Four hundred thousand oftener than.

ess," replied the pioneer, with melancholy pride. "See here," said the clerk, figuring rapidly, "gold's worth $18 an ounce, and there's twelve ounces to the pound, troy weight; that makes a pound worth $216. Now 216 into 400,000 leaves something over 1,851 pounds, pretty nearly a ton. How far up the hill did you carry that, did you say?"

The old pioneer looked at the clerk with fixed contempt for a moment, and then, merely saying, "You're a plagued Johnny-Come-Lately, that's what you are!" arose and left the court-room.-

Virginia Chronicle. A WHOLESALE tragedy, which calls to mind the sanguinary exploits of Trop-mann, is reported from Toulouse. A family of five persons, named Combet, living at Beziers, disappeared recently in a sudden and extraordinary manner. After minute search the bodies of three of the family-father, mother and eldest son—were found in the canal. There remained at last accounts two other children to be discovered. The

It is remarkable that the increase of insanity in England has occurred during the operation of a new and improved system of treatment. No one would return to the manacles and fetters of a former age; but it was expected that early admission to asylum treatment would produce more rapid recovery, and thereby diminish instead of increase the number of incurables. In expectation of speedy cure from this cause, vast sums have been expended on the construction of English asylums. A return, recently published, shows that during twenty years more than £6,000,000 have been thus employed. The repairs and extras may bring the sum to not much under £8,000,000; and, taking into account the annual interest on capital, the maintenance of lunatics must cost the country at least $2,000,000 per annum. It is true that the worth of the expenditure is not to be reckoned by the money value alone. If, when the cost is highest, the cure and care of lunatics is greatest, that system is the best. When the cost is highest, and the cure and care lowest, we have a right to complain. For the last thirty years the Earl of Shaftesbury and the Lunacy Commissioners have had entire control; their recommendations have been carried out—their appeals to the humanity and liberality of the public have been complied with. All that money could vield, all that architecture could bestow, in obedience to the orders of the Government or the suggestions of the medical profession, has been freely, even lavishly, executed. Although the proportion of recoveries in all institutions, portion of recoveries in all institutions, calculated on the admissions, has fallen, between 1859 and 1877, from 35.12 per cent. to 30.33 cent., and although the recoveries, calculated on admissions to county and borough asylums, show no improvement, remaining at 30 per cent., while those calculated in each year upon the whole number under treatment have fallen from 9.6 per cent. in 1859 to 7.9 per cent. in 1877—yet the Commissioners in Lunacy appear perfeetly satisfied with the results obtained. Thus, while expenditure increases and cure not merely stationary, but retrograde.-Fortnightly Magazine. Spiritualism. For every man interested in the question of immortality we have the profoundest sympathy. It is a question which has an intense, abiding interest for every thoughtful mind. At this time, particularly when the immortality of the soul is questioned more sharply than it has ever been before in the history of Christianity, the pre-cious faith of the churches has to be fought for with all the weapons that can be laid hold of. From the fact that there is really no evidence of immortality except the resurrection of Christ Himself, and His declarations, many minds have reached about them on every side for everything that offers help. In the desire to know something about the matter, mode Spiritualism had its birth and has held its life. It promised to do just the thing that millions of minds desired to have done; so that, when it assumed to demonstrate the existence of life after death, it had a tremendous audience in readiness for it. The marvel is that there was a man or woman living who was unwilling to hear what it and its promulgators had to say. That it has millions of believers and followers today is, probably, due less to its real, inherent strength, than to the greedy want which it assumes to satisfy—a want so greedy that it accepts as fact lunacy advances, they are content to see that which only has its lying semblance. We are not among those who regard what are claimed to be the facts of Spiritualism as improbable a priori. No man can read the Bible carefully without being educated in a belief in Spiritualism. In both the Old and the New Testament we have multiplied records of the communications of spiritual existences with men and women in the flesh. The doctrine of demoniacal possession is taught with great distinctness. The ministry of angels, the return to the earth of those long dead, familiar intercourse with Christ after His resurrection, all are in the line of phenomena claimed as genuine by modern Spiritualists; so that it is not strange that Christian men and women should find themselves educated by the Bible itself into a sort of readiness to receive Spiritualism. It is, or would seem to be, easy for a Christian to believe that visitants from the unseen world are about him influencing his mind, and endeavoring to make themselves known. That is precisely what they used to do in the olden time. Why should they not do it now as well as they did it then?—Scribner.

Balky Horses. A Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals recommends the following rules for the treatment of balky

1. Pat the horse upon the neck, examine the harness carefully, first on one side then on the other, speaking encouragingly while doing so; then jump into the wagon and give the word go; generally he will obey. 2. A teamster in Maine says he can start the worst balky horse by taking him out of the shafts and making him go round in a circle. If the first dance of this kind doesn't cure him, the second one will be sure to do it. 3. To cure a balky horse, simply place your hand over the horse's nose and shut off the wind till he wants to go, and then let him go. 4. The brains of horses seem to entertain but one idea at a time; thus continued whipping only confirms his stubborn resolve; if you can by any means give him a new subject to think of, you will have no trouble in starting him. A simple remedy is to take a couple of turns of stout twine around the foreleg, just below the knee, and tie in a bow knot. At the first check he will go dancing off, and after going a short distance, you can get out and remove

"Lizzie" is the name of a female elephant. She has a tenacious memory for kindnesses shown her, and the following incident shows her gratitude to be unlike that of which Wordsworth writes:

Two heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds With coldness still returning; Alas! the gratitude of men Hath oftener left me mourning. The Birmingham Gazette says that among the animals belonging to a menagerie that visited Tenbury recently is a fine female elephant named "Lizzie." Nearly five years ago this animal, after a hard walk, was allowed to drink a quantity of cold water, the result be-

Lizzie had not forgotten her preserver; and when she was walking in procession through Tenbury, recognizing the chemist at the door of his shop, police are said to be on the track of the she left the other animals, and going to him affectionately placed her trunk in his hand. In the evening the chemist visited the exhibition, when Lizzie gave him a warm and most gratifying reception. Gently encircling him with her trunk, she held him for some time

THE State of Georgia owes $10.344. 500, and has $870,222 cash on hand in the treasury.

More than one-half of the glass used n the United States is produced in Pittsburgh, where over 5,000 hands are employed in making it; 12,110 tons of soda ash were used in the business during last year, and the value of the glassware amounted to nearly $7,000,000. England consumes fifty pounds of sugar per head. The United States stands next, with forty-four pounds. France sweetens at the rate of fifteen and one-half pounds, and Turkey uses only three and one-third pounds per capita.

Texas has six cities of over 10,000 inhabitants each, thus: Galveston, 35,-000; San Antonio, 22,000; Houston. 25,000; Austin, 17,000; Dallas, 20,000. and Waco, 10,000. Beside this, she has eight cities of 5,000 and upward, thus: Brenham, Fort Worth, Bryan, Sherman, Corsicana, Paris, Jefferson and Marshall. Official statistics just published show the proportion of soldiers in the German army who have never had any schooling. Among the troops from Wurtumburg there is not one. Out of a corps of about 7,000 from Baden there were fifty-five, and out of a similar corps from Saxony only twenty-five. The largest percentage was found in the second Prussian corps, where out of about 8,000 men 710 had never attended school. The average percentage of the whole army is not over 2 to 3 per cent.

A Desperate Bear Fight. In the early part of this century, says the Raleigh (N. C.) Observer, the western portions of North Carolina were infested by wild game, among which was the elk, now entirely extinct in the South. The last elk was killed in Mitchell county, it is said, about 1824. Sometime about 1815 a party of veteran and daring hunters were in the mountains of Buncombe, engaged in a hunt for these animals. They spent several weeks usually in such expeditions, sleeping in the forests, always in danger from wild beasts. One evening just before nightfall, the party returned, one by one, to the rendezvous, all save one very old man, a most enthusiastic and tireless sportsman. Knowing his habits, his absence caused little remark; but, as time slipped on and he came not, it was determined to make a search for him. While preparing to do this, the well-known report of his rifle rang out on the air and then all was still. The noise of the report seemed to come in from a canebrake a quarter of a mile away. Taking lights, two of the hunters made their way thither and found their comrade but a few rods from the brake, lying on the wounded as to be helpless and well-nigh exhausted. In reply to inquiries he said he had tracked bear and fired at him, wounding the ferocious beast, he thought, fatally. On going up to his prize the bear arose and seized him. A terrific struggle ensued between the two. Losing his knife in this contest, the hardy hunter said he had no other means of selfdefense than to seize Bruin's nose in his teeth. He declared he had done this, and with such effect as to bite off the entire end of the nose. The earth near by was bloody and trampled, but his comrades ridiculed the idea of his having actually bitten off the bear's nose. He continued to assert it, and said that the bear, discomfited, had fled and taken refuge in the brake, where he would wager he then lay dead. The wounded man was taken into camp, and his injuries attended to. At daylight next morning several of the hunters went into the brake, and there found the bear shot through the body and with the tip of his nose bitten off. The old hunter lived many years, but always spoke with peculiar pride of his having thus overcome the bear, and exhibited a score of wounds made by the animal's claws as proof of the story.

A Pretty Story About the Composer - Chopin.

Frederic Chopin could always quiet his father's pupils, no matter how much noise they were making. One day when Prof. Chopin was out there was a frightful scene. Barcinski, the master present, was at his wits' end, when Frederic happily entered the room. Without deliberation he requested the roysterers to sit down, called in those who were making a noise outside, and promised to improvise an interesting story on the piano, if they would be quiet. All were instantly as still as death, and Frederic sat down to the instrument and extinguished the lights. He described how robbers approached house, mounted by ladders to the windows, but were frightened away by a noise within. Without delay they fled on the wings of the wind into a deep, dark wood, where they fell asleep under the starry sky. He played more and more softly, as if trying to lull the children to rest, till he found that his hearers had actually fallen asleep. The young artist crept noiselessly out of the room to his parents and visitors, and asked them to follow him with a light. When the family had amused themselves with the various postures of the sleepers, Frederic sat down again to the piano and struck up a thrilling chord, at which they all sprung up in a Queen Elizabeth.

This Queen, in spite of the representations of so many historians, was a wanton in morals, heartless, cruel, and ugly in person. In her 61 year she was thus described: "Her face oblong, fair, but wrinkled; her eyes small but black and pleasant; her nose a little hooked; her lips narrow, and her teeth black; she wore false red hair; her bosom uncovered." Yet was this woman vain to the last degree and susceptible to flattery, as the following instance will show: When the States of Holland sent a splendid embassy to her, during the first audience, one of the Ambassador's suite said to an English gentleman that he could not understand why people spoke with such in-difference of the Queen's beauty; that they did her great injustice; that he thought her very charming, and should be happy in having so fine a woman for his wife. The Queen, who had her eyes fixed upon the whole suite, when the andience was over, sent for the English gentleman and commanded him, under pain of displeasure, to tell her what the Dutchman had said to him. The gentleman endeavored to excuse himself on the plea that the conversation was very trifling; the Queen, however, was determined to know what the discourse was, upon which he told her what had been said. The conclusion of the matter was that the Ambassadors were presented each with a chain of gold of 800 crowns each; but the gallant Dutchman, who had found the Queen so very handsome, had a chain of 1,600 crowns' value, which, it is said, Mynheer wore to the day of his death.

THE debt of New Hampshire is $3, On one occasion, during the wars of Napoleon, a handsome Tyrolese, Franz Jubile, who had acquired fame as a leader of his people, was visiting the house of the Duchess of Wurtemberg. The Empress, having heard of the songs which the handsome Tyrolese sung, and of his adventures, was present, hidden, as usual, behind her ladies.

Jubile was in excellent spirits, and told stories, chatted and sung with vivacity. Just before the party broke up, the Empress came out of her hiding place and began a conversation with the Tyrolese.

Empress." The man turned pale, and stammered out: "Your Imperial Majesty, pardon me. It was your own doing. I did not know who you were; I thought you were only a maid of honor."

The Empress tried in vain to reassure him. He went home, took to his bed, and for several days was under the doctor's hands. "It was worse than a cannon-ball," he replied to a friend's inquiry. "The Empress has shot me through the of malaria, it is the belt of country lying on the shores of the gulf, and stretching from the alluvial marshes that surround the mouth of the Mississippisay from Lake Borgue—to the neighborhood of Mobile bay, and then be-yond far to the eastward through Alabama and West Florida. For the present purpose, however, it is not necessary to look beyond the Mississippi seacoast, bordering on what is known on the maps as Mississippi sound. It is a strip of sterile sand, with only soil enough to sustain a continuous forest of pines intermingled with the scant undergrowth of the "piny woods." There is no cultivation except that of the orange and fig trees, which grow in profusion, and there a scuppernong vineyard, and the gardens which, by dint of diligent culture, may be made to yield a scant supply of vegetables for family use during a few months of the year, and then wither and fail for lack of soil. The springs and wells are of the purest. The streams, unpolluted by cultivation, are always clear and limpid. There are swamps, but they are supplied by sweet and living springs. The water in time of drought disappears in the porous and sandy soil, but never stagnates. The shores are swept by delicious breezes on the one side from the vast expanse of the gulf, and on the other from the resinous and fragrant pine forests that stretch for 100 miles into the interior. People expose themselves to rain, sun. sea and night air, leave their wet garments to dry upon their persons and sleep without shelter with entire safety.

No Dog, No He. His loving mother said: "If you take some of the castor oil, I'll let you go to the circus." "How much?" he cautiously inquired.

"Oh, only a spoonful; just a spoonful," she replied. "And you'll give me some sugar besides?" he asked.

"Of course I.will—a big lump." He waited until she began pouring from the bottle, and then asked: "And you'll give me 10 cents, too?"

"Yes, of course." "And you'll buy me a shoo-fly kite?" he went on, seeing his advantage. "I guess so." "No kite, no ile," he said, as he stepped back. "Well, I'll buy a kite," she replied, filling the spoon up.

"And a velocipede?"

"I'll think of it." "You can't think no easter oil down

"And a coach dog?" "I can't promise that." "All right; no dog, no ile."
"Well, I'll ask your father." "And you'll buy me a pony?" "Oh, I couldn't do that. Now be a good boy and swallow it down." "Oh, yes; I'll swallow that stuff, I will," he said, as he clapped on his hat.

"You may fool some other boy with a circus ticket and a lump of sugar, but it'll take a $100 pony to trot that castor oil down my throat."

Boots and Shoes from a Negro's Hide. The Penny Press says that Dr. Schneider has taken the skin of a negro, which he has dissected, to the tannery situated on Franklin street, just out of Columbus, where it is now being made into leather. A reporter who examined the piece of skin found it extremely tough, and liable to do good service if put into gaiters. It seems strange use to make of humanity's remains, though. The tanner stroked and twitched it and dilated upon its good qualities. The process of tanning is to rub it with a mixture of alum, salt and eggs, which draws out all the oil from the skin, and saves months of time. Perhaps a new industry is opening up in the city, and perhaps some of those who are perfectly worthless in life may be made to do duty after they have quit. Imagine the sensation, however, of a dainty lady caressingly putting on a glove made from the skin of a darkey she wouldn't have touched without a shudder when in life, or of the thoughts that must

The great need of the South to-day is loyal men - men loyal to the Nation, loyal to liberty, men tolerant of the rights of others, men who love labor. It is suffering for the want of stalwart Republicanism. Under the controlling influences of truly loyal men, the dishonor which the days of slavery attached to manual labor would soon disappear, labor would become honorable, and neat and substantial farm houses would quickly rise above dilapidated shanties: elegant school houses would dot the land, and bless it with active and intelligent children, taught the value and merit of labor; worn out and almost forsaken plantations would be converted into beautiful and productive farms; dull and decaying towns and cities would spring into new life; energy and business activity would cities receive no censure by Democrats in the North, and the lawlessness and violence practiced there is never condemned by them, but invariable denied. The North is asked to vote for Hancock because of the heroism displayed by him on the battle fields of the war for the Union. If this be a good reason for elevating a man to a high office, I think you will agree with me that it is a new, a very new doctrine in the Democratic faith; and on account of its extreme youth it should be handled with great care; for if urged too hard it may wither before it blossoms. It may be truly said that my mind has

I think you will agree with me that as Democrats we have not always adaered to the same political ideas. It is true, as the northern supporters of Gen. Hancock aver, that a great many Democrats fought for the union, but it should not be forgotten that they fought against the openly-expressed policy and principles of the Democratic party at the same time. If the people of the North had been ruled by the Democratic party at any time from the beginning to the end of the war, the union would have been destroyed and the confederacy would have been successfully established on its ruins. A Democratic triumph in the present contest would result in the surrender of the government to the men who attempted to destroy it by force of arms, and we have the word of no less prominent and trustworthy a brigadier than Wade Hampton for if that the struggle now is "for the same principles for which Lee and Jackson fought for four years." Senator Hampton has tried to make it appear that he was not properly reported when he made his Staunton speech, but he has not denied that he believes that the "same principles" are at stake, or that if his party wins it will act as Lee and Johnson would have acted had they won their four years fight. These are solemn facts that the voters of the North should ponder carefully before election day.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Major General Hancock is already putting on as much style as a crowned king. His reception days are Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 10 until 2 o'clock. He can surround his island home with defenses at the government cost, and to keep off the politicians he can use the soldiers paid for by the United States. The bayonet, which he | in the morning. truly says "is not a fit instrument for | ing more rough, hoarse, and sometimes collecting the votes of freemen," has its advantage in thrusting away from the sacred presence of a major general, the intrusive partisans of whom he said, "this horde of hungry devils will drive me crazy." lost track of their doings.—Saginaw Disease of the Throat.

BY V. CLARENCE PRICE, M. D. Hundreds throughout the country are suffering from various affections of the throat. Some are only disturbed during the changeable weather of winter and spring, while others are troubled more or less most of the time. In some instances an affection of the throat will exist for a time without getting in upon the lungs. Notwithstanding this slow process in some cases, we do not believe there is one case out of ten that will not, if left alone, gradually grow worse, eventually reach the lungs, and end in consumption. The symptoms in chronic diseases of the throat are many, and vary according to the nature and locality of the disease. Among the symptoms of this ailment is an alterative of the the voice, its tone not as clear as usual a slight irritation or tickling sensation in the throat with more or less dryness, giving rise to a hacking, hemming, or an endeavor to clear the throat of something which is felt to be an obstacle to a full and free utter-cleared. Loud or long talking or reading produces cough, irritation or dryness of the throat. In the first stages there is no expectoration. Passing from a warm to a cold atmosphere or room, produces difficulty in breathing, and in advanced stages gives rise to more or less cough; the same symptoms follow an exposure to dust, or when walking against the wind. In cold or damp weather, the symptoms are generally more aggravated, the person liable to take cold from the slightest exposure. Sometimes the symptoms dissappear entirely, but return again on contracting a cold. It may thus go on dissappearing and returning, the patient meanwhile being in comparatively comfortable health, until the the disease has made considerable progress. There is often a tired feeling about the throat, a feeling of discomfort or uneasiness along toward evening. In the early part of the day the tired feeling about the throat is not noticed, as the voice organs have had a chance to recover their power, by rest, during the night. In the beginning of the disease no such symptoms are felt, but as it progresses these symptoms show themselves every evening, then earlier and earlier until the voice is clear only for a short time completely destroyed. Sometimes the the individual will be able to speak a sentence in an audible voice, while the next one will be in a whisper, or the audible articulation may be cut off in the midst of a single word. Considerable excitement was created in Memphis. Monday, by the receipt of a telegram from the Inspector of the Board of Health from Vicksburg announcing that there were five cases of yellow fever in that city. Wade Hampton finds too many proofs against him and is subsiding. He has also heard from the South, which fully approves of his ulterance at Staunton. The Mobile Register says: "Wade Hampton uttered nothing that should alarm the most supersensitive loyalist, when he made the remarks attributed to him."

Record: Buchanan,

THERE was a meeting in Kinyon's hall Monday evening of the business men of this place, to discuss the sub ject of employing a night watchman to care for the property along Front street, between the post office and creek. Some committees on constitution, assessment and boundary and to receive bids were appointed, and Mr. J. H. Roe instructed to correspond with the manufacturers of the night watchman's watch with a view of buying one. The meeting adjourned to last evening to hear the reports of the committees, when it was expected a permanent organization would be formed. On account of the Record being issued a little earlier than usual this week we are unable to give a report of that meeting.

again with an old darning-needle and a bit of twine, a boy of 14 halted on the walk and sneeringly said: "That doll's bin sunstruck, an' all the doctors in town can't save her life."

The girl made no reply, and, after a moment, the lad advanced, snatched the doll from her hands and flung it high above his head, laughing loudly at her efforts to prevent him. "Is your mother dead?" asked the girl, as her eyes filled with tears and her chin quivered. "Not as I knows on." "But mine is, and she made that dolly for me when her hands trembled so and her eyes had so many tears that I had to cut the cloth for her. That's why baby looks so bad!" 'Whew!" whistled the boy below his breath, and walking up into the street, he picked up the plaything, carefully dusted it, and, as he placed it in her hands, he said: "I remember now bout seein' the crape on the door, and I'm sorry I was rough. This 'ere linin' in my cap will make that haby a bull drass an' if you make that baby a hull dress, an' if you won't say nothin' to nobody of how I acted I'll give it to ye." Good-by, 'Tab!"-Detroit Free Press. How He Destroyed His Usefulness.

A deacon of a prominent Connecticut church, whose pastor had resigned, recently met a Hartford divine, when the following conversation ensued: "I was sorry to hear that Brother Blank had resigned. I had always liked him. He is regarded as a very able man, isn't he?" "We-l-l, y-e-s" (hesitating). "Oh, ye-es, he's an able man."

"But he is a first-rate preacher, isn't he?"

"W-e-l-l, y-e-s, he's a very good preacher." "And he's a man of the highest Christian character, so we have always thought here."
"We-ll, ye-es. Oh, yes, he's a good Christian." "But there must be something the matter, deacon? Why do you hesitate so, and say, 'We-II, ye-es?' has Brother Blank been guilty of anything wrong? I know of a church that I think he is just the man for, and I mean to recommend him very highly. Have you any reason to suppose that he would not give satisfaction?"

"Well, doctor, Mr. Blank is all you say about him, but I'm afraid he's not calculated to make a successful pastor in the country." "Why not, deacon? You surprise me very much."

"Well, I will tell you one reason. Mr. Blank lived next to a neighbor whose hens and chickens bothered him very much by digging up his garden. He spoke about it several times, but it did no good; those towls kept in his garden all the time. And what do you think he did? Instead of shooting some of them or building a high fence around his garden, he came here to Hartford and bought the best game-cock he could find, and took him home and turned him loose in the garden. The next day that neighbor heard a great commotion among the poultry, and, when he looked over the fence, there were all his hens and chickens lying in windrows, and that game-cock walking over the bodies and crowing. Now, you can't say that that was un-Christian conduct, but it was certainly calculated to destroy Mr. Blank's usefulness in that section."—Hartford Courant.

Betting on a Dead Thing.

One of the frequenters of a broker's office, in this city, is a man who will bet on any kind of a proposition. When he enters the office in the morning he greets the gentlemen present by saying, "Mornin', boys! Is there anything any of ye want to bet on this mornin?" And he hangs around all day watching for chances to bet; and, if a man ventures an opinion about the stock-market, hints that perhaps Sierra Nevada may sell for 40 next week, he will pounce on him like a hawk on a June-bug, and offer to bet him a hundred that it don't sell for 40 in six years. The other day the boys put up a job on him. They got a fly, dipped its feet in mucilage, and stuck it on a sash-frame in the office. Flies are pretty thick around this office. Of course, there's not much for a fly to eat in a broker's office; but, between ink, and mucilage, and the breath of the clerks, they manage to eke out a subsistence. Pretty soon another fly sailed in through the front door from a restaurant around the corner, and settled down on the sash near the fly that the boys had fixed, and in a few moments the betting man dropped in, with his usual salutation about betting. After some preliminary skirmishing about not being on the gamble, be ing busted in stocks, and other little by-plays to make the betting man think they were not anxious for a wager, one of the boys spoke up and said: "Pard, Ill tell you what I will do; I'll bet you that fly in the corner of that sash moves before that other fly about six inches from him does." The fly in the corner was the fly from the restaurant, and the other was the fly with the mucilage on its feet.

"It's a whack!" said the betting man "Bet you a hundred my fly moves

The money was put up, and all eyes were intently bent on the window. Pretty soon the mucilage fly made a struggle to free itself, and succeeded in dragging itself about half its length on the sash-frame.

"My money!" exclaimed the betting The others did not want to give up, as the movement had only been barely perceptible.

"Do you want to keep me here all day betting against a dead fly?" said the betting man. The boys rushed to the window to examine their fly.

It was dead!—San Francisco Stock Report.

A Nevada Whirlwind.

Jim Anderson is getting in his work on the Reno (Nev.) Gazette. A recent number of that paper contains the following report of a recent freak of a whirlwind: During the high wind which prevailed yesterday morning, J. Moorman Cutter started out with a half gallon of whisky to take to his sick mother, who lives out on Virginia street. He was found some four hours afterward lying behind a fence on the hill in an inarticulate condition. Later in the day he recovered sufficiently to explain the catastrophe which had overtaken him. He said that he stopped around a corner to fix the cork in the jug, and while he was taking the measure of the ornice of the jug a tremendous wind came down on him. It sucked the liquor clean out of the jug, blew it down his throat, and turned the jug inside out. He could remember nothing more of the occurrence.

THOMAS H. STOPFELL and Helen Reed were married at Ebensburg, Pa., against the wishes of the Reed family, the bride's brother, particularly, having op-posed the match. The young couple were at the village hotel, getting ready to start on a honeymoon tour, and the brother dashed into the room in great rage, and attempted to shoot Stopfell. The girl saved her husband's life by seizing her brother's pistol; but the ex-stement speedily caused her death.

places where we should consider it an insult to all proper or sacred feeling. An Englishman in almost any rank will accept pay or money for kindly services, which here the poorest would offer gratuitously. If he tells you the way on the street or gives you the time of day, or a light for a cigar, no matter how good his coat, the chances are that you will not offend him by a tip. If a lady calls at a friend's house, she is expected to tip the servant who shows her to the drawing-room; if you stay by invitation at a private house over night, you will find the whole corps of servants drawn up waiting for their money in the hall in the morning; their master saves himself so much of wages by your gifts, and counts on saving it. Very few Americans would be willing to throw open the privacy of their homes to the public to increase their income; but if an Englishman's house is his castle, or can by any means be made a show place, he turns an honest penny by exhibiting it. The shilling, or crown, or sovereign paid by visitors to the servants who escort them through the great houses goes, not to the servant as is often sup-posed, but directly into the pocket of the master. In the cases of Chatsworth, Blenheim, and places of that grade, the revenues of the ducal owners are increased thousands of pounds by this means. The American is just as fond, means. The American is just as load, probably, of the almighty dollar as his British cousin, but he manages to get it in a different way.—New York Tribune. An Admirer of Art.

One of our enterprising merchants, having an eye to the beautiful, and desiring also to make his show-window attractive to the passer-by and to his oustomers as well as himself, has adorned it with a handsome plaster bust. It is a beautiful thing, and our merchant was highly gratified when the other day one of our city educators came into the store and spoke about it.

Said the educator: "Ah, Mr. Blank, that's a handsome figure in your window." "Yes," replied the tickled merchant, "I call it so myself, sir, I do."

"Your taste is excellent," pursued the visitor, "and I am glad to see a love for art developing in Steubenville. What is the figure—Hebe?" And the educator took off his hat, mopped up his fevered brow, and began talking about the price of calico and pins, as the merchant replied:
"Oh, no, sir, it's plaster of Paris."-

Steubenville Herald. Rescued by a Trout.

Estimated by their game qualities and the difficulty sometimes experienced in safely landing them, the larger specimens of our mountain troat weigh like a sturgeon. This fact is established whenever the trout hooked in a pool with sufficient depth and spread of water can bring to bear in his native element the full resisting force of his remarkably strong and active tail. Illustrative of this, a story is told of the experience of two professional fishers who recently went out from Lielena to the Big Blackfoot—one a doctor and the other a lawyer. In a very brief time they had a basket of beauties for their pains, but the fascination of the sport kept them tossing their flies into the clear waters of the magnificent stream. Finally one man hooked a "bouncer," one on which he had most yearned to try his skill. The pool was deep and broad, and, work and finesse as the doctor might, the trout held to the water. The lawyer, resting his companion, tried his strength and tact, but with no better luck. The trout seemed quite master of the situation, nor could be be towed or tuckered out. The contest finally culminated in a most exciting scene. Determined to secure the prize, and forgetting he could not swim, the valiant doctor, throwing aside coat and boots, jumped into the depths of the stream. It was a rash act, and to save him the lawyer was forced to plunge in after him. A fair swimmer, he reached his struggling companion, and, holding on to the pole and tackle with one hand, lifted with the other his companion's head above the water. But the lawyer found he could not bring his burden to shore, and only by superhuman effort could he keep himself and companion from sinking. On the very point of drowning the trout came to the rescue, straightened out the line, and, after a few sportive pranks, hauled the two men out of the pool to shallow water. Grateful for the service thus obligingly rendered, the fish was permitted to disappear over the rifiles down stream. Helena (Mont.) Herald.

The Chestnut-Tree of the Hundred Horses.

Travelers say that people in Sicily tell of an old-time-hollow tree called "The Chestnut-tree of the Hundred Horses," because it could hold a hundred horses together within its trunk! That must have been "once upon a time," I should think; but I've heard of a man who actually saw, near Palermo, a tree measuring about twenty-five feet in diameter, and arching over the public roadway which passes through its trunk.—" Jack-in-the-Pulpit," in St.

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and power ful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. Ayer's Ague Cure thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AVER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition. We warrant it when taken according to Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no triffing, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

ART AND NATURE.

Eliza Jane two lovers had—
The one was Nature, to ther Art—
They were so very near alike
She couldn't tell the two apart.
At last, to test their qualities
And give to one the vantage place.
She profered each a photograph
Of her ethereal, tempting face.
Art snatched the pretty paper prize
And pressed it to his heart, and then
He put it to his marble lips
And kissed it o'er and o'er again,
But Nature hurled the painted gift
Aside with haughty. calm disdain,
And, grappling her with strong embrace,
He kissed that plump Eliza Jane.
"Begone, O Art!" the maiden cried—
"Let crities hymn your praise sublime,
But men are men and girls are girls—
And I'll take Nature every time!"
