A LUCKY DIE.

What the dence ails me? Where ain I, anyhow? Wherever I am, springs and mattresses must be scarce, for know I am laid on some mighty hard substance. Wonder if it is on a dissecting board? Wonder if I'm dead? I feel mighty like it. Maybe I am stretched out ready for the doctors to carve me.

These were my first thoughts, very deering, indeed, as I became conscious. T could neither speak nor move; but I soon learned that I could hear. A door opened, footsteps approached, I felt a cloth removed from my face, and a voice, which I recognized as that of my intended father-in-law, said: "He hasn't changed much," and his companion, whose voice I recognized as Sowerby's, the undertaker, said lightly: "There's just where you are mistaken, Mr. Muffins; he looks a cussed sight better dead than alive, but how does Priscilla feel about it? Take on much,

"Oh! no just enough to appear well," said the father of my affianced, with a chuckle. "She never cared much for Smith; 'twas his stamps that she fancied. My Priscilla is a practical girl and went in for his dimes, his carriage and greys, although at the same time I must own she was spooney on bald-pated Howard, the artist, but he's poor as Job's turkey, as the saying is." "Well, she can have him now for al! this poor cuss, can't she?" said Sowerby beating a tattoo with his digits on my

"I presume so, but she will wait till the year is up, for fear of gossip, you know. "But who gets his money, seeing the poor cuss has no relations?" queried the undertaker. "Oh! that's all right. You see, my Priscilla is a sensible girl. Before she promised to marry him she had him make his will in her favor. Poor Smith was rather sappy, you know; had nothing against him, however, although he was deucedly homely, and such a barndoor of a mouth, always open."

"Well," said the cheerful voice of the undertaker, "his mouth is shut tight enough now, I reckon; he'll never open it in this world again. I reckon his immortal part is now with the angels." And my mortal part is also with the angels, thought I-a fine pair of angels! I felt indignant at their clumsy ridicule. I tried to shut my fist, but the devil a shut was to it. I could do nothing but listen. He then began to measure me for my coffin. I had heard that undertakers whistled joyfully when they got a measure. I believed it to be only a struck up the air "Pull Down the Blinds" in a subdued trilling whistle while he measured me. "A nobby casket and 100 hacks, eh. Mr. Muffins? Must make a big thing of it. The cuss left lots of money, and remember he was to be your Priscilla's husband. Must make a splurge, Mr.

Muffins," said the worthy undertaker, with an eye to his own pocket. "Well, I don't mind if the coffin is a little nobby looking; but 100 racks! The deuce! Just send one or two for the mourners, and the rest who come to attend the funeral can furnish their own rigs or hoof it, whichever suits them."

They covered my face again and left me to my own reflections. I had often heard it remarked that meditation was good for the soul, and this was the best chance I ever had of trying it. An hour must have passed and the door was again opened, and two persons came, whispering along, to where I lay, and the voice of my promised wife fell

"I dread to look at him, Mr. Howard; he was so homely when living, he must be frightful when dead." I ground my teeth in rage as I remembered how often she had gone into raptures, or pretended to, over my noble brow and expressive mouth, and would solemnly declare that if I were taken from her she would enter a convent, take the black veil and never more

One of them raised the cloth, I knew they were looking at me. Howard was the chap she was spooney on, whom her father had mentioned

"Seems to me you don't feel very bad about his dying, Miss Muffins," exclaimed Howard, deliberately.
"Well, to tell the truth," said my betrothed, "I don't care very much about it. If he had lived I suppose I should have married him, because he was rich; but I was getting about sick of my bargain, for I know I should always be shamed of him." "But you loved him," remarked How-"No, I didn't! My affections were wasted long ago on one who never re-turned my love." And my fast-fading idol sighed heavily. They had now covered my face again, and were standing within a few feet of where I lay. About how long ago, Miss Muffins?"

asked Howard. "Oh! about a year or so," with an-"About the time I went away?" interrupted the cautious Howard, coughing

"Well, yes, about that length of time," assented my dear affianced. " Now, Miss Mu-Muf-Muffinsoh! you don't mean to insinuate that I-I-I, oh! oh! oh! too much bliss—am the

"I don't mean to insinuate anything, Mr. Howard:" and the angelic sweetness of her voice became somewhat me-"Now, see here -Pris-Pris-cilla-oh bt me call you by that melodious name.

your beauty, God knows, but for your artlessness; 'pon my soul I did, and would have proposed to you only I heard you were engaged to the chap that is stretched there."

"Oh! Mr. Howard!" said Mrs. Smith that was to be, giving a little squeal.
"Don't Mr. Howard me. If you return my affection you must call me by some pet names. Call me Harry-call me Lovey-but for Heaven's sake don't Mr. Howard me, my own Priscilla! said Howard in a quavering voice.
Then I heard a movement of feet, accompanied by a loud lip explosion.

Last week the house of James Buckingham, in Mitford, was struck by lightning and was somewhat damaged The most remarkable circumstance in connection with it is that Mrs. Buckingham, who has been deranged for several years, had her reason completely restored by the shock, thus showing the benefits of electricity as a remedia agent in s.ch cases. Mr. Buckingham says he would not have cared had his house been burned, so long as his wife's health was restored.

A MONSTER SALMON-TROUT. [From the Troy (N. Y.) Times.] Trojan sportsmen claim the honor of having captured the largest representa tive of the finny tribe ever taken from any of the Northern lakes, and that the honor is accorded them in a recently published work on the Adirondacks The fish was a salmon-trout, was taken from Round pend, on the north branch of the Saranac, by the late Garret Quackenbush and party, and weighed fifty-two pounds and a fraction. The head of the fish alone weighed over eight pounds. The monster was seen after its capture by many reputable residents of the Adirondacks, who fully substantiate this statement. The fish was caught while trolling. The above capture was made in 1863 or 1864. A BUTTON CARRIED IN THE EAR FOR

A young lady living in a town a few miles from Bridgeport got a shirt but ton into her ear while a child, and, all efforts to extract it proving unavailing at the time, it was allowed to remain. Since then she has been subject to terrible attacks of headache, which caused her severe suffering. She has on several occasions felt a large lump in her ear, but, as she could not get it out, she thought no more about it, till one day it fell upon the floor. An examination showed that it was the shirt button which had been in her ear since childhood, and it was incased in wax. Since the button was removed her attacks of headache have disappeared.

Wolves and Wild Horses.

It is said that whenever several of the arger wolves associate together, for mischief, in the German forests and their neighborhood, there is always a numerous train of smaller ones to follow in the rear, and act, as auxiliaries in the work of destruction. Two large wolves are sufficient to destroy the most powerful horse, and seldom more than two ever begin the assault, although there may be a score in the gang. It is no less curious than amusing to witness this ingenious mode of attack. If there Hon. W. D. The Truth: SERMON BY REV. DAVID SWING, OF CHI-One of the most beautiful and impressive of all the chapters in the books of John Ruskin is that one on the 'Lamp of Truth" in architecture. All the generalities and the details of a structure must possess truth. The foundation must be in harmony with the superstructure, the ornaments in barmony with the meaning of the building; there must be no contradiction of material or form. But all that Ruskin reminds us of in architecture is uffirmed of life, for the human soul is built up into a palace by the lamp of truth. A pretentious Court House in our State fell down while the workmen were putting on the finishing ornaments. The decorations were handsome, but there was a falsehood in a column down in the cellar—there was a lie in the bricks. But these buildings crumble to illustrate our spiritual world for uz, and teach us that a drunkard, or a gambler, or a defaulter is a spiritual temple with a lie in the foundations. What in the material world is called a ruin? A crushed bridge at Ashtabula is called "hell" in theology; they point alike to the destiny of that fabric or

You perhaps remember that, in the Apocrypha of the older Bibles, four orators contended before the King, each to show what was the most powerful thing in the world. The first orator declared the King to be the supreme influence; the second argued for the capabilities of wine; the third found woman to be the most powerful entity on earth, but the fourth orator bore away the prize by finding that truth ruled all things, from the humblest insect up to the Infinite God. Indeed, woman and the King had power only so far as they were children of the truth. Our poets have all said these things

for us, but more powerfully than the poets have all the old nations handed in their testimony; for in whatever manuer these nations have perished, their truths have rebloomed over their dust. As after a most violent storm has raged for days we see to reappear again the sun and the placid stars, no tumult having reached their far-away azure, so after the storms which made a desert of the valley of the Nile and which overtruths of those states came marching forth out of the dust cloud to join themselves with the civilization of the future. The mental power of Egypt and Greece, their achievements in art, their truthful sentiments in literature and morals, the true principles of Roman law, the divine parts of their religion-all these came on to us like the doves of Noah bearing olive leaves after the flood. The Greeks and Romans fell victims of errors, but there was no error in their verse, none in their columns and arches, none in their courage, none in their marble forms; the early church sank laden with mistakes and follies, but there was nothing perishable in its charity, its prayers, its faith and hope, and hence, out of the flames which consumed all these old times, there has flowed down toward us a stream of most pure gold. It matters little how a nation dies, whether by me vice or by many, the God of nations goes to it in its last hour and hands over to immortality its truthful principles. Just as when a poet like Robert Burns dies by command of intemperance, or as when a Byron passes away injured by many sins, their valuable and beautiful verses are detached at last from the marred or ruined soul, and live in their own intrinsic purity; so nations, though they may have died intoxicated, or amid carousal of crime and sin, are unable to involve their truths in their personal calamity; but from all their burning homes and palaces forms above life are seen carrying away all the household gods that embody a virtue to decorate with them the temples and homes of the subsequent

It being true that the human soul ascends according to the quantity and quality of its truth, and sinks according to the quality and quantity of its false hoods, it must also be true that man, when unable to find the absolute truth, must attach himself to the nearest posible approach to a verity. If to know the whole truth were a perfect bliss, then to know in part and see in part were a second condition of happiness. And this is the best rational defense of him who espouses the tenets of religion. Unable to learn the absolute facts from either the priest at the alter or from the atheist with his denial, man is justified, indeed made rational and happy, by asking the generations to tell him how near they ever came to finding the presence of a God and the confines of a second life. In this comparison of ideas atheism falls below its counter thought and competitive companion, for if nat-ure, not to say God, loves and blesses a truth, and opposes a falsehood, then it would seem that religion, as held by man, must come very near being a verity, for nature has blessed it in all the long history of man. It is not alleged that the highest doctrines of natural religion took any part in the overthrow of Babylon, or Athens, or Palmy a; it is not avowed by any that Caesar and Pompey were rained by their faith in God, and by their conformity of life to such an ideal; it will not be affirmed that a studious following of Christ has ever brought sorrow to a nation or to an age; and hence we feel justified in affirming that, if error be destructive. then religion has not, in the long ex-perience of man, brought sorrow enough to secure for it a place among falsehoods, but, on the opposite, it has so blessed man that it well merits the diadem of a truth. When nations have expressed a false principle in politics, the error has hastened to reveal itself. In one or two generations the false idea has been found by the havoc it has wrought. The leaf has turned yellow to disclose the worm at its root; but over religion, over Christianity, century

after century has passed, and all nations will declare that the more they held of its principles the happier they were and that upon its branches no yellow leaf has appeared. If false ideas bring injury, it would seem that Christianity must be true. There are some words whose sweetness or bitterness we can learn only in the experience of mankind. If you ask me whether twice two makes four, I shall answer you without consulting the human race, but if you ask me the worth of "liberty," or "education," or "music," or "home," then you must permit me to go outside of intuition and summon witnesses. It will be necesat last I shall return to you and declare liberty, and education, and art, and home to be sublime suns in the outspread heaven of man. Having seen these ideas, I declare them to have none of the qualities of a falsehood. So with the word Christianity. It cannot be a sublime suns in the content of the qualities of a falsehood.

be weighed in the positive scales. One cannot say over it twice two is four, and apply that demonstrative or intuitive method, but we can go out in the wide world and examine it in action, and so doing we can return confessing that religion acts very much as though it were one of the holy principles of nature—a law of man and God. It contains the features of that kind of truth which sets men free and makes them free indeed. The deeds of a lie are utterly absent from its history. You who are groping along in this world in great religious perplexity, wondering what is true and what false. remember this, that all moral ideas are easily veiled in doubt. A few years ago Henry D. Thoreau and Mr. Alcott and a group of lofty minds became in doubt as to the merit of civilization and

Rousseau and Chateaubriand a similar cloud was passing at the same time in France. Thus came doubt and hid for an hour so mighty a good as all the civilization of all time. It destroyed all the arts, it silenced music, it laughed at industry, it resolved life into a camp of bushes and a diet of roots and ber ries. Thus moral notions lie open to grave doubt, and among them every affirmation of religion. A retreat into atheism, into the wild bushes and wild berries, is always possible; but against this temptation place the whole career of mankind, and you will easily conclude that the religion of humanity contains the outlines of a truth. As the Thoreaus, and the Alcotts, the Emersons were called back from their tents and vales by the mighty voice of the world they had abandoned, as the roar of all the combined thoughts and achievements of the past and the present came. to them all day and all night, telling them that civilization was not a blunder, but a truth, so the heart bewildered in religion may become reassured if it will turn from the small to the great, and will ask the human soul every where to sum up for it the values of a faith in God. To you thus gazing, religion will come in the similitude of a that soul which omits the element of fact, not a truth of which you cannot doubt, but as an idea standing near by the most absolute verity. It is indeed possible to question the authority of Christ, but to question the authority of atheism, that god of night and oblivion, is more possible and easy still; for it has never acted like a truth, carrying men to grandeur on proud wings. And hence the soul, filled with the solemn mystery of life and death, would better

S.sepy Tom, the Fastest Pacer in the World. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial at Xenia, Ohio, sends to that paper the following interesting biography of Sleepy Tom, the wonder-fal blind horse that lately astonished everybody in Chicago by pacing a mile in 2:124: Greene county is justly proud of her wonderful pacer, Sleepy Tom, whose have excited the admiration of amazed thousands at the leading races this season. His history is no less interesting than his unequaled "going," and I give it as it has been gathered from such sources as warrant its truth in every particular. He was foaled in the village of Bellbrook, this county. June 22, 1868. His dam, a Sam Hazzard mare, then kept for breeding purposes alone, was 20 years old at the time of his birth. She was a fine pacer, and was formerly owned by William Simmerson, who used her as a saddle-mare. Old Pocahontas was Tom's granddam, and made her best time in 2:171, while carrying Tom's sire, old Tom Rolf. Mr. Isaac Dingler, of Bellbrook, paid $50 for the chance of the colt, and when he was 3 years old had him trimmed, and then put him in charge of his son Charley, who began training him upon the river-bottom track, near that village, and greatly injured the young horse instead of improving him. His first race was paced on the Dayton fair-grounds against a brown Gypsy mare; time, 3:35. The best time ever made by Tom while owned by Mr. Dingler was 2:22½, which he made while pacing against Sleepy George, Nellie Granger, Tom Hendricks and Bay Sally, at the Piqua races. While being trained by Mr. Dingler on the Dayton track in 1874, from too much hard driving he took a severe cold, which ettled in his eyes, causing finally the total loss of his sight.

Under the management of Clem Beachie, of Lebanon, Ohio, he was "shut out" on 2:48 time in the fall of 1875. Mr. Dingler then withdrew him from the track, as his eyesight was almost gone and his fast pacing considered at an end, and soon after sold him to a carriage-painter by the name of Milliard for a note of $125, approved by Ephraim Bumgardner, of Bellbrook. Milliard abused the horse shamefully. At one time he hitched him to a sleigh and drove him seventeen miles in seventy minutes, and, had he not been stopped and arrested for fast driving by the civil authorities of Spring Valley, he would have driven him still farther. When sleighing season was about past that winter, Milliard drove him to this city and succeeded in making a trade with William H. Corry, who kept a livery and feed stable here. He thought he had driven a good bargain when he accepted in lieu of the blind horse a crippled 3-year-old colt known as "Gum-elastic Bill," a shyster watch, and a quart of shotgun whiskey, all valued at about $30. Corry held possession of the horse for some time, but put him to little more than ordinary use. His late owner, and success ful driver still, Stephen C. Phillips, of this city, kept close watch over the horse during this time, and was known to declare more than once that he would yet own Sleepy Tom if it took every cent he could rake and scrape up to buy him, and he finally succeeded in driving a bargain with Corry and securing the horse at a small cost, not to exceed $100, it is said. He immediately began to give him a careful and thorough training, and after last year's rather unsuccessful course upon the track, at the races, has at last produced the wonder of the day, Sleepy Tom, the hero of the unequaled vacing time 2:124 hero of the unequaled pacing time, 2:121, at the Chicago races last week, and the winner of the races this year at Jackson, Mich., East Saginaw, Mich., Toledo, Cincinnati, Louisville, Columbus, and Chicago, against the best competition the country has yet produced; and the horse which sold at Columbus for $6,000,

A recent cable dispatch from London says: "At the 800-yards range at Wimbledon yesterday, Frank Hyde, American, Lieut. Col. Fenton, and nother, made each seven consecutive bull's-eyes, the highest possible score, in the contest for the Armorer's Company prize. In the shooting off the ties, each made three bull's-eyes. In the pool shooting, Morse, American, made almost an unbroken line of bull's eyes. Milton Farrow, an American, made the highest score for the single-barreled sporting rifles, in a contest for the Martin Smith prizes."

Just so. The North was solid for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, and she will be solid for Garfield in 1880. How do you like the prospect?

Last week the Democracy put in circulation, through their own organs and such independent sheets as they were able to bamboozle, a statement that Senator Jones, of Nevada, had gone over to the Democratic ranks. This was followed by a letter from the Senator vigorously denying the accusation as false, and stating that at no time has he considered Republican success of so much importance to the country as at the present.

In order to insure an honest election in Indiana next Tuesday, a proposition was made by the managers of the two dominant parties to have the officers of election appointed from both, that the Supervisor's should be of our party, and the clerk and register of election appointed from the other. Upon this proposition, the Cincinnati Inquirer, through one of its correspondents, makes the following comments:

"If the policy of flooding the State with Supervisors and Deputy Marshals is pursued, there is an almost absolute certainty that the 12th of October will be disgraced by bloody riots. The Democrats are desperately in earnest this year."

Very characteristic, that when any effort is made to secure a free and fair ballot, it should be followed by threats of "bloody riots" by Democrats who get "desperately in earnest." It looks as if that were not the kind of ballot they wanted, their candidates letter of acceptance to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Col. Ingersoll, in his Rockford, Ill., speech, made the following comment on General Hancock's letter in which he promises to veto any legislation his party may pass, looking to the payment of rebel claims:

"This is a strange procedure, a candidate certifying to his party in this country, where the rule is for a party to certify to its candidate. But how did he suspect that his party would ask the allowing of rebel claims? Garfield has written no letter indicating that he would veto any law that his party might pass. If he had certified to his party, as Hancock has done, the party would have been insulted. It would have said, attend to your own party.' affairs, but do not dare to certify to the moral character of the Republican party. Hancock says, I will not allow these ragamuffins, these rebels, who place me in power to have a law that I don't want. Between the hungry herd and the American people I will put the shield of my veto. All I want is to be elected, and they may go to the devil. It won't do. Gen. Haucock might die and who next? Death has never elected a good President. It always makes a frightful mistake."

ITENS I ROM THREE OAKS. ' Oct. 6, 1880.

Three Oaks has a business boom now, the wheat trade, and that gives all other business a boom. Merchants have all they can do to deal out goods to customers. The farmers can get gold, silver or greenbacks for their wheat. The streets are blocked up with teams loaded with the choicest kind of winter wheat. Sixty-one loads were received yesterday, and many stored their wheat at different points in the village and returned home. The R. R. Co., with their facilities, could not receive the grain as fast as the wagon loads arrived. We want a grain elevator. At this hour, 9 a. m., there are twenty teams waiting to unload. the fact is, a higher price is paid for wheat in Three Oaks than at any other point in Berrien or Laporte counties. Ten years ago cord wood was a legal tender for all debts in Three Oaks, now wheat is the great staple.

This section of country can't be beat for its large yield and choice quality of grain, splendid quality of fruit, fine herds of cattle, sheep and hogs, and above all an intelligent class of people. A portion are called Greenbackers, a portion Republicans and a portion Democrats. We hope all may east an honest ballot and have a fair count.

The "Blarsted" Britishers are taking Not only that: Under this tariff which they want to tear down, the a great interest in America this camtime has come when you are undersellpaign, and spending considerable amount of money in forwarding English interest therein. We are in receipt of one of the 50,000 pamphlets entitled, "The Western Farmer of America," by Augustus Mongredien, author of "Free Trade and English Commence" that have been circulated in this county at British expense. The books are printed in London, and at an expense that brings their retail price to ten cents, although they are distributed gratuitously. The work strongly advocates with the Democratic platform of 1880, an American "tariff for revenue only." Knowing full well that such a policy adopted in the United States will at once open up a market in this country for Mr. Evarts likens the Democratic | the products of their now idle workshops and factories, they of course work all manner of means to bring man who broke his wife's head with our people to its adoption. But canthe framed motto, "God Bless Our | not our laboring men who depend wages in American workshops, and the manufacturers of the country see that the starting of British manufacturing interests by that method would be at the expense of their own interest? The Democratic party becomes the willing agent of Great Britain in the advocacy of "a tariff for revenue only" while the Republicans believe in looking sharp after our own home manufacturing interests. In Great Britain, this question is forming a most prominent and important matter of difference in the political discussion of this campaign. The parties are outspoken in their beliefs on this question: The Democratic in the interest of British and Republican of American manufactures. "Which of the two is the best for us to support?" is the question that is brought before every voter of the country to decide and it ought not be very hard to decide whether your interests are Amer-

> "The current expenses of the national government require a vast annual revenue. There are under the constitution but three ways in which that revenue can be raised. One is by direct taxation, by laying a tax which, according to the constitution, must be a per capita tax, every man, woman. and child paying equally so much, share and share alike. No political party, no political leader, no demagogue in this country dares to advocate that mode of raising revenue, although every student of history and political economy knows that it is the logical fellow of the doctrine of free trade The second mode of raising revenue is by what is called excises, or, as we have come to know them, internal revenue taxation. The only remaining mode is by laving duties upon the productions, the manufactures, the articles of merchandise which are imported from other lands to us. The tariff laws do that, and the tariff laws speak loudly of your interests and your interests speak pointedly of them. Now, in the absence of a suggestion from a Democratic neighbor, I am going to tell you the features of this proposed change, which I believe lie in the not far future of Democratic success. A short time ago the national Democracy assembled in that city called the Paris of America, the largest city of your State. There, as John Quincy Adams once said, "speak-tract from Senator Conkling's speech at Cleveland, referring to the tariff quesproclaimed the Democratic avengel.

Turning back to the declaration which is specifically renewed I find this: 'We denounce the present tariff, levied upon nearly 4,000 articles, as a masterpiece injustice and false pretense. It has impoverished many industries to subsidize a few, it has degraded American manufactures, it has cut down the sale of the American manfactures at home and abroad, and depleted returns of American agriculture, and industry followed by onehalf of our people.

My Democratic neighbors, not doubting that you are candid, I ask you: Is ration true? It has two branches. Are either of them true? Is it true that the present tariff has prostrated and enervated agriculture, that great, underlying industry which is the broadest and deepest foundation of national wealth? Let me ascertain whether it is true. In 1860, exactly twenty years ago, all the sur-plus products of agriculture which came from the soil of all this country, from the polific garden of the world Kentucky, and Dunn, of Arkansas, mighty tract of inexhaustible fertility each one bag; Samuel S. DEALERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION, DETROIT, Sept. 25, 1830.

DEAR SIR:-The executive committee of the Michigan Liquor Dealers

Protective Association, in compliance with their duty, have made a thorough investigation of the candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor of this State with the following results:

Republican candidate for Governor, at his residence at Saginaw, and during an interview of over two hours" duration we could get no expression from him in the least favoring our cause; he absolutely refused to state whether he favored prohibition or not, and would not, say that he was in favor of the obnxious features of our present liquor laws. Upon our return home we wrote him a letter asking him to state to us his position in writing upon the principal points of interest to our association. In his reply he again refused to answer any of our questions. In addition to the above.

Mr. Jerome immediately after his nomination took Robert E. Frazer, the president of the temperance associations of the State, to East Saginaw, and they together addressed a meeting held for the purpose of ratifying Je rome's nomination; and since that time he has been conducting his canvas either in company with Mr. Frazer or the Rev. Mr. Miller, both extreme prohibition advocates. From the above facts we are fully determined that Mr.

Jerome is opposed to our cause, and if pathy with the prohibitionists. Mr. Crosby, the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, has been promitemperance organizations at Grand Rapids, where he lives, and our Kent county associations advise us that he is entirely opposed to our business interests. We wrote him a similar letter to the one sent Mr. Jerome, and he positively refused to answer our questions; and if elected our Lieutenant Governor we have no doubt he will be found acting opposed to our inter-

The committee had an interview with F. M. Holloway, the Democratic candidate for Governor, in which he did not hesitate to say that he was opposed to prohibitory legislation, and aiso to all the obnoxious features of our present law, and in favor of reasonable tax. We wrote him a similar letter to the one sent to the Republican candidate, to which he has returned answer in every way favorable to our cause, and we have no doubt, if he should be elected Governor that he would use all proper influence to give

We called upon D. H. Jerome, the ciently explains itself:

plus agricultural produce sold in the great auction of the world. Ten years afterwards, and ten years ago the surplus products of the United States sold for $72,000,000; (I will drop fractions now, and speak in round numbers,) rose in 10 years from $24,000,000 to $72,000,000. During the succeeding 10 years, that 10 years ending now, how much, think you, paid the world for the surplus products of the farmers of America? The surplus products of that agriculture which the Democratic party says lies bleeding in the streets, trampled under the oppressive hoof of an inconvenient and protective tariff, sold for $228,000,000. That is one part of this Democratic statement. Is the other part of it true? What is the other part? This follows: "We demand that all custom house taxation shall be only for revenue.' Why should that be so? There is a great variety of importations-importations of articles which Ohio cannot produce, which no zone in which our country lies can produce-tea and coffee for example. A tariff for revenue only. There is nothing more convenient to tax than tea and coffee. It is measurable, it is a single article, the importation is very great. But do you want to raise revenue from it? Everybody uses it. It competes with no American manufacture. If you lay duties upon it which will lead it to the water's edge, it protects and fosters an American industry; but if you want a tariff for revenue only there is the most convenient of all things. Turn to the next article. Take iron; iron, the monarch of all the metals, iron in its own form, iron as steel, as Bessemer steel, iron in all the innumerable forms, for man's convenience, which the ingenuity of man has conceived. There is nothing that can be made of iron, from a steam boiler, from a high pressure engine on the greatest steamboat that floats, from a ocomotive engine down to a stove damper or a mouse trap, which cannot be made in Ametica.

ing Great Britain in many of these very articles in the markets of the It is not wise in raising revenue to select those articles for example and visit taxation upon them, so that incidentally their price is raised, and incidentially the American iron worker has just that advantage over the iron manufactured abroad who does his puddling and makes his iron out of the sinews and muscles of men paid wages so low that, thank God, no man in New York or Ohio is compelled to accept them. Here are the coal fields of our commonwealth. There, far off in the Lake Superior regions, is an exhaustless supply of metal, a wealth of metal beyond all the dreams of avarice, idle, dead and useless where it lies, but embarked on the water, coming by the cheapest of all known transportations, handled here at this busy, thriving narbor, handled at the harbor of Ashtabula, it goes down until the iron and the fuel meet, and the moment they touch each other, as by rubbing of Aladdin's lamp in the Arabian Nights' Entertainment, wealth is evolved: wealth which 50 years ago would have been doubted by all the industrial and financial skeptics of the world. Is it not worth the while of laboring man, who wants wages not to starve on, but wages enough to buy the comforts and luxuries of home, to attempt to uphold, to vindicate the eternal respectability, before God and man, of honest industry and labor? Take another mode, as only a moment will be consumed, of testing the truth or the falsity of that vicious statement. In 1860 the value of all our exports sent out of the country to any and every land whatsoever, was $173,000,000, in 1870 it was $306,000,-000, and in 1880 it had more than doubled again, and was $646,000,000 Why disturb a tariff under which agriculture does not languish? Why disturb a tariff under which every leading branch of American industry is flourishing and favored. I can give you more reasons for it. The south is the Democratic party. There, Mr. Chairman, goes sectionalism again. Let me see, the south is an agricultural region; the south produces cotton and corn, and something that corn turns into. Corn is a Canadian procuct: it changes its color; it performs the miracal of liquefaction; it turns into that mild benevolent beverage so dear and sacred to the Democratic heart: so very grateful to the Democratic stomach, and so nourishing and inspiring to Democratic principles. The south raises cotton, corn and tobacco, all agricultural. She has no manufactories to protect, has she? No; none known to Republicans. But Republicans are sectional, not familar with all the secrets and interests of the south, and you can fill an immense book with what Republicans do not know, and, possibly, you might a small one with what several Democratic statesmen have forgotten to remember. The south has no manufactories to protect; the south, therefore, has no interest in the protective tariff—she never had. The harbor of Cleveland, the harbor of Ashtubula, the lake harbors, where iron and copper are handled, are not in the southern states. Woolen mills. cotton mills, rolling mills, trip-hammers, the anvil and the loom do not flourish under the southern cross. They belong to that kind of a dress which is repainted under the northern skies. The south, therefore, has, as each one believes, an interest in free trade; in sending abroad her cotton, which is her purchasing power, and bringing back in return, through the custom houses of the realm, whatever each one chooses to buy unburdened with custom duties. Why, that is natural. We should all see the force of that if we were entirely an agricultural and non-manufacturing people. Where a man's treasure is there is his heart also: and the same thing is true of the community. The south is for free trade; therefore that declaration goes into the Democratic platform. Think you that the astute man in Ohio who leads the Democratic party. Mr. Senator Thurman, for example, of whom I mean to speak in entire respect, bowing as I do to his large abilities, and to his large acquirements, think you that Mr. Senator Thurman trained as he is in political warfare, a veteran of a hundred fights, would offer to put into a platform such a resolution as that, if the object was to adapt it to the people of Ohio alone? By no means; it is not intended for the Ohio market. And yet there seems to be a certain Democratic free trade in Ohio. I notice that free trade in scurrility and personal abuse seems to be a large factor in Democratic politics even in the state of Ohio. I undertake to say no Democratic statesman in Ohio lives who dares to go into the coal fields of Ohio, where ore is handled, into the valleys where the machinery and industry of it dangles in the air. When I speak

But the south is for free trade, trade can fully rely on his sympathy and support, and if he should be electand as the locomotive pulls the tender, as the heavy end of the scale makes ed Lietenant Governor, we have no the light end kick the beam, so the doubt will do all in his power in favor preponderating weight and power of the south end of the Democratic party of personal liberty. On the 9th day of September a delegate conference was held in the city of lifts the light and northern end until

This letter is now being sent to every one in the trade, and we rely upon you to see that the dealers and their friends, not only in your town, but in the enand all the other people, and all who tire county, are fully advised of its contents; and that they must use every effort in their power to elect Holloway and Thomson—as it is of importance the property of the material interests | to them.

At present the executive committee think it advisable that our work be conducted quietly and within our selves, and you are expected to see that this letter is kept out of the hands of any parties who would use it to damage our cause.

Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg, November 19, 1863 : It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. President: There is danger lest the election of Hancock should be so interpreted as to obscure the fact that the war ended in a conquest, not a compromise. We recongnize the dilemma in which the South is placed by the introduction of a new political element, composed mainly of the ignorant and the indigent, but we find in the manner in which that dilemma has been met evidences of the survival in those communities which still control the Democratic party of the ideas and habits nourished by slavery, in the just abhorence of which the Republican party had its birth and finds a necessity for its continued existence.

"Farmers Never Had so Mach

Money." The Chicago Tribune, of Tuesday, says: "Business at the Chicago banks is steadily increasing. The demand from country customers, both for currency and New York exchange, is improving, showing that the west is now fairly engaged in the fall trade. As compared with previous years' business begins a week or more late, owing doubtless to the independence of farmers, who seem reluctant to rush forward their surplus at present prices. Their condition now is widely different from what it was a few years ago. Then they were obliged to sell for whatever the market offered; now most of them can hold their entire crop for a whole year, if they decide this to be the best thing for them to do. There never was a time in the history of the northwest when the farmers had so much money."

A Niles reporter, writing to the Chicago Times about O. W. Powers, Democratic nominee for Congress in the fourth district, points with pride to Mr. Powers' war record. Mr. P. was ten vears old when the war begun and fourteen when it closed, and lived on a farm all through "the unpleasantness." His "war record" must be a stunner.—Evening News.

A Queer Notion. Many people think it cheaper to buy 25 cent sizes of a proprietary medicine. But they make a mistake. For instance, Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry contains about eight times the quantity of ordinary 25 cent cough balsams. Besides it takes a less quantity of Wistar's Balsam to cure a cold. A single dose is often sufficient. For deep seated Colds and Consumption it has proven itself to be the best and quickest cure ever discovered.

A NEW PAYING OCCUPATION Ladics and Gentlemen.

The Handsome Nickel Plated New Home Lamp being introduced to the public this Season, is the most meritorious article ever offered Agents to make money with, is safer, and more convenient than the Student Lamp, which has heretofore had the reputation of being the Safest Lamp made. It has a clamp to firmly attach it to the Sewing Machine, Piano, Organ, Desk, etc. The fear of the ordinary lamp being accidentally upset or thrown from the table, is entirely relieved by this simple clamp contrivance. It can be addinary lamp being accidentally upset or thrown from the table, is entirely relieved by this simple clamp contrivance. It can be adjusted to throw the light just where it is wanted to suit the eyes, and can be converted into a handsome wall lamp. It has the best argand burner, a filling indica or, and convenient match box, and its price is within the reach of every one. It has been fully tested and editorially endorsed by the "Wostern Christian Advocate," Am. Christian Review," Herald and Presbyter," Journal and Messenger" and "Christian Standard," and the leading religious papers of Cincinnati, and is endorsed by the Mayor and Post-Master of Cincinnati, the Agent of the American Express Co., and Presidents of Insurance Companies, as being the Safest, Most Convenient and best Lamp made. There are three reasons why Agents should seek such an article to canvass for—first, for its absolute safety and great convenience it is needed in every home—second, its low price makes its sale immense—third, it will be a credit to handle such an article. One southern agent writes, it sells faster than Gen. Lee's portrait sold right after the war; another writes, it beats the palmy days of the Sewing Machine, its rapid sale, low price, and liberal terms surprise old agents. Address Home Lamp Co., Cincinnati, O., mentioning our paper, and they will give you full particulars and exclusive territory to canvass in.

In another column we publish the liquor dealer's plea to the voters to support the Democratic State ticket. They don't like the Republicans. There is too much temperance about it, and what they don't want is just what good, sensible, civil ized people do want, and will have in this State.

THE democratic campaigners in this place are putting in some heavy work, making special exertions when the town is crowded as it was last Saturday. We have no way of knowing just how many drinks it cost the most faithful on that day, but from the number they were seen to buttonhole and run into the saloons, we mistrust they were not a few.

A PROPOSITION is before the citizens of Niles, to bond the city to the amount of 40,000 in aid of a railroad that claims to want to extend its line to the Lake. Niles appears to be awfully anxious to bond itself in aid of some project, or at least a few of her enthusiasts are, but if that is what they depend upon to secure that road there is some serious doubt of its com-

MR. LEVI LOGAN has our thanks for sixteen peachblow potatoes. They filled a peck measure round full. He says that the way he managed to get them to grow to that size was by covering the hills about a foot deep with straw just as the vines were coming through the ground. They need no more tending until digging time came. He says where there was no straw the potatoes were small.

MR. FRANK SPENNETTE left two potatoes on exhibition at Barmore Bros' store that weigh three pounds and three ounces, or over one and one-half pounds each. He says he dug twentyfive bushels from 125 hills. They are of the Mohawk variety. That looks like a pretty good yield now. Twentyfive years ago there was nothing thought of digging 350 bushels from an acre of ground in this vicinity, and we have known them to yield as high as 400 bushels.

THERE is one place in this town where there is sad need of some improvment, and that is by way of a railing along the sidewalk around Mr. Day's vacant lot, on corner of Day's Avenue and Front street. This is really a dangerous place when the nights are very dark. Miss Mary Grover and her uncle Mr. Cripe, of Cass county, fell off from the walk opposite Mr. Slater's shop when returning from church, Sunday evening and were quite badly bruised, besides running a great risk of breaking their necks. This is a matter that has been neglected long enough and we trust the officer who have such things in charge will attend to it at once.

THE greenback county committee have placed the name of F. D. Orcutt on their ticket as candidate for Circuit Court Commissioner, and Orcutt is out making Republican speeches. We learn too that they have again interviewed Mr. Charles F. Howe, on their hobby, and find him "soft enough" to answer their purpose. He will consent to vote for a soft money Democrat for United States Senator, if elected. So he would. He would vote for the hardest money Democrat in the state his residence four miles north-west of | if brought up as candidate for Senator. It is all easy enough to make such promises as that, but will former Republicans be bamboozled by any such

THE trial of young Hobart, in Cassopolis, was ended last Monday, by the jury bringing a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, and the laws of this State know of but one settlement of such cases, and that a life in State prison. The jury was thirty-five minutes in forming a conclusion. This finishes Mr. Hathaway's task toward earning the $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Billy Young. The Supervisors will meet next Monday when his claim will be laid before them.

THE first delegation of the Burr Robbins show, that passed through this place Sunday morning, come from Berrien Springs by way of Carpenter's school house by climbing through the transom over the door, stole the dictionary and clock. Mr. Carpenter heard them and went to the school house to see what they had done, and upon missing the goods went to the moderator, R. V. Clark, and the two followed the fellows to this place where they over-hauled them. They gave up the goods and paid $5, and were allowed to go their way rejoicing that they got off so cheaply. We have seen numerous notices of just such opperations of the followers of this show, and the proper way to have done here was to give them the full benefit of the law in such cases made and provided and which is fully lenient enough.

REFORM IS NECESSARY.—There are a few practices going on in this town that need reforming about as badly as anything can. One of them is the practice of certain dealers selling cigarettes and cigars to little boys who are not yet large enough to look over the counter without mounting a chair. These boys call regularly for their tobacco, and go away puffing as important as lords. The second reform is needed with a certain father who sends his little boy, not yet five years old, to the saloon regularly for the pot of beer, the boy always taking his share; the same father taking this same boy to the saloon and buy whisky for him to get as drunk as a loon, taking pains to keep himself in nearly the same condition most of the time. to spend their time gambling. In the first case, every tobacco dealer should sign an agreement to sell no more to any boy of less than fifteen years, or to any one who will give to them. In the second, we trust the father will sufficiently recognize our picture to do his own reforming, else his name may be made known and he should be dealt with as the man who murders his own son. It is nothing else. The officers of the law should know their duty in regard to the third, if it is not immediately desisted from, and there is but one way for them to do. Will they do of the RECORD, I take pleasure in making known to the patrons of the school some general facts connected with its welfare. I hope also to suggest, from time to time, how, by co operating with the teachers, the people may assist in improving the school. It is a wellknown principle in hydrostatics that water will not rise above its source. I think the same may be said of schools, churches and other public institutions They partake largely of the tone and sentiment of the community in which they are. The schools are of the people and for the people; and the interest manifested in them by the people, as a rule, accurately gauges their success. The patrons of the school are cordially invited to visit it and become acquainted with the work done by teachers and pupils.

in the West.

The sky looked far in distant haze; The wild dove's mournful song In cadence sweet from out the maize Was borne the lanes along. The willie-weaver trilled his nots
From willows bending low,
In furzy grass beyond the most
Where freckled lilies grow.

There was a peace in all the air; The reapers' distant hum, The binders, busy here and there, Were gathering harvest home. A perfect rest crept o'er my heart; The evening shadows fell; My steps must turn back to the mark Where city fashions dwell.

But often I will seek the rest
Of country shade and sward,
Where peaceful thoughts sweep o'er the breas
And praises to the Lord.

Brother Gardner's Wrath. Just as the honored President of the Lime Kiln Club was about to leave his house on Indiana street to proceed to Paradise Hall and open the meeting, as usual, Mrs. Gardner climbed the line fence to borrow a "drawing of lard" of a neighbor. In some way, unexplained as yet, her feet became entangled in the boards, and she threw down twentyeight feet of fencing, and brought up on the ground with a sprained ankle. The President was therefore detained at home fifteen minutes beyond the hour for opening the meeting. There were nearly eighty members on hand, and a spirit of deviltry seemed to grasp right hold of even the old gray-heads. Trustee Pullback, who is in his 67th year, danced a regular breakdown in the middle of the floor; the Hon. John Paradox cuffed hats with the Rev. Penstock; Waydown Bebee threw a dipper of water over the sacred person of Deacon Hastings, and Samuel Shin and Elder Toots fell over a bench and jarred the hali to its foundations while engaged in a back-hold wrestle. In the midst of this jubilee Brother Gardner walked in. Some one in the back end of the hall just then threw a hardboiled egg at the honored pate of Judge Goslin, and it struck the President fair between the eyes. He got up after a minute, brushed the dust off his clothes and proceeded to his chair, and when the triangle sounded the hall was as still as death.

"Gem'len, I beg to inquiar'if dis am de nineteenth century, or if we hav' returned to de barbaric aige?" softly inquired the President, as he felt of the bump created by the egg.

There was no answer. Here and there an old member could be seen rolling up the cotton blossoms bebind his eyeballs, but not a whisper 'oroke the "I doan' know who frowed dat egg nor who begin dis scene of levity," resumed the President; "but I neber want to see ar y mo' of it. I didn't intend to pe's de collekshun hat aroun' at dis metin, bein' as de Treasurer am a long ways ahead, but de collector will at once pass aroun'. Let me add dat de pussun who raised dis bump between my eyes musn't toss less dan half a dollar into de hat." Quickened conscience made the collection foot up over $10, and there wasn't a coin smaller than a dime in the hat .- Detroit Free Press.

His Best Sermon Spoiled.

Brother Cuthbert Roach, brother of the Rev. Elijah Rosch, many years ago moved from Charlotte county, Va., to Trigg county, Ky. He told me when he went to the Little River Association, Ky., he heard a leading minister in that association, and a very good man, preach from the following text: Acts ii., 40: "Save yourselves from this untoward generation." The old gentleman pronounced the word "untoward," as if it was untow-erd, and went on to tell the andience that in the days of the apostles the people lived in walled cities, with towers and battlements for their defence; that the apostle used the word figuratively here, to show how defenceless was that wicked generation, without towers of strength, into which they could enter and defend themselves from the wrath of God. Thus it is at the present day, said he, the sinner is exposed and has no tower in which to defend himself. And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, "save yourselves from this untow-erd generation." As they returned from the church, Brother Roach said to the preacher: "Did you not give a wrong interpretation to the word untoward in your text to-day by pronouncing it in-correctly?" He replied, "Oh no Brother Rosch, I know I am correct, for I have preached that sermon at least twenty times at different places, and the brethren have told me it is the best sermon they ever heard me preach." "Well, well," says Brother Roach, "we will see what the dictionary says as to the meaning and its pronunciation when we get to the house." After they had looked at the dictionary the good old brother, with evident mortification and regret, exclaimed: "Brother Boach, this is too bad! You have spoiled one of my best sermons! I shall never be able to preach it again."—Richmond (Va.) Religious Herald.

Anecdote of Got. Allen. Several years ago, when the building of the Scioto Valley road was on the tapis, a delegation of prominent citizens of Columbus, Circleville and Portsmouth met in the parlor of one of our hotels, in conjunction with a number of our own citizens, to consult as to the best means of pushing the en-terprise to completion. To give more than usual eclat to the gathering, the "Old Governor" was induced to attend and give his advice (Chillicotheans were always fond of "showing him off" to strangers). After the business portion of the meeting had been dispatched the conversation turned upon general topics, and finally some one asked the Governor why he did not re-enter politics and become a candidate for the Presidency. This was enough to set the Governor going. Taking up his personal history from the earliest day he recounted in his impressive manner, he recounted in his impressive manner, step by step, the events of his life, until from a poor boy he had served this district as Representative, and the State two terms as Senator, "having for compeers such men as Harry Clay, Webster, Calhoun and Tom Benton. Leaving the Senate, "gentlemen," he continued, "I retired to my home and gave myself to study—profound study; deep study—and after twenty-five years of companionship with my books I came to the conclusion, gentlemen, that to be the President of a little patch of territory on a third-rate planet, by——, territory on a third-rate planet, by —, was unworthy the ambition of a statesman and a scholar!" The flashing eye the deep, Isonine intonation with which this was said, and the straightening of the form and the shake of the head which accompanied it, will readily be recalled by all who ever heard him talk upon that all-absorbing topic.—Ross County (Ohio) Register.

It is a noticeable fact that with civilization, either as respects the improve-ment of the condition of either the human or the brute creation, or even of the varied flora of the earth, comes diseases not before known. A great impulse has of late been given, both in this country and Europe, to the hatching of fish by artificial means. To such an extent has this been carried that in some portions of the British isles the fish-breeders have gone too far. Thus, at present, salmon in the Scottish rivers are suffering from a pestilence. It be gins as a skin disease, and soon a white mold eats into the head of the fish, which rubs itself to pieces, in its anygo, against grayel and rocks. Mr. Frank Buckland, the naturalist and connoisseur in salmon, thinks that the plague is the result of overstocking, just as in old times overcrowding caused typhus in jails and work-shops. Here is a hint for our pisciulturists.

The Chapman Tubular or Bored Well as shown in the "New Style," differs materially from the Driven Well, or the "Old Style," the latter being driven often meet obstacles that cannot be overcome, such as clay, hard-pan, rock and quicksand. In making the CHAPMAN WELL all these difficulties are easily overcome by boring inside and ahead of the pipe, settling the pipe as fast as the hole is formed by the tools, (we use no point but work with pipe open), thus by adding more the hole is formed by the tools, (we use no point but work with pipe open), thus by adding more reached, the screen is dropped inside and the tubing or pipe drawn back until the screen is covered as at F, Fig. 1, the "check," Fig. 2, at sched to wood rods is inserted as at J. Attach the rod to pump handle and non-corosive. To repair the pump, disconnect the rod and handle, remove the top of the pump, pull the "plunger," and with a grab pull the "check," then use a "puller" to remove the screen and you have everything on top of ground. > Absolutely and Chemically Pure. 'ARM AND HAMMER" BRAND.

> > CHURCH & CO'S PREMIUM

BI-CARB. SODA

Inpure Saleratus or Bi-Carb. Soda, (which is the same thing) is of a slightly dirty white color. It may appear white, examined by itself, but a COMPARISON WITH CHURCH & CO'S "ARM AND HAMMER" BRAND will show the difference.

See that your Saleratus and Baking Soda is white and PURE, as should be ALL SIMILAR SUBSTANCES used for food.

Honsekeepers who prefer bread made with yeast, will improve its quality, make it rise better and prevent it from souring, by adding one-balf teaspoonful of Church & Co's Soda or Saleratus. Be sure and not use too much. The use of this with sour milk, in preference to Baking Powder, saves twenty times its cost.

First Look in a Mirror. The effect which the sudden seeing of themselves as others see them had upon several Siamese women, is narrated by A few weeks ago a company of Siamese women came to see me and to look at my house. They consider it a great event if I invite them through my rooms, and let them look at my bed, my tables, my chairs, my pictures and nick-nacks, and especially if they can get a look at themselves in the mirror on my

One or two of those who came had been here before, and they were telling of how they looked in the glass, till the others were all anxious to see too, so they gathered in a crowd and stood before the mirror.

One quick look, and then a surprised, startled cry, and some of them hid their faces, others jumped away, and some looked about to see who was really there. They had never seen themselves before, and did not know how miserably they looked, with their black teeth and naked bodies. They drew their scarfs over their breasts, and tried to hide from the sight of themselves.

Colorado." This could be said without fear of much contradiction. All this is changing apparently. Every succeeding year notes the fall of more rain than the previous year. I have been here since the last of March, and I will venture to say that as much rain has fallen in Colorado as in Connecticut during the same period. All of the "old Barnacles," as the old settlers ("59ers") are called, note with increased astonishment and disgust the prevalence of rain-storms in this unusually dry section. Of course the farmers of the State enjoy the prospective change. The time may come when the necessity of irrigation will not be felt as now. The interests of agriculture in this State are to a considerable degree overshadowed by the mining interests, and in consequence their importance is but slightly understood beyond the boundaries of the State. But a small portion of the State is susceptible of cultivation, and the success of raising good crops has depended heretofore and does now to a large extent depend upon an or ganized system of irrigation. And in those portions of Northern Colorado and in the San Louis valley and in other localities in southern part of the State State where proper provisions have been made for irrigation, nowhere can be found more bountiful harvests or beautiful fields.-Denver Correspondence.

Advantages of "Plain Living." Fuith Rochester says there are many good reasons for living on plain, simplycooked but nourishing food. Variety is necessary; that is a judicious min-gling of dishes of grains, vegetables, fruits and meats. There need be but few kinds at one a cal if the family are agreed in their testes. The larger family, as a general rule, the more need of variety at each meal, that each one may follow natural instinct in selection, as far as can be done with due deference to the rights of others. Plain living reduces not only our expenses, but taught by both reason and experience; plain living reduces our liability to diseases of all kinds. As I said recently, there has been but one case of absolute sickness (down sick in bed, undressed all day) in our little family of four chi dren during the more than dozen years since the eldest was born. I think this is due to care in regard to the general rule of health, as no preventive or curative medicines-not even catnip

Yesterday a daughter complained of slight sore throat—a very unusual com-plaint here—and I felt some little uneasiness, as diphtheria is abroad in this part of the country. But I felt condemned for the dinner of the day before—hot bread pancakes, upon which I knew the little girl was eating guite too much butter in a melting condition, followed by pumpkin pie, which dispersions of the pumpkin pie, which dispersions of the pumpkin pier which dispersions of the process of the proc graced me because it was too sweet and spicy for health. She had the good sense (or the cultivated instinct) to go without supper last night, and a wet cloth on her throat during sleep, cov-ered by a dry one, perfected a cure of

The Middy and the Lady.

A well-merited repartee was dealt by a smart Midshipman to the daughter of a K. C. B. at a ball given by the latter to the naval officers on the North Paci-fic station. The middy was bold enough to ask the young lady to accept him for her partner. "Oh dear, no," said the supercilious beauty. "Ma never allows me to dance with a Midshipman!" Somebody let her know the middy was a Lord, and she repented, and by and-by reminded him he was engaged to her for the next dance. The youngster, however, was not so easily to be mollified, and, remembering the lady had native blood in her veins, smilingly replied: "Oh dear, no! Ma never allows me to dance with squaws."-Chambers' following anecdote of the witty poet, Phœbe Cary: On one occasion when Phœbe Cary was at the museum in New York, looking about at the curiosities, I preceded her, and had passed down a couple of steps. She, intently watching a big anaconda in a case at the top of the stairs, walked off (not noticing them) and fell. I was just in time to catch her in my fall. "I am more lucky than that first woman was who fell through the influence of the serpent," remarked Phobe, as she recovered himself.

Children who live habitually on plain fare show evil effects from rich food much more quickly than those who live regularly on the latter, and some suppose this proves that their stomachs are weaker on account of plain living, but I think it is because they have a more correct or healthy tone.

The Hartford Times thereon adds that next morning the resident of San Fernando street found his porch and front yard covered with umbrellas, restored under cover of the friendly ing ring at the door-bell, and the postman gave him the following letter:
