AN ACQUAINTANCE.

BY JOHN W. BAYTON.

Ab Abner lived a lonely life, for he could not with his own, nor find life for his, so cross was his nature.

And as often as he said himself he had the good of his life.

He would have been, and he would have been, but he would not have been.

And he would have been, and he would have been, but he would not have been.

And he would have been, and he would have been, but he would not have been.

OLD-TIME REMINISCENCES.

The New England of the South, and the Necessity for its Development.

BY W. W. W.

As I trust many of you are by this time aware, I am not writing merely to amuse those who chance to honor me with their attention, but with the hope that what is here set down bearing upon past and existing conditions of the South may serve to the good of the country.

What in the end may subvert the advantage and prosperity, in some degree, at least, of both sections. I purpose to deal to some extent with the substantial resources and attractions with which the South is really so richly endowed, in some degree, at least, of both sections.

Remarkable Tragedy.

An extraordinary tragedy was enacted some time ago at Scholwin, in Prussian Westphalia.

Two lads of 13 and 16, whose father and mother had died a few months before, and after their bereavement had lived with their maternal grandfather, were found on the 30th of July dead and horribly mutilated in their bedroom.

From the text of a written declaration found on a table in the room, and signed by the older boy, it appeared that both lads had resolved to die, finding life unendurable without their parents, and had concerted the means of their death, and having set down upon paper their wishes with respect to the disposal of their clothing, books, and playthings, the elder boy had shattered his brother's head with a hammer, using such force that the unfortunate child's skull was beaten in and his brains scattered over the floor.

After deliberating on their deaths, the youthful murderer took poison, opened the veins in his left wrist with a razor, and discharged a bullet into his forehead from a revolver. The grandfather was not suspected of any part in the tragedy, when the housekeeper knocked at the door of the room in which the brothers slept together, and obtaining no answer, fetched a locksmith to pick the lock, and enter the apartment.

When the door was opened, the mother, who had been called upon by the housekeeper, entered the room, and found her two children dead and horribly mutilated. She was so overcome by the sight that she fainted, and was carried to the hospital, where she died a few days later.

The Deep Sea.

At a recent meeting of the Christiana Society of Science, Robert Collected stated during the last Atlantic expedition amounting to thirty days, and proved to be of great interest to science, as the fish had, with a few exceptions, been taken from depths from which no Arctic fishes had previously been obtained.

The apparatus employed was the so-called trawl net, constructed on the same principle as that employed by the English fishermen on Dogger Bank. Fish were taken up with that apparatus from depths of 1,400 and 1,500 fathoms. Five species proved to be entirely new to science, and were necessary to classify one of them under a new genus. This was caught at a depth of 1,200 fathoms, and was about one foot long. While alive it was beautifully rose colored, all over, and was so glib and glibulous a substance that it was half transparent, and the heart could be seen performing its functions; and large portions of the brain, the entrails and the whole backbone were visible through the skin, and the gills were transformed into two long, split threads, which gave the fish a very peculiar appearance. It was named Rhodichthys Regina, and belongs to a group of the gonim deep-water fishes which is chiefly found in the North Atlantic seas.

Among the other species several were known only through single specimens scattered here and there in museums, and the descriptions of which are generally incorrect and defective. Rhodichthys Regina, however, was one of the few specimens have been found near Greenland and other places in the Polar sea (almost always taken by chance from the stomachs of sharks), appeared to exist in quantities everywhere at these great depths, where the temperature of the water is under zero. It has only been the lack of suitable apparatus which has heretofore prevented the discovery.

The Fathers of the Church. Some very stories are yet extant in Virginia and Pennsylvania of the old Methodist and Presbyterian clergymen, who, when the time came, first settled, used to wander up and down the wilderness, like Elijah, preaching and warning the ungodly.

One of the most noted was Lorenzo Dow, who, it is said, once followed a robber into a barn, and arrested him single-handed, brought him into the VICTORY!

Free speech, free ballot, and a fair count was what was called for by the voters of the country. Tuesday, it was a grand walk away for the Republicans. Garfield and Arthur carrying the solid North, with the exception of New Jersey, California, and Nevada.

Secretary Dossey, of the Republican National Committee, telegraphs The Inter Ocean that the United States Senate will be a tie, with Vice-President Arthur in the chair to cast the deciding vote. Also that the Republicans will have a majority of from 16 to 18 in the House of Representatives, that General Garfield has 230 electoral votes, or 51 more than a majority.

The result, so far as we are able to give at the time of going to press, is as follows:

The Republican majority in the State of New York is about 40,000; in Massachusetts about 40,000; in Pennsylvania 20,000; in Maine about 6,000 majority; in Rhode Island, 6,000; in Vermont, 25,000; in New Hampshire, 5,000; in Connecticut, 2,500; Ohio, 25,000; Indiana, over 8,000; Michigan, about 25,000; Illinois, about 40,000; and the Republicans have gained at least one Congressman. Iowa, about 50,000; Nebraska, 25,000 majority; Minnesota, about 15,000; Kansas, 30,000.

The Republicans elect the entire county ticket in this county by majorities ranging from 100 to 1,000, and hold their place in the legislature with a full delegation. Following is the vote by townships, so far as we have been able to get the returns:

It is to be hoped that we shall never have any more solid section of any kind in politics, but that the whole country shall be the solid for the right and against the wrong. Solidity of any one section, either North, South, East or West, for the mastery of the whole will most surely rend the country asunder and be the death of all Republican institutions.

On the afternoon of the 14th ult., while Mark Price and family of Wewas were attending a Republican rally at Bridgman, where J. C. Burrows set forth the principles which are so dear to Mr. Price, that he forgot all about home and friends, their house was entered, and things generally appropriated to the use of the invaders. Between thirty and forty of their relatives and friends had gained admittance and prepared a bountiful supper, and were ready to take seats at the table when the heads arrived. All were quietly seated in one room with lights turned down and doors closed. Immediately upon the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Price the lights were turned up, and such a sudden chapping of hands that Mrs. Price started back in amazement, exclaiming, "what does all this mean?" when some one responded, saying: "You were married twenty-five years ago to-day." After the excitement quieted down, each seemed to throw off all the shackles of restraint and enter into a joyful freedom of social intercourse, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Sherwood being the original groomsmen and bridesmaid took charge of the remaining exercises. After being arranged at the table, Alton Sherwood arose and made a few very appropriate remarks concerning their past history, and the great reason they had to be thankful for the privilege of meeting as they had. After returning thanks all did justice to the next scene. Supper being ended, Mr. and Mrs. Price were escorted to another room, while the burden of the table was changed, the gifts being tastefully arranged. They were then brought back and introduced as the same couple who, twenty-five years ago had vowed to share each other's fortunes the remainder of their lives. A brief review of the changes which that time had wrought in their families was then given by Mrs. Alton Sherwood, which was followed by a few remarks from others. Mr. Price expressed himself as much cheered by the demonstrations of his friends, many of them not having visited them for several years. There were thirteen present who attended the first wedding. Five went with them to Niles and saw the ceremony performed by Esquire Glenn, who has long since passed away. The following is a list of the presents: A large lamp; Mrs. Resalinda Howland; silver cator, James and Amanda Phillips; silver pitcher, Cora Price; set of silver teapots, Mrs. Van Buren; set of silver teapots, Mrs. and Mrs. Lily Weaver; set of glassware, Mrs. Malong Morgan; silver butter knife, Thomas Price; set of glass goblets, Mrs. Margarette Babcock; match safe, Mrs. John Cox; silver napkin ring, Mr. Alfred Sherwood; apron and handkercher, Aunt Jimma Sherwood; Britannia teapot and silver table-spoons, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Sherwood; silver butter knife, Mrs. J. P. Reese; silver knives and forks, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Sherwood; silver dollar, Mrs. Arnold Pierce; damask towel, Mrs. Ida Anstess; glass pitcher, Mrs. Mary Marquis; salt cator, Miss Laura Sherwood; some handwork, Misses Minnie and Carrie Sherwood.

Over two and a quarter millions of dollars in French and German gold was brought to this country by one steamer last week. The Democratic managers when closely cornered, finally acknowledged that the "Chinese" letter credited to General Garfield was a forgery. The public debt statement for October shows a decrease in the debt for the month $7,033,534, a decrease of $33,851,897, since June 30, 1880. The total debt less cash in the treasury, November 1 was $1,008,400,427.

They were then brought back and introduced as the same couple who, twenty-five years ago had vowed to share each other's fortunes the remainder of their lives. A brief review of the changes which that time had wrought in their families was then given by Mrs. Alton Sherwood, which was followed by a few remarks from others. Mr. Price expressed himself as much cheered by the demonstrations of his friends, many of them not having visited them for several years. There were thirteen present who attended the first wedding. It is to be hoped that we shall never have any more solid section of any kind in politics, but that the whole country shall be the solid for the right and against the wrong. Solidity of any one section, either North, South, East or West, for the mastery of the whole will most surely rend the country asunder and be the death of all Republican institutions.

On the afternoon of the 14th ult., while Mark Price and family of Wewas were attending a Republican rally at Bridgman, where J. C. Burrows set forth the principles which are so dear to Mr. Price, that he forgot all about home and friends, their house was entered, and things generally appropriated to the use of the invaders. Between thirty and forty of their relatives and friends had gained admittance and prepared a bountiful supper, and were ready to take seats at the table when the heads arrived. All were quietly seated in one room with lights turned down and doors closed. Immediately upon the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Price the lights were turned up, and such a sudden chapping of hands that Mrs. Price started back in amazement, exclaiming, "what does all this mean?" when some one responded, saying: "You were married twenty-five years ago to-day." After the excitement quieted down, each seemed to throw off all the shackles of restraint and enter into a joyful freedom of social intercourse, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Sherwood being the original groomsmen and bridesmaid took charge of the remaining exercises. After being arranged at the table, Alton Sherwood arose and made a few very appropriate remarks concerning their past history, and the great reason they had to be thankful for the privilege of meeting as they had. After returning thanks all did justice to the next scene. Supper being ended, Mr. and Mrs. Price were escorted to another room, while the burden of the table was changed, the gifts being tastefully arranged. They were then brought back and introduced as the same couple who, twenty-five years ago had vowed to share each other's fortunes the remainder of their lives. Buchanan Schools.

Table with columns: School, Pupils, Teachers, etc. Includes Buchanan, Niles, and other schools.

The totals are omitted in the above tabular report for lack of space.

It will be seen from this report that there have been thirty-six new enrollments during the past month, making the total enrollment for the school four hundred and fifteen. I am sorry to report that tardiness and absence are on the increase. These are evils that seriously impair the effective working of a school; they can be remedied, in part or whole, only by the earnest co-operation of parents and teachers.

At the end of each month the standing of each pupil in his classes, department and punctuality, for the month is placed on the black-boards, so that parents, by visiting the school once a month, can ascertain how well their children are doing. Parents, have you not interest enough in your children to visit them at their work once a month? J. F. JORDAN, Principal.

GALLEN, Mich. CHRONICLE.—CHAPTER II.

Lo and behold, on the 27th day of the tenth month of the fourth year of the reign of Hayes, the people of the mighty city of Galien, and the country round about, did gather themselves together from the east and the west, and from the north and the south, inasmuch that the mighty city was filled to overflowing. And a mighty man whose name is Burrows, who is a Garfieldite, came forth and spoke many words of truth and soberness; and the people were much strengthened in spirit and purpose. And the people saith one to another, surely this man speaketh to us sound doctrine, which no man can overthrow, be he either Hancockite or Weaverite. And with many cheers for the man Garfield, who shall be our next chief ruler, the people departed to their several places of abode.

CHAPTER III.

And on the following day it came to pass, that a mighty man from the city of Buchanan, a Hancockite and a toothpuller, came to the city of Galien, and having joined himself unto two other Hancockites, after laying aside his dignity, he writeth on the building of the Churchillite, "320." Now the Churchillite had heard that this number meant something bad, so he waxeth much angry, and he saith to the doctor of dentistry, you must obliterate that from my building or I will bring thee before one of the magistrates of this city. And the Hancockite being much afraid, saith, lo, I repent in sackcloth and ashes that I have done this thing. Come thou with me to the Ritzlerite and drink with me some hop juice and ales, until this number shall be pleasing in thy sight. And the Churchillite, who is of the tribe of the Garfieldites, saith, nay, I will not. It is not good for me. Then the doctor pulleth out a piece of silver like unto 25 cents, and saith, here is much money; take thou all of it, and let it be a recompense for the damage done unto thee. Now the Churchillite waxeth exceeding wroth, and saith that money cannot be a recompense unto me for this thing. Thou must erase it from my sight. Then the noble doctor getteth some sand paper and rubbith and scoureth with all his might and main; but long before the wonderful 320 disappeared the sweat rolleth off from his massive forehead, even so much as to ruin his paper collar. And he saith, lo and behold, it is finished; is thine anger appeased? And the Garfieldite saith, thou mayst depart in peace. Go ye and sin no more. But ere he had gone farther than the inn, the Churchillite's teeth the contemptible 320 on his beloved velocipede, and he waxeth more exceeding wroth than before.

"Then burned his swartly cheek like fire, and shook his very feet or feet."

And he saith, now shalt thou go before the judges and atone for this foul deed, and he saith, rather than go there I will give thee many shekels of silver; but first let me go and ask aims of my partners in this great crime. And he returneth and payeth him much money, even unto two dollars. Then he saith to the keeper of the inn, make ready my chariot and steed, that I may depart in much haste, for this people hath turned against me, and I will depart with them. And he saith, I will save only my partners in this great sin. And he departed and returned to the wife of his bosom, a sadder but not a wiser man.

SHIMSHAL.
