THE DRUMMER.

Ross Weeks, traveling agent for Cutter & Slasher, wholesale dealers in surgical instruments and cutlery, swung himself aboard the outwardbound train just as it moved out of the depot. Now Ross was not made up after the pattern of the conventional drummer, for, strange as it may seem, he was a quiet, gentlemanly young fellow, with a good deal of self-respect which led him to treat others courtcously. Ross had a dear mother and two

As he moved slowly down the aisle, his giance fell upon an unoccupied seat beside a lady—a slender figure robed in soft gray. Her profile was turned toward Ross, as she bent over a magazine. He hesitated and she looked up. Ross lifted his hat with the in-"Is this seat engaged?"

The girl—for she was not more than 18 or 19—took her satchel, which, by the way, was exactly like Ross' sample valise, and deposited it on the floor. "No, indeed," she said, with the sweetest, frankest smile in the world; and Ross made the mental comment that she was the very prettiest girl he aad ever seen.

Ross himself was a big, long-limbed fellow, and by the very law of contrast, she attracted him. She was slender and graceful, with a clear olive skin, and an oval-shaped face in which the only color was the vivid carmine of her lips. Her eyes were of a clear, dark gray with long lashes and delicately arched brows. Her hair was looped the curling end of the gray ostrich plume in her hat swept the tip of an ear, tinted like the sea shell.

Beyond that first cordial smile, Ross received no further notice—at least deeply interested in her magazine; and Ross amused himself by staring straight into the little mirror which hung at the end of the car and reflected his fair neighbor's lovely features to his

Outside, some vagrant snowflakes were loitering about in an aimless fashion, as if loth to touch the earth: but presently they began to wake up to their business, until at last there was a mad whirl of them, into a dizzy It was getting too dark to read, and so, with a long drawn breath, the young lady closed her book and turned her gaze toward the window. The lamps were lighted presently. The storm still increased, and by 7 o'clock—as Ross found at a glance at his watch—the train began to move as if clogged by the snow. "Will you be good enough to give me the time, sir?" queired the lady. Ross replied, and then ventured to remark about the weather.

After that they got on famously, and were chatting away like old acquaintances when the train came to a lecided halt—the road was blocked! Ross had learned by this time that his new acquaintance had been visiting in Boston, and was on her way home; that her parents were farmers in the northern part of Vermont, and that they were expecting her on that

She looked a trifle anxious when it was ascertained that they would be delayed some hours, but was evidently of a philosophic disposition, determined to make the best of the inevitable. She proved herself a charming traveling companion by meeting Ross' courteous advances with the same spirit in which they were tendered. She was not at all prudish; neither was she in the least bold or unladylike. Ross perceived that she was wellread, and possessed of a fine appreciation of the beautiful as well as the indicrous side of life.

In short, by the time the train began to make progress toward the station where Ross intended to change cars, he was quite certain that the young lady in gray was the only girl whom he might love and admire thoroughly. She was so lovely, and bright, and sensible, and ladylike! Really, she seemed to be all the virtues and graces con-

Ross felt a real pang of regret, when of his station. "I am sorry to sav good-bye," he said, taking up his valise, "and yet I do not even know your name." And he dropped one of his cards on the seat beside her. She looked up with the frank smile with which he had become familiar in the last few hours. "My name is--Ross bent a little lower. A whole of French Canadians were crowding past him on their way to the door, jabbering meanwhile to each other. The name, as Ross heard it through the confusion, was "Mary There was only time for a bow and a hurried good-bye, and he was gone. The next afternoon Ross entered large retail store in one of our New England cities, and meeting the proprietor, proceeded to open his valise in order to display his samples. After one glance at the contents, however, he closed the valise hurriedly, with a curious expression on his face, and a half smothered laugh in his voice, as

But of course this young man, having sisters, knew it to be a very common-place affair indeed -simply a robe de nuit-only this be-

Berrien County Record.

But, what pleased him most of all, he found in the very bottom of the satchel, a photographer's envelope containing a dozen first-class photographs of his late railway companion whom he knew as "Mary Bell." What was to be done? Of course she had the bag containing the samples, and an exchange was in every way desirable. He would write to her. Accordingly, the next mail carried a letter addressed in his hand-writing to "Miss Mary Bell, R-, Vermont."

The writer's business address was printed upon the outside of the envelope, and a week later it was returned to him with these words scrawled upon it: "No such person here."

Ross experienced a feeling of rage and disgust. After all, his "Mary Bell," who had so fascinated him, was nothing but a humbug. Mary Bell was not her name. Perhaps she had intentionally placed her valise where he would take it in place of his own, for she must have known that his valise contained valuable samples.

"She was an unmitigated little fraud!" he exclaimed to his favorite younger sister, when once more at home, he related to her interested ears the story of his adventure.

"Oh, I don't think so, Ross," said Nellie Weeks, shaking her curly head decidedly as she looked at the pictured face of "Mary Bell." "A girl with such a sweet, true face could not be deceitful. And then, if she were, she would not have been goose enough to place her photographs in your possession. You gave her your card; it bears your business address, doesn't it? Have patience, Ross-there has been some mistake; you will surely hear from

Sure enough, two days later, Ross received a little ladylike note in which the writer wished to know what disposition she should make of his property, also requesting him to return her satchel by express. It was signed "Mirabell Ray." The mystery was solved. She had given him her first name alone, which, m the confusion, he had understood as 'Mary Bell."

He marked the little valise and sent it off; and sent also by the next mail a note, in which he stated that, "as business would take him through that part of Vermont on the following week, he would take the liberty of calling at her home for his baggage, if | pened for business. Mr. and Mrs. Ray were old-fashioned people, and Ross found in Mirabell's brother John, who was at home on a visit, an old business acquaintance, and so was prevailed upon to spend a day or two there. It was not his last visit by any means, and a year later he took for a wife "the young lady in gray."

Boys and Cigarettes.

Physicians and moralists alike are pained by the spectacle, growing more common every day, of pale faced lads. ranging in age from sixteen to twenty years, who are puffing their little lives iway in cigarette smoking. Day and night they throng the streets, where the peculiarly offensive odor generated by eigarettes made of cheap paper and bad tobacco renders their smoking as obnoxious to others as it is hurtful to themselves. Every evening before the theatres they raise a cloud of foul smoke that is equally injurious to their own rickety constitutions and to the noses of their victims. Doubtless, also they carry their prenicious habit into their homes—when they are old enough to do so without risk of the spanking they deserve—thus still further doing harm to themselves and making other

The cheap cigarette is a modern invention, a peculiarly vicious one. Twenty years ago, when the cigarettes all came from Cuba, and were wrapped in rice paper, smoking them did no great harm, Moreover, being made of Honradez, or some brand of equally strong tobacco, only a boy of strong stomach could smoke more than two or three of them at a time. But to meet the demand cigarettes are sold nowadays cheap and weak. They are made of mild, often bad tobacco, and for the most part they are wrapped in ordinary white paper. Rice-paper wrappings necessarily increase the cost, and the boy who wishes to prove by the ordeal of smoke that he is not a boy but a man, much prefers the article that he can get the most of for his money. Moreover, the boy does not know the difference apparent to the sight between rice-paper and the ordinary paper; any more than he knows that while rice-paper burns away with scarcely any smoke at all, while common paper burns with a foul smoke that cuts like a saw into a chest and throat. So he spends pocket-money on cheap cigarettes and makes everybody around him uncomfortable while he smokes himself away nto an untimely grave. Of course the boys do not mean to sin against themselves and their neighbors. They no not realize what a had smell their nasty little cigaretts make: they are very far from knowing what serious injury the smoke from them inflicts upon their throats and bronchal tubes and lungs. They smoke innocently, knowing not what they do, but most earnestly believing that their smoking makes men of them. Down in the depths of their hearts the most of them have no sincere affection for smoking; and in the depths of their stomachs they not unfrequently entertain a feeling of positive aversion to ward it. But they hang on to their pestilent habit with a presistency that in a better cause would be worthy of all praise; stifling the dictates of conscience and asserting a bad mastery over the rebellions of the flesh. And, if reasoned with, they answer in the words of dear John Leech's bad boy: "But what is a fellow to do, when all the men of my own age smoke?"-Phil-

Letter from Dr. Myers.

We are permitted to make the following extract from a letter written by Dr. Myers, to a friend in this place: SACRAMENTO, CAL., Feb. 25, 1881. The hours have grown into days, the days into weeks, the weeks into months, and six months or more have passed away since we left Buchanan to visit the Golden State. It hardly seems possible, but nevertheless it is true, and to me the time has passed very fast and pleasantly, and during a part of this time, while you in Michigan have been frozen up with ice and snow, with your thermometer many degrees below zero, here in the warm climate it does not seem to me as if we have had any winter at all-but one long continued stretch of summer. True, we have had a great abundance of rain, but the rains heve all been warm like summer showers, and the grass has been bright and green; certain flowers have bloomed in the gardens the whole winter long, and from now on, for the next four months, Sacramento valley and Southern California may be seen in all her glory. The weather for the past week has been delightful indeed. The rainy season appears to be over, and overcoats are thrown aside, and we sit in our rooms without fire, with the doors and windows open, and pedestrians begin to take the shady side of the street. The days are beautiful, bright, balmy and warm; the frogs croak their evening songs, and the mosquito hums his doleful tune, with his bill well sharglorious, and the silvery moon, together with many bright stars, illumine the heavens at night. Many beautiful flowers and trees are in bloom, some of which are very fragrant. The acacia, a specie of the gum tree, has been in bloom since the 1st of February. It is a very graceful looking tree, with fine delicate leaves, and are completely covered with bright yellow flowers, beautiful to behold, and smell so sweet that the atmosphere in their vicinity is redolent with rich and delicate perfume. As I said, they have been in bloom about a month, and they look as pretty and smell as sweet as ever. Another, the china lilly, is very pretty and fragrani. The little double English violet grow here profusely and are constantly in bloom, sending forth their sweet fragrance on the air. Rose buds are ready to open, and the clatter of the lawn mower for the second cutting is heard on the glass plats, while birds carol sweet music amidst the blooming trees overhead. The almond tree has been in bloom for the past two weeks. Both the tree and the blossom resemble the peach tree, and they who have never seen them before would naturally take them to be one and the same. The peach trees and apricots are now in full bloom. No danger of being killed by cold weather here, but on the low lands many a fine orchard has been killed by the late floods. The apricot tree, in appearance, resembles somewhat the plum; their blossoms are about as large as the apple blossom and look quite pretty. The camelia, another beautiful flower, has been for some time in bloom. They are of different colors, white and crimson, and are about as large, and resemble somewhat, the rose, waxy in appearance, beautiful to look at, but no fragrance. There are also many other beautiful flowers and shrubs at present in bloom, the names of which I know not, and it is very evident that Sacramento valley is the garden of the world, and they who have an eye for the beautiful can find it here free of charge to their heart's This being my first winter in a southern climate, naturally you might be a little curious to know which I like best, rain or snow, or which is the most preferable or agreeable country to live in. Now this is a pretty difficult question to answer, and might be a good subject for some debating society. Great minds will sometimes differ, and most people have a choice "as the woman said when she kissed her cow." California, as well as Michigan, has its shady side as well as sunny. It is snow and cold against rain and dust, as far as climate is concerned. I love old Michigan in many respects and miss many friends I have left behind, and I probably shall some day, if my life is spared, return among them. The Michigan summers are beautiful enough for anybody, but her long cold winters I cannot say I fancy, for I prefer warm weather to cold. Here, as I said, it seems to me as if we have had no winter. We had a few light frosty nights in November, and then the warm rains set in and everything commenced to grow again. It seems as if we have had no Christmas or New Years this season, but in their stead two or three or more fourths of July, for Christmas day here was bright and warm, and we were early aroused from our slumbers by the ringing of bells, the firing of cannon, shotguns, pistols, fire crackers, &c., and really it almost seemed as if the "glorious fourth" was about to > ance of dust during the dusty season. We were somewhat surprised to receive a visit from one of our old townsmen. Wm. Conradt, last week, who was on his return trip from Los Angelos, southern California. He said the orange trees in that vicinity are so heavily loaded that they are breaking down with their fruit, and is so much pleased with California that he was going home to settle up his business and return to California again as soon as possible. Billy, on account of the flood, had a little sad experience which I presume you received the papers I sent you giving a full description of the great flood in Sacramento valley. We did not know but that at one time it would be "pump or drown, sink or swim." Fortunately Sacramento escaped, while our neighbors across the way were not so fortunate. Their levees giving away first took the strain off of ours, and a roaring stream fifteen to eighteen feet deep madly coursed its way through the streets of Washington, many people losing their all, being glad to escape with their lives. The levees along the river, for hundreds of miles have been swept away, and thousands of acres of rich fertile lands, with their vinyards and orchards, lie under water. A great amount of stock was either starved or drowned before the steamers could move them to high-

It is becoming very evident to all that hydraulic mining must cease or it will be merely a matter of time before this beautiful, fertile valley will be covered with sand and willows. The Legislature now in session having observed for themselves the dire effects of hydraulic mining, still refuse to pass a law for its prohibition. The consenuence is that the people of the valley have become incensed, and large antihydraulic meetings are being held weekly, and the citizens are making every effort to try and see what can be done to avert this nuisance, and save themselves and property from destruction. Before the time of hydraulic mining, large ocean steamers used to come up the river, while now, during low water, flat bottomed boats find some difficulty in navigating the Sacramento river. The bed of the river in some places has been raised from ten to fifteen feet, and is still constantly being filled up very fast from the debris of the hydraulic mining vicinity, and at this rate steamboat navigation on the Sacramento river, in a few years, will be "played out," and the river will overflow and cut new channels through thousands of acres of rich fertile lands, but the people of the valleys swear it shall not be, and if the State does not intercede and stop this wrong, they will shoulder the burden themselves, and fight it to the bitter end. This once done, the river can be dredged, the levees repaired, and in a few years they will once more have nice pure water, and their valleys be made to bloom again like the Garden of Eden.

The principle involved is that property should be equally divided. The idea is one of the most dangerous that can be introduced into any country. It may never assassinate kings or emperors in this country, but it has already, in 1877, burned cities and proclaimed for the murder of property holders.

The present method of doing read work is the most careless, slipshod and expensive method of keeping our highways in good condition imaginable. The Nihilists have at last succeeded in murdering the Czar of Russia. As he was returning from a parade about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon a nitroglycerine bomb was thrown at his carriage. It exploded, killing or wounding several of the guards and bystanders and doing considerable damage to the vehicle, but the Czar and the Grand Duke Michael, who accompained him, alighted unhurt. A second bomb was thrown at his feet, and it exploded with terribly fatal effect. His right leg was torn almost completely from his body, his left leg was badly shattered, and he received other frightful injuries. He was picked up insensible and conveyed to the Winter Palace, where he lingered an hour and a half. It is thought that he recovered consciousness for a moment before his death, for he motioned away the surgeons who wished to amputate his The Czarowitz and Czarina were present at the death-bed, and on leaving the palace were greeted with sympathizing cries of the people. The Grand Duke Alexis was in London, but on recept of the news left immediately with the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh for St. Petersburg. Two persons were concerned in the assassination, and both were seized.

Last Monday the Indianians voted on the adoption of the following amendments to their State Constitution:

1. That voters shall have a residence of six months in the state, two months in the township, and six weeks in the 2. That there shall be no discrimination against colored men before the law in the right of suffrage. That general elections shall be held in November instead of October. 4. That fees and salaries may be graded in proportion to population and the service required. 5. That the general assembly shall have power to establish such supple mentary courts as may be needed by 6. That municipal and political corporations shall not create an indebtedness to exceed 2 per cent. of the assessed valuation of their property.

A portion of these were adopted by the voters of that State in 1879, but a Democratic Supreme Court for political purposes pronounced them illegally adopted because the question was not carried by a majority of all of the voters in the State, notwithstanding the fact that out of a total vote of 321,842 there was a majority of over 40,000 for the adoption of the amendments.

TO THE CITIZENS OF NILES TOWN SHIP AND OTHERS .- The RECORD wishes to call your attention to the fact that your end of the river bridge is in a decidedly bad condition, and it would also arise to remark that it may be considerable cheaper and more satisfactory to repair the bridge and make it safe than to pay for some dead man that may be fished out of the river after the bridge tumbles. We are informed that the highway commissioner of that township has condemned the bridge as unsafe, and posted one or more notices to that effect; but we trust that this is false, for if true, the only verdict any coroner's jury could give would be death from criminal neglect on the part of the highway commissioner of Niles township, in leaving a condemned and dangerous bridge open to public travel.

ONE of the most remarkable escapes from a warm time came to the attention of the RECORD last Friday. In the house occupied by Dr. Slocum, on the corner of Main and Third streets, there is build an old-fashioned fireplace, and the chimney is built up alongside of the partition, but there is a space of six inches between the two, that being the width of the studding. On November 25 last the doctor em ployed a tinner to put up his stove in his office, running the pipe through the there through a partition across the hall and into the chimney, but instead of cutting into the side the chimney, the pipe was just put through the lath and plastering, and the smoke all run into the garret. This condition of affairs remained until about March 1, when the doctor being in the street happened to discover the smoke issuing from nearly every crevice in the roof and cornice, which led to an examination and discovery of the above. The remarkable part of it is that the house was not burned long ago.

THE question that divided parties at the village election this year was "Whisky, or no whisky," and after a hot contest on both sides the latter won the battle that was opened by the anti-temperance party. The complaint against Marshal Hathaway last year by one party, was that he did not arrest all who appeared on the streets intoxicated; and by the other, that he should not arrest any who were simply intoxicated and not making a disturbance. Mr. Hathaway appears to have commenced this term of his office by the strict enforcement of the liquor

The Berrien County

law, which in this regard is very plain, as follows: "Any persons who by false pre-tense shall obtain any spirituous or intoxicating liquors, or who shall be drunk or intoxicated in any hotel, tavern, inn, or place of public business. or in any assemblage of people collected together in any place for any purpose or in any street, alley, lane, highway, railway or street-car, or in any other place, by drinking intoxicating liquors, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of five dollars and the costs of prosecution, or be punished by imprisonment in the common jail of the county, not exceeding twenty days, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

Something of a stir was created Monday afternoon by the Marshal arresting Prof. Howe, a music teacher from Niles, andtaking him before Justice Dick, who taxed him the prescribed fine and $2 costs. The RECORD has only to repeat its request of last week. Serve'em all alike, be they paupers or millionaires, but not arrest the man in rags and pass the good clothes by. Our marshal is to be commended for the decisive action he is taking in the enforcement of this law. We hear the argument (?) that if his strictness be continued it will drive trade away from the town. That may be true, but when one man who does that kind of trading is driven away, trib law abiding citizens who will uphold the officer in the enforcement of the law will return. No town will lose any trade that is profitable for it to keep by enforcing the laws of

Frank Watson of Meridian, Monday, laid down his pocketbook containing $80 and a bank certificate for $300 in his barn, and went off a few minutes. When he returned a cow was just swallowing it. He killed the cow and got $60 dollars from its stomach, sufficiently recognizable to be sent to Washington for redemption; and with his proofs he can get another certificate. This sort of carelessness among cattle is too common. We have known a man who left a costly coal stove out in a shed last summer, where the cows could get at it; and one morning he found it all gone except a couple of sections of pipe too rusty to eat.—Ex. Last Sunday A. H. Young lost his norse, and came near losing his own life, by breaking through the ice on Paw Paw lake. He and Homer Hinkly drove down there with the horse and cutter and as has been the practice during the winter, drove out upon the ice which in most places is 16 or 18 inches in thickness. The outlet, which empties into the Paw Paw river, is a peculiar stream, the water running into or out of the lake according to the stage of water. Of late the water in the river has been high and the current strong into the lake, and to some distance from the shore had cut the ice on the under side leaving but about six inches of snow and soft ice. Mr. Young had gone some distance from the team to look at some holes cut for fiishing, to see if the ice was thick enough to be safe to drive over. Thinking it safe he called to Hinkly to drive to where he was. On the way he drove on to the thin ice and the horse broke through. They loosened the harness and drew it out, but as soon as it was upon it's feet it broke through again, Mr. Young going in with it, he dropping in near its forward feet. In its efforts to get upon the ice it came near pawing him under, and probably would had not Mr. Hinkly caught him and pulled him out. They pulled the horse out the second time but it broke in again. This time the hole in the ice was not large enough to turn the horse in and after working until they were nearly tired out went for help. They soon returned with two men and succeeded in getting it out and on to its feet, but it was so completely exhausted and chilled that it gave a shiver, instantly. In the struggle Mr. Young was badly bruised on his leg, he thinks by a blow from the horse's feet while he was in the water. It was a fine, high spirited animal and made a desperate struggle for life, but the fates were against it.-Hartford Day Spring.

The Rural New Yorker says it is always a good training and an essential part of a child's education, to have a bank account, however small. It is not always practicable to give a child a real bank account; but you, yourself may be the banker, receive the small deposits of the child, oblige it to draw out its savings when desired by means of checks, and near as possible transact the business as at real banks. Interest may be allowed on the deposits which the child should compute. Of course the child should be aided as much as possible in making deposits, and in spending the withdrawals judiciously. Care should be taken to inculcate a spirit of generosity, as well as one of frugality, and to teach that money has but one value—the use to be made of it. The investment and security of money form a good topic of talk with children, occasionally, and girls especially should be made to understand the meaning of bonds and mortgages, and the value and requirement of securities.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times symptoms, of indigestion are present as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, &c. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Internal, external and Itching piles vield at once on the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense Itching, and affecting a permanent cure where all other remedies have falled. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Ask your druggist for it, and when you cannot obtain it of him, we will send it, prepaid, on receipt of price. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by W. A. Severson

"The body of the wife of Capt. John Wilkinson of this city, who mysteriously disappeared last October, was found to-day in the St. Joseph river. The verdict of the coroner's jury was accidental drowning. She was addicted to drink, and it is supposed that while under its influence she fell into the river. She was about 40 years old.

Hoven's troupe from Detroit tried to play Uncle Tom's Cabin in this place, last Thursday evening. The impression they left here was not firstclass. Their advance advertiser was so full of "benzine" when he was here that he couldn't see straight, and some of the troupe were no better in that and other respects. Some of them carried their parts in the play very well, but we hear but little praise of the performances a whole.

A Benton Harbor paper says: "We learn that Capt. Curtis Boughton and Henry W. Williams have about completed arrangements for the raising of the propeller Hippocampus, which has been at the bottom of Lake Michigan for the last ten years. There is said to be between $1,500 and $4,500 in money on board the boat, and it is believed the machinery and hull are nearly as good as they were the night she went down."

AT the election next month we will be called upon to vote upon an amendment to the State Constitution to grant the judges of the Supreme Court the privilege of appointing the clerk of that court instead of his being appointed by the clerk of Ingham county as heretofore. This amendment ought to be adopted, as it creates no new office, nor does it change any salaries, but simply grants to the Supreme Court the privilege of appointing its own clerk instead of depending upon anoth er court for such appointment.

THE lecture of Rev. Henry R. Coleman, in Rough's Opera House, under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity on Friday evening last, was one of the most entertaining ever delivered in this place, and was listened to by the largest audience ever congregated in this hall, it being estimated that nearly 1,000 people were present. Over 200 specimens of woods, earth, rock, shells, fruits, coins, etc., were exhibited and described by the lecturer in a clear and comprehensive manner, thus keeping his large audience in perfect attention for nearly two hours.

GRAY(T) SCOTT.-A new firm under the name of Gray & Scott, composed of Loy Gray and Will Scott, of Rochester, Ind., have rented Mr. George H. Rough's brick building, two doors east of the bank, and expect to open a large stock of boots and shoes in a few days. Mr. Gray has had considerable experience in the business and understands how to administer to the wants of the people in this line. Mr. Scott needs no introduction to the citizens of Buchanan by the RECORD, for he is already well known. We all join in wishing the boys success in their undertaking.

THERE are now eleven steam engines in constant employment in this place, and three more will be added as soon as the weather will permit. One of these will run a saw-mill for Black & Willard, one will do the work in the Excelsior factory, and the third will run a machine for the manufacture of pressed brick and tiling for Mr. Henry Blodgett, at his brick yard in the north part of town. He has the brick machine here now, and will have the engine ready for business as soon as his clay bank will be in good working condition. Besides this there is some talk of a steam engine to help run Rough &

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF BUCHANAN: -I confess that I have felt a special interest in the young men of Buchanan, and, in order to prove it, propose to give a few lectures especially to young men, in Kinyon's Hall, begining next Tuesday evening, at 7½ o'clock. Admittance free, and everybody invited. The young people of the various churches, and the ministers are particularly invited to co-operate. Bring

NEW TROY, March 16, 1881. EDITOR RECORD:-I noticed in the Michigan Independent that William R. Gonder, my husband, has published that I had left his bed and board without just cause or provocation, and forbidden all persons to trust or harbor me on his account, that he will pay no debts while I am not at home. I had good reasons. I thought I would try to live without being pounded and choked, as this was not the first time, and I hereby notify all parties to not trust him on my account. I have paid enough of his debts. Also, parties are notified to not purchase anything from

There seems to be a general change of real estate about this time in and around this vicinity. Lorenzo Fields has sold his farm of eighty acres to Samuel Flowers, of

THREE OAKS ITEMS.

A series of meetings commenced at the Christian church last Sunday evening by Rev. Mr. Cole, resident minister. Rev. Mr. Ager, of Elkhart, has held a three weeks' meeting at the Baptist church in this place.

Rev. Mr. Tasker, of the Methodist church, some months since, organized a Band of Hope Temperance society. On Wednesday evening the Band will give a concert at Town Hall.

Quite a number of families contemplate moving about April first.

Quite a number of the cheerful folks of Three Oaks, one evening last week, called at the residence of Mr. Davidson, south of Galien. They had an enjoyable time. A few laughed hard enough to shed tears. The teamster drove against a stump, which caused a hearty laugh.

Two men caught him by the arms and another ran his hand into the Doctor's pocket and relieved him of his railroad tickets and about $100 in money. One of the men tried to snatch his big dimond pin, but failed in this. The car was crowded and the men accomplished their work and were out in a short time. A sympathizing minister on the car loaned the Doctor money to take him to Washington. The Doctor says a railroad detective was standing but a few

New York letter in Indianapolis Journal. Another of the achievements of electricity is called "telegraphic photography." The claim of the inventor is that he can, by a single flash of electricity, telegraph any amount of printed matter simultaneously for a distance of at least 50 miles. This, in fact, he claims to have done. Before me, lying on the table where I write, is the print ed prospectus of a mine, about 12 by 15 inches, arranged in newspaper col-umns and with a displayed head over it and four handsome engravings illustrating the test. It is a beautiful print, but apparently in diamond type friend, who is in the new company. A so small as to be read with difficulty. On the other side of the table lies a sheet four times as large, in brevier or long primer, evidently the original of the first named prospectus. "This small one is the telegraphic copy: it was telegraphed 50 miles." says my comparison shows that they are precisely the same to the most minute particulars, but the smaller one shows no indications of an impression, and the man who brings it, an intelligent person who knows what he is talking about, declares that it was not printed in any sense, but was, in fact, printed by telegraph. He also shows me a picture, apparently a bit of spatterwork, a submerged anchor beautifully entwined and overgrown with marine etloral and corals, and then he brings another exactly like it in size and style They are both apparently lithographs, with the strongest light and shade. There is no difference between them. "One of them is the original," says the man, "and the other. I cannot tell which is the telegraphic copy." He goes to explain: "The picture was put into a little box at one side of the laboratory and was reproduced on this paper on the opposite wall before my eyes. There was only a wire between, a wire 20 feet long, say. That is why it is of the same size. When we telegraph a picture or newspaper 50 miles it becomes much reduced in size, reduced in proportion to the distance. It is that the inventor is now trying to overcome. If it cannot be overcome by some reversing process we shall have to go to the trouble of rephotograph-ing the matter sent at its destination, so as to get it back to the same size."

Etiquette of Conversation.

The etiquette or conversation founded upon the fact that persons to be agreeable when in company must be considerate, refined and good natured. The following rules from a number published in the kinral Home may prove serviceable:

Do not talk of your private, personal and damly matters. Do not appear to notice inaccuracies of speech in others.

Do no allow yourself to lose temper and speak excitedly.

Do not allude to unfortunate peculiarities of any one present.

Do not talk loud. A firm, clear, distinct, yet mild, gentle and musical voice, has greater power. Do not try to force yourself into the confidence of others. If they give their confidence, never betray it.

Do not intersperse your language th foreign words or high-sounding terms. It is almost as impolite as to

Do not speak with corrupt or ridicule of a locality where you may be visiting. Find something to truthful ly praise and commend; thus make vourself agreeable. Do not make a pretence of gentility. nor parade the fact that you are a descendant of any notable family. You must pass for just what you are, and must stand on your own merit. Do not contradict. In making a correction, say: "I beg your pardon, but I have an impression that it was so and so." Be careful in contradicting, as you may be wrong yourself. Do not make a parade of being acquainted with distinguished or wealthy people, of having been to college, or having visited foreign lands. All this is no evidence of real genuine worth on your part.

Do not aspire to be a great storyteller: an inveterate teller of long stories becomes very tiresome. Do not talk scandal: you sink your own moral nature by so doing, and you are, perhaps, doing great injustice to those about whom you talk.

Locusts in 1881.

There are two breeds of periodical acusts, one appearing once in seventeen years and the other once in thirteen years. The earliest appearance of the seventeen-year locust in this country, so far as the records go, was in 1634, at Plymouth, Mass., and they have not failed to appear once in seventeen years ever since. Both breeds will appear this year, but not in the same localities. Professor Riley, the entomologist, says that the seventeenyear locusts will abound next June in Marquette and Green Lake counties, Wis.; in the neighborhood of Wheeling, West Va., and probably in Maryland Virginia, and the District of Columbia They may also appear, he says, in the west part of North Carolina, in Northeastern Ohio, Lancaster county, N. Y. The Professor says that the thirteenyear .brood will probably be seen in Southern Illinois, in all of Missouri except the northwest corner, in Louisiana, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina. The two kinds of locusts differ very little in appearance.

A Card-Player's Sermon.

Man's life is a game of cards. First it is "cribbage." Next he tries to "go it alone" at a sort of "cut, shuffle and deal" pace. Then he "raises" the "deuce" when his mother "takes a hand in," and contrary to Hoyle, "beats the little joker with her five." Then with his 'diamonds' he wins the 'queen of hearts." Tired of "playing a lone hand" he expresses a desire to "assist" his fair "partner," "throws out his cards" and the clergyman takes a ten dollar bill out of him "on a pair." She "orders him up" to build the fires. Like a "Enave" he joins the "clubs," where he often gets "high," which is "low," too: If he keeps "straight" he is oftengush." He grows old and "bluff," of trouble when at last he tal coil and "pass-

Newspapers Printed and Pictures Copied A Full Rigged Ship Found in a Scaled Cavern—Shaped Like a Chinese Junk, With Mongolian Characters on the Prow

The Leadville Chronicle publishes an account of the most marvelous discovery yet made by mortal man, provided that it is true, which is more than doubtful. Two miners, while sinking a shaft near Red Cliff, are represented to have found a deep subterranean chamber without apparent communication with the open air. What they claim to have seen is thus described:

The cave seemed at first empty, but as their eyes gradually became accustomed to the deep gloom, the men saw in the further extremity a huge black object, which, not without some trepidation, they approached. As they neared it, to their unbounded amazement, they made out the lines of some sort of sailing craft. It was, as nearly as we could judge, about sixty feet long by some thirty wide, and lay tilted forward at an angle of about fifteen degrees over a rough pile of stone. The body of the craft was built of short lengths of some dark and very porous wood, resembling our black very porous wood, resembling our black walnut, if it could be imagined, with the grain pulled apart like a sponge or a piece of bread, and made perfectly square. Both ends (it was evidently intended for sailing either way) were turned abruptly up like the toe of a peaked Moorish slipper. The planking was apparently double riveted on with nails of externally hard comper only slightly rust extremely hard copper, only slightly rust eaten, and with the heads cut or filed in an octagonal shape, while along the upper edge of the ship eleven large rings of the same metal, and evidently for the securing of ringing, were counted. At the bottom edges of the craft, and running its entire length, were two keels some four and a half feet deep and six inches thick, hung on metalic hinges, and at the ends were fastened rough copper rods, extending upward and bent over so as to attach to two masts rising from the upper edges. If the cross of an inverted letter v be conceived to rep-resent the deck lines, the two stems are at about the angle and position of the masts. These were upward of twenty feet long; and, as evidence that a sail was at one time stretched across, some ragged remnants of what appeared to be cording were found clinging to the inner edges. The ends of the masts were se-cured in pivots, and it was evident that in tacking one could be moved forward and the other back, thus bringing the sail at an angle with the body of the ship an idea which it might not be bad for our modern navigators to emula. This, it is believed, also explains the copper rods which moved the keels so as to reciprocate the position of the masts. While the whole ship was intact, the wood crumbled like dust beneath the finger touch, and fearful of trapfalls the two prospectors did not venture to explore the interior. Lying on the ground near by, however, was discovered a gold instrument bearing a rude resemblance to the sextant of the present day, and possibly used to calculate the longitude. No trace of any writing was found save at one end of the ship, inclosed in a medal ring, were twenty-six copper characters rivited to the wood and bearing much resemblance to the Chinese hieroglyphics of the present day. No human remains of any sort were found, although it is possible that a search in the hold will reveal something of this sort.

They went to the cabin of a well-to-do miner living some thirty miles down the gulch, and to him first told their extraordinary story. This gentleman is per-fectly reliable, and, together with a well known mining expert residing in this city, has seen and examined the ship, derful discovery to the world in all its possibly great historical value. The minute particulars as to the locality are at present witheld for very obvious reasons. The discovery of the junk-like ship with its unknown architecture, hermetically sealed in a canvern fifty feet below the surface of the earth, gives scope to indefinite speculation. The only possible explanation seems, however, that ages, or æons, perhaps, agone, a vessel bearing a crew of bold discoverers, tossed by the waves, sought a harbor in a cave within The waves then receding left it stranded there, and the great continental divide, the awful upheavals and convulsions of nature, which we know so little of and can only blindly speculate on, pressed the face of the earth together

In a lake near St. Paul the other day a box was picked up containing two human heads, and there is great excitement. We do not see why there should be great excitement. The probability is that, though human heads were plenty, boxes were scarce, and the man put the two in one box to economize. It may not have been very good taste, but we cannot see any reason to get excited because our ideas of propriety differ from those of other people. We have not all been brought up alike.—Peck's Sun.

STRYCHNINE, when administered in heavy doses to mammals, acts, according to M. Richet, acts partly like chloral and partly like curare. It is estimated from observations on the shadows of Jupiter's moons that the atmosphere of that planet is from three to nine miles deep. THE presence of iodine in Curacoa guano has been proved by H. Steffers. When a mass of guano was subjected to a heat from 110 degrees to 120 degrees C, the soluble vapors of iodine were given TRICHINE are by no means confined to pork. Two French soldiers died lately of trichinosis contracted by eating the flesh of geese. Dr. Glendenning has detected the dangerous parasites in a pike caught near Ostend.

When bars of a magnetic nature are compressed, twisted or stretched, they have a tendency, says M. Ader, to resume their primitive molecular disposi-tion when they are subjected to the action of magnetizing current. The German African Society has at present six different expeditions traveling through Central Africa. The money for these expeditions is obtained from the German Government, or through private subscriptions. Dr. Nachtigatt is the President of the Society. A. W. STERANS, son of the late President Steams of Amherst College, has gone to Labrador, where he will pass the winter in scientific research, and in collecting zoological, botanical and geological specimens for Amherst College and for several museums.

ADOLF MAYER has discovered that oxygen has no direct influence upon fermentation. When potassium-hydrogen tartrate was added to a strong syrup con-aining yeast, the cells of the yeast grew tapidly and the fermentation was easily rccomplished.

THE committee appointed by the French Government has recommended that the prize of $10,000 be awarded to Professor Graham Bell for his invention of the telephone, and that a prize of $3,-000 be given to Mr. Gramme for his magneto electric machine.

Prof. O. N. Rood, of Columbia College, contends that theories of Brucke and Aubust fail to account for the phenomena observed when while light is mixed with colored light. And Professor Rood himself is as yet unable to advance a plausible explanation of the observed facts.

A FRENCH scientist states that on one occasion, at the beginning of a vio-lent snow-storm he saw small tufts of light at the ends of the steel ribs of his umbrells, and heard at the same time a sort of humming sound. When he brought his hand near one of the luminous points he received a slight shock, and the lights then disappeared. This electrical display is rather exceptional.

Precipitated silica attracts and fixes aniline colors, turkey red much better on fabrics than silcious infusorial earth, but argues a writer in Riemann's Farber Zietung in opposition to Engel, these properties of silica cannot be due to capillarity because, of the two substances the influsorial earth can only be said to nossess capillarity.

I ALWAYS supposed that the newspapers during the late civil war deserved precedence for their sensational newspaper headings, until I met with the following in the New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, published at New York, October 20, 1777, by Hugh Gaine: "Glorious news from the southward—Washington knocked up—The bloodiest battle in America—6,000 of his men gone—100 wagons to carry the wounded—Gen. Howe is at present in Germantown—Washington, thirtymiles back, in a town—Washington, thirty miles back, in a shattered condition—Their stoutest frigante taken and one deserted—They are tired—and talk of finishing the cam-paign." The Tory typo must have been exhausted at this effort to glorify Germantown, for when the news reached the city of the British army to the northward, having been burgoyned, he could not set up one line of caps to catch the eyes of his subscribers.—The Magazine of American History.

The burial of Ole Bull took place from his residence on Lysoen, the "Isle of Light," a rock in the inlet of the Berenfjord, rising a hundred feet above the sea, and covered with dense woods of spruce, fir, and birch. The crown of gold which the citizens of San Francisco presented to Ole Bull ten years ago was carried behind the coffin by his most celebrated pupil, the composer, Edward Grieg: his many decorations by his old friend, the famous physician, Dr. Dan-ielsen. At the grave, the poet, Bjornst-jern Bjornson, spoke, and in the whole country there was hardly a village in which the day was not solemnized in

The Chapman Tubular or Bored Well as shown in the "New Style," differs materially from the Driven Well, or the "Old Style," the latter being driven often meet obstacles that cannot be overcome, such as clay, hard pan, rock and quicksand. In making the CHAPMAN WELL all these difficulties are easily overcome by boring inside and shead of the pipe, setting the pipe as fast as at F. Fig. 1, the "check," F.g. 3, is placed and the rubber ring is expanded as at B. Fig. 1, the plunger, Fig. 2, attached to wood rods, is inserted as at J. Attach the rod to pump handle and you have a well where no driven well can be made. The "check" and "plunger," Fig. 2 and 3, are brass bodies with hard rubber balls, making them durable and non-corrosive. To repair the pump, disconnect the rod and handle, remove the top of the pump, pull the "plunger," und with a grab pull the "check," then use a "puller" to remove the screen and you have everything on top of ground. Repair and return them and your pump is new. The "check" and "plunger," being submerged, the water is ilfred and not sucked.

A Romantic Incident. One of the most striking incidents that one of the most scriking incidents that ever occurred in my experience here was at one time that I had prepared boxes of fancy paper with a fancy initial, or pet name embossed in it, and put this up at a dollar a box and advertised it widely. One day I had an order from California from a Miss Susie —.

The box was done up, addressed to her and lay about here, when a young Englishman came in and wanted to write a letter. I gave him the materials and a place, when his eye caught the ad-dress on the box. "Have you the order that came for that box of paper?" he asked.

"Yes," I replied, "it is about here

"Would you mind sending it up to my hotel? If it is what I think, I shall leave for California to-night." I found it and sent it around, and heard no more about it for perhaps three months, when one day the young man, with a lady on his arm, walked in.

"Mr. Loring, I want to present you to my wife," he said. "We could not leave this country till we had thanked you for your part in bringing us to-

The denouement was quite a romance. The young man was the son of an aristocratic family, and the girl the daughter of the gardener. But love levels all distinctions, and the young man felt the girl to be the chosen companion of his life. To break off the attachment, his father had sent him to the continent, and dispatched the gardener and his pretty daughter to America, where the young man had followed them, ignorant of their address, and at last finding it through the chance of the box of paper.—Interview with Loring, Boston Publisher.

Rushing Into Print.

Those who read the "woman's column" of a weekly paper must be impressed by one curious fact: the fair writers are far too fond of confiding their domestic troubles to the general public. One asks for sympathy because her husband abuses her, and another deplores her husband's profanity. Others attempt to be witty and smart at the expense of "old maids." Then the "old maids are the pense of "old maids." maids" retaliate; and so it goes until wiser people are disgusted. What comfort can be in bringing one's family woes before the public through the medium of the newspapers is to us incom-prehensible. Nothing is gained by so doing, the troubles are none the less grievous, and little sympathy is given to people who have not sufficient fortitude to endure them without murmuring. These are the women who complain that they do not have their "rights." But when they say their literary work is not treated with as much consideration as that of men, they say what is not true. Any one, by glancing at the list of contributors to our ablest and most popular periodicals, will find nearly, and in some cases quite one half the names. some cases, quite one-half, the names those of women. There are said to be in the United States sixty lady editors, while many others have positions on edi-torial staffs. No one will deny that a book written by a woman gains recognition and commendation as readily as one written by a man. Ladies no longer find it necessary to assume masculine noms des plumes, in order to receive attention from the world. But there is a vast difference between honest, meritorious literary work and querulous complaining, and ill-advised scribblers must ex-

"So Young and Yet So Unhappy." Eddie the son of a prominent merchant in a neighboring town to Grenada, is only two months on his way to his sixth year. His father says Eddie has been a 'ladies' man" ever since he was two years of age. But it was only a few weeks ago that he succeeded in finding his Psyche, who so ruthlessly plunged the love-poisoned dart into his young soul that the simple name Mildred was metamorphosed into the tender name "sweetheart." The villiage school closed, and she broke the secret and her lover's heart by telling him that she loved his brother better than she did him. When the father came home Eddie buttonholed him and sobbed out: "Papa, papa, Eldred said she won't have me.

"Oh, son she was only joking."
"N-n-o, sir, she wasn't, 'cause she told me three times." There being "no balm in Gilead" for his lacerated heart, he decided "to take arms against a sea of troubles" and with a curtain cord end them. Having se-curely fastened the loose end of the out of the parior window, a distance of four or fip feet from the ground. Fortunately the cord broke and left no marks of suicide save a blood ring around his neck.—Memphis Avalanche.

Too Much, Hey?"

who suddenly walked out on Bijah's arm. "Hey?" replied the prisoner, as he leaned forward. "Is your name David Shaster?" "Hey?" "Hey?"
"Is—your.—name—David.—Shaster?" repeated the court with all his voice.

"Is your name David Shaster?" asked the court of a man nearly seven feet high

"Yes, I suppose it is." "You are charged with being drunk." "You are charged with being drunk." "Hey?" "Drunk!" yelled Bijah, with his mouth close to the man's ear. "Who's drunk? What have I got to do with anybody's being drunk?"

"You were drunk!" shouted the court.

" Hey?" "You were drunk!" yelled Bijah.
"Bet you $5," replied the prisoner as he went down for the money. The officer in the case said he found him lying under a shed, drunk and asleep

"Well, I can't yell my head off to make him understand. I've busted my collar-button and broken a suspender already, and I shall let him go. Prisoner you can go."
"Hey?"

and the court replied:

"You can skip."

"Hey?" Bijah turned him around and run him out and shut the door on him, but he put his nose against the glass and shook he door and called out: "Hey? I'll see if I haven't any rights!" A Strange Plea.

In Paris, some time ago, a druggist's assistant was tried for causing the death of a man by misreading a prescription. The doctor, whose writing is very clear, ordered eight drops of laudanum, which the assistant carelessly read as eight grammes, or about a quarter of an ounce. The overdose naturally killed the patient. and the court sentenced the prisoner to three months imprisonment. His advocates urged as an extenuating circumstance that if the mistake had cost the deceased his life, it had at least provided him with a rainless death.

The Work of the Thrifty. The world has always been divided into two clases—those who have saved, and those who have spent—the thrifty and extravagant. The building of all the houses, the nills, the bridges, and the ships, and the accomplishment of all other great torks which have rendered man civilize and happy, have been done by the saver, the thrifty; and those who have wasted their resources have always been their sives. It has been the law of nature that this should be so.
