PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times symptons of indigestion are present as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, &c. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after gotting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Internal, external and Itching piles yield at once on the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense Itching, and affecting a permanent cure where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Ask your druggist for it, and when you cannot obtain it of him, we will send it, prepaid, on receipt of price. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by W. A Severson.

A Mail-Carrier's Experience.

A great while ago-long before the late war—there was a young man who carried the mail between Madison and Macon, Georgia. His name was Bob Lovic. He used his eyes and ears pretty well, and never—fond as he was of a good story-told lies. To say "Bob Lovic says so" was to certify to the truth of a statement, which was certainly to his credit; and, moreover, he was as honest as the day, and could have been entrusted with untold gold or uncounted diamonds. Morally you could not find a fault with Bob. Mentally, he was very well for an uneducated man; but he had one great failng-great particularly in the eyes of pretty Annie Wesley, who otherwise esteemed Bob perfection. He had allayed himself with a certain class of persons who termed themselves "free thinkers." This theological difference at last lead to a little quarrel, and Bob tried to get Annie out of his mind, but failed to do it; and Annie was very misonl as for herself; for, though, she had offers in plenty, not one-not even rich John Grab, who had ever so many acres of land-could be compared for a moment in her mind to Bob, had Bob only held proper sentiments.

ing, as Bob rode along, slowly and stupidly for him, he saw, sitting under a tree, a little figure in a blue dress that he couldn't pass to save his life. So he stopped his horse and called out: "Annie, is that you?" "Yes, Bob," said Annie, showing a pair of wet eyes. "I came here on purpose to see you. I've talked in my poor, weak, womanish words, but you talk so much better than I that, of course, it's of no use; and all the while

So, though they kept apart for a whole month, at last one bright morn-there is One who talks so plainly to us, and the words are here; and I've brought them to you, and please, dear Bob, to read them, and perhaps-" She did not finish the sentence, but placed a pretty Bible in Bob's hand. "I've had it bound very nice for you.

and, oh! for my sake read it-it will teach you so much, Bob -so very Bob took the book. For a moment he felt annoved, and much like sneering, but Anna was very dear to him; so he kept his anger down for her sake, thanked her for her present, and placed it in the breast-pocket of his coat. "As if I were to be converted like a sinner in a tract!" said Bob, after he had ridden on a little. "But women are not expected to have minds like ours." And out of another pocket he pulled an infidel tract, which a friend, an unbelieving doctor, had loaned him, and fell to reading. It was not a wise thing, as the event proved, for the horse, left to himself, stumbled over something in the road and was lamed; not badly, it seemed, but it forced Bob to dismount and stop at a country store to examine and bathe the limb, and then he had to leave the beast take his own time afterward, so that instead of trotting briskly into Macon before sundown the young man found himself belated on a lonely road after the sun had vanished-his horse growing lamer and his hopes for supper quite gone.

"Hang the tract!" growled Bob:

"What did I bother it for!" And he gave the paper a toss into a clump of bushes, and his mind went back to Annie Wesley's Bible.

He felt for it. It was safe. He wished that he was somehow better, and he walked along with the bridle over his arm in quite a melancholy mood. Suddenly a shadow fell across the road. Bob looked up. Straight before him sat a mounted man with a black mask on his face and a pistol in "Halt!" commanded the individual, ferociously; and bob halted. "If you are quiet, you will come to no harm,' said the man. "I only want your mail bag. I happened to know it was worth something to-night, and I've followed you from the store yonder. There ain't a soul within hearing, and you may as well take it coolly; I am armed, you see; you are not. Hand over the bag. "Never!" exclaimed Bob. "The mail bag is in my care—entrusted; I'll guard it as long as I have breath in my body." Bob, for reply, mounted his horse and sat behind the mail-bag. "Your life is in danger," warned the robber, "I intend to have those letters. and a life isn't worth much to me. I'm in earnest; no fooling," and he took deliberate aim at Bob Lovic's

Bob was unarmed, and he loved life dearly, but he was no coward. It was mother from the alms-house, and other trusts were in that leather bag-the humble hopes and dreams of those who useless to try to overcome the robber. He had only his fists—rather useless weapons under the circumstances; but he "showed fight," and as the robber's anger kindled he fired. The aim was good. The little ball of lead lodged in Bob's coat, just where his heart should have been, and Bob staggered. He was shocked rather than hurt; and in that moment of excitement he remembered having heard that it was often so in mortal injuries. Probably he had received his death wound, and the robber would walk off with the mail-bag, where Bob well knew repos-ed the money which energetic Dick Dorr had sent to take his poor old wrote the letters twined around them. The doctor and his infidel tract had done Bob Lovic little good; but he was honest and kindly yet.

"I'll fight while I have a drop o blood left," he said to himself. "And help may come and the mail-bag saved, even if I die." He leaped from his horse and sprang upon the highwayman with such vigor that the man tumbled from his saddle. Then Bob struggled for the pistol, and gaining it, knocked the ruffian senseless with the butt end, and sat down upon his bosom to keep guard, expecting to die every moment, but praying that help might come before the robber recovered consciousness.

About that time a party of young men, who were out on a coon hunt came out with flaring torches, and a score or dogs at their heels. They all knew Bob well, and the most zealous were for dispatching the robber; but the voice of the majority were for binding him and carrying him to the the city, to meet his reward at the hands of justice, and with this party Bob agreed.

He felt weak and his breast ached, and he expected every moment to feel the faintness of death stealing over him: for there was a round hole just over his heart, and the bullet must be somewhere. A few unpleasant misgivings, which proved that the opinions of the future were not so fixed as they might have been, troubled him, and he sighed a little as the new comers ques-

"The bullet went in here," he said, touching the hole. "I don't feel any pain, and must be bleeding inwardly if at all, I think." He unbuttoned his coat contionsly, and out dropped Annie Wesley's Bible. with the bullet deeply imbedded in its cover. The tears came to Bob's eyes, and the others started, for he had been in the habit of boasting his infidel opinions, and it was odd enough that he should wear a Bible next his heart. But every one was too glad to find him unhurt to care for much else, and so they gave three cheers, and started toward the city with their prisoner.

Bob followed leading his horse, and keeping an eye on the mail-bag, and on the way thought-what he thought may be divined from the fact that six months after, Annie Wesley, found her lover by her side at church, and heard from his own lips, that he had not half so high an opinion of his own smartness, and that of his doctor friend, as formerly, and believed she was right after all. And so they were married, and for

PORTLAND, April 21 1881. EDITOR RECORD:-To-day I crossed the Willamette river, went over to East Portland, a city of about 6,000 population, on the opposite side of the erable, as well for the sake of Bob's river, and one cannot describe the amount of permanent improvement on every side. I saw them building a very > fine new steamer. I never in all my life saw such a prospect for fruit. The cherries are now about one-fourth grown. The trees here are all in full leaf. All kinds of beautiful flowers. The winter wheat is about knee high, and of a thick, heavy growth. General Joseph Lane died at his > home, near Roseburgh, yesterday. He has been gradually sinking for some time. He was a man of sterling mannood, and beloved by all who knew him. He was the last of the Generals of the Mexican war. He was appointed Governor of Oregon Territory by President Polk, and he made all speed to get here, arriving in Oregon City but two days before the expiration of the administration. He immediately organized the Territorial government. He was the first delegate to Congress, and the first United States Senator. He had a fine vault made at the cemetery during his life, in which his wife was laid, and to-morrow his remains will be laid there by Masonic honors, by the side of his wife. When the foundation of this vast Western Empire was laid, General Lane was among the very first. He has endured many hardships and privations. While he was a bitter partisan, yet the claim of dishonesty was never laid at his feet. And when the old pioneer fathers and mothers meet this summer, few stories will be told in which the brave, noble man will not bear some part. This season is really one of the most lively ever known here on account of so much railroad building. The new railroad is built from the Dalls to Walla Walla, and the first train of cars went over the road last week; and the road is being built to the Dalls from Portland just as fast as money can build it. About 2,000 men are now engaged in the work. Two German editors met upon the street last week, and one of them gave the other a very hard public horse whipping. Such work is condemned by the better part of society in this

Hon. M. R. Hathaway, brother of your vigilant city Marshal, has moved his family to Portland, having leased his dairy ranch to his youngest son Louis: and Mr. Hathaway is now engaged as foreman of a large gang of men on the railroad at the Dalls.

I have now been on this coast five years, and have watched carefully the rise and progress of the country, and I think that this country is, at this time, on the sure road to future prosperity, because railroads are now building in several parts of the State, and thus opening up vast empires of rich, productive lands, and also opening up a market and way in which the productions of the State can find a market more readily. I have been very cautious in the past few years about advising emigration to this country, but I have no fear in saying to men in the east who have money to buy and improve land and wish to get out of such a cold country, to make this Pacific coast a future home, because I am fully satisfied that the future of Oregon is better. I am and night in stores, hotels, private aware that every word written from | houses, and streets. Consumers pay by Oregon will be read eagerly by hundreds, and I will present nothing to your readers sensational that will not bear the future test. There is an abundance of chances here now for warm and pleasant.

These Female Doctors.

A St. Louis doctor factory recently turned out a dozen female doctors. As long as the female doctors were confined to one or two in the whole country, and those were only experimental, the Sun held its peace, and did not complain; but now that the colleges are engaged in producing female doctors as a business, we must protest, and in so doing will give a few reasons why female doctors will prove a paying branch of industry. In the first place, if they doctor anybody it must be a woman, and three-fourths of the women had rather have a male doctor. Suppose these colleges turn out female doctors until there are as many of them as there are male doctors, what have they got to practice on? A man, if there was nothing the matter with him, might call in a female doctor, but if he was as sick as a horse, (if a man is sick he is sick as a borse), the last thing he would have around would be a female doctor. And why? Because, when a man wants a female fumbling around him, he wants to feel well. He don't want to be bilious, or feverish, with his month tasting like cheese, and his eyes bloodshot, when a female is looking him over and taking an account of stock. Of course these female doctors are all young and good looking, and if one of them came into a sick room where a man was in bed, and he had chills, and was as cold as a wedge, and she should sit up close to the side of the bed and take hold of his hand, his pulse would run up to one hundred and fifty, and she would prescribe for a fever when he had chilblains. Then it he died, she could be arrested for malpractice. O, you can't fool us on female doctors. A man who has been sick and had male doctors, knows just how much he would feel to have a female doctor come tripping in and throw her fur-lined cloak over a chair, take off her hat and gloves and throw them on a lounge, and come up to the bed with a pair of marine blue eyes, with a twinkle in the corner, and look him in the wild, changeable eyes, and ask him to run out his tongue. Suppose he knew his tongue was coated so it looked like a yellow Turkish towel, do you suppose he would like to run out five or six inches of the lower end of it, and let that female doctor put her finger on it to see how fur it was? Not much. He would put that tongue up into his cheek, and wouldn't let her see many years have been living very con-

it for twenty-five cents admission. tentedly in their little cottage on the We have all seen doctors put their hands under the bed clothes and feel of a man's feet, to see if they were If a female doctor should do that it would give a man cramps in the

> A male doctor can put his hand on a man's stomach, and liver, and lungs, and ask him if he feels any pain there, but if a female doctor should do the same thing it would make a man sick, and he would want to get up and kick himself for employing a female doctor. O, there is no use of talking, it would kill a man.

Now, suppose a man has heart disease, and a female doctor should want to listen to the beating of his heart. She would lay her left ear on his left breast, so her eves and rosebud mouth would be looking right in his face, and her wavy hair would be scattered all around there, getting tangled in the buttons of his night-shirt. Den't you suppose his heart would get in about 20 extra beats to the minute? You bet! And she would smile—we will bet $10 she would smile—and show her pearly teeth, and the ripe lips would be working as though she were counting the beats, and he would think she was trying to whisper to him, and—well, what would he be doing all this time? If he was not dead yet, which would be a wonder, his left hand would brush the hair away from her temple and kind of stay there to keep the hair away, and his right hand would get a sort of nervous and move around to the back of her head, and when she had counted the beats a few minutes and was raising her head he would draw the head up to him and kiss her once for luck, if he was as bilious as a Jersey swamp angel, and have her charge it in the bill. And then a reaction would set in, and he would be as weak as a cat, and she would have to fan him and rab his head till he got over being nervous, and then make out his prescription after he got asleep. No; all of a man's symptoms change when a female doctor is practicing on him and she would kill him dead. The Sun is a woman's rights paper, and believes in allowing women to do anything they can do as well as men, and is in favor of paying them as well as men are paid for the same work, taking all things into consideration; but it is opposed to their trifling with human life by doctoring a total stranger. These colleges are doing a great wrong in preparing these female doctors for the war path, and we desire to enter a protest in behalf of twenty million men who could not stand the pressure.-Peck's Sun.

A City Lighted and Heated by Natural Gas.

Bradford, Pa., and neighboring places are lighted and heated by natural gas. In 1875 an oil company were sinking a well, on a high hill west of Bradford. At the depth of several hundred feet they struck a vein of gas. No oil was found. The force of the gas was such that when it was ignited a pillar of fire 50 feet high was formed. The roar of the gas could be heard for a mile and more. This burned for months The heat was such that the grass and foliage grew in the depth of winter as luxurously as it did in summer. Strawberries ripened near this well in February. The well had been burning long before the feasibility of utilizing it was thought of. A belt of dry territory, but yielding vast volumes of gas, was subsequently found to exist in the vicinity of the original gas well. A company was formed to carry the gas into the city. It is now distributed all over the place by pipes. A gaspipe, with jets attached, is run into parlor and kitchen stoves. The supply of gas is controlled by a stop-cock on the pipe. When a fire is wanted, a lighted match is thrown into the stove and the gas turned on. The fire is started at once. The gas possesses great heating qualities, and; apartments are warmed as quickly and as well by it as by coal. A woman in Snicarte, Mason county, Ill., to all appearances, died. But a few weeks previous to this she had given birth to a child, and was apparently well, with the exception of a nursing sore mouth, from the effects of which she had become quite weak; so much so, that her husband thought it was necessary to call in a physician, but she objected, insisting upon waiting a few days longer, thinking she could manage the affection without the aid of a physician. She soon afterward very suddenly sank away, and to all appearances gave up the ghost. The body was kept till the next day about 2 P. M., when it was inclosed in a coffin and taken to the grave yard, followed by a great many mournful friends. In laying her out her arms were tied together above the elbows with a strip of cloth, so that her hands would retain a natural position across her breast. At the grave some of her friends wished to view her remains, and the coffin was opened that they might do so. On removing the lid over the glass they could not see through the moisture on it, and it was then seen that one of her hands had been torn loose from the band and was lying by her side, and thousand persons visited the resorts her arms were as limber as one alive. in that State last winter, and that they | The circumstances bore upon the minds spent three million dollars while there. of several present, but still they could not entertain any notion but that she was dead. On opening the coffin they found fresh moisture on the glass of the coffin-lid, and her hands were again broken from the strip of cloth that bound them, and they were both lying by her side, and instead of her limbs being in the least rigid they and her fingers were flexible. Notwithstanding all this, they could not convince themselves but that she was dead, and she was reburied. The matter was generally discussed in the neighborhood, and by the fol-

The general opinion of the country at large is that he has "made a ath of hith-thelf" and will never recover. The new York Legislature is in session, and it is thought that those wise ones expect that body to re-elect them and return them to the Senate, but it is to be hoped for the best interests of the Republican party and of the country that that body contains good sense enough to refuse to do anything of the sort.

If the Legislature make a law of the capital punishment bill they ought to do so with many considerations of care. There are too many innocent men being executed to make a very loose capital punishment law a very desirable thing for Michigan. Following is that part of the bill now under consideration as refers to capital punishment:

(7510.) Section 1. All murders which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, or lying in wait, or any other kind of wilful, deliberate, and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate any arson, rape, robbery, or burglary shall be deemed murder of the first degree, and shall be punished by [being hung by the neck until dead], after first being confined in solitary confinement in the State prison for one year, or by solitary confinement at hard labor in the State prison for life [as the jury by whom the conviction was made or the judge by whom confession was received shall determine.]

(7512) Sec. 3. The jury before whom any person indicted for murder shall be tried, shall, if they find such person guilty thereof, ascertain in their decree whether it be murder of the first or second degree, [and shall deter-mine and deliver with their verdict which of the punishments provided in section one of this act shall be visited upon such convicted person]; but if such person shall be convicted by confession, the court shall proceed by examination of witnesses to determine the degree of the crime, and shall render judgment [and determine the punishment accordingly; and if the jury shall find the prisoner guilty of murder in the first degree, but shall not be able to agree as to the punishment, the court shall determine the punishment under the first section of this act and shall sentence the prisoner or prison-

THERE appears to be a sad fate in riew for the Young People's Picnic Association. They have forgotten where they are to hold their next annual meeting, and there is some doubt about their finding out before it is too late to hold it. A number of other questions connected with branch societies, the Boston exhibit. State fair, and other features of our work, will arise and occupy the attention of the convention. Sevjoining States have promised us their assistance upon the above topics, and all who attend are requested to go pre-pared to take part in the discussions. Benton Harbor is in the center of a region that ships more small fruits than all the rest of the State. This will be a good opportunity to visit that fa-mous region of fruit farms, and it is to be hoped that there may be a large attendance. The convention will open in Antis-dale's hall at 71/2 o'clock on the evening of June 7, and all delegates are requested upon their arrival to repair to the Lamb, and now he (Curtis) is out his desirable that there be an exhibit of mend it in the highest terms.—

most as much to fill and furnish as the food his stomach will demand to give the body he is abusing, strength.' HENRY BLODGETT has an advertisement in this issue of the RECORD in which he offers first-class pressed brick and tiling for sale. He manufactures tiling of all sizes from 2 to 8 inches in diameter, and those in this vicinity who are in need of such things will find it to their advantage to call upon him. His kiln is now being burned.

A St. Joe man at Buchanan this week who thinks that if some means' of transportation could be established from here to that village, St. Joe would furnish every foot of lumber sold there. High freights compel them to pay excessive prices and the use of lumber is, in consequence, greatly restricted.—St. Joseph Republican.

SOUTH BEND papers say the I. P. & C. railroad company will build a branch to that road from Plymouth to that city, and that surveying is now being done. That is just what is wanted here to open one of the best lumber markets in Berrien county there is in the country, when the St. Joseph Valley road is built to connect with it.

THE M. E. Church in Benton Harbor must be the subject of divine wrath. Their church was struck by lightning for the third time last week, on Sunday too, doing considerable damage to the front end of the building. Their house was served in a like manner in 1872 and in 1875 was burned by the same agent.

PROPERTY CHANGE. - The Rough Brothers have bought Mr. Garrett Morris' house and lot north of the wagon works on Main street, price $1,200, and Mr. Morris has bought the Isaac Brown place on Front street, price $800. Mr. Brown will build a new house on the vacant lot on the north side of the street, and directly opposite to the one he just sold.

IT would be a great accommodation to those living in the south side of the county if the St. Joseph Valley Railroad Company would put on force enough to finish their road to Berrien Springs in time for the meeting of the Pioneer Association, June 1, besides being of profit to the company. Eleven more working days before that time.

MR. EDITOR:-Should you wish any green sward to sod your yard over with. or for any other purpose, go and ask those who took the same, only a few days since, from the lot on which the Old Advent church stands, and doubtless they can tell you where such desired material of a fine quality can be found. Shame on them for the lawless L. S. B.

A Berrien Springs correspondent to the Detroit Free Press says that there never was a better prospect for a fruit crop in this county, especially apple, cherry, pear and strawberries. That one of the largest fruit growers in the west part of the county says that ninety-five per cent. of the peach buds on the-lake shore are all sound. It is just so here, but the difficulty comes in there not being any buds.

THE enforcement of the stock law in this county, is the cause and subject of numerous spirited discussions by those interested. As is usual in the enforcement of a law that is right, in some places, and not satisfactory to those living in others, this leads to trouble and grumbling, but like the others, will be better appreciated when all parties get used to its operations.

THE editor of the Mirror has taken to his usual rantings because we stated that a citizen of Niles originated the report of the failure of the Rough Brothers, and in denying it he denies a truth. We are sorry to see Brother Cook attempt in his weak way to uphold any such contemptable business as that was. We should suppose that he was about old enough to recognize in that sometimes deceiving.

THE Ladies' Home Mission Band will meet on Friday afternoon of this week at the residence of Geo. Howard, tory. He takes the place of John De. on Lake street. At the last meeting of this Society the sum of $1 was received as a donation from the Juvenile Mission Band of this village, for which these dear little girls, who have thus early in life begun their charitable works, will please accept the hearty thanks of the Mission Band, in behalf of the needy for whom their gift is intended.

MRS. SCOTT WHITMAN, Sec.

AFTER the narrow gauge railroad ermpany get their road built, and a little before if possible, the property owners on south Portage street would like to have them direct a little attention to the miserable and unsafe condition of that street. It ought to be repaired, and it can be just as easily done now as next year. Those who live there get more angry every day it is left in the condition it is now in, price on them. and there is no knowing what may happen before long.

Two rather pitiable appearing human beings appeared upon our streets the last of last week. One was a man named Isaac Tucker, from Flint, who was out of natural shape in nearly every part of his body, who was selling his book, "Eight Years in a County house." The other was a man with his legs paralyzed, lying upon a wheeled couch, and accompanied by an attendant who wheeled him about from place to place, as he offered some notions for sale. He belongs in Allegan.

AN OLD SETTLER GONE.-Mr. John P Martin died May 5, 1881, aged 73 years, 2 months, and 19 days. He was born in Ohio Feb. 16, 1808, married Miss Martha Burrus June 3, 1830, moved to Indiana Aug., 1844, living there until Sept., 1851, when he moved to Michigan to the farm where he died, near the Village of Dayton. The funeral, May 6, was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends The ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Mr. Skinner, of Dayton.

COMING.—SHUEY & Young's Great Star Combination, under a large tent, will exhibit in Buchanan, Monday, May 23, afternoon and night, introducing something entirely new under a large pavilion. Meet at 10 o'clock A. M., sharp. Appointment of neccessary committees by the Convention, after which the following questions will be present-

Resolved. That our annual election should be held March 1, Monday, instead of April 1. Monday. By A. N. Woodruff, Esq. Adjourn to 1 P. M.

Upon reassembling, the following questions will be discussed: Resolved. That each township should constitute one road district, and that a money tax should be collected for the support of roads instead of a labor tax.

By Hon. Levi Sparks. 3:00. Resolved, That for the protection of highways, the tire on all vehicles carrying 1,200 pounds or upwards should not be less than three inches wide. By Henry Ashoff.

3:40. What ought to be the rights and responsibilities of petitioners for laying out, altering or vacating highways. By Wm. J. Jones. 4:25. Recess for 15 minutes.

4:40. Miscellaneous discussion on the subject of bridges and bridge laws. 5:10. Contents of question box read and discussed. An explanation of the changes made in our road laws by the present legislature is especially desirable, and Hon. Thos. Mars will favor the convention with such explanation by special request. We specially invite contributions to the question box, and let no one fear or neglect to provide some questions for the consideration of the convention. Every Highway Commissioner, Street Commissioner and Overseer of Highways in the county is urgently requested to be present, as well as all others who pay taxes for the support

The Patrons of Husbandry are respectfully invited to give notice of this convention at their meetings throughout the county, and use their influence to secure a large attendance. WM. SMYTHE FARMER,)

Ah I distinctly I remember—
It was in that wet September,
When the earth and every member Of ct. action that it bors.
Had for weeks and months been scaking MAR for weeks and months been soal In the meanest, most provoking, Foggy rain, that, without joking, We had ever seen before; Se I knew it must be very Cold and damp beneath the floor— Very cold beneath the floor.

So I set me nearly napping,
In the sunshine, etretching, gaping,
With a feeling quite delighted
With the breezes heath the door,
Till I felt me growing colder,
And the stretching waring bolder,
And myself now feeling older,
Older than I felt before;
Feeling that my joints were stiffer
Than they were in days of yore,
Stiffer than they'd been before.

All along my back the creeping
Soon gave place to rustling, leaping,
As if countless frozen demons
Had concluded to explore
All the cavities—the varmints—
Twirt me and my nether garments,
Through my boots into the floor;
Then I found myself a shaking,
Gently shaking more and more,
Every moment more and more.

Twas the ague; and it shook me Shaking to the kitchen, every Place where there was warmth in store!
Shaking till the chins ratiled,
Shaking till the mortals battled;
Shaking, and with all warming
Felling colder than before;
Shaking till it had exhausted
All its powers to thake me more. All its powers to shake me more. Till it could not shake me more.

Then it rested till the morrow,
When it came with all the horror
That it had the face to borrow,
Shaking, shaking as before,
And from that day in September—
Day which I shall long remember—
It has made diurnal visits,
Shaking, shaking, oh! so sore!
Ms to bed if nothing more,
Fully this if nothing more.

And to-day the swallows fitting, Round my cottage see me sitting, Moodily within the sunshine Just inside my silent door, Waiting for the ague, seeming Life a man forever dreaming; And the sunlight on me streaming Casts no shadow on the floor—For I am too thin and sallow To make shadows on the floor—Nary a shadow any more.

The Fenians.

These people, if we believe the early historians so far as to allow them an his torical existence, were a body of Irish militia, forming a kind of standing army, which was employed to defend the coasts of Ireland from the invasion of foreign foes. They were billeted upon the inhabitants during winter, and obliged to maintain themselves by hunting and fishing during summer. Each of the four provinces had its own band of these four provinces had its own band of these warriors or champions, but Leinster was the most fortunate province in incorpor-ating distinguished names in the list of its Fenians. Fingal himself was one of the illustrious band, which included also the ever-memorable Ossian. When St. Patrick came to Ireland, Ossian narrated to the Apostle of Ireland, Ossian har-plotts of the valiant Fenians. The record of their conversation, which is still extant, is called the Dialogue of the Bages; but it seems that the saint and the bard, sage as they both were, were sometimes on the point of quarreling. Our readers may remember the version of an ancient Ossianic poem which, ac-cording to Sir Walter Scott, Hector McIntyre gave to his uncle, the anti-quary. St. Patrick there complains that his devotional meditations and psalms are disturbed by the old women's tales of Ossian; and Ossian, annoyed at the implied comparison of psalms to the tales of the bare-armed Fenian, declares in no measured terms that he should think it no great harm to wring the saint's bald head from his shoulders.

Killed by the Knout. John Howard entered St. Petersburg alone and on foot. The police discovered him, and he was invited to visit the Empress Catharine at court. He respectfully informed her Majesty that he had come to Russia to visit the dungeons of the captives and the abodes of the wretched, not the palaces and courts of Kings and Queens.

Armed with power, he went to see the infliction of the knout. A man and woman were brought out. The man received sixty strokes and the woman twenty-five. "I saw the woman," says Howard, "in a very weak condition some days fafter, but could not find the man any more." Determined to ascertain what had become of him, Howard visited the executioner. "Can you," he said, "inflict the knout so as to occasion death in a very short time?" "Yes! the last man who was punished by my hand with the knout died of the punishment." "In what mauner do you thus render it mortal?" "By one or two strokes on the sides, which carry aff large pieces of flesh." "Do you receive orders thus to inflict punishment?" "I do!" Thus the boast of Russia, that capital punishments had been abolished throughout the empire, was effectually exposed.

The Old Morgan Story.

A pamphlet has been issued entitled: "American Political Anti-Masonry, with Good-Enough Morgan." In order to give the reader an idea of the narrative it may be well to state that in the year 1826, a Freemason, by the name of William Morgan, then residing in Batavia, attempted to make an expose of Masonry. He was kidnapped on the 12th of September, of that year, and was supposed to have been drowned in the Magara river. When he disappeared he was quite bald and wore no whiskers. More than a year after this time the body of a man was found forty miles east of the Niagara river on the shore of Lake Ontario, and an inquest declared it to be the body of an unknown man. The clothing was taken care of by one of what was then known as the Morgan Committee. Soon after this inquest Thurlow Weed, who was chief of said committee, professed to believe the body might be that of Morgan. He, therefore, had it dug up and a second inquest held. The body, heier the said to be the being thus disinterred, was found to have a full head of hair upon its head and full side-whiskers on its face. All this Mr. Weed well knew, for, in a letter to the New York Herald, written in 1875, he says: "The head was covered with long silken hair of a chestnut color." The second inquest declared the body to be that of Morgan, and it was buried as such. But, doubt having arisen as to whether there had not been foul play by Weed and others, the body was again disin-terred, and a third inquest held at Batavia. The head of the body this time appeared very bald, and with no whiskers on the face, although the proof showed that the head when found on the shore was well covered with hair, and the face covered with whiskers. It was also proven that the body was four inches taller than that of Morgan, and was that of one Timothy Monroe.

Citizens of Batavia, where Morgan had resided, testified that the body was not Morgan's, and the third inquest so decided. After this Ebenezer Guffind said to Weed, "What are you going to do with Morgan now?" to which it was do with Morgan now?" to which it was said Mr. Weed gave the celebrated reply: "It is a good-enough Morgan till after election." Henry O'Reilley, the editor of the Daily Advertiser, published some statistics intimating that Weed had disfigured the head and face of the corpse of Timothy Monroe so as to make it look like that of Morgan, For this Mr. Weed caused O'Reilley to be indicted for libel. The suit remained untried thirteen years, thus harassing untried thirteen years, thus harassing O'Reilley, but was finally nolle prosequied, and lately Mr. Weed has publicly gined, and lately hir. Weed has publicly stated that the case was sworn off by O'Reilley, so that he could not get a trial. To this statement of Mr. Weed, Mr. O'Reilley now replies: "A lawyer familiar with prominent legal proceedings at that time knows that Weed's inability for twelve years to cause trial to he had against us on his indictment is in itself a libel upon our judiciary system, and as to his declaration that he urged the trial while he had been swearing it off, it may be repeated by us that it would require as much hard swearing as it would to make the public believe that Morgan's corpse had grown four inches in length and crept into Timothy Mon-roe's breeches twelve months after his death."-Exchange.

Shaving, Hair Cutting, Shampooing, in First-Class Style.

The Chapman Tubular or Bored Well as shown in the "New Style," differs materially from the Driven Well, or the "Old Style," the latter being driven often meet obstacles that cannot be overcome, such as clay, hard pan, rock and quicksand. In making the CHAPMAN WELL all these difficulties are easily overcome by boring inside and ahead of the pipe, setting the pipe as fast as the hole is formed by the tools, (we use no point but work with pipe open), thus by adding more work-pipe and more tubing any desired depth can be reached. After sufficient water has been reached the trober table, making them durable and you have a well where no driven well can be made. The "check" and "plunger, Fig. 2, attached to wood rods, is inserted as at J. Attach the rod to pump handle and you have a well where no driven well can be made. The "check" and "plunger," Fig. 2 and 3, are brass bodies with hard and with a grab pull the "check," then use a "puller" to remove the screen and you have everything on top of ground. Repair and return them and your pump is new. The "check" and "plunger" being submer ged, the water is litted in the stockers. A Famous Clown.

A Famous Clown.

Few men in his profession had less of the circus man and the clown about him outside of the ring than James Cooke, the leaper, tumbler, rope-walker, clown, and ring-master, and who died not long ago. He was slender, medium-sized, and erect, with close-cut, gray hair brushed back from a well-shaped fore-head, well-cut features, steel-gray eyes, and a short gray mustache. He dressed with care, in clerical black, and a white necktie added to his clerical appearance. His words were carefully chosen, and he His words were carefully chosen, and he spoke deliberately and thoughtfully. He looked and acted like a gentleman always. He was a religious man. His son, 17 years old, is studying for the priesthood, in the Santa Clara College, in San Francisco, and a daughter is at school in a convent near that city.

school in a convent near that city. "He was a perfect gentleman," said Mr. Nathan, one of the proprietors of Barnum's circus, where for the last three years of his life Mr. Cooke was equestrian manager. "He never used an oath, and he never permitted himself to talk ungrammatically. He seemed always try-ing to improve, and to improve all about him. If any of the men in the ring used bad language, ungrammatical language, I mean, he would reprove them, but in such a way that they would not take offense, and could only love him the more for the interest he took in them. He urged the boys to read the papers, and to study when they could. As a clown he was very good; Shakspearean, of course. He was dignified, graceful and witty, and studied hard to invent new things."

Where Booth Is Buried.

The Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Commercial writes: It was only Buffalo Commercial writes: It was only after some patient inquiry that I could ascertain the facts, which are interesting, and, so far as I know, are yet unpublished. Booth died, as will be remembered, in a barn in Maryland from a wound received from the musket of Boston Corbett. His body was brought to Washington, and, after having been identified by the court-martial before which his fellow-conspirators were tried, was dissected by the Surgeon General of the army. The brain and heart and some other parts of the body were preserved in alcohol, and are new on exhibition in the medical museum of the Surgeon General's office. The building Surgeon General's office. The building in which the assassination occurred was Ford's Theater. The Government confiscated it, but afterward Ford was paid its full value, and it has since been used as the headquarters of the medical corps of the army. The brain and heart of Booth are in jars, standing in a case that is situated very near the actual scene of the assassination.

After the surgeon had done with Booth's body, it was buried in a grave in the Arsenal grounds. Only half a dozen persons knew the exact spot, which was unmarked. In 1867 Edwin Booth the actor, sent Mr. Weaver, the sexton of Christ's Church, Baltimore, to Washington, with a request that the remains of his brother might be taken up and removed to the family burial-place. After some delay the request was grant-After some delay the request was granted by President Johnson, who was finally appealed to, and Mr. Weaver took the body to the cemetery in Baltimore and buried it beside the elder Booth and others of the family. The removal was conducted with great secrecy, and was concealed from Secretary Stanton, who had refused to give his consent.

A Leaky Church. Bishop Butler was once holding service in a dilapidated church in the North of England, and, a storm coming on, was nearly "drowned out" by the tor-rent of water that filtered through a thousand rents in the roof. He mildly remonstrated at the leaky condition of things, and suggested that the first surshiny day should be devoted to repairing the edifice. "But it doan't need repair, your Worship, when it doan't shower, was the answer of the worthy church-

The eye is dim, yet it glows with the soft radiance of holy love which can never fade. Ah, yes, she is a dear old mother. The sands of life are nearly run out, but, feeble as she is, she will gruther and reach down lower for you further and reach down lower for you than any other upon earth. You cannot walk into a midnight where she cannot see you; you cannot enter a prison whose bars will keep her out; you can-not mount a scaffold too high for her to reach that she may kiss and bless you in evidence of her deathless love.
