Romance Of a Glove.

"Does it please you, Katie?" "Oh, it is splendid! I could not have suited myself half so well, had I been eft to choose."

"But you have not seen the wine cellar vet. It is a treasure of its kind. Let's go down again." They went down the stairs together. he talking gaily, she with a troubled look on her face. After duly admiring the place she put a timid hand on his arm and said: "But, Arthur dear, let us have no wine in it." "Why?" he asked, in surprise.

"Because I have resolved if am the mistress of a house, there shall be no liquors kept in it—no 'social glasses' for friends.''

"Why, Katie, you are unreasonable. I did not know you carried your temperance opinions as far as that. Of course I shall keep wine in my house, and entertain my friends with it, too." She raised her face appealingly.
"Arthur!" she said, in a tone of voice he knew how to interpret. Arthur's brow grew cloudy. "But you cannot fear for me?" he said, with half offended pride. "I must fear for you, Arthur, if you begin as he did. And I fear for others besides-for the sons and husbands and fathers who may learn at our cheerful board to love the poison that They went up the steps again and sat on a sofa in the dining-room for a few minutes, while Katie put on her hat and drew on her gloves.

The argument was kept up. It is unnecessary that we should repeat all that was said on both sides. It ended at last as similar discussions have ended before. Neither was willing to yield -Katie, because she felt that her whole future happiness might be involved in it: Arthur, because he thought it would be giving way to a woman's whims, and would sacrifice too much of his popularity with his friends.

He had bought this house, paid for it, furnished it handsomely, and in a few weeks was to bring Katie as its mistress. All the afternoon they had been looking it over together, happy as two birds with a newly-finished nest. But when Arthur closed the door and put the key in his pocket, in the chill, waning light of the December afternoon, and gave Katie his arm to see her home, it was all "broken up" be-tween them, and a notice "To Let" was put over the door of the pretty house the very next morning.

It was the most foolish thing to do: but then lovers can always find something to quarrel about. "They parted with a cool "good evening," at the door of Katie's lodging-house. She went up to her room to cry; he went home hurt and angry, but secretly resolving to see her again, and give her a chance to say that she was in the wrong. He would wait a few days, however; it would not do to let her see that he was in a hurry to "make it up."

He did wait, nearly a week, and when he called at the modest lodging-house where he had been wont to visit so often, he was told that Miss Gardines had been gove three days ner had been gone three days.
"Gone where?" he asked, slow to believe.

"She did not tell me, sir. She said she was not coming back. Her aunt lives at Bristol."

He then took the next train to Bristol and investigated; but neither there nor in any other place, though he searched for months afterwards, did he find sign or trace of Katie Gardiner. All this happened more than a year before I saw Katie; but we three "factory girls," who lodged at Mrs. Howell's with her, of course knew nothing about it. She came to the factory and applied for work. The superintendent thought her too delicate for such labor, but she persisted; and, in fact, she improved in health, spirits, and looks after she became used to the work and simple fare of the factory girls.

She was a stranger to us all, and it seemed likely that she should remain so. But one day Mary Bascomb's dress caught in a part of the machinery, and before any one else could think what to do Katie had sprang to her side and pulled her away by main strength from the terrible danger that threatened her. After that, Mary and Lizzie Payne and I, who were her dearest friends, were Katie's sworn allies.

We all lodged together then in the big "factory boarding-house." But Katie took it into her head that we trouble, but she gave the required dihimself: "It can't be my Katie, of calf got through the auger hole. I would have so much nicer times in a private lodging to ourselves; and when she took anything into her head she generally carried it through. In less than a week she had found the very place she wanted, arranged matters with the superintendent, and had us sheltered under Mrs. Howell's vine and fig-tree. We four girls were the proud possessors of a tolerable large doubleand so persuaded that worthy woman bedded apartment, with a queer little dressing-room attached,—"and the lib-erty of the parlor to receive callers in," while we were having a frolic on the carpet with the children in Mrs. Howa proviso at which we all laughed.

This was "home" to us after the la-

may. "I cannot appear."

Katie glanced serenely at her own frizzy head in the looking-glass, gave a pull at her overskirt and a touch to her collar, and opened the door. Immediately afterward I was shocked by hearing her utter a genuine feminine scream and seeing her drop on the floor; and that man, a perfect stranger to me, gathered her up in his arms and began raving over her in a manner that astonished me. He called her "his darling," and "his own Katie," and actually kissed her before I could reach her.

I was surprised at myself afterwards that I hadn't ordered the gentleman out, but it never occurred to me at the time, and when Katie "came to" and sat upon the sofa and heard his speeches, she seemed so well pleased that I left them and took the children up to our room, feeling bewildered all over.
What shall I say further? Only that Katie lives in the pretty house in the town known as Dr. Craig's residence, where we three "factory girls' have a home whenever we want it. And there are no liquors found on her sideboard nor at her table. One day I heard Arthur say: "You were a silly child, Kate, to run away from me. I should have given up that point at last, I know."

"But there would have been the splendid cellar and the ten thousand a ing funny.
"Milly," said she, "please light the year," answered she. "It would have been such a temptation. We are safer as it is, dear."

Newspaper Borrowers.

An exchange recently published a letter from a lady subscriber in which she complained bitterly of the annoyance she experienced from the habit her female neighbors had of constantly borrowing her paper. The exchange failed to advise her on the subject, and, as the matter is a serious one, we have ourselves looked about for some method of relief, and now think we can offer the suffering lady, and all others similarly situated, an adequate means of succor. Here is our plan: Let the lady immediately upon receiving her paper carefully cut from it some item -it makes no particular difference what it is - most any item will do, only let it be neatly and carefully removed from the paper. Then the following procedure will be sure to ensue: In a few moments the neighbor's boy will come after the paper-he will take it home—within three minutes he will the street to get a magazine from the emerge from the house, he will scoot down street and very shortly return with a folded newspaper of the same date as the one just borrowed. A Small Hole to Get Through.

The proprietor of a tan yard, adja cent to a certain town in Virginia concluded to build a stand for the purpose of vending his leather, buying raw hides and the like. Debating what sort of a sign it was best to put up for the purpose of attracting attention, at last a happy idea struck him. He bored an auger hole through the door post and stuck a calf's tail into it, with the bush end flaunting out. After a while he noticed a grave-looking personage standing near the door, with his spectacles on, gazing intently on the sign.
And there he continued to stand, gazing and gazing, until the curiosity of the proprietor was greatly excited in turn. He stepped out and addressed the individual: "Good morning," said he. "Morning," said the other, with-out moving his eyes from the sign. "You want to buy leather?" said the store-keeper. "No." "Are you a farmer?" "No." "Are you a merchant?" "No." "Are you a lawyer?" "No."
"Are you a doctor?" "No." What are you then?" "I'm a philosopher. I've been standing here for an hour trying to see if I could ascertain how that

Correspondence. AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, (

July, 12, 1881. EDITOR RECORD: - Thinking that many of readers would be interested in an article on the work at the college this year, I find excuse for writing a few lines for your paper.

Having received a bountiful appropriation from our Legislature, many new buildings are going up, and other needed improvements made. A new building to contain the library and musium, reading, recitation and desecting rooms, offices of the president and secretary, is being rapidly built. The long needed chemical laboratory will soon be completed and ready for use. The old boilers are to be replaced by new and larger ones, so that the several halls and labratories will be heated from a contral station.

The prosperity of the farm, under the direction of Prof. Johnson, warrants the erection of two new barns to meet the growing demand of that department. The crops on the farm are far above the average for the year. The gardens and lawns are also in good condition, and many new walks and drives will be laid out after the completion of the new buildings.

A new feature of the college is the printing of a paper, the College Speculum, by the students, together with the aid of the Professors. It will be devoted to the interests of the college, and contains the results of many experiments now being made, which are well worth the attention of every good farmer. It will contain sixteen pages, nine by twelve inches in size, and be printed four times each college year The subscription price will be fifty cents per year. The first number will be published August 1.

The commencement exercises will be held August 16. The graduating class numbers thirty-three, being the largest class ever graduated here. A STUDENT.

"All the Difference."

It is an old story in England, the heartless obstructions placed in the path of young inventors, authors, and others, seeking for recognition. In America, anybody, everybody, is considered entitled to a hearing. "Why do we get along so well in this great establishment, and how is it every man and boy about the place looks so earnest and so hopeful?" asked the chief per will be materially increased. Not of a remarkable New York institution, one woman among them would be able | repeating my question. Because every to sleep a wink without knowing just man and boy in the place knows he has the lad who sweeps the office comes to me to-morrow morning and says, "Sir, I think I have discovered a plan whereby you can save an hour or a dollar in a particular operation," I should listen to him with respect and attention. In your country, I am told, he would very likely be kicked out of the place for his impertinence. He had struck the true cause of much of the hopelessness of the prevailing toil among the English masses.—Joseph Hatton.

How It Was Settled.

When the Erie railroad went on further than Turner's Station, fifty miles from New York, the engineer o that and other roads was in the habit of running the train according to his own judgment, the conductor being counted out altogether. Captain Ayres, the conductor of the Erie train, con sisting of engine, freight cars and passenger cars in the rear, did not fancy this fashion, and determined to try a new plan. He run a stout line from the passenger car and fastened it to a log of wood on the locomotive, and told the engineer to stop the train when he raised the stick. The engineer on starting cut the stick loose. Then next day the Captain rigged up his string and stick of wood again. "Abe," said he, "this thing's got to be setiled one way or the other to-day. If that stick of wood is not on the end of this cord when we get to Turner's you've got to lick me or I'll lick you. The stick was not on the string when the train reached turner's. The Captain pulled off his coat and told the engineer to get off the engine. Hammil leclined to get off. Captain Ayres climbed to the engineer's place. Hammil started to jump off on the opposite side. The conductor hit him under the ear, and saved him the trouble of jumping. That settled forever the question of authority on railroad trains, and was the origin of the bell-rope on railroad trains.—Detroit Free Press.

The Irish Highwayman.

An Irishman, finding his cash at

as a professional means of refreshing the exchequer; and having provided himself with a huge horse-pistol, proceeded forthwith to the conventional "lonely common," and lay in wait. The now less conventional "farmer returning from the market with a bag of money," of course, soon appeared to whom enter Pat with the regulation highwayman offer of choice "your money or your life!"—a remark fortified by the stimultaneous exhibition of the fire-arm in the usual way. The farmer, who was a Quaker, essayed to temporize. "I would not have thee stain thy soul with sin, friend and didst thou rob me of my gold, it would be theft; and didst thou kill me it would be murder. But hold! a bargain is no sin, but a commerce between two honest men. I will give thee this bag of gold for the pistol which thou holdest at my ear." The unexpecting amateur Macheath, yielding, perhaps, to the Quaker's logic and solicitude for his spiritual wellfare. made the exchange without a moment's hesitation. "Now, friend." cried the wily Ephraim, leveling the weapon, "give me back my gold or I'll blow thy brains out!" "Blaze away, thin, darlint!" said Pat. "Sure there's niver a dhrop of powther in it!" The result was a sold Quaker.—Chamber's Journal.

His first field of labor, Kalamazoo circuit, which included at least what now constitutes the following charges: Kalamazoo, Schoolcraft, Ostemo, Cooper, Richland, Otsego, Galesburg, Augusta, Climax and Leroy. At different points on this territory were preaching places, wherever a class could be organized and a school house or private house could be obtained to preach in. I think at this time it was a four weeks' circuit, traveled on horseback. The preacher's library was in his saddle-bags, and much of his study accomplished as he sat in his saddle. Many if not most of his appointments were on week days. When the long looked-for preaching day came, we left our work and went to the place of worship, which was frequently a log cabin, with one room for kitchen, sitting-room, parlor and meeting-house. Standing in the corner, near the great open clay back fire-place, while the little congregation were seated on seats extemporized for the occasion, he preached the gospel to hearers anxious to hear the word of life. Then came lowed by the hearty prayers and blessings of those left behind. In this manner our brother did pioneer work. This work he pursued as the country improved and settled, his field of labor covering a large part of the State. He may be said to have seen the state of Michigan made: the log cabin exchanged for the splendid residence and surroundings; the Indian trail for the railway; the uncultivated and wild vale for the rich, waving grain field; the log school house as preaching place, for the splendid and commodious church. I well remember when Brother Worthington came to be our preacher. I see him now so plain, pictured on memory's page, his dress and bearing. Twenty-three years old, small in frame,

How I would count the days when he would come again; and as I listened to his youthful preaching my admiration almost rose to adoration. It seemed to me that he was something more than human. I formed a friendship and love for him then that I have cherished through the long intervening years that have passed. And although our paths, some of the time, separated, and our associations have been broken, yet memory holds on to

During his stay on Kalamazoo circuit he made the acquaintance of a noble christian girl, of a staunch Methodist family of Leroy, Miss Jane Mills. They were married at Climax in 1839, and henceforward she bacame a sharer in the responsibilities of the itinerant.

Between his appointment at Moscow and Ionia there occurs an interregnum in his pastoral relations, in which he was engaged in business at Battle Creek and Coldwater. During this time he was bereft of the wife of his youth, and married again to his now bereaved companion. His first union was blessed with three sons and one daughter, who all survive him.

I will not attempt the full analysis of a character that is known to so many here to-day; and besides, there are others who may speak to-day who are better qualified to do it than myself. But one trait has so impressed me that I may say a few words in reference to it, and that is the cheerfulness and sunshine that was always upon his countenance—the smile that he had for every one. There was a warmth and geniality in his nature that drew around him friends everywhere; a light-heartedness that made him appear youthful; one of those men who never grew old. It was an inborn trait. I recollect in my early acquaintance with him, we were one day out in the woods, at the home of my father. He seemed quite light hearted and jovial, and I spoke to him of it, rather checking it than otherwise. I shall never forget his reply, which was about in these words: "If any man has a right to be cheerful it is a Methodist preacher." He seemed to retain the same idea to the end of his life. Even in his last painful attack he did not lose it; cheerfully commending his sorrowing companion to God, and assuring her that He would care for her. But we do not attribute the shouts of triumph and exultation during the last hours to this natural trait in Brother ings that were given him. He was with the rest of his brethren in the Ministry, looking forward to Conference, expecting in a few weeks to receive his appointment. But the Master has anticipated the action of the Conference. He has given him his appointment. His voice has been heard.

Prohibition in Kansas.

TOPEKA, July 18.—An immense outdoor Mass meeting was held here to-night to discuss the action of the city council in licensing the sale of mineral water and other drinks. Col. C. K. Holliday presided with a long array of vice-presidents. Speeches were made by Col. Holliday and Ex-Governor Robertson and others, and a series of resolutions were adopted, setting forth that the prohibitory amendment and consequent legislation have proved to be the most detrimental to the best interests of Kansas; that both foreign and native immigration has been stopped and growth of the State checked; that municipal corporations are threatened with empty treasuries; that the expenses to the courts have been greatly ncreased instead of diminished, as was claimed by the firiends of prohibition: that a further attempt to enforce the law will be detrimental to the moral as well as material welfare of the peo-

Guiteau, the would-be assassin of President Garfield (according to the statement of District Attorney Corkhill), determined to murder the President on Wednesday, May 18, and dogged his victim's footsteps until he beieved the deed was done. He went to Washington March 6, boarded and roomed at various places, borrowed money with which to buy a pistol, June S, practiced firing at a board with it, followed the President to the Christian church. June 12, but found he could not kill him without danger of hitting some one else. He noticed that the President sat near a window, and found he could be shot through the head from the outside of that window without hitting any one else. On Saturday, June 18, the President and Mrs. Gar field left for Long Branch, and although Guiteau was in the ladies' room with his pistol ready loaded, he had not the heart to murder Garfield before his frail-looking wife's face. On Wednesday. June 29, the President, his son. and U.S. Marshal Henry went out for a ride. Guiteau followed them with his loaded pistol, hoping the carriage would stop, but it did not. On Friday, July 1, he followed the President from the White House to Secretary Blaine's residence, hiding in an alley, and waiting for Garfield to leave; but as Mr. Blaine came out with him, no opportunity occurred for shooting. On the next morning Guiteau breakfasted at the Riggs house, walked in the park rode in an avenue car to the 6th street depot, got out, loafed around the depot engaged a hackman for $2 to take him to the jail, had his boots blacked, examined his pistol and cartridges care fully, took a seat in the ladies' waiting room, and as soon as the President entered, walked up behind him and fired two shots. With such a cool, methodical, deliberate procedure, covering several weeks' time, it will be no easy matter to establish insanity in the would-be murderer.-Lansing Repub-

The comptroller of the currency has issued a circular to the national banks asking reports from them of the proportion of their business which is done by drafts and checks, carried on their books as money. There is good reason for believing that 95 per cent. of all financial transactions in this country take place without a dollar of currency being handled. The cheapness of ex change, the use of the telegraph and telephone, the large masses of capital which seek employment in our business centers, all have combined to force down the rate of interest by dispens ing with treasury and bank notes and gold and silver coin. It is not within the power or province of any man or any ring to lock up the currency and cause a stringent money market, for the immense volume of money nov afloat and seeking employment is be yond the machinations of even the ugliest "bull" or "bear" in Wall street. While lower rates of interest are re ducing the profits of bankers and capitalists, they are conferring immense benefits upon legitimate enterprise and labor. Any industrious, frugal man. who can offer decent security, may now obtain money at rates hitherto unknown in this country, and the "nimble sixpence" turns out far better than the "slow shilling." Before the establishment of national banks, the current rate of exchange was from 1 to 5 per cent. and that of interest from 10 to 25 per cent. Now the highest rate of exchange is only one-quarter of one per cent., or a twentieth as much as was frequently paid say 25 years ago; and the lenders of money are looking anxiously about for borrowers at 7 per cent. on first class security. hardly bring par when they bore 10 per cent. interest, now command a premium when they bear only 5 per cent. interest. The Evening News has found a lunatic in form of a rich farmer who lives in the suburbs of West Bay City, and believes with Mother Shipton, that the world will certainly come to an end before 1881 closes, and that in the meantime the whole country will be but a hospital and charnal house. He says horses will die in their stalls, their harnesses and in the fields, and men, women and children will vomit blood, and half of them die before the great day of "end" shall come. He advises all his neighbors - many of whom, howrying it out—not to eat a morsel of food which has not been cooked with—in fifteen minutes, telling them that the air will fill it with poison. In all other matters this prophet of ill tidings is a very intelligent man, about 40

sults, and has greatly increased the extent of the food-fishes of the country, but no part of the commission's work is more valuable or of greater interest than the successful cultivation of carp. The commission have just drawn off the water from Babcock lake, the small carppond near the monument lot in this city, where most of the experiments have taken place. The result shows that the carp can be successfully cultivated in the muddiest inland streams, and it is said even in slonghs, swamps and mud-pud-dles. Prof. Baird has already received applications from 3,000 private persons for young carp with which to make the experiment in the Western States. The carp-ponds were stocked last spring with a few hundred carp, placed under the immediate management of Dr. Hassel, who has devoted most of his life to carpraising in Germany, but who was induced to come to this country three years ago by Prof. Baird. The young carp bred in these ponds are now being distributed throughout the country. A number have been sent to Illinois, Ohio, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The experiments have been so successful that new carp lakes for propagating purposes are to be constructed here. One containing eight acres has already been commenced, and another one of five acres is in contemplation. Prof. Baird says that one pair of carp will stock an acre of water, and that the spawn from a single fish will yield from 5,000 to 10,000 young fish. They do not commence to spawn until 4 years old. Dr. Hassel, the Superintendent, has seen carp in Austria 300 years old, so old that even moss grew on the back of ne fish; yet it was active, and appeared to have as much vitality as the younger fish. The usual maximum weight of the carp is thirty pounds. Dr. Hassel did not succeed in making any carp live to reach this country until he had made three trips with the fish. Those brought out on the first two voyages died. In the spring of 1877 he succeeded in landing in good condition 130 young carp. From these fish all the carp in this country have been produced within three years. Prof. Baird hopes in the course of a few years to be able to stock most of the Western waters with these fish.— Washington Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Shy, Proud Indian Youth.

The United States Government is educating a few Indian youths at the Hampton School. The teachers find an obstacle in the sky, proud, independent nature of these national wards. They are ambitious to go "the white man's road," but they do not want to appear thus ambitious.

A writer in Harper's Magazine illustrates this shy, proud self-consciousness by an incident of the class-room. When visitors are admitted the Indian oupils become shy and distrustful. They fret at being objects of curiosity.

"Laughing Face," says the writer, will not even smile, or show any sign of intelligence, nor will he condescend to respond in any way except by a grunt to his teacher's efforts. All this before strangers. But when they are gone Laughing Face, with much difficulty, writes on the board, 'I sorry I not try, for his teacher.

"An Indian girl," continues the writer, "stands leaning on the balustrade of the piazza, her eyes turned toward the waters of the bay, but seemingly seeing nothing. She might as well be behind a red mask, for any shadow of expression on her face. "You speak to her; she does not understand one word that you say, nor loes she turn her head or eves. "You touch the dusky cheek-you might as well touch a stone. But behind that mask she is watching you. She is learning every minute, but she will not let you know it. If she is touched, you will be none the wiser. If she is sorry, she will not ask your sympathy.

"On a Christmas night the Indian boys at Hampton contributed their share to the amusement of the occasion by a war-dance. They prepared their contumes unaided, and executed the dance with so much truth that it was frightful. But the next morning, when 'clothed and in their right mind,' they sat in their class-room, and their teacher said: "'I was afraid I had lost my boys last night. I am glad to get you back again—'

"They answered as with one voice, We are so glad to get back!"

THE latest thing for ladies' wear is a large cord with tassels attached, which is worn around the waist. It looks nice, but any young man who is really attentive to a girl this winter will have to protect his right wrist with some kind of pad, and even then much of the romance attendant ni clasping the waist of a lovely creat. All disappear when your arm comes in contact with something that seems too large for a clothes-line und not large enough for a ship's hawser.

Not Much of a Loss.

Young men should, when conversing with young ladies, use expressions free from ambiguity, else the experience of a Cleveland clerk may be theirs. A young lady went to a drug-store and had a prescription made up.

"How much?" inquired the lady. "Fifty cents," said the clerk. "But I have only 45 cents with me," replied the customer. "Can't you let me have it for that?"

"No, ma'am," said the clerk: "but you can pay me the 5 cents when you come in again. "But suppose I were to die?" said the lady, jocularly. "Well, it wouldn't be a very great loss," was the smiling response. And immediately the smiling clerk gathered, from the indignant flash on the lady's face, that he had been misunderstood, and before he could assure her that it was the little balance and not she that would be no great loss, she had bounced out at a go-as-you-please gait, and was beyond the sound of his voice.

"Well, Harry, how did you like the preserved cherries?" Harry (on his 5th birthday had preserved crystallized fruits for the first time): "Oh, auntie! I liked them so much that if I could have made a hole in my throat I'd have taken them out and caten them over

It is told of him that, visiting a friend's house where he had never been before, he caught a glimpse of the book-case as he passed the half-open library-door. In the course of the evening, when some of the company expressed their anxiety to witness some specimens of his power, he said to his host:

"Well, sir, I shall tell you, without stirring from this place, what books you have in your library."

stirring from this place, what books you have in your library."

"Come, come," said he, incredulously, "that is too gcod."

"We shall see," replied Houdin.

"Let some of the company go into the library and look, and I shall call out the names from this room." They did so, and Houdin began: "Top shelf, left hand, two volumes in red morocco; Gibbon's Decline and Fall; next to these four volumes of half calf; Boswell's Johnson; 'Rasselas,' in cloth; 'Hume's History of England,' in calf, two volumes, but the second one wanting," and so on, shelf after shelf, to the unspeakable wonder of the whole company. speakable wonder of the whole company. More than once a gentleman stole into the drawing-room, certain he would catch Houdin reading a catalogue; but there sat the conjuror, with his hands in his pockets, looking into the fire.

The First Roller-Skates.

The earliest of the roller-skates was probably that invented by Joseph Mer-lin, an ingenious mechanician, who was born in the city of Huys, between Namur and Liege, on Sept. 17, 1835. Dr. E. F. Rimbault, in a sketch of his life, tells us that, after living for some years in Paris, Merlin, on the recommendation of the Royal Academy of Sciences, came to England in May, 1860, in the suit of the Spanish Ambas aday, Count de Fuentes, with whom he resided for some time in Soho square. He was director of Cox's Museum, in Spring Gardens for many years, and in it and elsewhere he exhibited many curious inventions, among others, as we see from this ex-tract from "Bushby's Concert-room Anecdotes," a pair of roller-skates: "During the latter part of the eighteenth century this ingenious mech-anician and musical instrument-maker gratified the curious and tasteful by the public exhibition of his organ, piano-forte, and other inventions, at his museum, in Prince street, Hanover square.
Merlin's mind was adequate to the embracing the whole compass of mechanical science and execution, at least in his articles connected with elegant and domestic appropriate. One of his in domestic amusements. One of his ingenious novelties was a pair of skates contrived to run on wheels. Supplied with a pair of these and a violin, he mixed in the motley group of the celebrated Mrs. Cornelly's masquerade at Carlisle House, Soho square, when, not having provided the means of retarding his velocity or commanding its direction, he impelled himself against a mirror of more than £500 value, dashed it to atoms, broke his instrument to pieces, and wounded himself most severely."

PEACE GRUE.—"Here is the plan I have tried for twenty years with the worm that works on the tree just under the surface of the ground. I destroy all the worms I can find; then prepare a sheet of brown paper by painting it with grafting wax; clean the dirt from the tree as low as I can without interfering with the roots; then wrap the paper around the trunk about a foot up from the root. It will stick without any tying. Then pull the dirt back around the free. The time to do the work is in the spring. If you are planting out young trees, wrap them before they are planted. They should be wrapped every spring. Old trees are not worth bothering with. The miller deposits the eggs which produce the grubs in May or June, just above the surface of the ground. They hatch, go downward and become larger all the time and do not stop working till cold weather."-E. N., Cincinnati. O.

Physically Fine, but Vile Morally. The Afghans are Mohammedans of the faith Sunni; they reverence the first four Khalifs, and have no particular veneration for the prophet (Khalif) Ali. They are split up into tribes, clans and families each under its completed. lies, each under its own head, commander, or Sirdar; and they are often at war or feud, and often engaged in conspiracies, rebellions and assassinations. They are tall, burly, active men, with olive complexions, dark Jewish features, black eyes and long black hair hanging down in curls. Their countenances are color and they effect a tenances are calm, and they affect a trankness and bonhomie; they will sometimes indulge in rude jocularity; but their expression is savage, and evil possious are often raging in their hearts like hidden fires. They are bloodthirsty, deceitful and depraced, ready to sell their country, their honor, and their very souls for lucre. They care for nothing but fighting and loot, delighting in the din of arms, the turmoil of battle, and the plunder of the killed and wounded; without any relish for home life or domestic ties; without a sting of remorse or a sense of shame. There are no people on earth having a finer physique or viler morals. They are the relics of a nation who have played out their parts in history. In bygone ages they conquered Hindoostan on the one side and Persia on the other; but the conquering instinct has died away amid the incessant discord of family feuds and domestic broils.—Wheeler's "Short History of India."

Willing to Give Way.

On a Detroit street car a woman of 50, made up to look about 25 years old, got abourd at a crossing to find every seat occupied. She stood for a moment, and then selecting a poorly-dressed man mout 45 years of age, she observed "Are there no gentlemen on this

"Indeed, I dunno," he replied, as he looked up and down. "If there hain't, and you are going clear through, I'll hunt up one for you at the end of the line!"

There was an embarrassing silence for a moment, and then a light broke in on him all of a sudden, and he rose and

"You can have this seat, madam. I am allus perfectly willing to stand up said give my seat to anybody older than myself."

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no triffing, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chrontedis eases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their aliment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide forthemselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

plished. An old gentleman complain-ing that his glasses were not strong enough to serve his turn was told by the optician that they ought to be so, seeing they were twos.
"What have you got after twos?" inquired he. "Number ones," was the reply.

"And after ones?"

"Oh," said the optician, "if you don't find them strong enough, sir, you will require a dog and a string."

"The following colleges," took place.

The following colloquy took place outside a house in an American city, hetween some country visitors, unable to obtain entrance, and a German living next door:

Over-Curious People.

Over-curious people are not easily effenced, but the feat is to be accomplished. An old gentleman complain-

"Jane not at home, did you say?"
"Nein, Chane's nod at home." "Where is she?"

"She's gone the cemetery down."
"When will she come back?" "Oh, she won't come back already any more; she's gone to stay; she's det!"

A stranger, passing a churchyard and seeing a hearse standing hard by, inquired who was dead. The sexton informed him.

"What complaint?" asked the inquisitive one. "There is no complaint; everybody is satisfied," was the reply.

One man remained unsatisfied when he read in a California newspaper a paragraph respecting the vexed question of how Cain obtained a wife. It read as "You want to know where Cain obtained his wife. Upon any subject of a public nature we never refuse to throw the desired light. But this is altogether a different thing. It is a family matter with which we do not care to meddle. Cain died some time before many of us were born, and such idle curiosity respecting the family affairs of a deceased person we regard as most reprehensible, and calculated to violate the sanctaties of domestic life."

Bologna.

Bo-logn-ya is a walled city in Italy, yet it invented sausages. Bologna has no hogs, yet the shops reek with the odors of leeks and garlic. Cairo may have forty-nine smells, but how many has Bologna? There are nineteen kinds of cheek (that was good) and cash with has Bologna? There are nineteen kinds of cheese (that are good), and each with a smell—oh, what a smell! There are the shops of cooked vegetables where you buy a boiled hot potato for a soldi, or a half-kilo for five of them, all these smell; then the sausages. It's a perfect sausage fair, an industrial exposition of Bolognas. They are in links, in gut, in bladders (of all sizes), in cakes, in stomachs, in membrances in nets in gut, in standers (or an exces), in cakes, in stomachs, in membrances, in nets, in fiask-like forms, in clubs, in cudgels, in canes; sausages smoked, dried, leeked, fatted, lean, spiced, plain, mildewed, decayed, greasy, moldy, red, gray, mottled, broken, tottering with age, or plump with vonth plump with youth.

Luke wrote the Acts of the Apostles.

Paul is the author of the Epistles to the Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesi-ans, Philippians, Colossians, Thessalo-nians, Timothy, Titus, Philemon and Hebrews.

James, the son of Alpheus, who was cousin-german to Christ, and one of the Apostles, wrote the Epistle of James. Peter wrote the Epistle bearing his name. The Apostle John wrote the three Epistles of John. Jude, the Apostle, the brother of James, called also Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus, a near relative to our Lord, wrote the Epistle of Jude. St. John, the Divine, wrote Revela-

An Amusing Reminiscence of the Late War.

The fight at Blackburn's ford, just to the left of Bull run, was opened by the Second Massachusetts infantry. Sup-ported by a New York and two Michigan regiments, they advanced into the woods until they heard something drop. The regiment bumped up against intrenchments and were subjected to a tremendous fire. Before going into the woods the regiment was "dressed" as on a parade, and the Colonel rode out and

"Men of Massachusetts! the eyes of your country are upon you!"

There was a grand yell, and they went in to conquer or to die! After fifteen minutes' desperate lighting they retired from the woods to re-form behind the supports. Among the last was an old man. He had thrown away coat; hat, gun and all accourtements, and he was badly demoralized. As he passed the left flank of a Michigan regiment in line of battle, a wag called out:

"Only 800 miles to Boston!" The old man halted for a moment, and another joker observed: "The eyes of your country are upon

"You blamed Wolverines, go to grass!" growled the old warrior. "I've got a choice about this thing, and I druther stand the eyes of my country all day long than the fire of them cussed rebels for five minutes."

Ir is notorious that dogs take their manners from the human society in which they have been brought up. Thus the coach-dog, having associated all his life with grooms and stable men, is deficient in processing the stable men. ficient in sagacity and only fit to follow the rumbling of the wheels. Fighting, gripping, and holding on with iron tenacity are the congenital attributes of the bull-dog, while the greyhound has little of the reasoning faculty which is born in the colley or sheep dog. A parlor dog, which, like Lever's Mrs. Rooney, "comes o' dacent people," would repudiate the company of a street cur, whom the gentleman and scholar of Burns would nose and find out, just as honest Launce's cur Crab was spotted by the two or three gentleman-like dogs
