Abstract of Titles.

AN abstract of title is a brief statement of all the A conveyances, liens and tax sales of record affecting the title to a lot or tract of land. A set of Abstract Books shows the conveyances on every lot of land in a county, and to be of value must be thoroughly made and MINUTELY ACCURATE. The making of such an abstract is a work requiring the greatest care and patience in searching, and the closest scrutiny of all matters relating to the same.

To successfully conduct this branch of business and enjoy the confidence of the Public, persons must have large experience, a thorough under-standing of the business and a conscientious ap-DIRECTATION OF ITS IMPORTANCE AND RESPONSIBILITY.

TO THIS IS THE BEST GUARANTEE that their WORK

WILL DE ACCURATE AND RELIABLE.

Tne Abstract of the Records of Berrien County is owned and conducted by Messrs DIX & WIL-KINSON, with office in the County Building at Berrien Springs.

Careful buyers no longer accept as satisfactory the "IT'S ALL RIGHT" of the would-be seller, for experience teaches that nothing is easier than to be mistaken, and without an abstract one cannot know what errors have been made, and responsible sellers are equally careful, for one cannot safely warrant a title without a knowledge of its bistory.

While thanking its patrons for past favors, and soliciting their future orders, the office begs to invite correspondence with owners of lots and farms who have never looked up their titles. Defects readily cared now may be past healing when one wants to sell. All correspondence will receive prompt and courteous attention.

When writing about property, please give correct description and name of present owner.

A MATTER OF SENTIMENT.

BY ESTHER SERLE KENNETH.

Aunt Remember Mordaunt was a queer looking little body-like a bugaboo in the children's nursery book, her "nose went out and mouth went in." She wasn't much larger than a girl eight years old; and she had fallen down cellar and broken her wrist, been thrown out of a carriage and put her shoulder out of joint; and being as bald as a baby, she wore the funniest of small "russet fronts" under little "mob caps," so that it was no wonder people looked at her and smiled. Her shrewd, twinkling eyes usually smiled back. Aunt Remember cared little what people thought of her. She was much more occupied in deciding what she thought of them. And let me assure you she was no insignificant person in her circle. No fairy godmother ever was more fearfully looked up to—no, looked down to —than Aunt Remember. She was shrewd, she was witty, she had a sharp tongue of her own—more, she was the richest woman in Peachlands.

She lived with her brother Paul and his wife, who had three daughters. People said Aunt Remember would leave her money to one of these daughters, and Aunt Remember said that she should, "to the one who pleased her The thing was to know how to please her. She found fault first with one then with the other. Marion was self-willed, Mattie was lazy, and Mollie—well, Mollie had red hair. I do not think it a sin to have red hair, but Mollie thought it was. Had she not been reproached with it since her tenderest years?

To-be-sure, it was as soft as silk. and an artist might have considered the burnished ripples very lovely, as they swept away from a complexion whose pink was prettier than the tint of any sea-shell; but the color of her hair was a sore subject with Mollie. She was never quite happy, unless she had altogether forgotten the matter, and as Mollie was usually exceedingly busy, she generally had very good success at forgetting.

Marion was a brunette, very fond of stylish dress and very ambitious. Matrimonially she had fixed her goal very ligh. She intended to marry a man, handsome, distinguished, and able to support her in good style. No other would she look at.

"Ah, my lady," Aunt Remember would say, "you will go through the world and pick up a crooked stick!" Marion, the oldest, was already tweny-four. Mattie was twenty—pretty enough, good enough; but "Mattie'll never set the river on fire," complained Aunt Remember.

I think myself that the latter was fond of her importance—careful to keep up this uncertainty regarding her preferences, for nobody could be certain regarding it. But it kept the small house at Peachlands in a constant state of agitation.

The house itself belonged to Aunt

Remember, though she had virtually given it to her brother ten years be fore. After her husband's death-for Aunt Remember had had a husbandshe had transferred it to her brother, when he came west with his young The furniture was also given him, with the exception of a parlor suit, which Aunt Remember was supposed to have sold-a suit of mahogany and gray hair-cloth which she had ownedbequeathed by her mother, when a girl. I say supposed, because Aunt Renember was peculiarly reserved and secretive regarding her doings. She never asked counsel of her relatives or of any one else, but planned and performed according to her pleasure. She required her connections to some times execute commissions for her of which they had not the least understanding—as, for instance, during the last few years, since Aunt Remember her last words.

had dislocated her shoulder, one of the girls went quarterly to the office of C. Everard, said office being attached to a furniture ware-house, and paid him

He was a young man, very businesslike, but with pleasant hazel eyes, which Marion declared "just splendid," but curled her delicate nose at the suggestion of Aunt Remember, that Mr. Charles Everard's acquaintance might be worth cultivating.
"Nonsense! the idea of me marrying a man who keeps a little shop down on Bond street!" she cried. "Who are you, miss? Your father is only a poor farmer." "I don't always intend to be poor, if father is. I shall marry for money, returned Marion. "And not for money only—I must have everything."

"Humph!" ejaculated Aunt Remember: "when Sir Perfection comes court-

But nobody took offence at Aunt Remember's sharp speeches. Mattie was requested to carry the next quarter's money to Mr. Charles Everard, but dawdled so long at getting ready that Aunt Remember bade her take off her bonnet and sit down, ing you, let me know!"

and sent. Mollie. "You're smart, if you have got red hair, Mollie," she said; and, with this doubtful compliment ringing in her ears, Mollie set out. As I have said, the color of her hair was a sore subject with her, and, when Mr. Charles Everard first saw her, she had drawn her yeil of soft gray tissue down so as almost to cover it. But he beheld a pair of limpid brown eyes, a pretty smile, and a dimpled, rose-red cheek, and thought he never had met any one half so lovely.

"Well, how did you like Mr. Charles Everard?" asked Aunt Remember, sharply. "I think he is very nice," answered Mollie, taking off her bonnet before the glass, and wishing her hair wasn't

"I suppose you wouldn't marry a man who kept a little furniture shop, either?" remarked Aunt Remember. "Yes, I would-if it were Mr. Everard, and he wanted me to!" laughed

Mollie, blushing.

After that, the quarterly sums of money were paid Mr. Everard monthly instead, and Mollie carried the envelopes containing them to the dingy little office down on Bond street. Mr. Everard told her one day, that he wished it wasn't so dingy—for her sake; and, another day, told her that he did not like storing and selling fur-niture, but he had a mother and an invalid sister dependent on him, and could not follow the business he liked. which was architecture, but must continue in his father's shop, at least for the present.

It seemed to Mollie that never was such a pleasant spring, for in one way or another she came to see a great deal of Mr. Charles Everard, and his hazel pleasantly.

One day he told her that his deceased father and Aunt Remember had been engaged to marry each other when they were very young. "Then you know Aunt Remember?"

cried Mollie. "No. I never saw her but oncetwice. She engaged me to store some furniture for her." "What kind of furniture was it?" asked Mollie. "A very old-fashioned, grey hair-cloth

"No," answered Mollie.
"It's queer; ages out of style." "Why does she keep it?" "A matter of sentiment, probably. In value it's worth a hundred dollars or so, while she has already paid twice set. Have you ever seen it?"

its value over for storage.'

"I never knew that Aunt Remember was sentimental," laughed Mollie. "She doesn't look so, that's a fact. But do you know I fancy the look of those little bright eyes of her's?" It was an eventful summer, for Marion and Mattie both became engaged.

Marion to 'Squire Dillon's son, Mattie to Rob. Barney, the butcher's nephew, a young fellow as roly-poly and as easygoing as herself. Regarding the prospects of the latter couple, Mattie and Rob had promptly contented themselves with the thought that Aunt Remember meant to leave Mattie her money, and forthwith took no thought for the morrow. The other couple, thinking very sharply of the morrow, hoped that she would leave it to Marion. Marion gave Dudley Dillon every reason to "He has a fortune, being an only son. I shall be sure of that, anyway!" she said to herself. As soon as her bridal outfit could be prepared she hastened the wedding, for Marion did not mean to be five-andtwenty until after her wedding day. The next marriage, Mattie and Rob, followed shortly.

"How are you going to live?" asked Aunt Remember of Marion. "Dudley has means," replied her elder niece.

"How are you going to live?" she asked subsequently of the 'Squire's rather rakish son. "My wife will have means, I suphe said, with a rather sharp glance at Aunt Remember.

the subject, and the wedding, which was close at hand, took place. "When are you and Charley Everard going to marry?" asked Aunt Remem-

She volunteered no information on "Charley can't support two establishments at present; so we must wait," answered Mollie, cheerfully, though the limpid brown eyes had a regretful look "Then you don't calculate that I intend to leave you my money?" said Aunt Remember, grimly.

"No," answered Mollie, quietly. Marion was no sooner married than she learned that her husband had a quarrel with his father, and could expect nothing of him. She was too proud to let her family know this, and then commenced a desperate struggle to keep up appearances. Her dignity and energy shamed her unprincipled husband, and he soon began to make better use of his talents: but, so far as her expectations were concerned, Marion's marriage was a failure. She became a hard, bitter Mattie and Rob went to live with

Rob's uncle, the butcher, and though he was poor and unsentimental, he was good natured, and suffered them to share with the rest. But the old saying was true—that never was a house wide enough for two families. When Mattie's fat, good natured baby was born, Mattie became desperate to have a home of her own, and tired of waiting for Aun Remember's money, and longing for independence, she infected Rob with her tardily developed energy, and they went to work to make a home and liv ing for themselves.

They had hardly done so before Aunt Remember, who had been silently ailing for a long time, died. Mollie, who was no nearer marriage than she had been three years before, though a little graver, as well as sweeter-for patience and duty well performed make people lovelier as they grow older— Mollie tended her faithfully in her last illness.

"My will is in the escritoir!" were

When it was read, what did they find? The old estate legally secured to Paul Mordaunt and his wife. To Marion, $1,000; to Mattie, $1,000; another thousand to fat little Robbie; but these were the only moneys mentioned, and, as I have told you, Aunt Remember had always been consider-

What did it mean? To Mollie she had left only the grey hair-cloth parlor set. "We can marry now, Mollie," said Charley Everard, with a rather sad smile.

"I want to see it," said Mollie. So they went into the great storage chamber, and took the wrappings off the queer old furniture. Pinned upon the back of the sofa was a letter, which to Mollie's astonshment, she found directed to "My Niece," in Aunt Remember's cramped, stiff hand. The letter read as follows:

"I do not know which of my three nieces will get this in years to cometime must decide that; but it will be to my favorite. In leaving this set of furniture to her, I leave a legacy which I should like preserved—for it is surrounded by associations I have never spoken of. This furniture occupied my mother's best parlor when I was a girl, and many happy hours I spent there when I was engaged to marry John Everard. The furniture of the old parlor, where we spent our evenings, is all that is left me to remember him by, for I sent back his gifts when I foolishly promised to marry a rich man. I tried to be a good wife to my husband; but I never have been happy -never! I always have regretted that step. During the years I was a widow, with large sums of money in the house, I used to fear robbery, and at various times concealed bank-bills of different denominations beneath the lining of this sofa, where they will be found-enough, I think, to secure the finder from any fear of future want." Breathlessly they ripped down the rusty linings, and what a sight! The old sofa was literally stuffed with bank bills of the highest denominations. If the same amount of money had been concealed in gold in it, ten men could not have lifted it, Mollie thought.

Gratefully she accepted her legacy gratefully preserved the old furniture, which will again become an heirloom to the children she and Charley Everard proudly call theirs; and this story will be handed down from generation to generation, little as the little woman's favorite niece had suspected her of "a matter of sentiment." To Marion, let me add, a little daugh ter was given later in life, of whom "She shall never marry for money. I will warn her!"

Success in Business. "Archibald, my boy," said old Mr.

Diffenderfer, the rich commission merthe other day, as he called his son into his private office, "my dear boy I have just executed the deeds by which I retire from business and leave you sole active partner in the wealthiest house on the coast. Naturally you expect me to give you some timely counsel for your business guidance."

"Keerect!" replied young D., who has a member of the Bohemian Club, and knew it all.

"You suppose that I wish to enjoin upon you frugality, temperance, integrity and punctuality as the sure means of success. Not at all. Those virtues are very well for the copy book, but the only requisite to success in life-especially in this State-is a really good reciprocating dummy ene-house of D., as he put his feet on the desk and lit another cigarette. "Why, a first-class, bitter, unrelenting dummy enemy. Something like my dear old friend Guffey, for instance.'

"A what?" queried the scion of the

"Why, I thought you were down on that man the worst way?"

"That's just the point—that's just the joke of it," said old D., with a chuckle. "Fourteen years ago I met Guffey on the steamer, coming round here from New York. We had both failed in trade, I in Boston, he in Philadelphia; both were fairly driven out of business by the usual slanders, jealousies and underhand defamation peculiar to-well, to everywhere."

"Why didn't you go into partnership?" asked the junior. "I'll tell you. After talking the matter over, Guffey and I agreed that the only way for a man with small capital to get along was to have some trusted friend on the outside, who would keep him posted as to the doings of his enemies. Some one whom they would talk to, don't you understand?" "I catch on," remarked the youth. So we concluded to act as each other's dummy enemy. And from the day that we stepped off the steamer down at the wharf, Guffey and I have never spoken, except on the 1st and 15th of each mouth, when I visit him in disguise, to compare notes." "Well, by Jove!" "It's a fact, though. Every time my enemies—and everybody has them; they sorter grow, somehow-put a job on me, or lie about me, or try to injury me in any way, they go to Guffey and try to rope him into the plot. He sympathizes with them; says I'm the most infernal wretch unhung, and then sits down and writes me the particulars. Good scheme that, eh?" and the old merchant laughed until he was black in the face. "Well, I should smile," grinned the other.

"Of course I do the same for Guffey. Why, I can't tell how many thousand times I've scowled at him on the street and remarked to whoever I was walking with: 'There's the miserable scoundrel, Guffey. Look at the airs he puts on because he is rich. I'd like to break his rascally head with a club." "Was Guffey rich then?"

"Why no; of course not, at first. It was a part of our scheme, don't you see, to brace up each other's credit under the credit of abuse. For instance, I'd apply for a big discount at some bank, and the cashier would slip around to Guffey for information, knowing he would give away all my weak points. Guffey would scowl and say, 'Well, I uppose the old villian is solid enough, out darn a mau who'd turn his motherin-law out of doors on a cold winter night. The old beast! I wonder they havn't tarred and feathered Diffender-fer years ago. They say his grand-mother is in the poorhouse. With all his money, too; just think!" "And does that help you?"

"Why, certainly. A bank cashier doesn't care for grandmothers. What he is after is stingy old capitalists and other Muldoons. Why, Guffey once borrowed $50,000 because I privately told McLane that G. had swindled the government on a half million contract.

Mac had him up to dinner the very next day. Think over what I have said, my dear boy, and go thou and do likewise."

And promising to look carefully around him at the club, which was cramfull of dummies of all kinds, young Diffenderfer dived into his ulster, and hastened to get up on Kearney street before the matinee let out. -San Francisco Post.

Change of Views at the South. ed the richest woman in Peachlands.

following indicates: In general, it may be said that the New South is surely surmounting the intense and dogmatic provincialism of the Old, and is rapidly coming into line with the more progressive States. The most conclusive proof of the change may be found in the instructive book entitled "Our Brother in Black," by President Haygood, of Emory College, Oxford, Georgia. If, then, Southern men, suffering even under the sting of defeat, are, whether wittingly or not, surrendering errors which have come to them from remote generations, and are now only sensitive when the least doubt is thrown upon their immediate ability to take any part in any manufacturing, mechanical, or other kind of work—if they are now in as dead earnest to take up every branch of profitable work as they formerly were averse to sharing certain kinds of manual labor at allmay it not be well for Northern men to see if they also have not been controlled by some errors in regard to the past history and condition of the South? In the course of a conversation upon the events preceding the war, with two grandsons of John C. Calhoun, the writer was somewhat startled by a remark substantially to this effect: "If my grandfather and his associates had known as much about the negro as I know, and could have had the same faith in his capacity for progress which I have attained from my own experience, there would have been neither slavery nor war."

"Do you mean to tell me," I asked, "that your grandfather feared liberty for the black, however compassed?" Of course I mean that," said he "What other justification could there have been? He and his associates believed that the two races could not exist together upon the same soil except in the relation of masters and slaves. One of these gentlemen moved from South Carolina to the bottom-lands of the Mississippi, with a large number of the negroes formerly the slaves of his family. He has succeeded in assuring not only his own prosperity, but their welfare also, and he bears conclusive testimony to the ability of the colored laborers to sustain themselves in comfort.

Power of Imagination. City physician Myers of Patterson, N. J., was called up about midnight,

Dec. 1, to see a woman who was suffer ing the most excruciating agonies from having swallowed a set of false upper teeth, sixteen in number. Several women were about her, who had been called in to help her. Anodynes were administered to relieve her temporarily, and then the physician closely scrutinized her mouth and throat, but could find no evidence of laceration. Moreover, she could swallow readily. He suggested that the teeth might have been mislaid, but this was indignantly scouted by the attendants, who declared that they had searched the house from top to bottom. A further search under the pillow failed to disclose the missing property, and the case began to look serious, as the poor woman declared that she could not stand it any longer, as she felt the edge of the teeth cutting into the sides of her stomach. Finally, at the suggestion of the doctor, the inside of one of the pillowcases was examined, and there the teeth were found, perfectly safe and harmless. The patient, who had a moment before been suffering from the laceration of the teeth "against the edges of her stomach," recovered in-

In Judge Jameson's Court yesterday,

when a comely French maiden took the stand to testify against a man who had stolen her watch, it was noticed that the twelve solemn jurymen sat with downcast eyes throughout the whole time she was giving her testimony. .Those twenty-four windows of the soul were all turned toward the little platform on which the witnesschair stood, where two small, shapely feet, encased in the tiniest of French slippers, saucily kicked out from beneath the folds of a heavy silk skirt, and knocked all idea of the testimony out of the men who sat in judgment. The Judge looked severe and then pleased, as he, too, eyed the pretty feet. The State's attorney addressed his questions to the little slippers, and the counsel for the defense tried to crossexamine them, but gave it up and sighed: "You may go." The witness stepped down and the spell was broken, but regretting the loss the counsel re-called her, and again the little feet kicked out, bringing smiles to all faces. Three times were the pretty feet recalled, and three times was the prisoner at the bar forgotten.-Chicago Inter-

That is What the Jury Pronounced the Killing of James A. Garfield in the Verdict Yesterday.

Judge Cox finished his charge to the jury in the Guiteau trial yesterday afternoon at 4:40 o'clock, when the jury withdrew to make their decision. Soon afterwards the court adjourned to 5:30 when the jury filed back into the court, and rendered their verdict of "Guilty as Indicted." After the verdiet was made known, Mr. Scoville addressed the court as follow:

"Your Honor, I do not desire to forfeit any right I may have under the law and practice in this district. If there is anything that I ought to do now to save those rights, I would be indebted to your Honor to indicate it to me?

Judge Cox. in reply, assured him he should have every opportunity, that the charge would be furnished him in print to-morrow, and he would be accorded all the time allowed by law in which to file his exception, and that he would also be entitled to four days within which to move arrest of judgment.

The law gives defendant four days to file a motion and reasons for a new trial and it is customary for the court to sit some day to hear argument thereon. Should this motion be overruled. defendant will appeal to the general term, and under the law the defendant is entitled to a suspension of sentence until after the next general term, not exceeding thirty days. The January general term is now in session, and the case cannot go there, but will be appealable to the April term. It is the custom at the April term to adjourn until September, taking a recess over July and August. But should it be closed by the latter part of May, then, if judgement is affirmed, the execution might take place in July.

As the people of Berrien county are becoming somewhat interested in the subject of telephones, and should be a great deal more than they are, we copy the following article from the Evening News, which gives a slight idea of what the telephone accommodations of this State are reaching:

The first telephone ever operated in this city was in March, 1877, and after there had been a few experiments with it by telegraph experts a public or semi-public exhibition of the workings was given at 101 Fort street west, in the parlors of what was then the Detroit club house. This was the Gray "singing telephone," and was not adapted to conveying the sound of the human voice in conversation at all, but served as a very pretty precursor of what was to come. The progress of the intro-duction of the Bell telephone, the story of the inventor's struggles, subsequent triumphs and princely acquisitions as the reward of his ingenuity, the details of the work of organizing the present telephone exchange system, etc., have from time to time been noted in The News, but probably few realize how fully this simple, yet wonderful little instrument has entered into the general public and private affairs of this modern day. Therefore some facts concerning these points are hereby massed for the reader's observation and profit. There are to-day

OVER 300.000 TELEPHONES and a few hundreds in outlying cities and villages.

IN THIS STATE, outside of Detroit, there are regularly established telephone exchanges at the following places: Adrian, Alpena, Ann Arbor, Benton Harbor, Big Rapids. East Saginaw, Bay City, Saginaw City, Flint, Grand Haven, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Lansing, Kalamazoo, Ludington, Manistee, Montague, Whitehall, Mt. Clemens, Muskegon, Niles, Port Huron, St. Clair, St. Joseph, and Ypsilanti, to say nothing of scores of private lines, railroad telephones, mine service instruments, etc. Without going into detail as to the number used in each place, suffice it to say that Detroit has the most instruments. Grand Rapids is second with about 400, and East Saginaw is third.

ON THE SAGINAW RIVER every mill or mill office, from South Saginaw to Saginaw Bay, has telephonie communication, and the exchanges in the three cities of that valley are of almost incalculable benefit in the transaction of the enormous business there exchanges at Grand Rapids, Muskegon and Grand Haven are connected, so that every subscriber in each place may do business by word of mouth with every subscriber in each of the other cities as well as in his own. The same thing may be said of Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, and it is even stated on good authority that the sweet influences of close and confidential conversation (at long range) has caused the residents of the rival cities of Washtenaw to love each other-slightly, at of telephone extension, however, is presented in the connection of the thousand Detroit subscribers with the patrons at Wyandotte, Ecorse, Grosse Point, Roseville, Leesville, Mt. Clemens, St. Clair, Marine City, Marysville, Fort Gratiot and Port Huron in this State, and by cable under the river with 40 or more subscribers at Windsor and a few at Amherstburg, Sandwich, Essex Center, Maidstone Cross, and Chatham, Ont. More extensions are contemplated and will be made early next season. One of the first will probably be the building of a line from this city to connect it with the Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor lines, and ultimately with those at Jackson-the entire feasamply demonstrated by past experience. Negotiations are also now pending for the extension of a line between this city and Toledo, Ohio, and thence

Thus far the telephone has not been utilized for general railroad business to any great extent, although it is free ly asserted by the telephone men that the time is not far distant when this order of things will be changed. Indeed, Gerrish's railroad has the telephone in use already, and his heavy log trains are safely run by telephonic orders all the time; and when the Detroit, Macinac & Marquette railroad was in process of construction, telephonic communication was kept up with the construction parties all the time, from either terminus of the road and the line was even operated its whole length of 150 miles, from St. Ignace to Marquette, with perfect suc-

The company is officered as follows: Geo. W. Balch, President: Hugh McMillan, Secretary and Treasurer, and W. A. Jackson, Superintendent. The office of the company is in the basement of the Newberry & Mc-Millan block, where Mr. Jackson has his desk and clerks, and from which he controls the multifarious and complicated details of this wonderful modern business, like the master hand he is.

Farmers' Institute.

An Institute, under the auspices of the State Agricultural College, was held in Cassopolis, Jan. 17, 1882. Pres. Abbot, Profs. R. C. Kedzie, Mac Ewan and F. S. Kedzie were present, from the college, together with a large number ef people from Cass and the adjoining counties.

R. J. Dickson, of Dowagiac, as President, opened with a few pointed remarks, after which Erastus Osborn, of Van Buren Co., read an essay on Drainage. This was followed by an essay on Fattening and Care of Stock, by Gideon Hebron, of Porter. The essay was a presentation of facts based on carefully executed experiments. It elicted the fact that beneficial results could only be obtained by adopting the system of measuring the feed and frequently weighing the animal fed.

Uriel Enos, of Ontwa, read an essay on the Care and Management of Poultry. Prof. Mac Ewan's lecture on Home Life was full of wit and humor, and caused considerable merriment in the audience.

F. S. Kedzie opened the exercises on Wednesday morning with his essay on Sorghum Sweets. Money was appropriated by the last legislature to experiment with sorghum, to ascertain whether it could be profitably raised for the production of sugar. Dr. Kedzie was placed on charge and so far very satisfactory results have been obtained.

Dr. Kedzie's paper, on Ripening Wheat, was well received by the farmers in general. From specimens cut on twenty-one successive days, he determined that wheat cut just as it was leaving the milky state was more valuable for flouring purposes than that cut when dead ripe. He is opposed by the microscopist of the Michigan University, who finds the dead ripe wheat more valuable. Dr. Kedzie took two solutions of flour and added an equal quantity of tartaric acid to each. The flour from the wheat cut early showed greater viscular properties, thus substantiating Dr. Kedzie's theory.

Rev. Levi Dewy, of Pokagon, read a very commendable essay on The Farmer in Society. President Abbott lectured on The Ancient Notions of Education. It was too deep to be appreciated by the average hearer. No synopsis can do justice to these papers, and we would advise every farmer to read the Agricultural Reports, where these essays appear in full. The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. Glover, and the Cassopolis City Band furnished the institute with plenty of good music. After passing the customary resolutions the institute adjourned.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Defeat of the Patent Right Sharks. The Tribune took occasion, a few weeks ago, to refer to the manner in which farmers are so often swindled by patent-right sharks, and in that connection referred to the efforts of parties in Michigan to recover large sums of money in the form of royalty, claiming that a certain process of driven wells was their exclusive property. It was claimed by the Michigan farmers that they had not infringed upon the rights of the patentees, and that the process had become the property of the community at large. The self-styled patentees thereupon began a large number of suits against the unsuspecting farmers who had ventured to use the process, and the Michigan State Grange employed counsel to fight the question in the United States courts, where 30 or more cases of this character are now pending. The following decision in the New York courts will be read with interest by the farmers throughout the country, as it virtually strips the patentee of any rights which they may heretofore have assumed: "In the United States circuit court for the northern district of New York, before Judge Wallace, at chambers in Syracuse, Friday, Jan. 6, 1882, a decision was rendered in the case of William D. Andrews et. al., complainants, vs. William Verbeck, respondent. Separate bills in equity had been filed by the above named complainants against William Verbeck and 21 others, all residing at or near Saratoga Springs, for alleged infringement of the Nelson Green "driven well" patent. On the day above named, a motion for an injunction pending the litigation in the Verbeck case came up for hearing before Judge Wallace at his chambers in Syracuse, sitting as circuit judge. Green claims to have invented the driven well at the village of Cortland, N. Y., in October, 1861, while encamped there as Colonel of the 76th regiment, New York volunteers. The respondent in this case filed numerous affidavits showing that driven wells were put down at Saratoga Springs as early as 1854, and also on the county fair grounds there in 1859, in 1860 and in 1861, while the 77th New York volunteers were encamped there.

The complainants filed several affidavits in rebuttal, and after full hearing and argument on the issue Judge Wallace refused the injunction on the ground of prior use. This is an important precedent touching this now famous patent, and the first decision in this district, if not in the country, denying a preliminary injunction on

The contest that has been going on between South Bend and Battle Creek for some time, regarding the location of the Grand Trunk railroad repair shops and offices, has at last been settled in favor of the latter place, the city giving the company $25,000 and 25 acres of land. The shops are now at Port Huron, and will be moved to Battle Creek at once. This makes Battle Creek one of the most important railroad centers in the interior of the State. Hugh S. PILES! PILES!! PILES!!! A Sure Cure Found at Last. No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a positice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Cintment: "I have used scores of pile cures, but it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment." THE case of Joe Taylor against Eli J. Roe, for damage done Taylor's boy in December, 1880, was tried by the circuit court in Berrien Springs, yesterday. The jury decided in favor of Taylor, and placed the damage at $250. Mr. Roe informs the RECORD that it is his intention to appeal at once to the

A QUARTERLY meeting, embracing the Advent Christian Church at Union Mills and Sumption Prairie, Indiana, and Buchanan, Mich., will meet with the church in this place next Thursday evening, the 26th inst., and continue over Sunday. Preaching at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 and 7 p. m. each day. Dr. Mathewson, of Laporte, and Eld. W. C. Hicks, of Union Mills, are among the preachers expected. All are cordially invited by the church and pastor.

GEO. W. WRIGHT. MESSRS. Spencer & Barnes have been arranging their furpiture factory with a blowing machine that is to take all dustand shavings out of the factory as fast as made, and is so arranged that they can run their planer all day without getting a peck of shavings on the floor. This is a great improvement, both as a protector to the workmen from dust and for safety against fire.

A LATE copy of the Huntington, Ind., paper contains an account of the death of George Oden of that place, brother of Mr. Oden of Benton Harbor, from taking a large dose of quinine. A chemical examination of the quinine showed it to contain a mixture of strychnine in sufficient quantity to produce death when taken in large doses. The medicine was in the bottle the same as it came from the manufacturers, and sold by the druggist. This is the kind of quinine that the people will not care to have peddled out to

THE Berrien County Highway Improvement Association met in this place last Friday afternoon and evening. There were a number of prominent citizens from other parts of the county present, and some excellent essays on the subject of road making read by them. The meeting was better attended than previous meetings of | and those near by can be safely deposthe Association, but not so well as the | ited. A fire proof ash house could be subject under discussion demands. Berrien county has not the worst roads in the country, but she comes pretty near it, and the subject cannot be too thoroughly discussed, as improvement in the condition of our highways means an advancement in the prosperity of all classes of citizens of the county. Money cannot be better invested than in building up good roads, and as there is an abundance of the best of material near at hand, the work ought to be forthcoming.

WE have received a late Florida paper, from Mr. H. H. Kinyon, from Jacksonville. Mr. Kinyon has marked for our attention an advertisement of orange groves for sale. One containing 1,200 bearing trees that will bear 2,500 to 3,000 oranges each and yield a net profit of $8,000 to $10,000 per year, is offered for $16,000. Will some one come to our relief? Buy the Rec-ORD office and let us go into the orange business. It is just such profits as that we have been looking for.

DISTRICT NO. 4, BUCHANAN TP. Jan. 16, 1882. Mr. EDITOR: - The Literary Association at this place is in full progress. The meetings are held every Friday evening, and well attended. The exercises consist of essays, declamations, orations, dialogues, biographies, invectives, eulogies, impromptu speeches, debates, and the reading of a paper each week. We shall endeavor to make the meetings of interest through the entire winter. Everybody invited

MATTIE E. REESE, Cor. Sec.

THE friends of Mr. John DeMott will be pleased to learn that he was fully acquitted of the charge of selling corrupt or unwholesome meat. No unbiased person could listen to the testimony in the case from beginning to end without concluding that Mr. De-Mott had no thought of putting on the market what he deemed unbealthy food. It is very evident that this was a case of malicious prosecution from the first, and it should be a matter of rejoicing to farmers and all other employers of help, that they are not to be left to the mercy of any of their workmen who may be discharged for cause.

In the trial of the railroad right of way case between the E. N. & M. railroad company and George S. Hoppin, of Niles, the jury gave Hoppin $1,000 for right of way through his 40 acres. He asked $2,000. In his reply to the charge of the company he held that there was no such company, in fact, and had never been, from the fact of the legally required amount of capital stock having never been subscribed or paid in, and that the only capital the company held was $10,000 of the city's money raised for roads and bridges; and proceeded to show that this was

Mrs. Jemima Sherwood died at the residence of her son, Asa W. Sherwood, in Sodus township, Jan. 23, aged 76 vears. Mrs. Sherwood was born in Ashtabula county, Ohio, came to this county in 1834, and has since made it her home. A post mortem examination was held by Dr. Klittenger, of Shanghai, when there was discovered that the gall bladder was filled with stones, one of which measured over three inches in circumference, and the digestive organs seriously deranged and partly disappeared. This has long been a case that has puzzled the physicians. A full account of her pioneer life will appear in these columns next

A BOOK called "Mormonism Unveiled," published by the Moffat Publishing Co. of St. Louis, has just reached this office. It contains an autobiography, and private papers, confession, account of the trial and execution of John D. Lee, the man who had charge of the murderers in the Mountain Meadow massacre in 1857. It tells some terrible stories of the workings of the Mornion church, as it appears in Utah. Just why the United States should tolerate such damnable practices within its boundaries for so long a time, is one of the unexplainable mysteries. The slavery of the South was, in comparison with this, as a dia-

COMPLAINT comes to us from two men living south of Bakertown, of the lawless way of doing business, practiced by a lot of young people in that vicinity. The complaint of these was that as soon as the older members of the family had gone from home to be away a week or more, this mob make up what they call a surprise party, take possession of the house for an evening, running things as best suits them, snooping into all cupboards and cellars, opening and destroying canned fruits, defacing the walls of the rooms, and committing such other depredations as shall enter their minds. Is there no way to find these rioters and properly punish them? The sense of honor, if such they have, should be sufficient to cause them to desist from CRIMINAL CARELESSNESS.—Some one in the business part of this town needs rigid instructions about the character of fire. Last Monday night the employes in Rough & Pears' flouring mill put out three fires from heaps of ashes that had been thrown out in the lot back of the RECORD building, filled with live coals, that the high wind was scattering in all directions. People who do not know any more than to wantonly endanger the property of others ought not to be allowed to run at large. This occurrence brings to mind once more the suggestion of the RECORD made several weeks since, that some place ought to be provided where all ashes from the business buildings made that would hold one or two month's deposit, and the deposit then drawn away and disposed of. This would be far better than to have ashes thrown into every open corner in the back alleys, where fires are almost sure to follow sooner or later.

the vicious creature flies away and amuses himself in mid-air. Presently he settles, and the chase begins again, till the hunter sets fire to the flimsy cur-in extinguishing the fire. After that mosquitoes come and go as they please, without let or hindrance, and day dawns on a feverish and frantic man, who has only bagged two or three of his innum-erable enemies. Late in the morning mosquitoes sleep, overcome with triumph and the refreshment which they have snatched from their enemy. They may now be killed, and it is curious to see-as any one who crushes them will see— how much of man's vital fluid one mos-quito can absorb. They who are fortunately inexperienced in the ways of mosquitoes will now understand that the insect is one of the greatest players that nature tolerates. There are more dan-than the South from mosquitoes. The mild Bulgarian dreads them, and there is a ghastly story of a drunken Bulgarian who tied up his wife in a mosquito trap. The poor woman was bitten to death, and her husband observed in the morning that he had suffered almost as much as if he had not thought of his savage expedient. Greece is, perhaps, more remarkable for the insect "whence is derived the verb 'to flee'" than for mosquitoes; and the same remark holds good of the Baden contingent. None of A Prince's Obtuseness.

The fondness of the late Prince Peter of Oldenburg for artificial fish-breeding had become a passion. After the man-ner of that Grand Duke of Tuscany who owned a Raphael Madonna and insisted that it should always accompany him on his travels. Prince Peter was accustomed to take with him when traveling a certain number of gold fish. Baron Rothschild, of Frankfort, shared this passion with him, and, in his winter garden, had a beautiful basin filled with fish and surrounded by plants of the rarest and most expensive kind. One day when the Prince was in Frankfort he took it upon himself to call on the Baron, having al ready heard of his fish. Of course, the Baron felt honored by this, and received his princely guest as it was becoming that he should. It so happened that these costly plants were at that time in bloom, and it was a matter for doubt whether the Baron cared most for them or for the fish. But the Prince, caring nothing for the plants, and ignorant of their value, or forgetful of it in his en-thusiasm for the fish, broke off some of the blossoms and threw them upon the water to attract upward the fish from below. The Baron, while making a long face as he saw this done, had too much tact to interrupt the Prince, and simply directed a sevant to bring some fine bread. When the servant returned the Prince looked at the bread with great surprise, but recovered himself soon and then politely said: "Bread—ah! isn't it?

Very kind of you, very amiable indeed!"

He then ate the bread, and went on picking off the blossoms and throwing

But they suffer all night long from the shrill, persistent noise of the mosquito's trumpet. At the first warning they leap up, light a candle, take it into bed, and try to catch the intruder. No one can guess how difficult this is. You soon find the messarite on the curtain where he lies THERE are flaws in diamonds, flies in mber, and faults in every man. THE best part of man's life is in the world of his natural affections, and that realm has laws of its own that neither know nor heed king nor congresses, and are deaf even to the voices of shouting popular majorities, but heed and obey rather the gentle voice of woman and the cry of helpless and feeble childhood.—Senator Bayard.

Why are you barbarously imprisoned by your fears? Why do you carry burdens all the day on account of the fears of an unexplored next day, next week, next month? Why do you fish on the troubled stream of fear and bring to land fish that have no money in their mouth? Why do you not say, "Let my life flow tranquil and pure in that higher realm of faith and trust and let the future take care of itself?"

A Feminine Trick.

A feminine trick, very common among foreigners at Rome, Italy, is described as follows: A lady goes to a milliner's and looks over her stock of bonnets. he selects those which she thinks wil suit her, and begs the milliner to send them to her the following morning that she may try them on at home and select the one which suits her. The poor milliner consents. At 9 o'clock she sends the bonnets. The lady is not up. Will the "young woman" call again a little later? The "young woman" conents to leave the bonnets until 3 o'clock. What does my lady do then? She takes the bonnet she likes best to a little working milliner in a back shop of a back street, and bids her make one exlike the model she leaves with her until half past 2 o'clock, when she takes t back to the grand milliner, saying that she is very sorry, but none of them "suit her."

Now Then, Marry a Coachman. Newspaper readers will readily recall the sensation created two years ago by the elopement and marriage of a daugh-ter of ex-Governor Hubbard, of Connecticut, with a coachman named Shep-ard. It has, since that time, been reported that the couple were living in pinching poverty, but this statement is not true. Soon after the marriage they went to board with Shepard's brother in Hartford. Mrs. Shepard occasionally visited her father's house to see 'her mother and sisters, but the presence of her husband in the home of her father was strictly forbidden. Shepard has a wealthy uncle living in Middletown, Conn., who became interested in Shepard after the elopement. The uncle was somewhat nettled by insinuations that Shepard was not good enough for the young lady, and to show that his sympathy was practical, made a tender of pecuniary assistance. He made deposit of the necessary amount of money, and Shepard was enabled to purchase an interest in a well-established livery business in New Haven. Not only is the former coachman doing well in business, but he is conducting himself in a manly manner in other ways, and his wife is reported to be very happy. She is seen frequently driving in her phæ'on, and it is understood is kindly received by many of her old friends in New Haven. Once in a while she goes to Hartford, and is noticed as being in perfect health, and looking prettier than ever. She keeps up a thoroughly stylish appearance, and has money enough from her husband to warrant it, all of which proves that she s not "living in poverty," as thousands

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

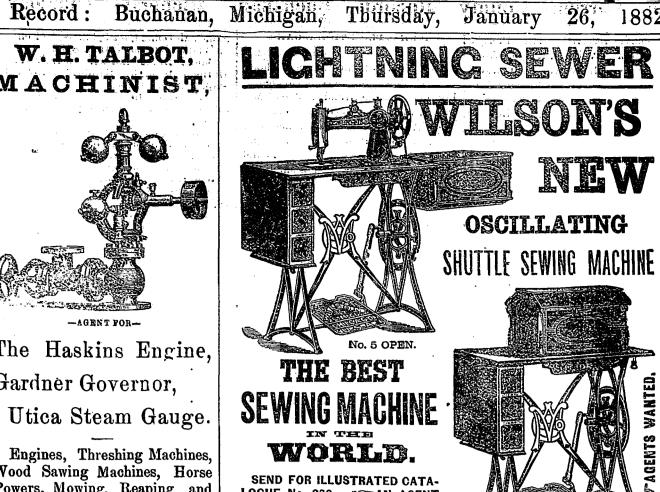

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the canse and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronicdis eases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. the sheet long enough to turn under the mattress at the foot, the lower one the same at the head, but fold the upper sheet well over the bedding. This will save the quilts from becoming soiled by the sleeper's breath. When a bed has been accounted all winter accounted.

been occupied all winter, everything about it should be washed in the spring.

To wash a feather-tick, choose fair weather so that you can dry it out-door.

Crowd the feathers into one end of the tick and tie firmly in the center. Wash the empty end and when dry shake the feathers into that, tie again and wash the other half. Corn-husk beds are much nicer than straw, as they are not so dusty and with the addition of a few fresh husks from time to time, will last for years. They may be freshed by turning the husks out in the sun and air for a day or two and sifting out the fine stuff.

In winter never keep sheets on a bed that is seldom used. They will gather dampness and render themselves very uncomfortable, perhaps fatal, to your guest. Make up the bed without the sheets and add them when needed.

ures. The municipality has set up a laboratory under the prefecture of police for the work of analysis. Out of 123 samples of wines, three only were found to be of genuine grape juice; the remaining were pronounced deleterious falsifications, in which were litharge, tannin, lime, chalk, the carbonates of sode and notach with coloring metter of soda and potash, with coloring matter from coal tar. Many of the packets of coffee analyzed contained as a base torrified coffee grounds purchased from the restaurants, mixed with red clay, mahog-any sawdust, and baked horses' livers reduced to a fine powder, while even the chiccory, commonly supposed to be the principle bogus element, was found to be falsified with brick-dust, ochre, refuse figs and animal black. As to chocolate, it is mixed with ochrous clay, grated toast, sawdust and damaged cocoa, sweetened with coarse brown, instead of

If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away, full of perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary hours and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a bare coffin without a flower, and a funeral coffin without a flower, and a funeral without an eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. The Fashion in Gait for Girls.

The fashionable gait of the utter young girl at this season is an importalike most of her articles of clothing. It is supposed to be an onspring of the utterly utter manners of the London æsthetic, who have set the fashion for languid, willowy, weary wabbles, now the rage at many fashionable gatherings among young women, who in a spirit of intense utterableness gaze into the depths of a new-blown lily or rose or silently study the heart of a field daisy. Upon the avenues, however, the great public see the esthetic walk undimmed by the mellow light of a drawing room, and ameliorated by the rich colors of Persian portieres and Daghestan rugs. When the esthetic appears upon the front doorstep with her Langtry hat she shakes out the bangles on her bracelets. pushes into better position the Jacque-minot roses at her belt or the field daisies in her fourth buttonhole, then shakes out the puffings of her polonaise, raises a balloon with its ivory handle carved like a calla lily, and prepares to get into shape for the fashionable gait. For the space of a minute her body seems to work upon eccentrics. Her spinal col-umn shoots forward at an angle of about forty-eight degrees and remains rigid, her neck lifts, her chin goes about an inch and five-eights above its normal line, her nose naturally follows and perhaps improves upon the incline, her arms to the elbow points hug her sides like the wings of a duck, and the forearms hang like willow branches, while the hand that does not engage itself with the parasol hangs limp and languid.

as much more dangerous than tight lacing."—Pittsburg Telegraph.

It requires two teeters to give the shape inertia, and off the æsthetic goes. Her progress defies accurate description. It the kangaroo's movements have some element of grace. Others say it is very like a duck which flaps its wings, but

The Spider as a Balconist. In speaking of the intelligence dis-played by birds and beasts, Seth Green argued strongly in favor of the reasoning power of insects especially, and related from his own experience the manuer in which a spider constructs a balloon. If you anchor a pole in a body of water leaving the pole above the surface, and put a spider upon it, he will exhibit mar-velous intelligence by his plans to escape. At first, he will spin a web several inches long and hang to one end while he allows the other to float off in the wind, in the hope that it will strike some object. Of course this plan proves a failure, but the spider is not discouraged. He waits until the wind changes, and then sends another silken bridge floating off in another direction. Another failure is followed by several other similar attempts, until all the points of the compass have been tried. But neither the resources nor the reasoning power of the spider is exhausted. He climbs to the top of the exhausted. He chimos to the top of the pole and energetically goes to work to construct a silken balloon. He has no hot air with which to inflate it, but he has the power of making it buoyant. When he gets his balloon finished he does not go off upon the mere supposition that it will carry him, as men often do, but he fastens to it a guy rope, the other end of which he attaches to the island pole upon which he is a prisoner. He then gets into his ærial vehicle, while it is made fast, and test it to see whether its dimensions are capable of the work of bearing him away. He often finds that he has made it too small, in which case he hauls it down, takes it all apart, and constructs it on a larger and better plan. A spider has been seen to make three different balloons before he became sat-

sus, gives some very interesting facts concerning the distribution of the national debt. The registered bonds are distributed about as follows: The New England States own about 11 per centum, the Middle States about 43 per centum, the Southern States a little over 2, the Western States 81, and other corporations about 351. The difference in the number of bondholders is somewhat significant. New York State owns nearly $210,000,000 of the bonds, and there are less than 15,000 holders, while Massachusetts, with $40,000,000 of bonds, has less than 17,000 holders. Mr. Porter says the debt is not a popular loan, but that it is owned by less than 100,000 persons, and it is probable that 1,500 persons own over $410,009,000 of the registered bonds. This is held in amounts exceeding $50,000. Many of the banks, however, hold small amounts in trust, so that 100,000 do not repre-sent all the holders in the country. These figures indicate to some extent the immense growth of private wealth in the country. During the last few years individual fortunes have grown enormously, and a large part of this wealth has been invested in government securities. The checks that are drawn by the Treasury for the payment of interest to individuals are some of them very large. This class of holders, strange as it may appear, do not oppose the refunding of the debt at a low rate of interest. They are perfectly willing to take 3 per centum, or any rate which the government will pay, but they want the bonds to run a long time. The difference between a low and a high rate can not pay for the cost of reinvestment. Tuat and the trouble of seeking new securities are what the owners of these great fortunes dread. It is not at all improbable that the influence of this wealth should be soon felt in favor of making the national debt permanent. It was perfectly well understood at Washington that the late Fernando Wood was in favor of a permanent debt as the best investment, both for large fortunes and for trust funds. Such a thing, however, is against all the tradi-tions and policy of the country, and will undoubtedly never be adopted.— Philadelphia Times. ---

Never give way to meloncholy; nothing encroaches more; I fight against it vigorously. One great remedy is to take short views of life. Are you happy now! Are you likely to you remain so till evening, or next week or next month, or next year?
