There is a great deal said in agricultural journals as to the proper time to cut grass. We have heard many practical farmer needs information about this, the oldest crop perhaps ever raised upon the farm, and that no farmer ever thinks of doing without it.

Disease of the Throat.

BY V. CLARENCE PRICE.

Hundreds throughout the country are suffering from the throat of the throat. Some are only distressed during the changeable weather of winter and spring, while others are troubled more or less the most of the time, and some instances an affection of the throat is so intractable that it will not get into the lungs without getting in upon the lungs. Notwithstanding this slow progress in some cases, we do not believe there is one case out of ten that will not get into the lungs, and reach the lungs, and end in consumption.

The symptoms in chronic diseases of the throat are many, and vary according to the nature and locality of the disease. Among the symptoms of this kind are: hoarseness, a more or less voice, its tone, not clear as usual, a slight irritation or tickling sensation in the throat with more or less dryness, giving rise to a hacking, hemming, or coughing, and a feeling of constriction, something which is felt to be on the way to a full and free utterance.

On attempting to speak there will be an inability to produce a proper sound, until the throat has first been cleared. The voice, when first cleared, is more or less hoarse, and the patient produces cough, irritation or dryness of the throat. In the first stages there is no expectation. Passing from a warm to a cold atmosphere or room, produces difficulty in breathing, and in advanced stages the patient has a more or less cough, the same symptoms follow an exposure to dust or when walking against the wind. In cold or damp weather the symptoms are generally more aggravated, the person has to take cold from the slightest exposure. Sometimes the symptoms disappear entirely, but return again on contracting a cold. It may thus go on disappearing and returning, until the patient has become so habitually comfortable that the disease has become considerable progress. There is often a tired feeling about the throat, a feeling of discomfort, or uneasiness along toward evening. In the early part of the day the tired feeling about the throat is not noticed, as the voice organs have had a chance to recover their power, but after the night. In the beginning the patient has a feeling that the voice is not clear, but as it progresses these symptoms show themselves every evening, then earlier and earlier until the voice is clear only a short time in the morning. The voice becomes more hoarse, but the man pretenses completely destroyed. Sometimes the individual will be able to speak a sentence in an audible voice, while the next one will be in a whisper, or the patient's consultation may be cut off in a single word.

Thus the disease may go on for some time, but gradually the symptoms increase, the general health, if not previously affected, becomes impaired, the appetite becomes irregular, the kidneys become impeded, the pulse frequent and weak, the skin dry and harsh, the feet are cold, and the patient has a feeling that the voice is not clear, but as it progresses these symptoms show themselves every evening, then earlier and earlier until the voice is clear only a short time in the morning. The voice becomes more hoarse, but the man pretenses completely destroyed. Sometimes the individual will be able to speak a sentence in an audible voice, while the next one will be in a whisper, or the patient's consultation may be cut off in a single word.

Where Ignorance was Bliss. Familiarly breeds contempt even of leaguers. The steamer India, of the German line, with 492 immigrants on board, struck an iceberg in the ocean May 24. The vessel was so badly damaged that she was obliged to return to New York. The captain and crew were rescued, but the vessel was so badly damaged that she was obliged to return to New York. "I cannot afford to furnish my family with newspapers, I am too poor," says the man who straightway tosses half a dollar over the bar to pay for the drinks for the boys. "No, sir, I am too poor," he says as he continues to gabble with the boys and lose his time, and then, to "keep his end up," he throws another half dollar over the bar for cigars. If his wife wanted ten cents with which to purchase a dish of herrings or a quart of milk for the family table, he would growl out, "I haven't a cent," but the next day, money or no money, he gets the bar-tender to trust him "until he gets his pay," he spends the money he has just received, and his family go without necessary food and miment because "he is too poor." There are lots of that kind of men, and they are not the lack-bone of the country when they are lacking in both spinal strength and horse sense.

A bold attempt was made on Friday night last, about half past ten o'clock, to rob Edgar Pierce, a young man who is traveling agent for the Niles Chair Factory Company. While in this city he stops with Mr. Thomas, one of the firm, who resides in the southeast part of the city, on the Finley place. When he entered the yard he heard a whistle in front and one in the rear, and in two or three minutes he was suddenly seized by the throat by a ruffian, who demanded his money. Pierce told him he had no money, and he was then jerked upon his knees. In the scuffle his collar and neck broke, and he then received a blow from the fist of the ruffian, on the back part of the head. By a sudden effort Pierce succeeded in getting away from him and made his escape into the house.

A large tree of the species known as pepperidge or gum tree, in Eastman Park, was struck by lightning during the heavy thunder storm of a few days ago. The electric current struck the tree near the top splintering the upper branches, running down the trunk, and tearing off the bark in its path, but not splintering the trunk, following the growth of wood which is greatly twisted, making a circuit of the tree in about eight feet.
