

THE ELECTIONS.

Yes, we have heard from the whole country and Chicago.

Too Much Sameness About the Returns.

Although it was conceded by all that the election on Tuesday was to be a sort of referendum to the Republicans for their action in New York, Pennsylvania and other States...

In New York the fight was between Conklingites, calling themselves stalwarts, and independents, and the Democrats step in with over 150,000 majority.

In Massachusetts Ben. Butler, by the aid of a prohibition ticket, is elected Governor by about 10,000 majority, although the balance of the State ticket is Republican.

In Connecticut the Republican candidate for Governor was nominated because of a custom that is something like inheritance, and a Democratic governor rules the State.

California went Democratic two years ago, and again this year.

Michigan Republicans followed a custom of giving the second nomination because of a bashfulness about telling an unpopular man to step down and out, and for the first time in twenty-eight years she has an opposition Governor.

The balance of the State ticket comes in looking pretty sick after its fatiguing load, although the latest returns show it to be Republican, and the legislature is Republican on joint ballot.

Different reasons are given for the change in different places, but the only satisfactory explanation is that too many fellows voted the opposition ticket. This State will have five or six Democrats and Greenbackers to represent them in Congress, and the next Congress will be anti-Republican by about sixty.

In Kansas the Democratic governor has been elected over St. John, the famous prohibition governor, who was up for a third term. This does not prove, however, that Kansas is not still 80,000 Republican, as of yore. The same is true of a number of other States, prominently Pennsylvania.

Taken as a whole it has been a severe punishment for the Republicans which they perhaps deserved in many places, and which they can better afford to receive now than at any other time. If the result can have any effect upon the general election in 1884 it will be a good one for the Republicans.

In this county the Republicans have elected the full ticket with the exception of Himes for Clerk, who is defeated by about 300, and probably Worthington for Circuit Court Commissioner, whose prospect is quite slim, although close. He is probably beaten by about 80. Yaple comes in with 306 majority in the district, and 134 in Barrien county. Major Duncan is elected to the State Senate by about 800 majority. The returns from the county are slow about coming in, and we are unable at time of going to press to give full vote of the county. Following are the returns, so far as received up to three o'clock this afternoon:

Miss Madeline Stockwell, the first young lady who entered the Michigan University, gives the following reminder of her experience at Ann Arbor: "The young men of my class were, without exception, very kind to me throughout the course. I once attended a senior party of about 200, and not a woman except the hostess and her daughter spoke to me during the whole evening."

Mr. C. E. Weaver returned yesterday from trying a somewhat peculiar case for the Lake Shore railroad company at Ann Arbor. In March, 1881, a family of German emigrants were on the night train on the Jackson branch, bound for Manchester. When the train stopped at that station they failed to get off, and the train was stopped for them to get off some fifty rods past the depot. The night was dark and rainy, and they were considerably exposed before shelter was found. They accordingly brought suit against the railroad company, claiming, among other things, that the mother of the family, who died shortly after the arrival at Manchester, that night contracted the cold which caused her death, and that a little son fell in the darkness and sustained permanent injury. The plaintiff claimed at least $2,000 damages, and by the verdict obtained $325.—Adrian Times
