THE MAN WHO NEVER ADVERTISES. Sing, business muss, the dark and doleful fate of him who labors but that he may wait...

Who never advertised, but simply waited. So simply and so vainly! Splendid signs, which basement art imitations and refines...

He waited, and all waited; clerks, cashiers, Salesmen, saleswomen, such delightful dears...

Business was dull, but salaries and rent went on till each and each would be spent; The merchant hoped his luck would turn...

Until the sheriff closed the whole concern. Now, at a pitance which his soul despises, He works for one who always advertises.

A TUB STORY.

New tubs, is it? Well, Mr. Carpenter, no doubt they'll be a date later than the old ones, but they'll never be the same to me.

Why, sure if you'll believe it, I've the best of reasons for being attached to them, for they saved my life, indeed they did, as I'm a living sinner.

And when I think of the old tub, how well-off I was, with washings of silver and the like of that, and at the time I'm speaking of they kept them same in the house.

And when I think of the old tub, how well-off I was, with washings of silver and the like of that, and at the time I'm speaking of they kept them same in the house.

And when I think of the old tub, how well-off I was, with washings of silver and the like of that, and at the time I'm speaking of they kept them same in the house.

And when I think of the old tub, how well-off I was, with washings of silver and the like of that, and at the time I'm speaking of they kept them same in the house.

Waking Him, being look for his own good.

"Waking him, being look for his own good. They took me out, and sure, getting me straight was a hard job, Nora said, I'd been doubled up that long, but I came to at last; and it was owing to my own good, that I was saved."

"I wish you'd poked your ugly head out of that hole, Bridget," says one of them in the court.

"But bless the tubs, I didn't," says I, "and here I am to confound ye."

Yes, Mr. Carpenter; now you've got the tubs, and you're a happy man, are you? I'll give you a bit of the old ones to remember them by, 'av' ye please.—Oriental Casket.

Keeping Tally of Kisses.

There is a young man in this county of Wayne, state of Michigan, ss., who is going to be terribly astonished by the year 1883 is a month old, says the Detroit Free Press.

The law will reach out and clasp his throat just above Adam's apple, and he will get such a shaking up and mopping around for the year 1883 is a month old, says the Detroit Free Press.

They were to see a lawyer yesterday, Mary Ann and her mother. Mary Ann was a little embarrassed, but the old woman spoke about a breach of promise case, the lawyer asked:

"What evidence have you got?" "Mary Ann, produce the letters," said the lawyer, and she produced them.

"The footing is 214 times," answered the girl. "Now turn to the heading 'Darling,' and you will see how many times he has applied the term to you."

"I've figured right the total is 9254 times." "I guess you counted pretty straight, for you are good in arithmetic," returned the heading of 'Woodbine Cottage,' and tell us how many times he has talked of such a home for you after marriage."

"Heaven, it is 1395 times." "Very well. This lawyer wants to be sure that we've got a case. How many times has Charles Henry said to you, 'I love you, Mary Ann?'"

"Over 84,000 squeezes." "And kisses?" "Nearly 47,000." "There's your case!" said the mother, as she deposited the book on the lawyer's table.

"Look over the documents, and if you want anything further, I can bring a dozen neighbors to swear to facts. We use for $10,000 damages, and don't take for less than $5,000. I'll give you $10,000 in gold repair. Well! call again next week. Good day, sir."

Something in the Bed.

Judge Pitman has a habit of slipping his watch under his pillow when he goes to bed. One night, however, it slipped out, and he found it under the foot of the bed.

"It was steps and the jingling of silver in the dining-room, and somebody coming through the passage-way to the kitchen."

"I'm a little woman, by the grace of Heaven, and I can slip in almost anywhere, and it came into my mind that this was the time to slip, and down I went into the room, letting the cover down over me just as the door cracked to get a peep, and sure if I didn't see enough to satisfy me."

Two men—bad luck to them!—widened their faces, and pistols in their hands, looked at her.

"I told you there was no one here, Jim," says one.

"And I knew his voice, and the hands of him, with a crooked finger on one hand, and a pistol in the other, was pretending to work the watch of the master."

"I heard something," says he, "and I'll look about me."

Then he poked around, peering over the door, and saw the judge.

"The family is out," said he, "but that devil of a Bridget might be here, or the other girl, Nora."

"They're safe asleep upstairs," says the judge.

"They'd better stay there," says the other, "for I'd think nothing of silencing the two. This is a good haul, Jack—a solid stuff."

"It was mine, put a bullet through a screaming woman as not," said the other. "See here—here's a pocketbook."

It was mine, with just ten shillings in it, and I didn't mind the money at that time, but I'll take it now."

They took it out and counted it and divided it, and they seemed in no hurry to go, the villains.

"The silver is in the bags," I heard them say.

"Maybe there's clothes in the tub," says the one; and he lifted the lid of the one next me.

My heart gave a great flop, and I went to the tub, and sure if I didn't find along with you, 'said the other."

"Here, while we're waiting for the chance to go, let's have a bite. Here's a good piece of bread, and some butter."

But sure the next minute I'd just lifted me head to page again, when crack came the lid on it, and I knew the crooked finger was sitting on the tubs, taking their supper.

I was nearly dead with the blow, and I'd have smothered but for a hole in the lid that was there, glory to God!

And lay still, doubled up like a frog, and heard them caw.

And whether it was the fright or the closeness, I don't know, but I fainted away, and they went on their way.

When it was daylight, Nora waked and missed me, and dressed and came down.

The minute she saw what had happened she rushed out to the street, shrieking for help, and in came the police and neighbors, and sure they said I was in the robbery, and had let the tubs, and I'm lying unknown in the tub's story."

They sent Nora for master and missus, and nobody had the sense to look for me, until missus, Heaven bless her, says, says she:

An Appeal For And To Woman.

"Woman should have no voice in the interest and cause of temperance." Who of all the world should have more to say upon this question than the women of our land? What class of people suffer from, and endure more of the privations which enter into and form a part, more or less, of every drunkard's home, if it be not the wife, mother, and the helpless children who cling about her? Are they to have no voice in the great question of reform? Are they to keep silent at home and look idly on and behold the serpent-winding his slimy coils across the threshold and around the form of a loved one, slowly but surely carrying him downward to ruin and death, blasting forever all the heart's best, and truest affection of that once manly and loving heart, kindling the flames of a demon upon the altar where love and affection once brightly and truly burned, but now no longer responding to the sweet voice of love and welcome that once brightened a happy and a prosperous home; silently watching the lamp of life go out in that once strong and manly heart, giving place to the wild and visionary utterances of a delirious brain, and at last surrounded by destitute, starving, and wretched orphan children, leaving him to a drunkard's grave, with nothing to mark the last resting place of him she loved, save the sad remembrance of the bitter past, and yet utter no word of complaint, drop no sigh, shed no tear for the lost one who has gone, nor even reflect for a moment on the brightness of years had "heart to heart been true?"

No, God of Heaven and earth forbid! The drunkard in his most sober moments of life would not, and should we, No, we could not. Neither would we brand them as weak, imbecile beings, as is the manly custom of some strong minded men.

Speak out, ye women of earth; warn your daughters against those who traffic and tamper with the glittering vice, the sure destroyer of home and all its sweet associations when once it enters thy domain. "Weak minded woman!" Who of us bearing the impress of strong manhood could have the strength, courage, and the hopeful and loving heart to bear up against the fearful odds arrayed against woman in and around a drunkard's home, as do they? Think you, would we, could we endure the same disappointment, sorrow and poverty with as little murmuring as is often their lot to bear? "Weak woman!" Who is that strong one, when amid the dark storms of life all hope to the vision of man is gone, and in despair he sits down, looking into the dark, bleak future, seeing no light or hope beyond, I say you, is it that will then step forth amid the cloudy and dark day of life, a fair angel from above speaking peace to our troubled soul, strengthening, by words of love and hope, man's spirits, which are ready to perish, say, "Come, despair not, I will stand by your side through all the clouds and storm," and with these kind, encouraging words lift man's sinking hopes, strengthening him to some more battle with the storms of life? It is woman, with her hopeful heart, whose powers to endure, cheer and strengthen the fainting spirit of man many times, are not fully developed until his are gone. Who is it, when the "cold world shall despise and forsake us, when it leaves us by the wayside to die unnoticed; who is it that will then gather us up in their arms and carry us home, and tell of all our virtues, until we almost forget that our souls are disfigured by vice and dissipation? It is woman. "We cannot walk into a midnight where she cannot see us; we cannot enter a prison whose bars will keep her out; we cannot mount a scaffold too high for her to reach, that she may not kiss and bless us in evidence of her deathless love" and strength to feel and endure for man.

Women of America, rejoice and be glad, because of this thy power to hope, labor and love. "Neither is it beyond your power to trample the liquor traffic out of existence. Never smile on a man who is not a totalist. Tell him that you do not care to cultivate the acquaintance of those who indulge in, intoxicating drink, because you believe the habit is debasing, and those who indulge in it are in danger of becoming ensnared by it to the disgrace of themselves and friends." Dream not of converting loved ones to sober habits, for after marriage, for it has too often been proven to be but an idle dream.

Some "friend to a paper" has taken it to heart and sends us the following: "We will not, we will not, we will not, that we cannot present the chirography."

"Dear Editor you are weary kind sure to help to buy dog, sure & show me a new one, and I'll give you a new one, and see if he ain't 't'ch there more than I that has bought a dog and does not take a paper sur."

A Room Full of Snakes.

Six serpents, one python, two cobras and three black snakes, arrived in New York from Berlin last Saturday afternoon, and were consigned to a dealer in the city. Their attendants on the vessel were incompetent, and instead of placing blankets in their cages to keep them warm, simply spread a bandful of hay under them, and the serpents were frozen. They were lifted from their cages like walking canes and sent to the superintendent at Central Park, and made himself known we will give him a year's subscription.—Dealer (Me) Gazette.

They were found a short distance from the putting on of his new crown, which they were present in the park awaiting their owner's action.

Touched in a Tender Spot.

Last week we printed the following item: "I saw a man too poor to pay for a newspaper and we will help him buy another dog or two."

Some "friend to a paper" has taken it to heart and sends us the following: "We will not, we will not, we will not, that we cannot present the chirography."

"Dear Editor you are weary kind sure to help to buy dog, sure & show me a new one, and I'll give you a new one, and see if he ain't 't'ch there more than I that has bought a dog and does not take a paper sur."

When you all firmly take such a step as this, then will you fully realize that power which you have ever held since the dawn of creation to the present hour over the destiny of man. Then will you again be reminded (as back in the garden of Eden, but by far happier results) that you still hold control over the acts and lives of men. Should such an era as this (which is possible) dawn upon the land, the heartstone of many a home would burn with a bright light, where to-day darkness, want, sorrow and tears are enthroned because of rum. This mission and work is possible unto thee, oh woman of earth!

A Prisoner's Friend.

Agent Taylor of the prisoners' aid association, tells of a discharged State prison convict who, as soon as he reached Hartford on his way to liberty, burst into tears and was much solaced by the aid of the association.

"He would playfully run down my arm and play about my face, let me feed him, and stay by me when I was eating my supper, and when I went into my cell and did not pay immediate attention to my little pet, he would chatter and scold at me in such an earnest way that it made me laugh. He was my one friend, and I have come away forgetting him."

A Boston Lady's Kind Act.

A little incident happened on Hancock street Monday, that attracted considerable attention from the bystanders. A poor, forlorn-looking horse was standing on the side of the street suffering in the wintry snow, when a fine lady, dressed in every morning and afternoon, took the blanket from the wagon and covered up the horse, buckling the blanket tight around the horse's neck and tucking the ends under the harness to prevent the blanket from blowing off. After this kind act was completed, the lady, without noticing the crowd, passed along. When the driver came out of a neighboring store he was much surprised at the care bestowed upon his horse. A correspondent says private opium "joints"—smoking dens—are increasing to an alarming extent in San Francisco. The evil is increasing, owing to a lack of parental discipline, and children being hopelessly depraved by vice before they are out of their teens.

Certain kinds of wood, of great durability, have been found in Alaska, and are being sent to the States. A new industry has recently sprung up in Sweden: In most parts of that country enormous quantities of blancheted and bleached mosses are found which grow upon the rocks. These mosses are now gathered and made into paper which is found to be very fine quality. A manufactory of paper from this material has begun operations near Jönköping, and the quality of the paper is in all degrees of excellence, from tissue to sheets three-quarters of an inch in thickness. These latter is harder than wood.

Russia is on the brink of bankruptcy. The state debt, both foreign and internal, amounts to the enormous sum of $1,142,000,000 roubles, and is annually increasing, for the government, being unable to pay the interest, has fallen due, issues new obligations. Russian Government securities in the different European exchanges now stand lower than ever before. Even the bonds of the Russian Government are now gathered and made into paper which is found to be very fine quality. A manufactory of paper from this material has begun operations near Jönköping, and the quality of the paper is in all degrees of excellence, from tissue to sheets three-quarters of an inch in thickness. These latter is harder than wood.

The feat of George Hutchins, a Boston fireman, will bring him a medal. It was performed at the burning of a gun store, described the other day by telegraph. It was impossible to keep the people far from the building, although they were kept back by a line of explosion. The firemen learned just where the stock of powder was, and Hutchinson volunteered to go in after it. He climbed through a window, got to the powder, and he kept the powder spot to which he had been directed. The smoke was stifling and blinding. His hands touched the high copper box and he carried it out. Again he went back for the remaining box. The copper burned his fingers, and he sprang out the flames followed him, but the powder was safe under a powerful stream of water.

A smooth talker went from house to house among wealthy people in Chicago, telling them that a Count Eugene Radezky, a wonderful pianist, but too aristocratic to perform before an ordinary audience, would give an evening concert. He had a great success, and should not be advertised in the newspapers, and that admission should only be granted to carefully chosen persons. In this way about 500 tickets were sold at $5.00 each. Carriage after carriage rolled up to the hall on the night of the promised performance, but the doors were found locked, and the janitor said: "I don't know anything about no concert. This gentlemanly-looking man has not been seen since in this city."

The new fusion Governor of Michigan is too humble by half. He says: "The word Governor seems harsh and inappropriate. A designation that would more nearly define my real position as a principal servant would be more agreeable." This is indeed the pride that apes humility. Is the man a fool?—Chicago Tribune.

A few years since the state of Tennessee, by its democratic managers, borrowed large sums of money to build state houses and other public improvements, and then stole the whole affair by repudiating the bonds, and now because the state treasurer has followed the example of his teachers, and stolen a paltry $400,000, the whole state is in an uproar.

The status of affairs in the neighborhood of the new governor is fairly indicated by the story of the performance of Col. Sanford. It is somewhat remarkable that Democrats should ever do such things, as it is purely a matter of principle with them and not a hankering for office, as one would be led to believe by their cries for reform. The idea of giving appointments to public offices in payment for political work has a very bad smell to a Democrat until he gets there himself, when he never knows when to quit.

The chief howl of the opposition now is that the administration is taking money from the people too rapidly, and demand great reductions in taxes. If they succeed in doing that their next cry will be that the debt is not being paid. It is being paid too fast to suit them. The fact is that no one is being burdened by the amount of taxes they pay the general government excepting a few chronic grumblers of the opposition who will never be satisfied with anything until they are in office.

Some indication of the influence of the Post & Tribune on the Senatorial question is found in the following, that appeared in the Inter-Ocean, Monday: James McMillan, R. Alger, and C. H. Bush, Directors of the Post & Tribune, telegraphed to the Republican members of the Wayne county delegation not to go into caucus. But four out of five of them, namely: Senator Gresham, Representatives Bolger, Coots and Bettinger, disobeyed these instructions, appearing in caucus and voting for Ferry. Mr. Coots, ex-Sheriff of Wayne county, and a reliable man in the country is loose upon the world. And now the question arises: "On whom did Jack spend his money?" If the Citizen's statement be true.

Some of the comments of the press on the action of Begole in pardoning the notorious Jack Ryan are not very complimentary. "Firstly, the following from the Jackson Citizen: The Citizen says that Jack Ryan, pardoned by Gov. Begole last week, "is said to have won $50,000, and has spent between $6,000 and $7,000 in trying to secure a pardon, and that the governor who has been in office since his incarceration. His persistence, or that by his friends backed by the free use of money, has finally succeeded, and one of the worst criminals in the country is loose upon the world." And now the question arises: "On whom did Jack spend his money?" If the Citizen's statement be true.

Mrs. Phillip Tinker, an old lady residing in the southern part of Bunkerhill, met with a terrible accident last Saturday evening. She had lighted a lamp which in some way came in contact with her clothes, setting them on fire. The poor woman ran and jumped into bed, and faintly sought to smother the flames. Her husband, hearing her cries, rushed in, seized her and carried her out doors and rolled her in the snow until the fire was extinguished. She was badly burned about the breast and chest, and at last accounts was not expected to live. Aged 80 years.—Mason News.

At Lapeer, Wednesday, a young son of Victor Howland carelessly slid off a hay-wagon and struck on a pitchfork which had been left standing on end, times up, and one prong penetrated his body for six inches, the other gashing one of his thighs horribly. The wounds are not considered dangerous.

The Michigan Senatorship.

The Republican members of the Michigan Legislature who declined to enter the Senatorial caucus have not, as yet, given any explanation of their conduct to the public. It is their right to demand. While there are grave doubts in the minds of members of our constitutional question, they may be excused for not entering a caucus that is to pass upon the question of a committee to all concerns of interpretation. In such a case the question goes in advance of the action or accompanies it, and there is manifested a disposition to meet the issue fairly rather than an inclination to dodge it.

In the Michigan case there is no issue of this kind and nothing answering to it. The legislative caucus last fall was made on the Senatorial question. Eighty-one Republican Senators and Representatives were elected. It is well known that a large majority of the Legislature were elected as Ferry men. The constituents of these gentlemen expect them to vote for Ferry, and few of them have indicated that they would not. The evidence that there has been a caucus in the public sentiment is not apparent to the unprejudiced observer. Then why did so many Republicans refuse to enter the caucus?

The State, as was shown by the election, is overwhelmingly in favor of returning Mr. Ferry to the Senate. A large majority of the Republican members of the legislature are clearly in favor of him, as there is no reasonable doubt on this point, there is no good excuse for not entering a caucus which was simply to formally announce the candidate already named by the Representatives of the State.

Why, then, such a majority in favor of Senator Ferry, the action of the caucus was a foregone conclusion. By absenting themselves, certain gentlemen give notice that they do not regard themselves as being bound by the action of the caucus. They do this with the intention, it is presumed, of electing some other Republican or committing at the election of a Democrat.

In either case they will be expected to give more than personal reasons for their course. The simple fact that they as individuals prefer some other man to Mr. Ferry is no warrant for their action.

There are no charges against Senator Ferry. He has served the State acceptably, and has taken high rank in the Senate. The simple fact that two or three other men desire his place is a matter that does not concern the Republicans of the State or country at large. All these are more interested in maintaining the Republican majority in the Senate than they are in the personal ambitions of any man. These aspirants for place made their campaign against Mr. Ferry last fall. They knew they were beaten when the ballots were counted, and they should have given up the fight.

But as they continued it in a spirit of petty spite, with wanton recklessness as to results, it is a plain duty on the part of the Republicans of Michigan to make them understand that their conduct is disapproved of.

At the very lowest estimate 55 Republican members of the Legislature are in favor of the re-election of Senator Ferry. They are asked to vote for him less than half their number to abandon their candidate and vote for some one named by the minority. The majority declining to accept this proposition, the minority are asked to do this. They will make a fight in caucus, but will go into the joint convention to do all they can to defeat the candidate of the majority.

This is the programme marked out by the three leaders for the holding minority to follow. But in this minority are many Republicans who are not soreheads, and who have sympathy with the designs of men working against Senator Ferry for a better reason than that of personal spite. It rests with these men to assert themselves, and by declining to take the risks of defeating the clearly expressed wish of the people, to place themselves and the State from humiliation. Republicans in all the States are by right greatly interested in this contest, and that they are overwhelmingly against the man working against Senator Ferry for a better reason than that of personal matter is beyond dispute.—Inter Ocean.

Col. Geo. P. Sanford, of Lansing, has pressed several appointments upon Gov. Begole; pressed them with persistence that would hardly brook defeat on the other day. Sanford has a friend called upon Gov. Begole and immediately the claims of Mr. G. H. House, to be Insurance Commissioner, were brought up. Gov. Begole felt that he could not acquiesce in the claims that were demanded, and politely intimated his dissent. Col. Sanford then talked of what he considered due him personally on account of time and expense incurred in securing Gov. Begole's election. The Governor then suggested Col. Sanford to admit that he had been paid in cash for what he had done. The remark was so truthful and stinging that Col. Sanford gathered up $200 and sent it by another messenger to the Governor. The Governor requested that the money be taken back to Col. Sanford, but Col. Sanford's friend had no instructions to do that, and accordingly the money was deposited in subject to Col. Sanford's order. The Governor feels his responsibility in the matter of making appointments, and he is not disposed to surrender himself with such officers as will reflect credit upon his administration, and will exercise his best judgment calmly and so far as possible unimpaired by the claims of any man to be made. As to the $200 the money was claimed by Col. Geo. P. Sanford, and paid to him by Gov. Begole; $100 he paid for the election and $100 afterwards.

Some of the comments of the press on the action of Begole in pardoning the notorious Jack Ryan are not very complimentary. "Firstly, the following from the Jackson Citizen: The Citizen says that Jack Ryan, pardoned by Gov. Begole last week, "is said to have won $50,000, and has spent between $6,000 and $7,000 in trying to secure a pardon, and that the governor who has been in office since his incarceration. His persistence, or that by his friends backed by the free use of money, has finally succeeded, and one of the worst criminals in the country is loose upon the world." And now the question arises: "On whom did Jack spend his money?" If the Citizen's statement be true.

RENOVIATION.

Both bird and cage were fair, And both belonged to me; Yet with my heart I longed To see the bird loose from its cage. Within their tender depths Shone sweet and wild unrest; Ever against the bars It beat its beautiful breast.

I said, I will make his cage A little more airy, With all that love can do, It can not choose but stay. To vain I will not try, Still it will plain to me That over with longing eyes He beats his beautiful breast.

Then I said I will hold it close— Surely it is my right— I will keep this precious thing, If not to love by might, In vain! Though mine the power To hold or set it free, I mean to hold it fast— That child shall escape from me.

Then I said, Be free, O bird, To spread your beautiful wings. For care for me and I, It's also the heart that sings? For the glances of eyes that shine, In shining they also say, For the sweetest breath, if never It beats with the pulse of love!

Wide I opened the door; In either case they will be expected to give more than personal reasons for their course. The simple fact that they as individuals prefer some other man to Mr. Ferry is no warrant for their action.

There are no charges against Senator Ferry. He has served the State acceptably, and has taken high rank in the Senate. The simple fact that two or three other men desire his place is a matter that does not concern the Republicans of the State or country at large.

INAUGURAL MESSAGE

Josiah W. Begole, Governor of the State of Michigan, TO THE LEGISLATURE,

JANUARY 3, 1883.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE AND OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: We have assumed the duties assigned us by the sovereign people of the State of Michigan...

I have had little opportunity to examine specially and in detail the many interests for which legislation or appropriations may be required...

No political organization is to be held responsible for my views on any subject. The candidate of two political parties, and elected by the votes of men of all parties...

The results of the recent elections in the several States have called the attention of men of all parties to the need of a reform in the civil service...

Our humane institutions compare favorably with those of any other State, and will, I feel sure, be generally deemed to be well managed...

The report of the Commissioner of Railroads discloses some interesting facts. The present length of road within the State is 4,544.90 miles...

At the last session of the Legislature authority was given for the transfer of the St. Mary's Falls ship canal to the United States Government...

The $2,000 appropriated at the last regular session of the Legislature has been used with success in conducting a series of sanitary conventions...

The manufacture of salt is constantly increasing in magnitude, and has expanded its territory to the westward...

The Michigan State Reform School for Girls meets a long-felt want, and I am, from personal observation, fully convinced of its advantages...

Among the various State institutions I have occasionally visited, there is none in which I have felt a deeper interest than the State Reform School at Lansing...

The laws heretofore enacted sought to provide against the introduction and spread of disease among cattle, horses and swine...

In closing my official connection with the Government of the State, I renew my commendation to the wisdom of the Legislature...

The Michigan Asylum at Kalamazoo and the Eastern Asylum at Pontiac are admirably managed institutions, creditable alike to the State and to the intelligent gentlemen who compose their Boards of Trustees...

The report of the Commissioners for the Northern Asylum for the Insane shows that a site has been selected near Traverse City. One of the Commissioners having an interest in the State and to be purchased...

The Michigan Asylum at Kalamazoo and the Eastern Asylum at Pontiac are admirably managed institutions, creditable alike to the State and to the intelligent gentlemen who compose their Boards of Trustees...

The report of the Commissioners for the Northern Asylum for the Insane shows that a site has been selected near Traverse City. One of the Commissioners having an interest in the State and to be purchased...

thority to sentence persons convicted under it in Justice's courts to such punishment as the law may require...

The progress made in the school in the prison is set forth in the report of the teacher of the reformatory character of the institution...

This was the first prison built by the State, and has been added to from time to time to meet the increased demands upon it...

The school is more than full, and embarrassment is felt to furnish suitable employment for the boys...

Recommendations to your careful consideration. For details, reference is made to a special report made by the Superintendent...

This institution was projected by some philanthropists in order to give to the women with a view of redeeming young girls from vicious lives...

A sufficient amount of land was secured near the city of Adrian for a site. Four cottages, a school and engine building were erected...

For full details of the operations of the school, and its wants, I refer you to the report of the Board of Control.

As much may be expected of this reformatory work as of any other, and the high expectations of the good women who inaugurated it...

On coming into office I found the management of the institution in a state of confusion and complaint. The members of the Board of Management were known as of good reputation...

After a long and careful investigation, the committee reported no criminal wrong found, and the prison in good condition, but that a want of harmony existed between the board and the Warden...

The reports of the Adjutant and Quartermaster Generals very clearly and intelligently show the condition of the troops and of the funds, and to these reference is made for details.

In 1881 the Board of Geological Survey published the fourth volume of the series entitled "Geological Survey" covering the work of the State Geologist for the preceding year...

The explorations in the iron districts are so far advanced that at the last meeting of the board having charge of this work it was determined to prosecute investigations in the copper regions for the immediate future.

These scientific explorations and the publication of the information thus obtained have tended to develop the mining interest of our State...

The manufacture of salt is constantly increasing in magnitude, and has expanded its territory to the westward...

The average prison population for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1881, was 272,123-265.

The average for the year 1882 was 272,123-265. The large increase in the latter year is mainly due to the increase in the number of commitments from Justice courts under the Disorderly act...

The report of the State Librarian for the years 1881 and 1882 is an intelligent statement of the present condition and needs of the library, and the appropriation of $3,000 asked for each of the years 1883 and 1884 is recommended.
