NEWS of a sad nature was received from Mr. W. J. Tennant, of Hart, Oceana county, Saturday. Mr. Tennant is acting as agent for the Buchanan Windmill Company, and in putting up one of the mills, on Friday, the derrick fell when partly up, killing Mr. Tennant's oldest son, a young man about twenty-three years of age. Mr. Tennant will be remembered as a former resident of this township, and son-in-law of Mr. Joseph Coveney.

LOOK out for a lot of brown tanned faces and hands in about two weeks. A party, consisting of Salma Barnore and wife, Geo. Howard and wife, Geo. Richards and wife, Geo. Merrill and wife, the Misses Lucy and Mary Richards, Hattie Hahn, L. Darling, and a number of others, went to Diamond Lake, Tuesday, to rusticate during that time. Another party expect to embark for that resort for their falling health, to-morrow. They will have lots of fun, get well sunbathed, perhaps a few duckings, and come home feeling as happy as if they had been on a trip to the mountains of Europe.

THE following item from the Detroit Free Press is being quite freely copied by the county papers: "A correspondent who was a passenger on a Michigan Central train bound for Detroit, on the other day, says that at a small station near Kalamazoo a strapping youth boarded the train, leading by the hand a blushing rustic maid. Taking his stand at full view of everybody, he ordered: 'Ladies and gents, this is my wife. Ain't she a daisy?' He proudly exhibited his prize to the amused observers with an exultant flourish of the arm. The youth used to win her through a fifty-mile ride. Arrived at Buchanan, the happy pair alighted in the presence of a large crowd of spectators. Again the groom announced: 'Ladies and gents, my wife. Ain't she a darling?' As the train moved out, the passengers waved their handkerchiefs and applauded. The bride and groom were left to everybody-to-know-it pair were left to their rare and singular felicity."

THE facts are as stated, but the circumstances are not all given. The "strapping youth" referred to, was Jefferson Hofer, of Dayton, formerly of Niles. Mr. Hofer has, since his childhood, been subject to spells of violent insanity, and it was at one of these times that the Free Press correspondent met him, and did not have enough of the elements of a gentleman about him to keep him from publicly making sport of the deformities of a sick man. Mr. Hofer has since that time been violently insane, requiring the constant care of one or two strong porters. Fortunately, he is now slowly recovering, and with proper care may again return to the right use of his mind. He is a young man of steady habits, and well respected by those who know him best, and the Free Press' remarks are entirely out of taste.

In the Berrien Springs Era we find notice of the death of Mrs. Harmon Cowan, of Grand Rapids, nee Nellie Coomber, of Berrien Springs, which occurred July 8, after a sickness of only three hours. The remains were brought to Berrien Centre for interment in Union Church cemetery. There was a large attendance at the funeral.

LOOK out for a lot of brown tanned faces and hands in about two weeks. A party, consisting of Salma Barnore and wife, Geo. Howard and wife, Geo. Richards and wife, Geo. Merrill and wife, the Misses Lucy and Mary Richards, Hattie Hahn, L. Darling, and a number of others, went to Diamond Lake, Tuesday, to rusticate during that time. Another party expect to embark for that resort for their falling health, to-morrow. They will have lots of fun, get well sunbathed, perhaps a few duckings, and come home feeling as happy as if they had been on a trip to the mountains of Europe.

THE following item from the Detroit Free Press is being quite freely copied by the county papers: "A correspondent who was a passenger on a Michigan Central train bound for Detroit, on the other day, says that at a small station near Kalamazoo a strapping youth boarded the train, leading by the hand a blushing rustic maid. Taking his stand at full view of everybody, he ordered: 'Ladies and gents, this is my wife. Ain't she a daisy?' He proudly exhibited his prize to the amused observers with an exultant flourish of the arm. The youth used to win her through a fifty-mile ride. Arrived at Buchanan, the happy pair alighted in the presence of a large crowd of spectators. Again the groom announced: 'Ladies and gents, my wife. Ain't she a darling?' As the train moved out, the passengers waved their handkerchiefs and applauded. The bride and groom were left to everybody-to-know-it pair were left to their rare and singular felicity."

THE facts are as stated, but the circumstances are not all given. The "strapping youth" referred to, was Jefferson Hofer, of Dayton, formerly of Niles. Mr. Hofer has, since his childhood, been subject to spells of violent insanity, and it was at one of these times that the Free Press correspondent met him, and did not have enough of the elements of a gentleman about him to keep him from publicly making sport of the deformities of a sick man. Mr. Hofer has since that time been violently insane, requiring the constant care of one or two strong porters. Fortunately, he is now slowly recovering, and with proper care may again return to the right use of his mind. He is a young man of steady habits, and well respected by those who know him best, and the Free Press' remarks are entirely out of taste.

NEW TROY ITEMS.

Those who collected at the social, last Friday evening, were agreeably surprised by the richness of the literary exercises pertaining to the evening's entertainment. To the vocal music, sung by our home troupe, won for those young men a first appreciation of their musical talents possessed by them, but hitherto unobserved by the general public. Also Miss Judd, by her select reading, impressed upon the minds of her hearers a mark of respect which will long remain unattested by the dust of forgetfulness. The net receipts of the evening amounted to twenty-six dollars.

The North American Review for August opens with a very spirited discussion of the subject of "Moral Instruction in the Public Schools," by Rev. Dr. H. Heber Newton, who offers a practical scheme for conveying ethical instruction without religious tenets, and the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, who, in a brilliant and able manner, must be made, the basis of all moral teaching. Henry D. Lloyd exposes the tricks and frauds of speculation in grain, and maintains that it should be repressed by law, as being flagrant in opposition to public policy. Women in Politics," by ex-Surgeon-General Wm. A. Hammond, is a very able discussion of certain facts of nervous organization which in his opinion rendered the female sex unfit for participation in public affairs. Hon. Frank A. Walker reviews "George's Social Fallacies," criticizing in particular his doctrines regarding land-tenure and rent. The evils resulting from "Crude Methods of Legislation," by Hon. J. M. McKim, are pointed out by Simon Stearns, who advocates the adoption of certain rules of legislative procedure which, in English practice, have been found to serve as an efficient barrier both against lobbying and against the mischiefs of ill-considered law making. Charles F. Wingate writes of "The Unsanitary Homes of the Rich," and there is a full discussion of "Business and Property," by President Galusha Anderson and Thaddeus B. Wakeman. Published 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

FOR years Dr. F. B. Brewer made his visits as regularly as the recurring seasons, has outlived all other specialities, and given unquestionable proof, to the satisfaction of both ages, of the efficacy of his remedies. He is skillful and reliable. "His visits do not interfere with the regular practice of the local profession, being confined to a special class of patients, both in and out of the city, which they gladly surrender to those who, by constant study and long practice, are more eminently qualified to treat them with skill and success. We congratulate this class of sufferers on the opportunity thus offered, here at their homes, of being treated from time to time, by a physician who not only can thoroughly understand their peculiar case, but knows the best remedies to be applied to cure them. And we unhesitatingly recommend the afflicted to avail themselves of the skill of Dr. F. B. Brewer, confident that from him they will obtain the advice and treatment they so need."

On Saturday, August 4th, Dr. Brewer will be at the Bond House in Niles, free of charge.

For His Brother's Sake.

George W. Symonds in Detroit Free Press. "The governor pardoned John Brisben, a penitentiary convict, to-day. He was sent up from Bourbon for fifteen years for forgery, and had ten years more to serve. Our readers are familiar with the history of this case, and the humane action of his excellency will be generally commended.—(Frankfort (Ky.) Freeman.)

Tread this little paragraph and my mind went back six years. I knew John Brisben, and I know his brother, Joseph. I was familiar with the details of the action that placed John Brisben in a felon's cell, and now when the sad affair is brought back to mind, I can't help but feel that, for never before have I met, in prose or poetry, in real life or in romance, a greater hero than plain, matter-of-fact John Brisben.

The Brisbens came of good stock. I think the great-grandfather of my hero emigrated to Kentucky when Kenton's station, between the present city of Maysville and the historic old town of Washington, was the principal settlement in the "dark and bloody" days. He came from upper Pennsylvania, and located about five miles from the Ohio river, on Limestone creek. He was an industrious, strong-limbed, lion-hearted old fellow, and the best of his surroundings were of the most comfortable description. One of his sons, Edwin Brisben, once represented Kentucky in the Federal congress. I think he was the grandfather of John and Joseph Brisben. Their father's name was Samuel, and he died when they were little children, leaving his widow an excellent blue-glass farmer and a snug little fortune in stocks, bonds and mortgages.

The widow remained a widow under her death. Mrs. Samuel Brisben was a good woman, and she idolized her twin boys. Like most twins, the brothers resembled each other in a striking manner, and even in their acquaintances could not tell them apart. But although the physical resemblance was so strong there was great dissimilarity in the disposition of the two boys. Joseph Brisben was surly and morose, sometimes cunning and revengeful. He was withal a dreamer and an enthusiast; a man well learned in books, a brilliant talker when he chose to be sociable (which was seldom), a splendid horseman, and a most excellent shot. John Brisben, on the contrary, was cheerful and bright, honorable and dignified. He was a man of high moral principle, intensely practical and methodical, cared little for books, and although he read but little, was a splendid companion. He was a poor horseman, and he did not like to ever shoot a gun in his life. He saw nothing of the poetry of life, and as for sport, he enjoyed himself only when hard at work. He loved his brother, and when they were boys together suffered punishment and reprimand, and when they were men together, they were together in the same way.

John, on the contrary, never demonstrative, took the great affliction with his customary coolness. He said but little and shed no tears. The property left to the boys was considerable. The division was made in 1850, and the trustees met and made settlement. There was the blue-glass farm valued at $50,000, and $100,000 in well-invested securities which could be turned into money. Joseph demanded a division. "You can take the farm, Jack," he said. "I was never cut out for a farmer. Give me $75,000 in money for my share."

So this sort of a division was made. John continued on at the homestead, working in his plain, methodical way, and slowly adding to his share of the money he had raised out of the profits of the farm. Joseph, with his newly-acquired wealth, set up an establishment at the nearest town and began a life of pleasure of the grosser sort. His brother gave him no aid, and he had to live on his own. Joseph spent his money with great prodigality, and before he knew it he was a beggar. In the meantime John's $25,000 had nearly doubled itself. One day Joseph came to him with a full confession of his pecuniary troubles. "Jack," he said, "I am not only a beggar, but I am heavily in debt. Help me out like a good fellow, and I will set down from this time on my sober earnest. With my capacity for business I can soon make money enough to repay you. I have sown my wild oats, and with a little help I can soon recover all that I have squandered so foolishly."

For an answer John Brisben placed his name to an order for the $20,000 he had earned so laboriously. "Will that be enough, Jodie?" he asked. "I have heard much more money which you can have if it is necessary." "This will be sufficient, old fellow," was the reply. "In two years I will pay it back."

When he went back to town, drew his money, paid his debts, sold some of his horses and discharged some of his servants. Twenty thousand dollars was left out of the loan. "He invested this in business, and he has managed to have really reformed. John was encouraged to say: "Jodie will come out all right. He is smarter than I, and in five years will be worth more money than I could make in a lifetime."

In less than three years Joseph Brisben's affairs were in the hands of his creditors, and a sheriff's officer closed out his business. Again he turned to his brother for help and sympathy. "I own that I managed a trifle carelessly," he said by way of explanation. "Experience is a dear teacher, and the lesson I have learned I shall never forget. If you come to my assistance now I can soon recover myself."

Once more John Brisben placed his name to a check payable to the order of his brother, and Joseph entered into business again. In two years he was a bankrupt. "I shall never succeed in business, Jack," he said. "Help me out of this trouble and I will live with you on the farm. I shall succeed as a farmer."

Jack all this time had been hearing of his brother's debts, but he made no complaint, uttered no reproach. He said: "I am glad you are coming back to the farm, Jodie. You need no work, and we will be very happy together."

So Joseph took up his residence at the farm, and remembering his brother's words, devoted his time principally to his business, and doing nothing but his brother's help and sympathy. "I own that I managed a trifle carelessly," he said by way of explanation. "Experience is a dear teacher, and the lesson I have learned I shall never forget. If you come to my assistance now I can soon recover myself."

bank behind the heavy clouds of despair. "Yes, Jodie, I am glad, and I wish you long years of happiness." He turned away and staggered, rather than walked, to his own room. He thought of the old man's deep sobbing groan struggled to his lips, and the moonbeams struggling through the window fell full upon his face, and surprised two great tears stealing down his cheeks. He had never known any such evidence of weakness and sorrow, and when the morrow came, no one looking into his calm, serene eyes would have guessed how hard was the battle that had been fought and won. They were married, and the man rejected by the bride and supplanted by the groom was the first to congratulate the newly-married pair. A vacant house on the farm of fifteen acres was paid for the furnishing. "Hereafter, Jodie," he said, "I will divide the profits of the farm. I don't need a cent, and you shall have the larger share."

Ten years passed away, and John Brisben, an old man before his time, still worked from dawn till dark that he might have a good dinner and keep in comfort the large family which the years had drawn around him. It had been necessary to mortgage the old homestead, to raise money to pay the mortgage, and for a number of years he had labored heavily and had invariably lost.

One day—it was in the summer of 1877—a forged check was presented at the bank of the village of New River by Joseph Brisben, and the money for which it called was unhesitatingly paid over to him. He was under the influence of liquor at the time, and he had just received a check for $2,500, which was high stakes, which was in progress. The check was for $2,500, I think. Before daylight the next morning Joseph Brisben had lost every dollar of it. To the bank he went, and he became drunk, and while in this condition an officer arrived and apprehended him for forgery and uttering a forged check. The prisoner was confined in jail, and word of his disgrace was sent to John Brisben. The messenger, however, and a mist came over his eyes. He groaned audibly, and but for a strong effort of the will would have fallen to the floor, so weakened was he by the shock.

"She must not know it," he said to himself, and he made instant preparations to visit his brother. When he reached the jail he was admitted to the cell of the prisoner, and the two brothers remained together for several hours. What passed during the interview will never be known. When John Brisben emerged from the jail he went straight to the office of the sheriff, and issued the warrant for the apprehension of Joseph Brisben. "Squire," he said, in his slow, hesitating way, "you have made a mistake. It is not Joseph Brisben, but John Brisben, the magistrate, who had a high regard for his visitor."

"You have caused the arrest of an innocent man," began the magistrate. "But—begin the order for your brother's instant release. He is innocent of the intent to do wrong. I am the guilty man. I forged the name of Charles Ellison to the check which he uttered. He did not know that it was a forgery."

"You!" cried the astonished magistrate. "You a forger—impossible!" "Nothing is impossible in these days," said the white-haired old man, sternly. "I alone am guilty. My brother is innocent."

So stoutly did he aver that he was the forger that the magistrate reluctantly issued a warrant for his arrest, and at the same time wrote a check to the jailer for the release of Joseph Brisben. "My constable will be in soon," said the magistrate, but the old hero picked up his hat and went. "I will not trouble him," he said; "I will execute both papers." And he did. Handing the jailer both papers, he explained their meaning thus: "They have made a mistake. I am upon me to your prisoner. My brother is innocent."

Accordingly, Joseph Brisben was released and returned to the farm. John Brisben remained a prisoner. When the extraordinary affair became known, several prominent citizens offered to go to the accused man's bond, but he would not accept their kind offers. At the trial he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary. Joseph came to see him before he was removed to Frankfort, but their interview was a private one.

John Brisben remained at the farm, but he was a changed man. From the day of his release from jail down to the time of his death, he was never known to touch a card, and a drop of liquor never entered his system. He died, and his confession, duly sworn to before a justice of the peace, was made public after his burial. In substance it was this: That he was guilty of the forgery for which his heroic brother was sentenced to a long imprisonment. "It was my brothers' wish, not mine," reads the document. "He insisted that he who had no ties of blood or marriage could better suffer the punishment and the disgrace than I who had dependent upon me a large family."

Noble John Brisben! Of such stuff are heroes made. ONE OF THE GREATEST OF SPECULATORS. P. D. Armour is of sturdy Scotch Presbyterian stock. He was born in New York, on a farm among the hills. It was the highest ambition of his boyhood days to earn money enough to buy the farm adjoining his father's. When the gold fever broke out, he was still a mere stripling; but, full of youthful enthusiasm, he started for California, driving a wagon across the plains and mountains. He remained there three or four years, and in the time he saved a few thousand dollars. He had cash enough to buy that farm and settle down. He had no sooner reached home than he experienced a sudden reverse of fortune. The house he had bought was narrow, cramped, and dull. The house appeared mean and dingy. He only remained on the farm two or three days, and then took himself to Cincinnati, where he drifted to Milwaukee, and thence to the west where he sold a great lot of pork at $40 a barrel, and bought it in again at $18 to $19, realizing a profit of about thirty cents per barrel. He was then the wealthiest man in Chicago, being rated by those who know something of his business at $25,000,000 or $30,000,000. His transactions were so large that he had to employ 5,000 and 6,000 men, and on his pay rolls are about fifty men who receive salaries of $5,000 and over. He is not yet 55 years of age. DOINGS OF AMATEUR STAGELINGS. New York Times London Letter. There is a rush for the stage among persons who suddenly find themselves rich. They have been in the market, and the newest and prettiest amateur who was to "rival Mrs. Langtry," is earning $10 a week at Drury Lane. This is her first engagement. Edgar Degas, the French painter, has been a week, and she was to travel with a provincial company. Mrs. Bernard-Bere is little better than a novice, though she has tasted the bitters of management of the Globe, a leading London journal, and she is a charming daughter of the great people of the day, publishes the fact that the horses of Mr. Bernard-Bere, when she was returning from the meet of the Four-in-hand, she was riding a horse named "Belmont." She jumped out, was not much hurt, and played at the Haymarket theatre in the evening "with her foot in an iron splint." Mr. Irving may well have something to say about amateurs invading the professional stage. Here are three of them: Mrs. Langtry comes home from America with upward of $20,000; Mrs. Alcock has stepped straight to $500 a year, and Mrs. Bernard-Bere drives her own coach and four at the meet of the Four-in-hand club.

MAKING VILLAGES BEAUTIFUL. New York Sun. In order to encourage and create a desire to beautify the surroundings of the village of New River, the Village Improvement association made a distribution of awards on Tuesday evening in the public school hall to residents who had presented the neatest and most attractive lawns during the past year. This plan is being widely adopted, and in consequence, all along the lines of the railroads leading from the city gardens are carefully cultivated, fences and buildings are kept well painted, and sidewalks are freed from obstacles and shaded with rows of elms and maples. Even the surroundings of many of the railroad depots are brightened by artistically arranged flower beds.

A SHARP CONTRAST. Glasgow West of Scotland. One cannot but wonder whether, having regard to the tendency to simplicity in the higher civilizations, the time will ever come when the Russians, as now, are more civilized, or less influenced by gorgonness either of ritual or of trappings in the official recognition of those whom they choose to rule over them. No contrast can be conceived between the Russian, in his gay surroundings of the president of the United States, whose hand can be shaken at any time by almost any citizen, and the inaccessible eminence of the czar, worshipped by a people that have been many years reined from slavery.

A GROWING TOWN. St. Paul Pioneer Press. "What is the population of La Beau, D. T., now?" we asked. "Well, the first lumber was received two weeks ago last Sunday. Now there are six general stores, one dry goods store, one hardware store, five saloons, one meat market, three lumber yards, one bank, one newspaper office, one telegraph office, a post office, a school, and 80 lock boxes, the Yale pattern, in a building 20x30, two stories high, two hotels, and some other structures. Since then there has been started another bank, a fifty-room hotel, a hardware store, a dry goods house 30x50, and a Presbyterian church."

IN HIS OWN DEFENSE. Detroit Free Press. The next man out was a colored person named Judah Small. He had a limp, dressed in ancient style, and carried in his hand with utmost care an umbrella, with three broken ribs, a fractured handle, and 155 cents in the cotton covering. He did not want to be addressed, but depositing his hat on one side and his umbrella on the other he began:

"Mr. Small, do you appear here as your own counsel?" asked the court. "Yes, sah, an' I enters de plea of not guilty, with three broken ribs, a fractured handle, and 155 cents in the cotton covering. He did not want to be addressed, but depositing his hat on one side and his umbrella on the other he began:

TRUE Temperance. Is not signing a pledge or taking a solemn oath that cannot be kept, because of the non-removal of the cause—liquor. The temperance man tempts to kill the desire for those dreadful artificial stimulants that carry so many bright intellects to premature graves, and desolation, strife and unhappiness into so many families.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured. "AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years." DARTMOUTH, Ia., March 2, 1882. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from my bed, and I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and in a few days I was able to get up. I tried several remedies without much success, until I used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with it since. I will recommend it to all who are afflicted with this disease. I have sold large quantities of your Sarsaparilla, and it will retain its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public." E. F. HARRIS, River St., Backland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had used three bottles I felt well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for a month, and I feel as well as I ever did. I will recommend your Sarsaparilla to the greatest blood medicine in the world." JAMES MAYNARD, 100 West 31st St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AMERICAN POETRY. Happy rhymes are not poetry. Emerson is full of them, jerky, pithy. It seems he will hardly go down as a poet. His temperament was that of a verse, City philosophy, his wisdom. He indulged in it. A poet is a poet because he can't help it. Occasionally poets are half poets. Feeling fuses style. Continuity is bred of it, a connected note, a persistent cadence and an air; the feeling one is the true tribe. We have had no passion in poetry. Milton's words are its text, "Simple, Sensuous, Passionate." It seems if they could be repeated too often. Feeling is the true text of art; without it all the talent in the world is empty. Have we ever been so sensible or so passionate with the mood of the poet? We have never had the passion of Byron, the sensuousness of Keats? Has our poetry any exclamation? Not so much as in these sonnets—they are from the depths. It is a very slender thread with no uniform cadence. "Fine phrensy" has not crossed the Atlantic.

AYER'S Ague Cure contains an antidote for all malarial disorders which, so far as known, is used in no other remedy. It contains no Quinine, nor any mineral or detestable substance, which, in many cases, produces no injurious effect upon the constitution, but leaves the system as healthy as it was before the attack.

WE WARRANT AYER'S AGUE CURE to cure every case of Fever and Ague, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Bilious Fever, and Liver Complaint caused by malaria. In case of failure, after due trial, dealers are authorized, by our circular dated July 1st, 1882, to refund the money.
