the year one thousand eight hundred and eightyfour.

Present, ALEXANDER B. LEEDS, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Domandigo Spennetta, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of R. M. Shaffer, Executor of the last will of said deceased, praying that he may be anthorized, empowered and licensed to sell the real estate of said deceased as in the said petition described.

Thercupon it is ordered, that Monday, the twenty-eighth day of April next, at ten o'clock in the foreuoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden in the Probate office, in the village of Berrien Springs, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Buchanan Record, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ATHLOPHOROS operates on the blood, muscles, and joints; and dissolving the acids that cause Rheumatism, removes them from the well. , ATHLOPHOROS is pronounced by all who have tried it an infallible specific for these obstinate and painful diseases. Read the testimony of one of the sufferers. David Little, Sumner, Benner Co., Iowa, writes:

"I am past 77 years of age, have had the Rheumatism three years and eight months; lost on orbird of my weight; could not walk, but shuffled along on crutches; could not sleep; nerves shattered, no strength in my hands, wrists, knees or feet. But thanks be to God for your great discovery! The medicine arrived Saturday night. I took a dose Sunday morning, felt it all over me, and kept on with it. Monday morning I got up and dressed myself, and walked out into the kitchen without the aid of crutch or cane, and wished them all a happy New Year. I rest well nights, am gaining in strength, and once more enjoy life. Wish I could put ATHLOPHOROS in the hands of every sufferer from this terrible disease."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist. as you cannot get APHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

A PAYING FLIRTATION.

"No, Herbert, I can't do it. You will have to get out of the difficulty by yourself. It is useless my going to your father any more; he said the last time he would never again cripple himself by paying your debts. His mind is made up about it; and even if it wasn't I know he has not got the money. As for me, you know I have

"Then what on earth am I to do?" inquired the Hon. Herbert Farnham. "The Jews will do no more for me. I'm 'broke,' and that's the truth. They say there is a baronet working down at the Docks, glad of three shillings a day when he can get it. I suppose I shall come to that

The smile was but transient on died away soon, and she fell into profound thought. Presently she said very gravely, "There is your Aunt

"What of her?" inquired Hon. Herbert, looking up from his admirable, which he had been studying attentively, possibly wondering whether the hundred well-cut pairs that stood in his dressing room would be of any use or whether it might become necessary to have a sale of his personal belong

"Well—I know she is in England She wrote and told me so, in fact. And it has occurred to me, once or twice, to wonder who she will leave her money to."
"Has she no one?" inquired the Hon.

Herbert quickly.
"No one at all, I believe; absolutely no one. She was an only child, and with no near relatives, when she married your uncle George. That is how she came to be sole heiress to such an "Made out of sausages, wasn't it?"

"Oh, no; nothing worse than pickles and jam. I'd have forgiven her the source of her money, for, her father being dead when she married, it might have been forgotton; but I found it difficult to forgive her for being her-"What's the matter with her?"

asked the Hon. Herbert. "Well—" said Lady Chetwynd, hesitating a little, "she's—vulgar—and rather flighty. She never seemed to me good enough for George," "Why did he marry her, then?"

"Oh, as for that," answered lady Chetwynd, her color rising slightly, "I believe he married her for her money. I can imagine no other reason." "Ah!" said her son; "then she's been married twice for the same reason, I suppose?" "Yes," observed Lady Chetwynd, "that second marriage made me more angry with her than ever. Now, her second husband is dead, I really wish she would call herself Mrs. Rolleston again, instead of going about as the Princess Droguca."

"Never mind," said the Hon. Herbert; "as the Prince cleared out without squandering her money at cards I'll forgive him his sins and even speak respectfully of his memory. Now tell me where to find my Aunt Margaret, the Princess Droguca. Surely I must have inherited some of those fascinating powers you and Uncle George seemed to have possessed in common; I will try them on her. I will be humble, dutiful, the most exemplary of nephews. I will carry her prayer-book to church, and nurse her poodle. Most elderly ladies have some monomania or other. I will discover hers and feed it. You will hardly know me if you should see me at her

Lady Chetwynd smiled and sighed at once. "I have no idea what she is like now," she said, "It is a long time since I have seen her-many a long vear-never since George died, in fact. She was not pious then; perhaps she is now. You will find her at the Clairville at Seagate." • said the Hon. Herbert thoughtfully; "a queer place for an elderly lady. However, I dare say she knows no better. Give me a line of introduction of her, and I'll run down at once. and handed it to her son, who started off immediately. He was in such an exceedingly "tight place" just now that he would have gone a much longer journey, at equally short notice, if thereby he might discover an elderly aunt with money.

Seagate was looking glorious; and the gayety of the place of people, the freshness of the air, and the brilliant color of the sea and sky, made that solemn duty when he was discovine the Hon. Herbert feel very "young and the party taken to the station."

Some disnotest person, his eight-year oargain.

A writer, whose veracity, however, we dare not vouch for, gives the following as an actual statute recorded in the lady bulge, only that is horrid slang." the gayety of the place of people, old son had seated himself on the pathe freshness of the air, and the bril-rental stomach, and was engaged in delightful." He resolved to lunch at a restaurant, take a turn on the promenade and smoke a cigar on the pier before going to the Clairville. He fancied that he would then be refreshed, and so better able to enter thoroughly into the role of dutiful nephew which he proposed to play.

He lunched well, lit his cigar, and started in search of half an hour's recreation. He did not go far before he found what he was in search of; he met with a lady so surprising to look at that the mere sight of her recreated him. He proceeded to stare steadily at her and to take note of all her "points" carefully. She was a little creature, well formed with pretty feet and hands; the feet clad in wonderous high-heeled boots that were very high, but did not meet at all in front; the lacing displayed crimson openworked stockings. The little figure, wasp-waisted, was dressed in the most extravagant of French checks-the sort of custom devised by the Parisian intellect for English women who are "fond of dress." A mass of blonded and frizzed hair encircling a small face which was admirably well painted; only the usual mistake was made—the thing was overdone, and thus the possibility of deception destroyed. The lady's hat and parasol each deserve a page of description, they were so surprising. The whole thing astonished and delighted the Hon. Herbert This young gentleman had a good deal of the "knight of the pavement" in him; if a pretty girl gave him a glance of encouragement he was capable of walking after her quite a mile in the hope of adventure. The lady he now saw before him had "encouragement" writ in large characters all over her, thanks to her custome, and her plaintive blue eyes repeated the word. She stood quite alone, by the rail at the went onto it. The Hon. Herbert followed her, passed and repassed her. At the end of the pier there were some sheltered, secluded seats. The lady walked onto these slowly—for no one could walk fast in such boots as hers-chose one with much deliberation, sat down and straightway dropped her parasol. Of course Herbert was at hand to pick it up. Then he sat down by her and for half an hour they looked at the blue sea and talked. She amused him very much. She never smlled, but said the most spicy and piquant things in a small, high-pitched voice, looking straight at him the while. Herbert knew very well how to look admiration, and he found that she understood the look perfectly, but also that she appreciated a little more open flattery. This made it very plain sailing and Herbert found himself much less bored than usual during a flirtation. The little lady being so excessively pronounced it was difficult to feel bored until one had seen all the extravagances.

edge of the sea walk, looking at the passers-by. She soon became as much interested in Herbert as he was in her.

She slowly walked toward the pier and

At last he rose. "I must go," he said: "it is hard, but I must. Do vou come on the pier in the evening?" "Yes," she answered immediately: "about 10 o'clock."

"Then I shall stay in Seagate till tomorrow," said Herbert, gallantly, and left her. Then, assuming a business-like manner, he walked off to the Clairville, Lady Chetwynd's handsome face; it | meditating all the way on the mode in which he should address his aunt. After turning the matter over and over in his mind he resolved to trust to the inspiration of the moment, and to fol-low her lead very carefully till he

> On his way a hired carriage passed him; in it sat the little lady whom he fully intended to meet on the pier tonight. She gave him a glance from under her wonderful parasol; such a look—seducive, full of invitation. "I believe she is as old as the hills," reflected Herbert; "but she is marvellously made up and very funny. What a catastrophy if she should live at the Clairville! He arrived at the hotel—a fine house standing in pretty grounds, and tenanted principally by people who lived on pension; people who seemed to have no houses of their own anywhere; who were exceedingly sociable and very merry. On the broad terrace upon which the front door opened a number of people were talking and laughing; the hour of afternoon tea had brought them to the house. In the midst of a small crowd of gentlemen stood the little lady: evidently she was a favorite. Herbert quickly passed the group, looking the other way the while. He entered the hall, and, finding a waiter, asked for the Princess Droguca. He was shown into a small drawing room. Two minutes later the little lady came in and looked at him with some surprise. "You have asked for me?"

she said; "you know my name!"
The awful truth flashed upon him. For one wild moment he thought of sinking his identity-of escaping without telling her who he was. But he had not time to think it out-he was confused, stammered something-and then, in despair, handed her his mother's note She opened it deliberately, read it at a glance, and threw it carelessly on a table. He fancied his doom was sealed; he took up his hat and prepared to go. But he felt he owed it to himself to apologize; he did so profusely. She interrupted him with her slight shrill voice, looking straight at him with those plaintive blue eyes, which were so full of candid admiration. "What are you apologizing so much for?" she said. It is the first compliment your family has ever paid me! Come into the other room; I must have some tea. She put her hand on his arm and led him away. For the first time in his life Herbert was at loss what to do. Rut at last he succeeded in taking her cue; it seemed funny to flirt with one's aunt, but he did it. And she paid his debts. Probably she will leave him her money .- London World.

Excusable.

A gentleman in Richmond, Virginia. had a servant named Joe. One morning he lay in bed till nine o'clock, but no Joe and no fire. The impossibility of shaving with water thirty degrees below freezing point brought imprecations on the tardy domestic's head, when the door opened, and Aunt Polly leisurely began to light the fire. "Where in thunder" (the historian is nothing if he is not accurate) "is that

"Now, Marse Tray, you must 'cuse

At three o'clock Thursday morning lay sleeping the sleep of the just in a Bowery gutter at Grand street, and for fear that he might be carried off by some dishonest person, his eight-yearWays of Wooing.

Sir Arthur Helps gave it as his belief that since the world was created no two couples ever made love after the same fashion. And since "it takes all sorts of folks to make the world,' they may be fairly supposed to do their courting in all sorts of ways. For instance, the courting of the aboriginal of Australia consisted simply in knocking the woman of his preference down with a club and carrying her off. This form of wooing was as efficacious as brief, and was certainly as commendable on the score of economy, since it subjected neither party to the expense of lights, fires, oyster suppers, ice cream, elaborate dresses, flowers, etc., which are the usual concomitants of civilized love-making. But the method of the Australian has been tried by other than the dusky savages. Some curious courting customs prevail in Africa. In one tribe of Eastern Africa it is regarded as the ne plus ultra of gallantry for the lover to pa-rade before the hut of his inamorata astride of a huge boar. Mungo Park tells of a tribe in the interior where flows along very simply. When in Berlin he occupies a comparatively custom compels a woman to carry a calabash of water to the man who has expressed a preference for her. Seated on a mat before his door he washes his hands in the vessel, and then the woman drinks the water as a token of her affection. Less repulsive was the act of the lover among the ancient Persians, who burned his hand or cheek to prove his devotion and then showed it to his lady love. If she was "willin'" she bound the injured part with a silken scarf; but if obdurate she sent the man to the physician for healing-salve.

Among the Moravians it was the custom for the ministers to select wives for the men of his generation. If a "sister" had any objection to the "brother" selected for her life partner she was permitted to state it, but it was generally overruled by the priest's eloquence Strange to say, the historian tells us that these marriages were generally

In Greenland the services of the pastor of his flock are also called in. A man who has made up his mind that his worldly circumstances warrant him in indulging in what has been called "the abstract desire of every man to furnish board and lodging to some young lady," and has decided which young lady ne wishes to be taxed for, calls on the reverend father, and states the case. The inquiry is made whether the girl knows of the suit, to which the man replies that he has made some preliminary love-making, which was not very kindly received, but adds: "Thou knowest the ways of mankind." In Greenland, be it remarked, it is an accepted fact in social philosophy that a woman's no means yes. The priest calls upon the young woman and pleads the case of her lover, assuring her that he is a good man: that he catches many seals, etc. It is the custom for the woman to reject all proposals at first, but to yield at last an unwilling assent. If the priest thinks she is too obstinate he generally remarks: "Ah, well, it's no matter; I can easily find another woman who will have such a good provider," and turns to leave, which action brings the stubborn maiden to terms at once. In St. Petersburg, Russia, a custom prevailed for many years—though declined greatly in importance, it has not gone wholly out of use—which was designed to stimulate laggards in courtship. Whitsunday there was held in the Summer Garden, one of the city parks, a fair of all the damsels of the city who wanted husbands. Dressed in their best, with all the ornaments at command, and holding silver spoons or other ware in their hands to show they were not wholly portionless, they stood in rows under the trees, attended by parents or guardians to insure propriety of behavior, to facilitate matrimonial bargains. The men in search of wives strolled about scrutinizing all the candidates at leisure. When a man saw one that pleased him he usually introduced himself to her cusiodians, and if his statement of family, business, and prospects was satisfactory he was made acquainted with the young woman and invited to her residence After this the nuptial ceremony followed as speedily as the would-be bridegroom desired. We find a custom precisely like this still in existence in a district in the south of Ireland. There it is known as "shrafting," the name being derived from Shrove Tuesday, the day on which it is held. On that day all the marriageable young people of both sexes are marshaled on the village green by the parents, the girls in all the glory of Sunday gowns and gay ribbons, as lovely as fresh-blown roses, evidently enjoying their blushes, and the young men, also in their best attire, looking as foolish as only the male human can look on exhibition. The two sexes are stationed in line apart from each other, and the parents pass between to youchsafe proposals or to receive them, and to haggle over marriage portions. The preferences of the young people are fully understood by the elders, and commendable effort is made to gratify them, the main object of the parents being to secure as good a set-out as possible for the young couples.

A California miner, having amassed quite a fortune, was returning by ship to New York to revisit old friends and to find him a wife. A young woman on board the ship, serving in the capacity of nursery governess to the famly of a merchant on board, pleased him much by her neat and modest appearance. He therefore introduced himself one day, and broke the ice of his purpose with one reckless plunge: "Madam, my name is ——; my parents and family reside in New Hampshire; I have property amounting to $200,000, and expect to engage in business in —. I am a perfectly temperate man, and can give you good reference to testify of my general upright character. I am unmarried and want a wife. Will you marry me?" The lady took in the character of her suitor at once. "Thank you," said she, "I will;" and on landing they were forthwith mar-The Rev. Richard Hooker had no time to devote to courtship, and therefore deputed his landlady, Mrs. Churchman to find him a wife. She selected her daughter Joan, but the unfortunate divine no doubt often quoted in the recesses of his soul, in after years, the old saying: "Marry in haste to repent at leisure." For Joan proved a terrible shrew, and led the poor minister a wretched life of it. Courting by proxy is a dangerous thing, whether a plausible old lady or a bosom friend is employed to do it. So the Saxon King Edgar found it when he sent his friend Athelstane to report on the charms of a lady called the most beautiful in the Kingdom, and to offer her the office of Queen should she prove to be as lovely as reported. But Athelstane fell in love with her himself, and wooed and married her, and then told the King she was not beautiful at all, only be-Mr. Holcomb, a citizen of Brooklyn | ing rich. the privilege that she has taken such poor advantage of: "Albeit, as often as leape yearre doth occure, the womanne holdeth prerogative over the manne in matters of courtship, love and matrimonie: so that when the lady proposeth it shall not be lawful for the manne to say her nae, but he shall entertain her proposal in all gude courtesie." However, whether this law was ever placed on record or not, the practice of female proposals was never adopted, and seems never to have been more than a tradition. There have been instances, of course, of a woman who dared, but not many, as the risk of a refusal was too serious a one to run. How the Princess Louise of Savoy ever recovered from her humiliation after having offered herself to Charles, Duke of Bourbon, only to receive a grave but positive refusal, few women can understand. Ladies, however, are permitted to assist a bashful wooer.

The window of his study on the ground-floor looks out upon that point in Unter den Linden where Ranch's statue of Frederick the Great stands. Ordinarily the Emperor rises between six and seven o'clock in the morning. He dresses at once completely for the day; the convenience of dressing-gown and slippers is unknown to him. The room to which, after a slight breakfast, he goes for work is rather plainly furnished. There is a managany writing table covered with writing materials of every kind, packages of letters, small presents from members of the family, and mementos of battles in the form of paper-weights. Smoking implements fail, for the Emperor is no friend of tobacco. On a long and broad table near by lie books, maps, bundles of documents, and papers of various kinds. The Emperor sits at his work on an ordinary chair covered with leather, and receives personally all communications, opens them himself, writes his decision on the margin, and hands them to his secretary to be disposed of. One of his peculiarities is his economy in the use of paper and envelopes. In Versailles one evening he announced a new victory of th Germans to the Chancellor on a piece of paper which had been torn from a letter. In Berlin the envelopes which reach him with reports from the Foreign Office addressed, "To His Majesty the Emperor," go back with the "to" erased and "from" substituted, so that the envelopes reads, "From His Majesty the Emperor," with "To the Chancel-lor" written beneath. The Emperor's extraordinary capacity for work makes it possible for him to dispose, as a rule, or the anairs with office, or to direct their disposition his own way.—Harper's Magazine for May.

Death's Shafts.

Heart Disease is Causing Them to Fly Thick and Fast. Illustrative Instances of Daily Telegraphic Dispatches.

From the Cleveland Herald. New York:-The editor of the World was notified by Trescott that Gen. Hurlburt, late United States Minister to Peru, died suddenly of disease of the heart, at Lima. Sandusky, O.: Peter Zerbe, aged 22, was found dead in bed this morning; he retired at ten o'clock last night apparently in perfect health. The wife of Peter Fraze, of Chippewa, died very suddenly last night. She was in apparent good health and ate a hearty supper before retiring. Kenton, O.: A man named Brown, while unloading ties at the C. & A. railroad yesterday, suddenly dropped dead. Mount Vernon, O.: Mrs. John Crowl dropped dead this morning in Tudor's grocery; heart disease the cause of her sudden demise. Falmouth, Ky.: Mr. W. W. Williams, a farmer living near here, fell dead at his plow. He was fifty years of age; heart disease was the cause. Mr. Niece, of Kinsman, Ohio, came in the house from doing chores, lay down on a lounge, and immediately expired; it is supposed from heart disease. Erie, Pa.: A farmer named John Hersky, living near here, dropped dead this morning as he arose from the breakfast table. Rev. L. Hamilton, pastor of the Independent church, Oakland, Cal., died suddenly yesterday morning in the pulpit while delivering his discourse. Intense excitement has been caused by the article headed "Sudden Deaths," in last Saturday's issue. Probably there never was an article published in our columns that has awakened the interest and set even the most indifferent person to thinking as the one mentioned, for it is a matter of vital importance, not only to those suf-fering with some form of liver, kidney or stomach trouble, but to those appar ently in perfect health, as while the former are in great danger, the latter are very liable, as it often attacks them without the slightest premonition. Those of our readers who neglected giving the article careful reading should not fail to read it again. The terrible facts are before us, and are proven in every day's paper, that the people are dying rapidly and suddenly with heart lisease, and it goes without saying that physicians as well as the people throughout the country are more seriously alarmed concerning this disease than that of any other, and well it might be dreaded, for who is there that may not be affected at any moment, without previous knowledge? Consequently the slightest indications we have at any time that our system is not in perfect condition should be a solemn warning to prompt us at once to seek that which will not only cure but prevent the occurrence of this terrible complaint. Our interest has become greatly awakened on this subject, because it is a sorrowful thought to know that so many are afflicted with this disease, and it should be brought out vividly before the people. We have taken the trouble of again interviewing Mr. White and Mr. Austin personally for our benefit as well as others in reference to their remarkable statements and to satisfy ourselves whether our first report had not, to some extent. been exaggerated regarding their sickness, but on the contrary we found that they were even in a more critical condition than had been stated, and they most emphatically declared that the remedy known as Von Tagan's Alaxine cured them. Now reliable testimony published of this character, from two such gentlemen of candor and veracity as these, must, it seems to us, convince the most prejudiced that Von Tagan's Alaxine has great remedial virtue and power, and that it will do all that is claimed for it. Therefore we ask your serious consideration when we advise the immediate use of the great German remedy, Alaxine for the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart affections. We make this broad assertion based upon the best evidences of its curative properties, that we believe within the space of but a few months Von Tagan's Alaxine will be adopted and considered by every family in the land as the best remedy science has yet originated, both for old and young, to keep the system in health, the people having always needed such a remedy. That remedy they now have. The following is important in-

Patients afflicted with complaints mentioned on the label of each bottle of the remedy are requested to use it in teaspoonful doses three times daily before eating, and occasionally just before retiring, and like all sterling remedies, it should be given a systematic and protracted trial if not at once remedial. We feel that this great remedy will save many of our readers money, sickness, perhaps life, by preperfectly cooking joints of pork, and all articles made with pork, can the deventing the occurrence of heart disease and by the cure of all diseases for which it is recommended. Therefore we urge you to procure a bottle of Alaxine at once, on the guarantee every druggist gives as authorized by the proprietors, until further notice that you may taste and see for yourselves, without money and without price, if you do not receive positive benefit. Daniel Weston is special agent for this important remedy. The Democratic reform house of I tell you three years experience has taught me that the only way to deal with railroads successfully is to be just as unscrupulous, as unpleasant, and as chilly as they frequently are. They are very anxious to get your favors in the way of freight, but you just ask them for a favor in the way of a pass and see how quick they'll turn you the cold shoulder. I've seen that tried. About a year ago a friend of mine, who had been shipping eight cr nine thousand dollars worth of freight they have lived together and for years a year over a certain road, wanted a acknowledged themselves in public as man and wife. Hence he grants An-pass to go to Buffalo. After a lot of red tape performance the agent came back with the answer that the management couldn't grant him a pass; it was against the rules. "All right." said my friend, "I know you're not to blame; but you just tell the management of this road, for me, to go to the devil," and he withdrew his patronage. It wasn't long before he got word that he could have the pass to Buffalo or anything else he wanted if he would only come back with his freight.-Commercial Traveler.

Secretary Lincoln, in a brief letter to Hon. Leonard Swett announces that he is not a candidate for either President or Vice-Paesident and wants no Lincoln clubs for him. The people are going to select their own candidates this year, and strange as it may seem will not ask Mr. Lincoln about putting his name on the ticket.

At the District Convention held in Kalamazoo yesterday, Dr. Josiah Andrews, of Paw Paw, and C. H. Reed, of Cassopolis were chosen to represent June. Both are understood to be Blaine men. The alternates are Gen. W. L. Stoughton, of Sturgis and W. I. Babcock, of Niles, also Blaine men, which makes the fourth district pretty solid for Blaine.

· While the other candidates are putting in their time capturing primaries and getting up large and small-sized booms, President Arthur goes steadily along carrying out the details of a most satisfactory administration, as if there was no such chance as a re-election possible. It is for such men the people are clamoring loudly for high offices. He may not be re-elected, but his successor will hardly improve on his work.

It is becoming painfully evident that gold coin and certificates are to form a part of our circulating medium but a short time longer. THE RICHARDS-ROUGH CASE. Following is the decision of the Su preme Court in the above case, which has created considerable interest in this place. The decision was rendered by Judge Sherwood, the other justices The plaintiff brings his action on the case for injuries received while in the employ of defendants, using machinery which he alleges was unsafe. The defendants are partners, and for many years have been largely engaged in carrying on the business of manufacturing wagons at Buchanan in this state. They are not mechanics. Their business in the shops, at the time the accident complained of occurred, was under the general management of M.S. Mead, against whose competency for the position nothing appears in this record. He had the general superintendence of the entire business at the works, and George McNeil had the oversight and the immediate charge of the blacksmith shops in which the injury to plaintiff occurred, and nothing s alleged against his competency and fitness for his position. Various machines for sundry and divers purposes, all connected with the plaintiff's business, however, were run and operated in this shop, and quite a large number of men were employed therein for that purpose. The motive power used for propelling the machinery was steam, and there is no complaint but that this was properly managed. For 14 months before the accident occurred the plaintiff, who was then 23 years of age, had been working in the blacksmith shop for the defendants, cutting iron and punching holes in iron plates with the punching-machine, known as the Long & Alstarter power press, and by which he claims to have been injured. The machine had been in use in the shop as long as the plaintiff had been there, and in general use in such business establishments long before plaintiff used it, and he used it for two hours immediately preceding the accident, and when in the shop used it a quarter of the whole time he was employed. The die and punch were both new. The punch had been set twice. Mr. McNeil set it both times, and the plaintiff was present.

In describing the accident, the plaintiff says: "I always sat right in front of the machine. I only have a recollection I was punching these plates, and placed one on the gauge out here (describing the model before him), setting in front of the machine, and swung it in, and heard the crash; *

* * that is all I know about it. I cannot describe the crash even. * *

* I know I did not become uncon-er I went over or not. I think I threw scious.

* * * I don't know wheth-

my head back. I don't hardly think it threw me from my feet." One piece of steel went into his eye, another into his cheek, and another into his forehead. The plaintiff further testified that he had no thought of danger at all, in connecting with punching the piece of iron, when the injury occurred. Plaintiff further stated he could use the machine and punch as well as Mr. McNeil could; that he understood how to use the machine, and notice nothing wrong in the way the the fourth congressional district in the | die was set; noticed the working of national convention at Chicago in the punch; saw nothing wrong with it; never knew there was any defect about the machine or its working; never had any accident with the machine before; never saw any indication of an accident; and that the die was always held firm, so far as he could discover. None of the witnesses testify that the machinery used was more dangerous or unsafe than others of that kind, and the only ground upon which the plaintiff seeks to recover is that the defendants were negligent in using Long & Alstater's set-screw method in fastening and hold the die; that to use it was negligence. The cause was tried before jury, and, under the rul-

> the plaintiff obtained a verdict for $4,-383.33. Defendants appeal. It is unnecessary, under the previous rulings of this court, to discuss this case at length, or to examine separately each of the 61 assignments of error. But three questions of importance are necessarily involved. (1) Was the plaintiff injured by the machine of the defendant? (2) Was the defendant degligent in furnishing the plaintiff with proper and reasonably safe machinery to use? (3) If they were, was ings and charge of the circuit court this fact known to plaintiff, and, if it was, did he continue to use the same without protest or objection? It may be said the verdict has settled the first question in favor of plaintiff, and this is true if it was based upon testimony properly admitted under a charge properly given by the circuit judge. We shall not, however, enter upon an examination of the record upon this point in our discussion of the case, but leave it as the jury has

Upon the second point, it is claimed that the machinery was not good sound, and well made; neither does it appear from the record that the plaintiff ever made any objection to its use, or notified defendents that it was in any respect improper or dangerous for the purposes for which it was used, or anything of the kind. He was in the employ of a company, none of whose members were accustomed to machinery. If the machinery or any of the appendages were dangerous, or one position more dangerous than another the plaintiff's means of knowing that fact were greater than defendants' He gave no notice of anything of the kind; in fact, it seems never to have occurred to him that there was any It is difficult to see how the defendants can be held responsible to a skilled employe for an injury received while using machinery with which he was particularly acquainted, and which neither he nor any other person ever regarded as unsafe. The testimoey does not show or tend to show the machinery, from the use of which the injury occurred, was defective, either in construction or for want of repair; neither does it appear that anything could have been done to the machine by the defendants to guard against danger or accident more than was done. All machinery is dangerous to a greater or less extent, and particularly when operated by steam. The defendants had to select the kind of machinery they wished in conducting their business. At this day, when inventions of machinery are of daily occurrence, frequently a large number of different kinds are made to accomplish the same purpose, and a great difference of opinion exists as to the kind best adapted to the use intended in minds of men well skilled in their construction and use. The comparative merits of the different kinds, whether most difficult to solve; and to say that it shall be left to a court or jury to determine in any given case which kind a while using it, would be im posing a duty upon the court and an injustice upon the party alike intolera ble. A manufacturer must be permit-ted to choose the machinery he desires to use, and to control his business in his own way, provided he does no un-lawful act. He may use new or old ing it, so long as the only cause alleged is that there is a better and safer kind of machinery used for the same pur-

There is no question in this case but that the injured party had as much knowledge of the machine and appliances used, and of all the circumstances relating to the machinery and its safety, as did the defendants or their foreman. There is no showing in this case that defendants or their foreman did not use ordinary care and prudence in protecting the plaintiff against dangers not without his knowledge or observation, and the accident of which he complains, and this was all they were required to do. The risks and dangers, whatever they were, so far as the record shows, were voluntarily assumed by the plaintiff, and no ques tion is made but that he was fully capable of understanding and appreciating them, and in such case the risk was his, whatever it might be.

No employer, by an implied contract undertakes that his machinery and appliances are safe beyond a contingency or even that they are as safe as those of others using the same kind of ma chinery, "or that accidents shall not result to those in his service from risks, which, perhaps, others would guard against more effectually than it is done by him." Not only did the injured party in the case know all the danger there was in using the machine that the employers or their agents knew, but his position was such that if any change occurred or was make involving an increase of danger, he would be the first to see it; and if he continued his service after such change without protest it would be at his option, and if injured he would be remediless. The plaintiff must be held to have understood the ordinary hazard attending his employment, and therefore to have voluntarily taken upon himself this hazard when he entered into defendants' service. Under the third point, had the defendants negligently furnished an un-safe machine to the plaintiff to use, under the circumstances of this case he could hardly have failed to have discovered the fact; and if he chose to continue the service after such knowledge he assumed the consequences of the increased hazard, and he would have no cause against the defendants for injury resulting from such increased hazard.

From what has been said it will be discovered that the plaintiff's whole theory of liability in this case (which seems to have been adopted by the court) is erroneous, and it therefore becomes necessary to consider the various assignments of error based upon the charge. The judgment must be reversed, and a new trial granted.

His Vote for the Fitz John Porter Bill Settled Him.

From a Washington Special "I see that A. Herr Smith has already received his punishment for voting for the Fitz John Porter bill," said a Pennsylvania Republican Congressman to-day. He continued: "He was sure of a renomination until he voted for that bill, but when he did that the grand army of the republic organization in his district set to work to defeat him, and they have succeeded in doing It by a majority of more than 3,000 in the primaries. That ought to be a lesson to other Republican Congressmen who voted for Fitz John Porter." Mr. Smith has been in Congress twelve years, and there seemed to be no opposition to his renomination until within the last two months.

attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious ex-posure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. Aver's Cherry Pectoral has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured. A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The dectors gave me up. I tried Aver's GHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL Saved me.

Croup. — A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

STUDY FOR YEARS.

Has made Chronic Diseases of the Throa', Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys,

A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively and has had his many years of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in his opinions and reasonable in his charges. Those who are afflicted are invited to call, investigate and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing to do so. Address all letters to F. B. BREWER, M. D., Lock Box 350, CHICAGO, ILL.

EDITOR RECORD.—Please allow us to give the following statements in the columns of your paper: Last Tuesday, April 15, we appointed a sulky plow trial to come off on the farm of Freeman Franklin. After arriving on the ground we gave the Sulky, Plow and Dynamoneter into the hands of those present with the request that they should manage the trial and give us the results. After a careful test with the instrument, the following figures were obtained: Gale plow (walking), draft, 410 lbs.; depth, 7 inches; width, 16 inches. Same plow attached to sulky, draft, 400 lbs.; depths, 7 inches; width, 1614 inches. Giving 10 lbs. lighter draft and 1/2 inch in width of furrow in favor of the Sulky. Although this difference is small, and the least we ever had credited to Sulky (have had from 50 to 100 lbs. given it), yet it keeps our word good, and sold one of the Sulkies to Mr. Franklin. Messrs. Benjamin Chamberlain Freeman Franklin, Henry and Willard French were the principal ones in conducting the trial, and they have kindly consented to give their names in testimony to the above facts. Although our advertising bills have been torn down, the price cut out, and otheawise defaced, yet the Sulky is here to stay, and will stand the test of draft and prove itself every time to be lighter than your walking plow. And although we have been requested to raise on the price of Sulky, yet it will make ANGELO'S "LAST JUDGMENT." A Description of the Wonderful Fresco of the Sistine Chapel.

[E. B. Stuart in The Current.] Grand, solitary and gloomy, is it strange that Michael Angelo has made such a scene as this as his conception of the Day of Wrath? The fresco occupies the entire end of the chapel. In the threatening attitude of an angry Avenger, the dread Judge raises His arm as if devoting to endless torment the supplicants who approach Him. By His side is the Virgin, interceding for the accused. Above and around these central figures are the apostles, saints, and blessed martyrs. Little angels bear triumphantly the emblems of the Passion, and sunlight hovers around them. There is the blackness of darkness in the lower picture. Rising from the earth are skeleton forms that, yet unconscious of doom, are borne before the supreme tribunal, and as they mount heavenward, the different shades who have known each other, it may be in the flesh, or, perhaps, only in hades, meet and recognize. There are smiles from lips that have mouldered away before the world grew old, but that are now perennially blooming; longing arms are reached forth to embrace the loved, the lost, the found.

Oh! in the Resurrection Morning Michael Angelesque there is joy and happiness, until the observer looks on the left, on the other side of the angels sounding the trumpets. Then the heartrending horrors chill the soul as the damned fall headlong into their place of torment. Demons seize them; Charon's boat bears them over a darker Stygian pool than Erebus ever knew, and amid wailing and despair they enter the unlimited future of an agonizing eternity. So, with a vivid impression of horror, the spectator turns away. There is no comfort in the picture, and no loving forgiveness in any face save Mary's. In point of drawing, in the "Last Judgment," the maestro has excelled himself. His grand lines, bold fore-shortening, and anatomical exactness are unsurpassed. Michael Angelo despised drapery as he did oil painting, and left all his figures in the "Last Judgment" quite nude. From an artistic and historical standpoint this was correct: but some later pope was scandalized, and M. Biagio de Cesena suggested draping the women. Daniele de Volterra was the artist invited to clothe the poor ladies so that they might no longer offend the pope. Suc-ceeding ages have decided that Volterra would not make a fortune on the bonlevard as a second Worth if his tailorwork in the chapel is a fair specimen At any rate, it was an ungrateful job. and Volterra's contemporaries dubbed him "Il Braghettone," in our vernacular "The Breeches-maker."

Meanwhile Michael Angelo had not been idle, but had carried out a deeplaid scheme to wreak vengeance upon Biagio da Cesena, whom he regarded as the author of the suggestion to drape the nude forms. With a few well directed strokes of his brush the master altered the visage of Midas in Hell, so as to make it an exact likeness of M. Biagio. Deeply insulted, the courtier hastened to lay his case before the holy father and obtain redress. Biagio begged the pope to have the resemblance changed. His holiness ascertained the location of Midas, then he said sarcastically to the supplicant:
"Ah! Had it been Purgatory I could have released you, but over Hell I have no power!" So the unwilling Biagio still growls beneath asinine ears, and Herr Teufelsdrockh, the clothes-philosopher of a later age, has ignored him. A Lesson from a Cook.

[Paris Figaro.] Napoleon had a cook whose ability to cope with an emergency made him a worthy servant of the great soldier. The following anecdote illustrates the culinary tactics of the cook, which enabled him to be always prepared.
Napoleon's constant dish at breakfast was roast chicken. But he was so uncertain in his breakfast hour that sometimes the meal would be served as early as 8 o'clock, and sometimes as late as 11 o'clock. Yet the roast chicken was always done to a turn. The fact surprised Napoleon, and one morning he sent for the cook. "I do not know how it is," said he, "but at whatever hour I call for my breakfast my chicken is always ready, and always in good condition.

"Sire," answered the man of culinary enius, "the reason is that every quarter of an hour I put a fresh chicken down to roast, so that your majesty is sure always to have it in perfection." There is a lesson in this anecdote which, if heeded, would crown many callings with success.

Oil or Troubled Waters.

[Chicago Times.] The literal pouring of oil on troubled waters is sometimes a good thing. The steam whaler Jan Mayen, which left Dundee in February to proceed to the Newfoundland seal-fishing, has re-turned to Scotland, having been unable to proceed on her voyage, owing to stormy weather. February 18 the vessel encountered a hurricane, in which she was thrown on her beam ends, and would, it is believed by the crew, have foundered had not the use of oil been resorted to. Three bigs filled with oakum saturated in were hung over the side of the vessel, and in a brief space the sea, which had been washing completely over the ship, ceased to break. The captain attributes the escape of the vessel to this experiment.

Braves in the Chair of Torture.
[Winnepeg (Minn.) Times.] A dentist at Calgary has been busy lately extracting teeth from Indians. It is stated that before the advance of civilization, when the natives subsisted solely on buffalo meat, decayed teeth were unknown among them. Braves who stand the torture of the sun-dance without flinching are reduced to a state of abject terror whon they feel the cold grip of the forceps. Her latest photograph shows Sarah Berdhardt enwrapped from head to fort in a wonderful wad of furs, swelling

"SELF-MADE" MEN.

A Fashionable City Tailor Talks of Corsets and Other Things. [New York Sun.] "Why, there's nothing new in certain men about town wearing corsets!" said he, leading the reporter to his plateglass window that overlooked a fashionable thoroughfare, then at the height of the afternoon promenade. 'They always have done so as far back as I can remember, though of late years. with the advent of a sthetes and dudism in general, the fashion has been on the increase. The ultra dudes nearly all wear stays, but, bless you, there are others, too, who are by no means dudes, or especially effeminate, either. There go two swell gamblers arm in arm. Yes, of course you know them by name and reputation-every one does; but what you don't know is that the slenderer and better dressed one on the outside wears corsets, and has done so for years. I ought to know, for I order his stays for him. Masculine corsets are made to order by two large manufacturers here in the city. I assure you that there are few daughters or dames of wealth and fashion with more expensive silk-woven, fine-boned, gold-colored stays under their silks and sealskins than that yonder carries under his upper linen. There, with that richly dressed lady, is one of the most prominent sporting men about town, who has worn a corset for years. You can t deny that it helps him set off his shoulder pads to advantage. You know the handsome actor swinging his cane in solitary grandeur on the opposide side-walk? Well, if you don't likewise know that he helps his general makenp, off stage and on, by means of a cor-set, I don't know why I should tell you. There go three well-dressed men together, all customers of mine. yould you give the palm to in point of The one in the middle. I knew you would say that, for it's the solid truth; and he's the only one of the trio that wears corsets. Now catch on to the brace of pinch-backed, longtailed, toe pointed dudes following, and note the difference. They also have corsets, but you could detect it a mile off, for it simply gives 'em a generally nondescript, idiotic air, while in the case of the bucks already pointed out, the practice really serves to set up their shapes. Oh, a dude's a dude, corset or no corset; while a thorough-bred's a thoroughbred, in stays or out of 'em. It's all the difference in the world."

"But this is astonishing!" we ex-

"It shouldn't be anything of the sort," said the tailor, complacently. 'Fashionable men have as good a right to improve their shapes artificially as women have; and if false calves, padded shoulders, bran biceps, and counterfeit chest fronts are allowable in the masculine make-ups, why not corsets just as well? Understand, however, that I don't say I would wear corsets myself. However, I must tell you a little story about a prominent society man whose make-up, so admirably had he contrived it, I only discovered the other day by the oddest of accidents. Understand that I'm not his tailor, or I wouldn't have been surprised at all at what hap-pened. But there was a business transaction between us, and he told me to call any day at his club apartments to talk the matter over, without appointing any particular hour. Well, I chanced to drop in on him early in the morning, and, as his sitting-room door was ajar, ventured to enter unannounced. Though I had often been there before, I thought at first I must have got into the wrong room, for, while my friend is to all the world a big, grand, superbly preserved man of middle age, the only occupant of the room was a bald-headed, toothless, shrivel-shanked sort of galvanized anatomy shivering over a feeble fire in a dressing gown and slippers. I coughed, and the old wreck suddenly started up with a sort of frightened screech and darted into an adjoining dressing-room, slamming the door after him. I hadn't recognized him. Presently the door re-opened, and there stood my big, grand, well-preserved, middle-aged friend, as large and selfpossessed as usual, but just a little out of sorts at the discovery I had made." "But what was the discovery, and old man?' "Why, he had simply vanished into the personality of my friend, as made up, but whom I had surprised en deshabille, don't you see? That was the joke.'

Producers of Lead. [Exchange.]

In the lead productions of different countries Spain still holds the first rank, the amount reaching some 120,-000 tons in one year, or one-sixth more than America, which comes next on the list, while Germany follows with 90,-Of Spain's total production some 67,000 tons are derived from one district, that of Linares, in which more than 800 mines are registered. Of this large number, however, only a compartively small proportion are actually worked on a large scale, and there are only about fifty in which steam power is used. The total number of steam engines employed is stated to be 130, nearly one-half of this number belonging to English companies; in fact, most of the mining machinery and pumping engines in all the mines are of English

> A Wise Charity. [New York Times.]

The late Peter Cooper wisely founded the Cooper Union long before his death, and had the pleasure of seeing many thousands of young men and women prepare themselves for useful and comfortable lives by means of his beneficence. The schools of the Union were so intelligently managed that their excellence bore fruit from the first; they have been steadily increasing in effectiveness. For i stance, the Woman's Art school, under Mrs. S. N. Carter, has ten teachers of both sexes for the 200 or 300 pupils in the free and paying classes. Among these teachers three are painters of note. But this winter, for the first time since Mr. Cooper's death, a complete check has been put on the entrance of new pupils to the free-hand drawing class of the free school. There are from 500 to 600 applicants for this class, owing to the fact that it forms the stepping-stone to almost every kind of artistic work. The reason why no opening exists is that pupils in more advanced departments have the right to claim places in the free-hand class, in accordance with the rules of the trustees. In other classes 200 beginners can find places, if they satisfy the requirements. Between 300 and 400 applicants are thus about to be turned from the doors of the art school over which Mr. Cooper used to watch

A Curiosity.

[Chicago Herald.] A veritable natural curiosity is in the possession of a St. Louis editor. It is the head of a 2-year-old rattlesnake preserved in spirits, the lines and tracings on the back of which formed a very well defined picture of the head and bust of a woman. The gentleman states that he and a party of friends were resting under an apple tree in Cleburne, Johnson county, Tex., when they perceived the reptile on a branch above them, and knocking it down with a whip, killed it.

Something After. . C. Cochran in The Current ] In all the patchwork of hypotheses (not science) the menchanicists cannot account for the "primordial germ;" nor for the existence in man of the abstract sentiment of good and evil, for moral sense, for a belief that there will be something after this life-which Max

Muller once called "part of the original dowry of the human scal." Fine Italian Air.

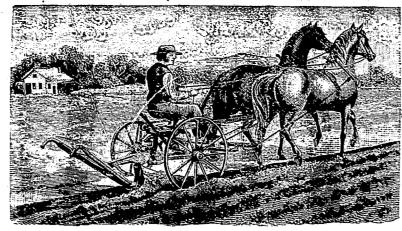

[Arkansaw Traveler.]
A scientist has discovered that in the air of Italy rests the secret of the country's fine vocal music. It is said any one can breathe the air of certain sections of Italy and become a fine singer. An enterprising New Englander will soon begin to ship boxes of Italian a'r to Marriage as a Reward of Merit. [Paris Figaro.] A party of fifty women left Bordeaux for New Caledonia a short time ago under peculiar circumstances. They were women sentenced to long terms of imprisonment for grave offenses, who have elected to go to the French penal colony, where they will find husbands in the convicts of the first class—that is, those convicts who have by their good behavior entitled themselves to a government grant of land and obtained permission to marry. The women were selected from various prisons, and are described as young and good looking. On their arrival out they will be housed in a religious establishment managed by a community of Sisters, where bachelor convicts of the privileged class will be permitted to visit them, and, as often as a marriage is arranged the Colonial government will provide the bride with a trousseau and set the couple up in housekeeping in a small

Needed in Medical Education. [Chicago Current.] What is needed in the medical education of this countay is rigid preliminary examination of applicants for admission to medical collèges in all important branches taught in literary and scientific colleges; greater thoroughness in the medical course, and a very decided extension of the course to three or four full years, and a searching examination before certification. This would cut down the number of students and break up some medical schools which are conducted to make money, but it would be far better for the medical profession.

Will it pay to walk six miles or more for every acre ploughed, when the Elkhart Sulky will carry plow and driver and add no more draft for team than when drawing the naked plow? But I hear you say, "What a lie that is!" Well, I stand ready to prove it to be true. With care the sulky will last twelve years, which would be a yearly investment of $2.08. Can young or old afford to tramp behind the plow during the entire ploughing season of each year for $2.00? They would be out more than that for boots, saying nothing of the wear of the man. The Sulky is intended for any plow, right or left handed. A boy can plow with it; the lame can run it, and with those that try it, as I did, it has come to stay. Direct all orders to L. S. ### DR. JOHN BULL'S Smith's Tonic Syrup

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

The proprietor of this celebrated medi-oine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PER-MANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole fami-lies have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usu-ally this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. Aver's Catharric Pills act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derange-ment, including Constipation, Indigestlon, Dyspepsia, Hendache, Dysentery and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these Pills by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profes-

These Pills are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from caloniel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AVER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occusion offers.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir:—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zon-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. Mrss C. G.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

Dr. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir:—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zon-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did, her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone, I firmly believe that Zon-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Your respectfully.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler,

No. 28 Will St, Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for six teen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debillity. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused-by weakness and hervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My hu b und said we would test Zon-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zon-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

Late in Life to Look for Joy—Yet Never too Late to Mend. Readers of Howthorne's "House of Seven Gables" will recall the pathos with which poor Clifford Pyncheon, who had been unjustly imprisoned since his early manhood, said, after his release: "My life is gone, and where is my happiness? Oh! give me my happiness." But that could be done only in part, as gleams of warm sunshine occasionally fall across the gloom of a New England antumn

In a letter to Messts. Hiscox & Co., Mr. I., II. Titus, of Pennington, N. J., says: "I have suffered untold misery from childhood from chronic disease of the bowels and diarrhocal accompanied by great pain. I sought relief at the hands of physicians of every school and used every patent and domestic remedy under the sun. I have at last found in PARKER'S TONIC a complete specific, preventive and care. As your invaluable medicine, which did for me what nothing else could do, is entitled to the credit of my getting back my happy days, I cheerfully and gratefully acknowledge the fact." Mr. E. S. Wells, who needs no introduction to the people of Jersey City, adds: "The testimonial of Mr. Titus is genuine and voluntary; only he does not adequately portray the suffering he has endured for many years. He is my brother-in-law, and I know the case well. He is now perfectly free from his old troubles, and enjoys health and lite, ascribing it all to PARKER'S TONIC.

Au Inside View of a Swell Haberdashery in New York. [New York Cor. Atlanta Constitution.] We worship that which is expensive was reminded of this forcibly by a firm which has won its way to the top rank in its own particular line by unblushingly and shamelessly overcharging for everything they sell. They describe themselves as "haberdashers," and keep what is known in the vulgar parlance of the day as a "gents' furnishing-goods" store. They have a superb establishment. It is the size of wo stores; is fitted in polished mahogny from floor to ceiling, and filled with a small army of snobbish clarks. A page in livery opens the door for those who enter, and they never allow a customer to take any article home himself. If it is only a neck-scarf they send it to him, though he lives five miles away. They have two delivery vans for that purpose, driven by uniformed coachmen with funkies by their side to deliver the goods. Altogether, the style of the establishment is stunning. The prices are so high that men of modest means do not buy there. This is entirely to their satisfaction, as they do not want that kind of custom. Nothing in their shop can be bought at the regular prices. Collars, for instance, which sell usually at 25 cents, are 50 cents there; and they charge 80 cents a pair for cuffs that are elsewhere 25 to 40. It is impossible to buy any sort of a scarf or necktie for less than $2, and the prices for smoking-jackets, bath-robes, and articles of that sort are positively enormous. They demand $28 for a bath-robe of Turkish toweling which could be bought anywhere else in town for $12 A few days ago a friend of mine dropped. in casually to order some shirts. door was swung open by an obsequious attendant, who bowed and pointed to a clerk who was leaning gracefully on the end of a counter. The clerk stepped forward, bent, and smiled. "I want some shirts," said my friend. "Will you be kind enough to step this way, sir?" and the clerk rubbed his hands together and walked softly down the store. The customer followed until they arrived at the office in the rear. There the clerk was met by a member of the firm, who was introduced to the custemer. The customer, rather astonishel at so much ceremony, was asked with great politeness to step up-stairs. which he did. On the way the proprietor asked him if he would exchange cards, This being accomplished, the next foor was reached, and proved to be a richly-upholstered and heavily-carpeted parlor. The proprietor touched an electric bell, and conversed easily with his customer until the shirtm...'er appeared. He was measured carefully, while the head of the firm walked casually up and down the room, as if he had nothing whatever to do with the shop. He said nothing about the shirt, and seemed to treat the call as purely social. After he had been as purely social. After he had been measured, the customer said: "You may make me a sample shirt first." "We never make less than half a dozen shirts, sir, and our price is $50 a dozen," said the shirt-maker lacon cally.

"But I don't care to pay $25 for a half dozen shirts, and then find that they do not fit me; and I think it is an extortionate price, anyway." "Our crstomers," said the proprietor. grandly, "never suspect us of ill-fitting them, and never ask the price."

Belgian Lace-Making Schools. There is considerable agitation in Belgium over the lace-making schools. They are chiefly in the hands of different religious communities—as the Apostolines, the Maricoles, the Josephines and the Collectines-and are understood, while teaching the art of lacemaking, to give some primary instruc-tion. It appears that less than an hour is devoted to reading and writing, the rest to the Litany and the loom. The age of admission is as low as 5 or 6 years. The regulations issued by the bishop of Bruges fix the school hours from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., but these hours are nearly always exceeded, and the children are kept at work from half-past 5 in summer and 7 in winter to half-pest 8 in summer and 8 in win-ter; their health is consequently very They are robbed, in addition. A child is mentioned in the report, who after working for two months, took home 30 centimes, or at the rate of half a centime a day; another 12 years old, received for three years' work 9 francs, or 1 centime a day. Chinese Boot-Blacking.

[Canton Letter.] Did you ever hear of blacking boots without blacking? It is done here. I went on board the American war-ship Essex the other evening, and saw the operation. A banana skin is used, and with good effect. I thought at first that the rind simply served to moisten blacking which had been previously ap-plied; but I was assured that the shoes f the officers aboard had not seen any blacking since the ship came here, quite number of weeks ago. I throw this hint out gratuitously for the nefit of American boot-blacks.

Prayer Unanswered. [St. Louis Republican.] A colored man entered the African Bethel church, and, kneeling down with the converts, indulged in an outburst of profanity. He said he was anxious to see what effect the prayers of the revivalists would have upon him. Thereupon every member of the church began to pray at the top of his lungs. The place was a pandemonium of entreaties and exhortations, but above everything else arose the stentorian blasphemy of the sinner. After two hours the revivalists gave it up, and the discussed at the recent meeting of the Miller's River Medical association at Athol. A young man who had been all his life afflicted with cyanosis, or "blue affection," was found dead in his bed in Cooleyville, and his heart was brought to the doctors for examination. During the prenatal life of a child there is a passage between the right and left sides of the heart called a foramen ovale. In healthy children this passage closes at birth, and, res piration beginning, the blood is forced round through to the lungs, and becomes purified and reddened. Sometimes the foramen ovale does not close, and the child is blue, because the blood does not pass through the lungs as it ought. Such children usually die in a week or ten days after birth, but here was a man 24 years old afflicted all his life with this disease, always blue, never able to work or take active exercise. Though he was a small man, his heart weighed twenty-three ounces, or three times the ordinary weight, an l the "-amen ovale was almost an inch in diameter.

rent, and my experience goes to show that a visitor, intending to spend any time here, can make himself more comfortable in some of these lodgings than in any of the hotels. I found a curious place immediately pposite the square in one of the old imily mansions built when this was a fashionable part of the city. On top of the two story front building the roof runs up to a sharp point, and in the rear is a long row of smaller buildings, in which in old times the slaves were quartered. The room looks over a small paved garden, in which are flourishing orange and lemon trees and a few bananas. But the bananas show the effects of the late frosts and droop sadly. Like all the houses in New Orleans, this one of mine is supplied with an immense tank, filling a large part of the yard, to catch the water from the roof, for there are no wells. The water tanks form a curious part of the New Orleans establishments. They are immense wooden casks, like brewers' vats. When a tank proves too small for the necessity of the house they build another one on top of it, like a second story, and sometimes a third and fourth story, till the cistern towers up in the air as high as the house. Many of the tanks are built in imitation of Chinese

NEW ORLEANS TO-DAY.

Its Frame Buildings, Water Tanks.

Restaurants and Theatres.

[Letter in New York Times.]

I was told that the upper part of St Charles street was the Fifth avenue of New Orleans, and walked up to look at

it. It is a very pretty street, but about as much like Fifth avenue as Hoboken is like New York. There are a number of handsome residences, nearly all built of wood, and elevated to keep them out of the damp. They all stand in the midst of large yards, in which are orange, lemon, and magnolia trees and great quantities of flowers. They have a curious custom of keeping the front gates locked, and a visitor has to ring bell at the gate before he can reach the front door. This part of the street stretches out for several miles, and is filled all the way with pretty dwelling:.

Around Jackson square are a number of comfortable, old-fashioned houses, in which furnished rooms are kept for pagodas, and look like summer-houses. For all the comforts of life New Orleans is far in advance of any other part of the south; indeed, it is nearly the only place south of Washington where a traveler can feel sure of getting a good din-ner. Some of the better restaurants, although generally plain in their appointments, are almost equal in their fare to the best in New York. There are a number of comfortable little French restaurants in the French quarter, and several excellent German ones where pretzels and sauerkraut may be washed down with foaming beer. For the miserable slave to to-bacco New Orleans is a much better place than New York. In nearly every one of the 10,000 little tobacco shops a good cigar can be had for a reasonable price, and in some of the restaurants a good Havana cigar is always served after dinner, whether it is ordered or not. The restaurant can well afford to soothe their customers' feelings with a good cigar, for I find it impossible to get a reasonably good linner in any passable restaurant for less than $2.00 or $2.50.

No city in the country is better supolied with means of transit than New Orleans. Street-cars run in every possible direction, and a stranger has no difficulty in reaching any of the points of interest. The theatres are striking reminders of those in Havana and Mexico. They are so much like them that they even have the same musty smell, though I have never been able to make up my mind whether the smell is must or garlic. The fashionable part of the theatre is that which in New York we call the balcony or dress circle. No lady ever goes into the parquet. This is given over entirely to gentlemen, who often do not take the trouble to remove their hats during the performance. But no theatre in New Orleans is really fash-ionable; the only thing that draws out

"Yes, I've heerd tell on this smoothin' down the sea with oil," said a Michigan passenger, whose shoulder appeared bent down as if he had been carrying a bucket-yoke all his life, "but I never b'leved a word of it until t'other night sat out in the sugar camp' 'ten lin' the kittles of bilin' sap. A chap out in the wools all by hisself on a dark night always keeps his thinkin' machine goin' so as not to git lonesome, ye know. Now, I s'pose I've biled sap enough to make a snug little river, but no matter how long a man's at a business if he keeps his blinkers open he's always gettin' new idees. Before the boys went home that night old Joe Stone an' I had an argyment bout the oil story. Joe told as how he'd seen it with his own eyes, but he's always yarnin', and I pooh-poohed the whole thing. But as I sot there an' watched the kittles I'll be dod-durned if I didn't have a revelation, so to speak. You know, in bilin' sap we always keep a piece of fat pork in the kittle, an' when a piece is cooked up we hev to put in more. If a kittle has a nice chunk o' fat sow-belly in it ye can't git fire enough under it to bile it over. Well, sir, that night it come to me all of a sudden that it was the grease out o' the pork risin' to the top o' the sap that kept it from bilin' over-smoothed the waves down, as it were. I saw through the oil-on-the-water business right away. So nex' day I sez to ole Joe: 'So you say oil won't quiet a sea down, eh?' I knowed he'd forgotten his statements the night afore-Joe likes to argify and be on the contrary side all the time. 'It's impossible, ridiculous; no man ever seen such a thing,' sez coe. may occasionally be carried out in too literal a sense. A certain great lady in Paris aims at converting her house into a sort of Hotel Rambouillet, and with that object gives periodical dinners, at which assemble most of the best known wits and literati of the day. But it is a weakness of great talkers that they often insist upon talking all at once, and, to obviate this unpleasant result, the rule of the mansion is that while one personage discourses no interruption whatever can be permitted It is said that M. Renan once attended one of the e dinners, and, being in excellent vein, talked without a break during the whole repast. Toward the end of the dinner a guest was heard to commence a sentence, but he was instantly silenced by the hostess. After they had left the table, however, she at once informed the extinguished individual that, as M. Renan had now finished his conversation, she would gladly hear what he had to say. The guest modestly declined, the hostess insisted. "I am certain it was something of consequence," she said. "Alas! madame," he answered, "it was, indeed, but it is now too late. I should have liked a little more of that ice pudding!"
