who trifles with the destiny of human hopes in financial matters was illus trated in an application made to Surrogate Francis H. Woods, at Albany, Friday. Twenty years ago few names carried with it in Albany the representation of more wealth than that of Jeremiah J. Austin, familiarly known as "Jere." In those days when the river was literally covered with spars and white-winged carriers of commerce, and the docks and piers were thronged with a busy mass, the leading and enterprising citizen and boatman was "Jere" Austin, the owner of the chief towing line on the Hudson and a large owner of canal boats. At that time he was considered among the most stable of Albany's financial men, and had he died then it is thought there were not two men in the city who could qualify as the executors of his estate. Soon after 1870 his reverses began and he was swept into financial oblivion. On the 29th of November, 1878, the former millionaire died at Fairfield, Conn., and the application to the surrogate was made for letters of administration on an estate said to be worth at the time of his death $15.

She was about three score years of age at the time of her death She left a small house and lot, and having no brothers or sisters living the property reverted to the next heirs, who were on her father's side This was the manner in which the heirship stood, after being figured with Italian fineness: There were 11 uncles and aunts, 10 cousins and 7 second cousins. which would make the share of cousin's children 1-7 of 1-10 of 1-11, or 1-770 of the whole amount. The property at sheriff sale brought $360, from which $121.40 costs had to be taken, leaving $238.30 to be divided among the heirs This leaves a division to each of the uncles and aunts of $21.67 or their descendants, to each of the ten cousins $2.17, and to the seven children of the third cousin about 30 cents. These heirs are scattered through Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, .Virginia and California, and one and one-half pages of legal cap was required to record them.

In Persia they bottle up their tears as of old. This is done in the following manner: As the mourners are sitting around and weeping, the master of ceremonies presents each one with a piece of cotton wool, with which he wipes off his tears. This cotton is afterward squeezed into a bottle, and the tears are preserved as a powerful and efficacious remedy for reviving a dying man after every other means has failed It is also employed as a charm against evil influences. This custom is probably alluded to in Psalm lvi., 8: "Put thou my tears into a bottle." The practice was once universal, as is found by the tear-bottles which are found in almost every ancient tomb for the ancients buried them with their

A DANCING GIRL.

A youth was threading his way northward through streets - streets, streets, wide and narrow, short and long, there was nothing else but bricks and mortar, though the locality was called a suburb, and the youth was country born and bred, and had t'e innate love of greenery such a lad must have. Three months he had been in London, and his life seemed to grow more narrow each day, such a contrast was it with the measureless hopes with which his soul had panted as he rolled away from Lattermere village in his father's gig. An aunt, Miss Ursula home, and this lady had a certain authority over the various branches of her family by reason of her spinsterhoor, and her "stocks and shares," consequently young Oswald Money was advised to try and make himself content with his home. Country doctoring was not profitable enough for him to follow his father in his village practices, and here again Miss Ursula's words carried weight. "Let Oswald come up and grow into a merchant. There's my house for bed and board, and I have enough interest with Drayson Brothers to get him in.

A lady with a strong will and a narrow mind was Miss Ursula; but, there, we cannot waste time over an analysis of her character. She had Oswald Money under her roof. Yes. And she was pinching the dear life out of him.

Three months had taken the tan of sun and wind from off his face. A handsome young man he was, with an elastic tread and an upright, manly bearing; city ways had not robbed him of that heritage. No, he never could be robbed of that; the freedom of the fells and dales was in his blood and, though he might chafe, and perhaps would light against a limited, bounded existence, he surely would never be beaten in spirit. It had been a brilliant October day, the sun had been hot like June; the air was clear and keen and invigorating, and had set a different humor upon the grimy office where he worked. As he tread the streets, upward to Halloway, there was the spring of a wild animal in his muscles, and once he actually threw out his arms instinctively, as if he could, Samson-like, break down the walls of his imprisoning Gaza.

That very action threw him further back into the narrowness of his days. He walked along one degree less quickly, and he cared not at all to look at any person or thing he chanced to pass. Generally he found the high-roadnow, this dullness of spirit having got the upper hand, he turned off down a side street. This, and some other side street, would take him more quickly home to the substantial, routine orderliness of Miss Ursula. The street had a red gleam of western sun-set light glinting along it, the last ray of day-time. One bar of fiery scarlet shone far away where a break in the universal brick-work let one see the lower sky. One bar of scarlet, and the rest all murkey gray. Gazing on it Oswald went dreaming on, and thought of the autumn sun-settings over Lattermere Tarn. A chill wind coming round a street corner woke him-the grand red fire was burned out and only the thick city smoke and fog remained. He had missed his turning. Never mind, it only made a change of streets. Some of the houses were closed for the night and had lamps and gas lighted, other windows glared grim and hollow like eyeless sockets; some were eerie, some were gay with the flicker of firelight-comfortable people like fire in October even if the sun does

One was ruddier than the rest-it shown warmly in front of Oswald with its bay window and with the firelight making its crimson, undrawn curtains declare themselves very decidedly. A little square of garden before the house kept it well off the public road; it was one of some dozen semi-detached villas, and Osward roused from his dullness to look over the railings to of the window, the centre pane being broad and open. No blind was drawn down, and one could well see a bright fire flashing and leaping and making queer figures and apparitions of the There was a white capped lady in a another direction, there would only be a vague swaying and bending-just a vision of misty grace and beauty.

The girl must have been asking the lady to play, for she rose, and moving to the rear of the red curtains, Osward heard the notes of a piano. What was it she played? It was strange to the young man-a monotonous swinging, a springing reg-ularity quick and yet regularly swing ing—neither polka nor waltz, assured ly. But his eyes were occupied-let dancing niece brought here-mind!" sounds go!

He saw waving arms, and heard the click of-could it be castanets?-rising and falling, swaying and twirling, softly, gracefully, gently, but oh, so

The dark girl was evidently teaching the iet. She stopped them with a very sharp click of her castanets. Her head nodded and shook, and she made the fair girl dance by herself. A gay laugh rang out. Evidently the performer had inade some egregious mistake. A rapid flourish of the hand, a clickclick of the castanets, an angry shake of the head to the laughing girls, and the dark one, she must have said, "Look at me, I will show you," then danced alone. Steps could not be seen, of course, but the easy rising and bowing could. Now the slim figure lifted and turned; now spinning round so swiftly she yet bore the same strange monotone of grace that the quaint minor-keyed music had. Now she seemed to run within the circle of girls, lifting her arm on high, swaying them, waving them, clicking the gay castanets all the while, sometimes too, giving a little short cry as she went on.

All at once she stopped, talked with vivacity, pointed here, pointed there. set the laughing girls apart. She must have bidden them dance with her, they all began again, rising. falling, gently swaying, skimming round and round.

"Who was she, that girl?" She was dark and tall, and her head had closely knotted hair; all the other girls had universal fringe and friz variously arranged. All the girls had a gay, merry grace; the dark one was different, she was perfection of grace.
Osward Money said to himself as he moved away that he understood now what was meant by "the poetry of motion."

He and Miss Ursula Money dined together in punctilious order, after which she retired to the drawing room-so went the night routine. An hour af-Money, had said she would give him a | ter, also by routine, Oswald went up to her, and together they had a cup of coffee.

She had heard his experience of the dancing girl at dinner time. "No news to-day?" she asked, abruptly. "None- no, nothing."

"Business flat?" Oswald shugged his shoulders. "Very much the same as usual. Thompson has a lift; they've given him the offer of the Canaries. "Don't talk business jargon here reprimanded the lady, stifly, "The offer of the Canaries! Is the group of islands to be given to the young man named Thompson ?" "King of the Canaries!" laughed he. It was a sorry joke, but Osward was free and buoyant of heart, and under such conditions one does laugh easily "He is offered the management of the house there, I mean."

"I could divine so much, but I admire perspicuity of language and fit Miss Ursula was prim and precise. A silence followed.

"I wish you could have seen that girl, aunt—those girls, I mean," presently the young man began. "A snitable correction, Osward. Let no special, 'girl' or female of any rank occupy your thoughts for some years to come. Girls taken generally are ennobling elements in a young man's society-they refine it. One girl," she extended a hand oracularly, and spread out her bony jeweled fingers, "must be relegated to the uncertain future."
Oswald did not laugh, but he stood up before an ancient mirror and fingered his thick, fair mustache. Those words of his aunt's fixed a vague germ in his mind; it was a healthy, living germ, and it would grow. "I never saw such dancing!" "Insane, idiotic folly! sinful desecration of human strength!" exploded

"Rather strong, aunt," ejaculated her nephew. "Did you ever see graceful dancing?" "I have seen in my youth epelish gesticulation and posturing. I do not wish to be near more of it."

"Then what I saw does not come under that head.' Miss Ursula looked astonished. She thought she had nearly brought this lad, this Oswald Money, her nephew, into decorous behavior-lo! he was displaying quite as much indepedence of spirit as he had done at home. "Tut, tut! the subject is distasteful to me. Reach me the paper. Have you read the report of the Social Science meeting?" She read. Oswald lazily moved ibout the room. "Really!" she cried, "I cannot endure your aimless fidgets. Has Herodias bewitched you? Oswald smiled. "Herodias-or Salome? No, aunt. 1 am in possession of myself, so far." "Ha! you twit me on the score of names. I think I knew my scriptures before you were born, sir. Herodias answers my purpose. Dismiss her

"A minuet?" The young man laughed lightly Then he described what he had seen. "Castanets?" said the old woman sharply. "I suppose so."

"Tarantella—a witches' dance." "A fairies' dance, if you will." Another silence fell, and Miss Ur sula either dozed or ruminated-she certainly did not read, for the paper had got turned upside down in her angry contempt, and she never righted it. Presently she said suddenly: "Where did you see that foreign

"Do you mean to say that you did not know that Drayson's head clerk ives there, in Lansdowne villas?" "Well, not at that house, surely?" Oswald actually flushed. "I am ignorant of which your house last of that great fortune of $10,000,000 is." The old lady jerked her head as she set her gold spectacles more tightly on her nose. "I know that he has taken some Spanish girl to educate with his daughters—a nice thing for his wife to have a young Polish minx undermining her family.

"The family seemed happy under the process," said Oswald carelessly. "Pshaw! he'll repent it-mark my "The daughter of ore of our corres-

Such things may exist slumberously for a long while, but just give one flick of opposition to the fancy and it starts into a full growth at once, Oswald Money before long was a welcome guest at the house of his fellow-clerk. The old clerk would continue in clerkdom, but Money all the world knew would rise to mastership either in "Drayson's" or in connection with "Drayson's"-a man may be glad enough to welcome such a fellow to his house when there are four fair young daughters with an unseen future before them. Alas and alas for the Reddison

It was Carolina, the Spanish girl; she was so full of grace and all sweet charms in the clear light of companionship as she had been through the misty October light; she it was for whom Oswald Money angered his aunt. Three years went by. Oswald was working hard and would rise by his own worth and capability. Lina had left the Reddisons, and for six months went to stay at Brighton with some relations of her own who were in England-by-the-by, she was of high rank, and her father was Don X —. She was a girl strangely particular in the matter of lovers, she would need perception of that perfect lover, though as yet no one had declared himself to her under that name.

One day, driving along the King's road, her horses took fright at some hideous clank of so-called music, and an accident happened. The old lady's collar bone was broken. Things were done with barbaric free doom at such times. They carried her

She heard sounds about the house, and she missed her sweet young nurse. "Why do you not stay with me?" she called, when Lina came back after a long absence. The girl was flushed, and tears of gladness shone in her eyes. "What is it? Are you ordered back home? You do not want to go? Come and stay with me in London." The old lady spoke sharply, but not unkindly. "Yes, I go," she said, "But many things are changed; I do not go to stay at my father's house—" "Some marrying nonsense!" snapped the old lady. Lina laughed, then she directly after began to cry. "I will not cry!" she burst out; "I am too happy; but ah! how can I tell me—hate me!" "Whom are you going to marry? Is he a gentleman? Is he an Englishman? Is he rich?" "Yes-yes-yes. All three-yes. But you do not think I care about the last,

Its climate is mild in winter, but in summer, I am told by an old inhabitant, is extremely cold. "In 1874, Flood, O'Brien, Mackay and Fair organized the largest scheme of mining speculation ever known on the Pacific slope. The stock of Bonanza mines was then very low-about 28, I believe. One afternoon Mackay, who was the general superintendent of these mines (all a part of the great Comstock system), came in a hurry to San Francisco and went at once to Flood and O'Brien. He said that they had struck the most wonderful lot of 'bonanzas,' or pockets, full of almost pure gold that he in all his experience two gentlemen named, and Fair, that they should quietly get hold of all this stock that could be had before the news of this wonderful 'strike' was made public. This was on Thursday. By Saturday evening they had threefifths of all the stock. Only two outsiders-Sharon and Bill Ralston - were allowed to come in, and the only reason the latter was told they wanted the bank of California to carry them through. Keene, shrewd and sharp, felt that something was in the air, but for the life of him he could not tell what it was. One afternoon a little woman in rusty black came into the office and, with a timid air, asked of clerk if she could see Mr. Keene. "The young man addressed was very

She waited a moment and modestly said: 'Will you into the house occupied by Madame take my name in to him?' Just then a Molinez. She might have been carried tall, slender man came out of a back home almost as easily. Well, she was office with two or three others, and, not, and here came the ordering of fate. A tall, dark girl, whose touch was genhearing the conversation, said: 'I am Mr. Keene, did you wish to see me? Come into my office, madam.' went with him. He offered her a chair with as much courtesy as if she had been the reigning belle of San Francisco and waited for her to speak. 'Mr. Keene,' she said. 'I am the widow of Tom Crittenden, of whom you once ing one of the bonanza set-and heard a conversation which convinced me that a great operation is being engina partner of the house of Drayson & eered by Flood, O'Brien, Mackay and Fair. They say that they have made a wonderful discovery that will put up the Comstock certificates of stock 300 or 400 per cent. Would she take a seat and wait for him? She sat down in a sort of daze, hardly knowing what she did. How long she waited she has no idea to this day. Mr. Keene's voice awakened her faculties, and he was standing before her. I got your note. Mrs. Crittenden, he was saying, 'and I sold your stock to-day. Come into my office, Mr. Quill See how much money Mrs. Crittenden has with us,' continued the great mining millionaire. In a moment the clerk replied: 'Mrs. Crittenden has $570,000, less commissions, making her profits on 2,000 $562,870.' Will you have a check for it now?" asked Keene.

He heard a soft sigh. 'Get some water

The American Normal Musical Institute will be held this year in Michigan City, under the management of an efficient corps of teachers, including Profs. Straub, J. M. Stillman, and others of equal note and ability, July 7, continuing four weeks.

The "Burlington Route" has issued a convenient political map, showing the political complexion of the several States and territories, the electoral vote and other useful information of a political campaign, that they mail free on application to Percival Lowell, General Passenger Agent at Chicago.

In the Senate discussion of the proposition to pension veterans of the Mexican war and their widows there arose a serious objection because these old men almost invariably married young women, and the wise senators object to pensioning this kind of widows because of their sufferings and privations in the conflict of 1846.

Some of the Greenbackers object to voting for Ben Butler because he voted for Jeff Davis for President; others because he did so good service in the rebellion; because he voted the Democratic ticket in 1880 and the Republican ticket in 1876. If there is any question that Butler has not been on all sides of it is because he has not heard of it.

At the meeting of the Michigan State Central Committee, in Chicago, Monday evening, a resolution was passed naming Detroit as the place and August 13 as the day for holding the Republican State Convention for the nomination of State officers. Judge Van Zile, chairman, announced the following executive committee: Wm. Livingstone, jr., Detroit; C. W. Watkins, Grand Rapids; D. B. Ainger, Charlottee; Wm. Kilpatrick, Owosso; T. T. Giddings, Kalamazoo; Green Pack, Oscoda; C. E. Holland, Hancock. Dr. A. W. Smith, of Adrian, was appointed Secretary of the committee.

THE CONVENTION.

The convention that will name the next President of the United States met in Chicago Tuesday. Up to the present time, Thursday morning, the Convention has only organized and done some preliminary business. Hon. John R. Lynch, a colored delegate from Mississippi, was chosen temporary Chairman. Gen. J. B. Henderson, of Missouri, was elected permanent Chairman. The hominating speeches will probably commence this morning, and the balloting this afternoon. Hon. James G. Blaine and President Arthur will lead in the vote, but there is no certainty that either will be nominated, as their present strength shows they will have just votes enough not to get the nomination, and that some "dark horse" will capture the prize, as was the case four years ago, when Gen. Garfield was nominated. The question of who will be the nominee for President is so much discussed that scarcely no thought is expressed as to who will have second place on the ticket.

More than half the Republican newspapers of Michigan have already declared in favor of the nomination of Cyrus G. Luce, of Branch, for governor. In fact the only opposition that we have noted thus far comes from the Allegan Journal and Tribune, the Lansing Telegram, and the Howard City Record. Unless a political cyclone strikes Michigan between this and the time for holding the State convention, Mr. Luce's nomination may be looked on as a foregone conclusion. The at tempt to arouse antagonisms within the party on account of personal differences has proved a signal failure and future efforts in this direction deserve the hearty condemnation of all men who care more for party principle than for personal gratification.— Lansing Republican.

A Sensible Clerk

The clerk of the county of Montcalm has struck a key that might be used with profit to the public by every other clerk in the state. He has issued a circular to the supervisors and clerks of his county in regard to the selection and return of jurors for the circuit court, which contains the following good advice: "Trusting that you will not deem it an impertinence, I respectfully ask your careful consideration of the duties devolved upon you by the law, found on pages 1900 and 1901 of the annotated statutes, requiring you to furnish lists of persons to serve as jurors in the circuit court for the year ensuing. Pouring contempt upon the verdict of juries and the jury system is so common that it is greatly feared that faith in the fair administration of justice by civil courts, is rapidly being destroyed. The legitimate fruitage of this will be the wreaking of private vengeance and unreasoning brutal mobs. It is as sure to occur in Michigan as in Cincinnati. Is it the fault of the system or of its administration? The writer believes it to be the latter. Please carefully read the law, and then send me the names of such men, and of such only, to whose judgment you are willing to commit your dearest interest, your liberty, your good name and rights of property. If you do that, the juries and their verdicts in Montcalm county will protect all interests and reflect honor upon the integrity and intelligence of her citizens. The responsi-bility for better verdicts rest with you."

For about a month a fellow has been in the vicinity of Tecumseh selling a package, and representing the goods as the bankrupt stock of Freedman Bros., Detroit. He said twelve farmers of Wayne county bought $16,000,-000 worth of goods for $3,000,000 and were establishing branch stores, and one would open at Tecumseh May 26. It didn't open, and the farmers who invested hundreds of dollars in goods. are left.

NEW TROY ITEMS.

Miss Elsie Pennell, a former resident of this township, is here visiting with her friend, Miss Christina Anderson. Mr. Hiram Baker, of Bakertown, was in Troy last Thursday. Mr. Wilson Carroll, of Indiana, is visiting relatives here. Mr. M. W. Boyce has bought out Dr. Streeter. Marion will remove his wagon and blacksmith business to this new stand in a few days.

Children's day at the M. E. church next Sunday. All are invited to attend, irrespective of age. The cemetery is being remodeled under the careful supervision of J. S. Pardee. It must be some special attraction that causes young men to walk four miles merely to attend Sunday school. How is it, boys?

There is no question the answer of which seems to interest the citizens of New Troy more than the one relating to temperance reform; and from time to time much has been said and written regarding the subject. One gentleman, last winter, went so far as to make a public declaration, "that he would help to tear the shingles from off the roof of a certain place and lay them gently down in the street," this resort being obnoxious to him because cider was sold for a beverage within its walls. Now it would be supposed that such strong sentiment as this could only emanate from a mind zealously engaged in battling with the great moral evil of the age. Yet this man, who, by the way, is a farmer, finding that his cider was becoming too sour for his educated taste, offered the same for sale, and for a time regularly supplied a neighboring mill crew with the stuff, in quantities ranging from one to five gallons per day. The question now arises, was the gentleman seeking notoriety when he uttered the words quoted, or is he ignorant of the following facts: That cider contains a large percentage of alcohol; that its use as a beverage, in a saw mill, placed many lives in jeopardy, or, that of all the drunkards in the State, who to-day are pursuing a degenerate course in life, fully one-half laid the foundation of such dissolute career at the spigot of the cider barrel. I mention this for the purpose of showing that when a man comes to grind his own ax he is not so particular as to whether it's water or something stronger that turns the stone.

A Sunday school is being established in every school district in the township, under the able management of Mr. Miller, of Hill's Corners.

Death of Judge H. H. Coolidge. The following short sketch of the life of Judge Coolidge we copy from the Niles Mirror:

"It becomes our sad duty to chronicle the disease of our most worthy and esteemed citizen, Henry H. Coolidge, who died at his residence in this city on Saturday evening last, at 9 o'clock, after a short but painful illness. Judge Coolidge was born at Leminster, Mass., August 5, 1805, and was near 79 years old. He was educated at Amherst College and paid for his tuition by teaching school during vacation. After leaving college he went to Montreal, where for two years he taught music. He came here in 1836 and clerked it for George W. Hoffman in a dry goods store for a short time. In 1837 he went to Edwardsburg, in Cass county, and was engaged in the dry goods business for four or five years. After which he taught school, and all this time he was improving his leasure moments in studying law. In 1838 he married Sarah A. Mead, of Edwardsburg. He was admitted to the bar in 1844, and elected Prosecuting Attorney of Cass county in 1850. He removed with his family to Niles in 1859 and has resided here ever since. In 1862 he was nominated on the Union ticket and elected Prosecuting Attorney of Berrien county, the duties of which office he discharged with great fidility. In 1867 he was a delegate to the State Constitutional Convention. In 1872 he was appointed by the Governor Circuit Judge in the place of Judge Blackman, resigned. In 1876 he was elected to that office by the people, and resigned in September, 1878, having held that office about six years. Great regret was expressed by all at his resignation, for he faithfully and honestly discharged its duties, and was frequently called to try cases outside his district. Such satisfaction did he give that nearly every county in his district favored his nomination for Judge of the Supreme Court. It was understood by a few that his resignation was on the account of the meager salary and that his son Orville, being in active practice before him. made it somewhat unpleasant. Since his resignation he has been engaged in the active practice of his profession, and up to the time of his last illness he was engaged in an important law suit at Berrien, when he was attacked with bilious cholic. While he has been at his office since, he never recovered from this attack. The serious illness of his companion, whom he loved so much, and with Marion Shies, $1 whom he had lived 46 years, preyed heavily upon him and no doubt hastened his death. Judge Coolige was noted for his abil-

From the mental toils of the day it was a recreation to enjoy with friends innocent games, and he was one of the most social and genial members of society. He will be greatly missed at the bar, in the church, the Sunday school, by his family, and a hosts of friends. The members of the bar attended his funeral in a body on Monday at 4 p. m., and conveyed his remains to the family burying ground, in Silver Brook Cemetery, followed by a large concourse of sympa-thizing citizens."

Has made Chronic Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Blood and Nerves, A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively and has had his many years of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in his opinions and reasonable in his charges. What came very near being a circumstance accurred in H. C. French's hardware store Tuesday afternoon. Mr. C. H. Strong of Galien, bought a revolver which he claimed would not revolve when loaded. The result was two pretty badly scared men and one spoiled revolver. 25c at Memorial Day Notes. MEMORIAL day services brought more than the usual crowd to this place Friday. The program, as arranged by the committee appointed by the G. A. R. Post, was fully carried out. THE crowd of Saturday was rather smaller than usual. Too soon after memorial day.

JOE THOMPSON, formerly leader of the Buchanan band, was here Friday to assist in the playing for memoria services. THE Rev. Mr. Gardner won many applauses by his excellent oration. He

Physicians Trying to Check the Business Man's Life-Gallop. [New York Hour.]

Many physicians in New York are devoting themselves to the task of prolonging the lives of persons who are not ill, yet have begun to wear away too rapidly. Among the practitioners who study the subject carefully, there seems to be but little difference of method. Their first and hardest work is to convince their patients that it is dangerous to live "fast"—a word which has a special significance which makes it absolutely insulting to many eminently respectable transgressors of the laws of health. It seems impossible to persuade a merchant who does more work in one hour than his best clerk can do in three, that he is guilty of fast living and dissipation, even if he never drinks a drop and refrains from all improper pleasures. The lawyer or broker who accomplishes wonders in the morning, but feels a sense of "goneness" early in the afternoon, cannot be made to believe that part of him is literally "gone," and that if he urges himself beyond that point, without first taking a little rest he expends vitality with frightful rapidity. Ladies who, between household cares, religious duties and social responsibilities, are steadily active from 8 in the morning until midnight, some-times wonder why they lose the freshness of youth, while some of their sex, whom they occasionally see, but would not for words speak to, preserve face and figure in spite of lives of which the less said the better. But when these, as well as less innocent classes, are convinced that they are living too rapidly, able physicians begin to arrest the advance of age by urging rest. No practitioner of high standing now prescribes stimulants to any persons not really ill, excepting those who are absolutely compelled to more ex-ertion than is good for them. Short periods of relaxation throughout the day are always found beneficial; some business men have been greatly helped by dropping upon a lounge for five minutes in every hour or two; they may not -can not-stop thinking, but there seems great relief in merely assuming a recumbent position for a little while. During the recent civil war a general whose men were noted for coming out of a hard march in fine fighting condition, attributed his success to his imperative order that his men should lie down whenever a halt was ordered.

Regular and full hours for sleep are also insisted upon, and until the patient endeavors to adhere closely to this rule he does not begin to comprehend how nature's great restorative is diminished in quantity by the demands of business and society in a great city. One or two half-nights of sleep per week do not seem to mar the health of young people, but any person who has reached the age of 35 is weakened by such privations, and few of them who have active nerves can ever make good the "High living" is remorselessly tabooed—not only the custom of drinking a great deal of wine at dinner, but that of eating concentrated food, with stimulating condiments and sauces. Much meat and little vegetables is the rule with active people in large cities. It is the result of a physical craving, born of rapid waste of physical tissue, for stimulation. A hard-working farmer, who is in the open air all day, would not, because he could not, eat as much meat as a slightly-built business man will consume daily in New York, and he would become excitable almost to madness were he to partake as sparingly of bread and vegetables. Good physicians place no restriction on the quantity of food for a city man or woman of active habits, but they urge that the proportion of meats and pastries to vegetable be lessened.

The free use of fruit and milk is strongly advocated, to correct the bad effects of over-eating and of stimulating food. Fruit juices are believed to accelerate the natural and healthful action of the alimentary canal, to prevent the retention of wasted tissue, and to maintain at its normal condition the perspiratory system, one of the most important and least remembered portions of the physical machinery. While not delaying or diminishing nutrition in any way, fruit, if used in sufficient quantity, is known to lower the temperature of the blood that is overheated by liberal feeding, combined with lack of exercise. New York has plenty of melons and peaches during the summer months; but in eight of the twelve months of the year fruit is regarded as a luxury rather than a necessity. A physician with a large practice in a fashionable district in New York said recently that careful inquiry failed to di-cover that any one of his patients ever bought apples, except for special treatment in the kitchen, although the apple is the most abundant, cheap and ever-present of the fruits which are peculiarly beneficial as food.

Turning One of Boston's Corners.

[Rockland Courier-Gazette.] Everybody knows of the crookedness of Boston streets, but we think Will Rivers tells the best story about them. He says he was looking for a certain place one day, and, after turning multitudinous corners and becoming hopelessly involved in a maze of sinuosity (William didn't say sinusity, but he would if he had thought of it), he resolved to ask assistance. Turning another corner at that moment he saw just ahead of him a man, who e coat he reached out quickly to grasp to arrest his attention, when he himself at the same moment felt a violent pull from behind. Turning hastily, Will discovered that by reason of the crooked street and phenomenally sharp corner he had grabbed himself by his own coat-tail.

Value of False Hair.

[Exchange.]
The most expensive kind of false hair is natural silver white. It is worth $18 or $20 an ounce, more than its weight in gold. Bleached white hair is worth only $3 an ounce. Natural hair of ordinary shade is worth from $5 to $20 a pound, except the hair collected by rag-pickers, which brings only from $1 to $3. The value of different colors of hair depends on the fashion. Yellow hair, not golden, is almost useless. SOMETHING ABOUT AMBER.

What It Is and Where It Is Found-Entombed Insects.

[New York News.] But what is amber? Two thousand years ago Pliny pronounced it the fossil resin of an extinct conifer, Succinum pinites, and this belief, indorsed by Goppert, has displaced the romantic and mythological tear theory. Thousands of years since a vast conifer forest extended from what is now Holland over the German coast of the Baltic sea, and far into adjacent territory, and on this shore the most plentiful deposits of the substance are now found. The amber, or rather the gum that formed it, exuded from the trees as we now see gum exude from pine and spruce trees. Every boy who has been "spruce gumming" can understand the matter. On the Pomeranian plains in the Hauptvaterland pieces weighing four pounds have been taken from the surface clay near Bradenburg. This is one of the finest deposits. A similar one exists on the peninsula of Samland, where in former times the crown claimed a proprietary right to the treasure, detailing gendarmes to watch the seekers one-tenth of the value of their dis-As long ago as Nero's reign an expedition was sent to the shores of the Baltic to seek for amber with signal success, about 13,000 pounds being secured, nearly all of which was obtained from the belt that runs between Pillau and Grosz Hubenicken, on the coast of Prussia. Here exist regular mines of the substance. Somes of these mines are 130 feet in depth, and extend through strata of bituminous wood, often forty to fifty feet in thickness, at a great distance below the surface of sand and clay. Here lie the trunks, or the remains of them, of the extinct trees, more or less impregnated with the precious resin, in apparently inexhaustible supply. There is evidence that the old forests are now under water far out in the Baltic, for after severe storms the gum is found floating on the water, evidently broken off from the submerged base of supplies by the action of the waves.

The amber fishery, if it may be called a fishery, is a regular industry at such times, and the fishers, like the little old man of the nursery rhyme, "clothed all in leather," wade as far out into the water as their stature will permit, and, with bag nets attached to long poles, scoop in as much amber as is within reach. Drag nets are also used to remove it from the bottom. These Baltic mines yield an annual produce of about 300,000 pounds, and it has been estimated that the value of the unmined supply is still worth millions of dollars. It is believed that not less than 2.000 tons have been quarried during the present century. The amber is packed in baskets and stowed away in properly prepared vaults until de-manded by the market. The records of one system of these vaults run back as far as A. D. 1500, and show that since that time 60,000 tons of amber have been extracted from this Baltic The most interesting fragments of imber are those which contain the bodies of insects and reptiles, vegetable fragments and other inclosures. If, as Peter Pindar has told us, King George marveled as to how the apples got into the dumplings, what must he have thought or wondered when he saw a spider so perfectly intombed in a solid and transparent mass of amber? Any one who knew could have told him that the viscid exudation of the tree, running its trunk, caught the unlucky creature in an unrelenting embrace, gradually enveloped him and carried him down to a tertiary bed, where he should lie for thousands of years, until dug up, tomb and all, to figure in a necklace or a brooch or repose on the musty shelf of a scien-tific cabinet. Many of them show evidences of having struggled to extricate themselves from the clinging mass, legs and wings being sometimes found at a distance from the body, in a posi-tion to show that they had become detached in the efforts of their owners to [Cincinnati Enquirer.] April and May are the egg months. That is to say there are more boxes barrels, and cases of hen fruit handled in these two months of the year than in any other four months; and the first half of April this year beats the whole thirty days of any other month on record. In the fifteen days there were received in New York—this includes only the quantities reported through the regular channels of trade-the almost increditable aggregate of 83,000 barrels of eggs. Each barrel contains seventy dozen, and so there were shipped into New York in fifteen days no less than 4,810,000 dozen, or nearly 70,000,000 of eggs.

Size of the Egg Business.

The biggest previous report is of $2,000 l arrels in a whole month. Such an aggregate as this gives an approximate idea of the extent of the eggpacking and shipping business. It looks a little like heaping Alp upon Alps to pursue this inquiry further: but just for curiosity we will see what quantity of the article is set down in the pages of the Ohio statistical reports. The report for 1880 is not just now accessible, but that for 1882 shows a total of 31,627,941 dozen, and Ohio is not such a big state for eggs, either. It doesn't seem out of the way to calculate that fully one-half as many dozens go into consumption, for manufacturing, table and propagation purposes, that are never reported in the official lists.

Sure Enough. [Bayard (Iowa) News.] Leaving home this morning for the office, we kissed our little 4-year-old good-bye, saying to him: "Be a good boy to-day." He somewhat surprised us by saying: "I will. Be a good man, Sure enough, we thought. We need the exhortation more than he.

Looks Like It.

A poet chirps: "Encircled by that yawning gulf I stood entranced." It looks like a delicate intimation of the fact that he tried to kiss a St. Lynis girl.

A Snail in an Ant's Nest.

[John Burroughs in The Century.] I took one of those large, black, shelless snails with which this land abounds, a snail the size of my thumb, and dropped it upon the nest. The ants swarmed upon it at once, and began to sink their jaws into it. This woke the snail up to the true situation, and it showed itself not without resources against its enemies. Flee, like the beetle, it could not, but it bore an invisible armor; it began to secrete from every pore of its body a thick, whitish, viscid substance, that tied every ant that came in contact with it, hand and foot, in a twinkling. When a thick coating of this impromptu bird-lime had been exuded, the snail wriggled right and left a few times, partly sloughing it off, and thus ingulfing hundreds of its antagonists. Never was army of ants or of men bound in such a Stygian quagmire before. New phalanxes rushed up and tried to scale the mass; most of them were mired like their fellows, but a few succeeded and gained the snail's back; then began the preparation of another avalanche of glue; the creature seemed to dwindle in size, and to nerve itself to the work; as fast as the ants reached him in any number he ingulfed them; he poured the vials of his glutinous wrath upon them, till he had formed quite a rampart of cemented and helpless ants about him; fresh ones constantly coming up laid hold of the barricade with their jaws, and were often hung that way. I lingered half an hour or more to see the issue, but was finally compelled to come away before the closing scene. I presume the ants finally triumphed.

Edison's Prophecy of Ballooning. [New York Express.]

"But about the balloon?" "Well, having lightness with power, we should not need enough balloon for actual lifting power and we could at-tain a very high velocity. You could hold a ten-horse power motor out in your hand, and, once in the air, with five pounds of coal, could the consump-tion be made direct, the little jigger could go anywhere. Nobcdy would want to ascend to great heights where the air's resistance to the propeller would decrease, but skim along over the trees and houses like a bird above the water. The rudders could all be worked, and your ballastless balloon could be raised or lowered, turned to the right or left, by the motor itself, and a boy could do all the work. Such an arrangement would scarcely do for heavy freight, but it could carry passengers, and mail matter, and express parcels, and move readily at eighty to 100 miles an hour. If we can solve the power question we can do anything."

Bismarck's Policy. According to Dr. Busch's biography Bismarck's policy is based upon three political exigencies: a close and intimate alliance with Austria, friendly relations with Russia; the isolation of France from all continental alliances. So far he has succeeded.

A Simple Remedy.

[Peck's Sun.] "The best remedy I know of for this foot-and-mouth disease," remarked old Mrs. Blinker, as she looked up from the paper, "is for folks to stay at home more and talk less." And then she resumed her reading. Piedmont (Ga.) Press: Don't look down on a laboring man. Who was your father? Who was your grandfather? Who was your uncle? Who are you, anyway? Comfort, Economy and Speed.

He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. tions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Dr. Pengelly:

Dear Sir.—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zont-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. Miss C. G. Jersey Ville, Ill., April 25, 1882.

Dr. Pengelly:

Dear Sir.—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zon-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did, her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zon-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

Mrs. Sarah I kandolph.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodie pain in my head and general nervous lebility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My hu b und said we would test Zoa-Phora thorou fily. He gave it to me according to directions for severe ca-cs, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladles who suffer from nervous or sick head-ache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

A MICHICAN LOGGING CAMP.

Ninety Tons of Lumber Pulled Over an Ice Road by Two Horses. [Cleveland Leader.]

The several logging camps of one lumber firm in this city are all in north-ern Michigan, and have turned out in the season just closed an aggregate of 40,000,000 feet of lumber. The camps are scattered along the Au Sable and Pine rivers. Some of the logs are floated 150 miles before the mill at Oscoda is reached. The logs are hauled from where they are cut to the river on low bob sleds over a carefully prepared roadway. These roads, after a snow foundation is formed at the beginning of the season, are carefully scraped with a patent scraper. Then a sprinkling-cart, with an abundant flow of water, is run over the road at night. The water freezes and makes the roadbed a mass of solid ice. Each snowfall is carefully scraped off and the flooding process continues until the ice driveway is eighteen or twenty inches above the surface of the ad-jacent land. Thus built, the roadbeds are firm and not as susceptible to a thaw as the ordinary snow-packed roads. In laying out these roads a dis-tance of two miles is often traversed to make a point not more than onequarter of a mile distant. This is requisite in making it perfectly level or with a slight incline toward the objective point of the loaded sleds.

On such magnificent roals immense hauls can be made, and the expense incurred in building and caring for them is amptly just fied. In the company's office in this city is a large photograph of the largest load of logs ever drawn by a single team of horses. The nicture was taken about three weeks ago at Ctsega lake, on the head waters of the Au Sable river. There are twenty-one pine logs, sixty-four feet long, and the load measured 30,038 feet of good lumber, board measure. The hollow butts, bark, and waste are all scaled out of these figures. A close estimate of the weight of the load puts it at ninety tons.

The team weighed about 3,200 pounds, and easily hauled this immense weight a distance of a mile and a quarter. The horses pull wide apart, the neck yoke and whitletrees being twelve feet in length. The bolsters of the bob sleds on which the load rests are of the same length, and the logs rise up to a height of about sixteen feet. The runners of the bob sleds are about four inches wide and six inches thick. The bobs set very low and spread fully twelve feet. They are connected by cross chains which run from the heel of the front sled to the toe of the rear one, crossing in the centre. The logs are loaded by means of skids which reach from the ground to the load. With a rope and tackle the horses roll the logs up the inclined plane in o place with the greatest ease. There is a deal of rivalry in the lumber camp; over the question of big loads. A few years ago three or four of these logs, caling 1,500 or 2,000 feet of lumber, were considered a pretty good load for a team. The improved roadways have largely contributed to the increased

The Strawberry Box.

[Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.]

Horticulturists inform us that the largeness of the improved strawberry and the diminutiveness of the highlybred box will not for this season prevent the latter from accommodating at least one specimen of the fruit When A. T. Stewart Was Nominated.

[Ben: Perley Poore.]

A. T. Stewart, the New York merchant prince, made large sales to the government during the war for the up-pression of the rebellion, and he displayed his gratitude by making Mrs. Lincoln handsome presents. He was also a large contributor to the fund of $100,000 raised by the merchants of New York for Gen. Grant, as an acknowledgment of his war services: and when the general was elected president, Mr. Stewart was selected by him as the man to reorganize the treasury department, prune off its excrescences, and reform its abuses. Mr. Stewart was deighted with the order, and had a suite of rooms in the libbitt house, with a private entrance fitted for his occupation until he could go housekeeping. A few days before the 4th of March he came to Washington and occupied these three rooms, with Judge Hilton as his companion and adviser. After the inauguration, he was nominated by Gen. Grant; but Senator Sumner, who had been consulted as to the formation of the cabinet, interposed his objection to he immediate consideration of Mr. Stewart's nomination.

Late in the afternoon of that day, a rumor got abroad that there was a law. understood to have been really written by Alexander Hamilton while secretary of the treasury, prohibiting an importer in active business from holding the position of secretary of the treasury. A newspaper correspondent obtained the law bearing on the case, and carried it to Gen. Butterfield, who conveyed it to Mr. Stewart and his legal adviser, Judge Hilton. They consulted Chief Justice Chase, and he confirmed the view which had been taken of the law by those who first brought it to Mr.

devote the entire profits that might accrue during the time that he should hold the office of secretary of the treasury to charitable objects. But this was decided to be something which would not be proper, either for him to carry out, or for the government to accept. Immediately after seeing Chief Justice Chase, Mr. Stewart and Judge Hilton drove to the White House, and laid the facts and opinions before the president, who, on the next day, wrote a message to the senate, asking that the law of 1788 be set aside so as to enable the candidate to hold the office. This the senate declined to do. It was a very natural ambition for a man of Mr. Stewart's tastes and training to desire to be at the head of the treasury, and it is not unlikely that the disappointment was a very severe one. This was the beginning of the "unpleasantness" between President Grant and Senator Sumner, which finally resulted in an open rupture.

Pet Cats! Pictures.

[New York Sun.] "It was expected, said a west side photographer, "that instantaneous photography would result in some interesting scientific revelations. And so it has, but by far the most conspicuous result of the instantaneous process is the vast number of photographs of cats in the possession of the great American people. "You see," the photographer went on.

about nine-tenths of the household ets in the cities are cats. Allowing then, that the increase in the numbers of other pets photographed has been proportionately great, the grand total eems still to consist principally of pictures of cats. There is this also to be remembered, that the instantaneous process is the only one you can depend upon for a good picture of Thomas or Tabby, and the discovery of that process has made easy work of what was very uncertain and uphill business.
"It is a fact in natural history," coninued the man of the camera, with a learned air, "that the cat is almost the only creature which does not remain motionless for a moment when it hears an unusual sound. Now, suppose you succeed in making a cat lie still in a chair or on a stand till you have stepped out of the camera's field. Then the man at the camera tinkles a bell or does something to attract pus y's attention so that she will look like a live cat. What does she do? Well, her spine begins to arch, the hairs on it tip forward, her tail becomes as big as your arm. It is a good time then to abandon the work. She thinks you're putting up a job on h∈r, and makes a break for the skylight. "But the quick-as a-wink method," said the man of dry and wet plates, "has done away with all this. It is quick enough to photograph greased lightning: and wi h it the historic cats of Kilkenny could have been pictured just as they would have looked, if the eye were as quick as the camera, when their memorable conflict was at its hottest. A handsome cat makes a very pretty photograph, and the popularity of pictures of pet cats has grown so much that there is almost a craze in fashionable life for having the Toms and Tabbies of the household reproduced on imperial cards and displayed in velvet frames on brackets and chimney pieces.'

Pipe Clay from New Jersey---Its Peeuliarities---Dexterous Workmen. [Detroit Free Press.] However, there are cheaper pipes made than these by the stolid carver of Mayence, who once made a pipe that cost $500. Detroit makes a pipe that sells at wholesale for about the fifth of a cent, and at retail for a cent, which is somewhat cheaper than meerschaum even in Germany. There are three of these clay pipe factories in Detroit, America used to get its clay pipes mostly from Scotland, there being some large factories in Glasgow; but now all the chanical. There is no margin for nice ornamentation on a 1 cent pipe. In the first place the clay comes from Woodbridge, N. J., where it costs $3.50 a ton. The freight then costs $5 a ton, and by the time the clay is at the factory it is worth $10. So far all attempts to find pipe clay nearer at hand have been unsuccessful. If any Michigan or Ohio farmer reads this and thinks he has pipe clay on his farm, let him put a churk of it in the fire. If it burns red it won't do; if it turns white the pipe factories of Detroit will be glad to hear from him, and the chances are that his fortune will be made. It is rather curious that no one has ever tried red clay pipes. They are used in Turkey and on the south shores of the Mediterranean, where they certainly know

There are six men and two girls working at the Joseph Campau avenue factory. One man takes the moist lumps of clay and with one lump in each hand rapidly rolls them into the shape of a club with a spindle handle and a heavy end. The dexterous manner in which he works with both hands at once would please Charles Reade, the champion of ambi-dexterity. Three men work at three machines and turn these soft clubs of clay into the shape of pipes with great rapidity. Each man makes about 2,440 pipes a day. They take the clay club; dip a long needle in a mixture of kerosene and fish oil; run the needle into the stem of the future pipe; rub the clay with the oil mixture; chuck it into the steel mold; squeeze down a lever that presses out the hollow of the bowl. When released it is the blue semblance of a clay pipe, and all these and then turned over to a couple of girls, who give them a sort of finishing polish. They are next allowed to dry and are then packed in earthenware crocks. These crocks are placed in the furnace and about 50,000 pipes burnt at once. They come out pure white, and are then packed up in cases Stewart's attention.
