IN A MOMENT OF PIOUE.

You're too good a fellow to be trifled with, Allan," said Charley Leonard in a tone of measured confidence. hate to see a woman make a fool of you, and Nora Lindsley-"What makes you think she's making a fool of me?" Allan asked in a quiet way that quite concealed the lepths of his feelings. "My dear boy, you must look at these things in a common-sense light. Miss Lindsey is an heiress—the richest girl in Cambridge; you are-" "What?" "Well, you know very well, Allan, that, from a worldly point of view, you are poor, like myself!"

"I have a few thousand, Charley; and then, there's my profession. I could support a wife comfortably on my income. I have enough to make woman happy, if she loves me."
"Yes, if—if—! That's just it!" cried

Charley, springing up and pacing the room with a restless stride. "Women don't love nowadays—not with their hearts, at least. It is all fancy." Allan looked up, half quizzically. "Ah, I thought there was something ehind all this cynicism," he said. "You have been playing with the divine fire again. You and your Dulcinea are "Don't joke about it, Al, for heaven's sake! It a is home thrust, this time. Three weeks ago I thought my happiness was assured. The woman I loved had promised to marry me, and now, for the merest trifle she has cast me aside. No wonder I have no faith in woman and their professions." "I'm sorry to hear it, Charley-indeed I am-and I hope it may only prove a lovers' quarrel. But you must not expect me to share your doubts. I love Nora Lindsley with my whole soul, and I intend to ask her to be my

"Well, I wish you success, Al. For-give me for meddling. I only—" The door opened and a rough old fellow came lumbering in-one of Allan's clients Charley picked up his hat and left, with the brief remark:

"I'll see you later." It was while Allan was engaged with this client that the postman came in and through down upon the desk a thick envelope, with a graceful superscription that contrasted strongly with the careless, dashing style of business correspondence. Allan's heart bounded.

His patience hardly lasted till he was alone and could open the letter. It was rather longer than Miss Lindsey's favors usually were—two full sheets, beginning: "My dear Mr. West-lock," and ending, "Your friend always "Your Liveley." —Nora Linsley.'

"Your letter was rather a favor." she said on the first page. "Seaton is a pretty place, but horribly dull in I shall be so glad to get back winter. to Cambridge! It was very kind of you to ask me to go and see Bernhardt next Wednesday. It will give me great pleasure to do so.'

Then the letter wandered on in a pleasant way till the bottom of the fourth page, when there was a complete break. The second sheet did not go with the first at all. Neither the words nor the ideas were in any way connected. Allan turned it over and over in new bewilderment, and finally held it perfectly still, whild these lines stared him straight in the face:

"I am only flirting with Mr. Westlock, and leading him on for the sake of amusement. Don't distress rourself, my dear Blanche. I know what is best for my own ha piness. I shallnever marry a manwhom I do not love." The paper trembled in Allan's hands and he gasped for breath. "Good heavens!" he cried, hoarsely

'What does this mean?" Slowly it dawned upon him that by some mistake, a part of another letter, not intended for his eyes, had been in closed in the envelope that bore his address. But what did it reveal to him?

Allan crushed the fatal sheet in his hand, and sank down in a chair with a pale, distorted countenance. It was hours before he could com mand himself; but once he gained the mastery, he drew from his pocket two theatre tickets, and taking up a sheet of elegant note-paper wrote as follows: DEAR MISS LINDSEY:-Circumstances compel ne to recall my invitation for next. I enclose you the tickets. You have so many attendants that I am sure you will not want for an escort. Hoping you will enjoy the performance, I am, yours truly, ALLAN WESTLOCK." That was all! "She shall never know by word or act of mine," he said, as he drorped this note in the box on his way to supper. "That dream is over, and my happiness is at an end forever; but she shall not know it. I will hide my suffering from her if I die for it!" That evening when society was about wakening to the touch of dissipation, Allan Westlock presented himself in faultless attire in the parlor of a pretty up-town residence.

"How fortunate I am to find you at home!" he murmured, as he bent over the slender white hand of a tall, graceful girl, in an exquisite dress of pale blue surah. "But what have you been

"Promise me you will not tell him!" she cried frantically.

No Pension for Him. At a club dinner in New York recently, an examining surgeon related the following incident, showing how the Arrears act developed pensioners out of sound and undeserving men. During the war he was surgeon of an infantry regiment. When the regiment first went into battle he observ ed, sitting behind a big tree at a safe distance from the fighting-line, the captain of one of the companies.

"What are you doing here, captain?" asked the doctor. "I'm not feeling well," replied the officer, in a doleful voice. The surgeon was too busy looking after the wounded to stop and inquire as to his complaint. A few weeks later the regiment again got under fire, and the surgeon found the same captain skulking behind a barn. "Hello! sick again?" he exclaimed. "Well, the fact is, doctor, I'm not exactly sick. I may as well own up that I'm a coward. There's no help for it, It must be constitutional. Now, doctor, what's the use of my staying in the army? Won't you help me get a discharge?" The surgeon thought he was doing the country a service when, a few days afterward, he recommended that the man be discharged on the ground of general disability. He heard nothing of the captain until sixteen years later, when he received a letter from the Pension Office informing him that Captain Blank had applied for a pension from the date of his muster-out, and that as he, as surgeon of the regiment, had certified to the disability, would he kindly inform the Government as to the nature of the disease from which the officer suffered? The surgeon replied that the captain's complaint was chronic and incurable cowardice, not contracted in the line of his duty, but constitutional. The captain's name did not go upon the roll, and his plan for getting some four thousand dollars for arrears and twenty dollars a month for the rest of his life came to grief .-The Century.

A Brief History of Wall Street.

Across the Island of New York, in 1685, a wall of earth and stones was built, a wall cannon-mounted, to keer back the savages. Along this wall ran a street, and as the street kept the line of the wall it was appropriately called Wall street. Short, natural, unarchitectural, and yet unique in its history, and, excepting Lombard street London, the mightiest street in the world. There the United States government was born. There Washington held his levees. There Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Arnold and Mrs. Caldwell. and Mrs. Knox and other brilliant women of the revolution displayed their charms. There preached Witherspoon, Jonathan Edwards and George White-field. There Dr. John Mason chided Alexander Hamilton for writing the constitution without any God in it. There negroes were sold in the slave mart. There criminals were harnessed to wheelbarrows and compelled to draw burdens. There they were lashed through the street behind carts to which they were fastened. That street has seen the coronation and the burial of 10,000 fortunes. The abode of just the opposites - unswerving integrity and tip-top scoundrelism, heaven-descended charity and bloodless Shylcckism. The history of Wall street would be the history of the commerce of America.

President Arthur has just taken the LL. D. degree at Princeton.

The Indiana Democratic State Convention, yesterday, nominated Isaac P. Gray for Governor.

No lack for Presidential candidates this year, and they appear to have pretty good success getting nominated.

The prohibition and anti-secret party of this country, held a national convention at Chicago on Friday last and nominated S. C. Pomeroy, of Kansas, for President and J. A. Conant, for Vice President.

The Republicans of Indiana have nominated Major Calkins for Governor, which means that Indiana is going Republican in November. When Major Calkins undertakes anything of the kind, he is the kind of man who always gets there.

The Independents of New York had a meeting at the residence of one of the Harpers, a few days since, and were not crowded. Before election day they will be able to be accommodated in one of the bedrooms.

The committee appointed by the Republican National Convention went to to Maine, and on Saturday last officially notified Mr. Blaine of his nomination for the Presidency, through the chairman, Gen. Henderson.

There is a strong Cleveland wind blowing toward Chicago. It is no evidence that because he carried New York by such a large majority vote, that he can carry the country. He didn't have James G. Blaine to run against then.

A list of twenty-seven papers of Virginia has been published that support Blaine and Logan, and the list is said to be only a partial one. The Republican party of that state has become a power and will make itself felt. Senator Mahone may not have been far out of the way when he said the Republicans have a good show to carry the state next fall.

Harvard University has by an old practice conferred the degree of LL. D. on the Governor of Massachusetss, but last year they refused to confer the empty honor upon Gov. Robinson has refused to accept the degree from another Massachusetts college that offered it to him.

During the thunder storm Wednesday, the Allegan Journal and Tribune office was visited by a stroke of lightning, which played tag among the belts and machinery for an instant, and finally came in contact with the drive belt of the engine and exploded, making a report similar to that of a musket. No injury was done further than a somewhat frightened crew.

Maj. W. H. Calkins, the popular member of Congress from the adjoining district in Indiana, was nominated by the Republicans of that State for Governor last Thursday. In his speech at the convention after his nomination, he reviewed the two parties in a masterly manner, and concluded with the following reference to the nominees for President and Vice President: "Before I conclude I must refer to the gallant men who head your National ticket. I know them both well. It has been my pleasure in the past to somewhat associate with both, and today the people of this country may felicitate themselves upon the fact that their delegates at Chicago expressed the wish of the Republican party [Applause.] James G. Blaine, of Maine [applause], the prince of parliamentarians and the leader of leaders. The Plumed Knight, as he was dubbed by Ingersoll, stands preeminently as the man of all others who is close to the Republican heart. I know our Democratic friends have already begun with their calumnies. Already you have seen the vile caricatures. But let me give you a tattoo that the Republican party should give to James G. Blaine. They will write on one of his arms, "Love of country." They will write upon the other, "Patriotism." They will write upon each of his legs, "Glory and honor to his country." They will place his feet on the Constitution and they will entwine his brow with a laurel-wreath, with victory surmounting it, and in November the tattoo will be complete. [Applause.] Brave Jack Logan, the typical American soldier, the man of all others in this Nation who succeeded in spite of West Point! I recall him now, when the battle was raging, when the lines trembled, with his sword gleaming in the air behind the seried ranks, asking the brave volunteers to stand to-day for their country and their flag. I see him to-day the brave volunteer soldier leading his corps on to victory; the soldier who never knew defeat. [Applause.] With such leaders the Republican party cannot fail."

The Grand Army boys of this place have very warm spots in their hearts for Rev. W. I. Cogshrll of the Methodist church, who takes a great interest in them and their post. Desiring to give some expression to this feeling the boys Monday evening mustered, closed rank ang marched in a body to the Metho-Cogshall's residence where they found him on the front porch with his feet elevated above his head, and his portly person completely concealed behind the voluminous folds of a newspaper. Before he knew what was up, the 'vets" had filed in front of him, while W. D. Brainerd, stepping out from the ranks, in a few happy words informed the astonished "parson" that he need fear no evil, that they were there only for the purpose of letting him know that they appreciated the interest he felt in them and took this way of showing it. Mr. Cogshall began to fill up, but finally managed to say: "There are times when a man can't say what he wants to, and this is one of those times, but I can take every blessed one of you by the hand, nevertheless," and jumping down among them he suited the action to the word. I take this method to inform the citzens of Buchanan and all the surrounding country, relative to the house and ground in the village of Buchanan, county of Berrien, State of Michigan, known as Jones' corner, that I went upon the ground above referred to in 1880, and paid rent to Thomas Jones for ground, as staked off by T. Jones, until November 17, 1881, and I was at that time informed by Attorney Howlett that Thomas Jones did not own the property above referred to, that the property belonged to Mrs. Graves, of Niles, and he (Howlett) had the right to sell house and ground; and then and there Mr. Howlett offered to sell to me the west half of eighty-three feet six inches of the property in question. I informed Howlett that I would look at the abstracts, and if correct I would give him his price. I think Thomas Jones bought the east half of the eighty-three feet six inches, the amount being 41 feet 9 inches. The county surveyor surveyed the ground in question, and according to deeds and survey, and on my part of the ground fell nearly half of the house on the east side of me. The flames of civil war lighted at Sumpter almost a quarter of a century ago, were only quenched by almost superhuman deeds of bravery. The noble achievements of the loyal legions upon the battle-field during those eventful years, outrivaled in glory and splendor all that had previously been recorded of the heroism and prowess of men. War is simply an aggregation of deeds of valor, and the plumed palatried sulphur fumes but found that dins of the north, whose foemen were worthy of their steel, performed acts of courage that will live in song and story until oblivion shall set its final seal upon human history. As in all such conflicts this great upheaval was characterized by many instances of individual intrepidity, some of which haply have been preserved and constitute a part of the records of the war. Others are only remembered by the few who witnessed them; while others again have been told for the last time. as the hearts in which they were treasured have ceased to live. It is to be regretted that all these thrilling events could not be preserved in the annals of our restored and re-united nation Of this unwritten history a short chapter is herewith given.

One of the most gallant men that ever drew saber or wore spurs is Capt. Thomas H. Botham, whose portrait heads this article. The old hero resides at St. Joseph, Berrien county, this Rapids. He had formerly been a drill sergeant in the British army, and was an accomplished swordsman. In the spring of 1862 the regiment, fresh from the victories of Island No. 10 and New Madrid, was transferred with Pope's entire command to Southern Tennessee, where it participated in the siege of Corinth. The troops disembarked at Hamburg Landing on the Tennessee river, a short distance from the bloody field of Shiloh, and the following day marched southward about four miles and encamped on eligible ground away from the swollen and overflowing river. One morning soon after daybreak, while encamped at this place, a picked regiment of rebel cavalry from Cor inth made an attack on the Federal picket line, which, after a stubborn re sistance, slowly retired in the direction of the camp. Brigadier General Palmer, of Illinois, ordered two companies of the Third Michigan and two of the Seventh Illinois cayalry to repel the attack. The latter engaged the enemy in front, while the Michigan men, by flank movement, endeavored to get to Botham at the head of Company I led this enterprise. The valorous Michigan boys were well mounted and full of fight. They crossing gullies, galloping through thickets, the nature of the ground be ing such that they were not observed by the Confederates until they reached swamps. As the command ascended this eminence it was observed by the rebels who well knew the import of the maleuver. They instantly began to retreat. There was but little order in their flight. They swept away in detached masses, firing as they went with the two Michigan companies in hot pursuit. Botham was in advance, mounted on a fine gray mare, one of the fleetest animals in the regiment. It was his custom to say to his men, "Come!" never to "Go," He was in his element on this lovely May morning. A splendid rider, and a skilled swordsman, it was the conviction of those who knew his dauntless spirit and fiery nature, that it would be a sorry hour for the rebel he should over take. And so it proved.

It soon became evident to the old hero that the rebels had so much the start they would escape to the last man unless he could come up to some of the more isolated squads by the superior fleetness of his horse. Motioning his men to come on and twirling his flashing sabre in circles around his head, away he dashed with the speed of the wind. Early in the race his hat was lost, and he skimmed the air bareheaded. Overtaking a straggler who scoffed his summons to surrender, his quicker horse brought him alongside, when by a single upward stroke of his sabre he laid open the rebel's cheek, slit his ear in twain and gashed his scalp neary to the top of his head. The fellow oled fearfully and was speedily taken by the Captain's followers.

This was but a trifling matter. The blood of the indomitable Captain was up, and on he flew in quest of more game. Observing a party of the enemy dashing along a highway at his left, he spurred across a field to intercept them. In a flying leap across a creek that lay in his way his horse fell. owing to an undermined bank. She came down on her rider's leg, halfwrenching his hip from its socket, and at the same time his shin was terribly lacerated by the stirrup of his saddle. But in the excitement these hurts were unnoticed. Rescuing his floundering horse he re-mounted and was off again just as a portion of his command came up to the creek. But two of his troopers gained the opposite bank, their leader being then half a mile away. Upon reaching the top of an eminence covered with undergrowth Capt. Botham saw in the road a quarter of a mile to his left, and coming in the direction of his place of concealment, a body of two hundred rebels dential reasons he kept close cover, and they swept by at a gallop amid a shower of dust. Directly a squad of eight others approached, and he instantly formed the resolve to intercept and capture them or give them a bloody fight. Putting spurs to his horse he burst like an apparition from his covert. He flew toward them with his | Fourth. tract, and a good and sufficient deed gray hair streaming in the wind, his face aflame and his keen eye flashing fire. Heading off the astonished rebs, and whirling his sabre in rapid circles above his head he called out in stentorian tones, 'Halt! throw down your arms or I'll cut you in pieces!' The panic struck foe did as they were commanded, and five others riding up in ones or twos also yielded to the Captain's menacing orders. Just then Corporal Cochran and Private Philetus Farr. also of St. Joseph, joined the victor and assisted in conducting the rebels into camp. In addition to the thirteen prisoners (fourteen with the wounded man), there were captured 14 horses, 14 carbines, 14 sabres and 54 rounds of ammunition. The gallant achievement was quickly in everybody's mouth, and Botham became the hero of the hour. He was highly complimented by Gen. Pope, Gen. Palmer, Colonel Mizner, commanding the Third Cavalry, and other prominent officers. The Captain's career in the army was made up of gallant exploits, but we will relate only one other. While the army was near Rienzi, Miss., after the fall of Corinth, he was ordered to the front and told to advance till he found the enemy. After an all night's picket service ten miles outside of camp, he moved forward at daylight. His force numbered 64 men. After an advance of two and a half miles a strong picket was encountered. It was instantly driven in, and their camp, which proved to be that of the Eighth Mississippi Cavalry, charged at full gallop. The regiment, composed of several hundred men, warned by the firing, was partially drawn up in line to receive the Federals. Botham, as he swept with his men like a tornado among them, gave command to fire. His navies emptied many rebel saddles, the riderless horses galloping about the camp in terror. The enemy did some desultory firing but Botham brought off all his men unharmed, save that a soldier named Frank Versaw, of Sodus, Berrien county, whose horse becoming unmanage-able ran into a swamp when he was taken prisoner, and after he was captured Versaw was shot through the knee, receiving a bad wound. This was a most gallant action of both officer and men. Soon after, Capt. Bctham, owing to injuries received in the service, resigned and went home. After a brief rest he recruited a company compelled to retire from the service for the reasons compelling his first resignation. Capt. Botham was born at Radbourne, a little country village in Derbyshire, England. May 11, 1816. At the age of 18 he enlisted in the Seventh Queen's Own Hussars, a cavalry regiment, in which he served seven years. His regiment assisted in suppressing the Patriot Rebellion in '37, '38 and '39. He was promoted meantime to Sergeant, and held that rank in the riding-school for the drilling of new recruits and young horses. In '57 he removed to St. Joseph, of which place he is now a spirited and enterprising citizen.

Louisville and New Orleans.

To the people of the State of Michigan. I deem it my duty, in view of the importance of the subject, to call your attention to the Louisville exposition to be held at the city of Louisville, Kentucky, from August 16 to October 26, 1884, both inclusive, and also to the New Orleans exposition, commencing Dec. 4, 1884, and closing, not later than May 31, 1885.

The exhibit made by the west Michigan farmers' club at Louisville last fall was most creditable to the indussults to the state have already manifested themselves in increased immigration, and the constant inquiries made as to the resources of Michigan from all sections of the country. It is contemplated to have a full exhibit of the agricultural, pomological, and mineral productions of Michigan. The native woods of the state in a finished and unfinished condition will also be a marked feature. It will be readily seen of how great and far-reaching importance a full and complete exhibit of the resources of the state of Michigan must be to its people. No appropriation was made by the legislature of 1883 to defray the expenses of such an exhibit on the part of the state, and I therefore feel it incumbent on me to urge upon all interested the necessity of liberally aiding to make the Michigan exhibit, at both the Louisville and New Orleans expositions, a credit to our great and growstate, and a means of materially increasing its growth and prosperity. F. M. Carroll of Grand Rapids and A. P. Swineford of Marquette are the duly appointed state commissioners All cummunications and remmit tances should be sent to the commis sioners at Grand Rapids. With the hope and belief that so im portant a project will meet with hearty and liberal support, I again commend it to the enlightened and public-spirit ed people of Michigan, JOHN W. BEGOLE.

The Chances in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—The effect of the Republican nominations at Chicago is already seen in Virginia The Democrats in their nominations for Congress are disposed to ignore the strict Bourbons and where possible to induce Readjusters to run. A promi nent Virginian says: "The nomination of Mr. Blaine has thrown the Republican party of the state into a solid phalanx against Bourbonism, and thus the possibility of securing enough votes of the Republicans to pass a law taking the election machinery out of the hands of the Republican party is gone. Should the Legislature be convened there is no chance of passing over the Governor's veto the election laws of the last session, and this would be the only cause for an extra session. Not only do the Liberal Republican members of the Senate refuse to sign the call for an extra session, but the Strightout Republicans also decline. There will, therefore, be a fair election this fall in Virginia, and the State is almost sure to go Republican. Some claim a majority of 20,000 for Blaine. Campaign clubs are forming in many parts of the state, and the pine cone as an emblem has been adopted."

Mistory of the Republican Party.

Thirty years have passed away since the Republican party came into existence. No thirty years of the world's history have produced more thrilling scenes, and no party ever had such a grand record. Organized at a time when the slave power was encroaching upon free territory, and for the avowed purpose of preventing the further extension of slavery, it has passed through and been victorious in the greatest war of modern times, restored the rebel states to all their rights, grabbled successfully with all the questions growing out of the war, reconstruction, finance and tariff, elected six presidential caudidates, and is now in the midst of its eighth presidential campaign. All these events are graphically told by Frank A. Flower, in his History of the Republican Party; its Origin, Growth and ussion, just issued. It is a grand book its subject matter is grandly treated and the work should be in the hands of everybody. Sent postpaid on receipt of $2. Agents wanted in every county, city and town. Address.

The Niagara Falls Route. Railroad That Does What it Advertises For more than twenty years we have read of a Niagara Falls route, with the implied understanding that by going east over that highway, we should specially repaid by views of the greatest of wonders, the Falls of the Niaga ra. But who ever got anything more than a passing, rapid glance, as they hurried by? It has been left for our own Michigan Central Railroad to establish what may be emphatically called the Niagara Falls Route. Finding the International Bridge at

Black Rock an unsatisfactory crossing of the river for their business, this thoroughly live company have built a bridge of their own, which itself is one of the wonders of modern times, so located between the bridge so long used by the Great Western, and the Falls. as to furnish one of the very best views of that roaring, tumbling water. We met a "pencil shover" a few days since, who remarked that the Michigan Central people were specially culpable and deserving of reprobation, and that they were the first railroad he had ever met with that did what they advertised to do; (and he is railroad reporter on one of the large papers.) It turned out that the occasion for his disgust arose from the fact that the Central people advertise to stop their trains ten minutes at each of two points, so as to allow their passengers ample time to "take in" the grand scene; and they actually do stop their trains as adver-Running down the river on the Canada side to the Cantilever bridge, and then across it, with time for sight-seeing, and without special hurry, they prove themselves to be, what Michigan people have long known them to be, one of the first companies in the country to cater to the pleasure and comfort of the traveling public. But those who travel have long ago learned to put little confidence in railroad advertisements; and when it is known that the Michigan Central have undertaken a line of policy at variance with all preconceived ideas in this direction; and actually take pains to do what they advertise for their patrons, t is matter of no small note.

In Michigan, the "Central" is of course a household word. Its rolling stock and motive power are unsurpassed in the land, and its trains are rarely "off the card." With its Canada Southern acquisition, and the building of the Cantilever bridge, it takes front rank among the common carriers of the country; and with its "new departare," in doing what it advertises, the Michigan Central stands without a peer.—Lansing Evening Telegram.

A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively and has had his many years of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in his opinions and reasonable in his charges. GEO. W. NOBLE. Notice to Tax-Payers.

As required by the Charter of the village of Buchanan, I hereby give notice that I have received the Assessment roll of said village for the year 1884, for the purpose of collecting taxes, and that I will be at the Common Council room, in Engine House No. 1, on each and every Saturday, to and including June 28, from 10 o'clock A. M.

to 4 o'clock P. M., to receive tax money. On all taxes paid before July 1, one per cent. will be added for collecting, and on all paid from and after July 1, four per cent, will be added as fees for col-lecting. All of said taxes are required to be paid before the 29th day of July, JOHN SHOOK, Marshal.

SINCE Monday afternoon nearly the whole talk upon the streets has been about the railroad extension fizzle. some censuring one party and others the other party. Rumors are also rife that we will soon have another road of the standard guage, an extension of the Vandalia route from South Bend to the lake.

Lucius Beach, of Fort Gratiot township, St. Clair county, yesterday mar-keted his wool clip at Port Huron. He had 210 fleeces weighing 800 pounds, and he got 32 cents a pound for it. This is probably one of the best sales made in Michigan this season .- Even-

Now, will you add that Enos Holmes, of this place, had 173 fleeces that weighed 1,801 pounds, for which he received 18 cents, unwashed, bringing him $324.18, or $68.18 more than Mr. Beach received for his 210 fleeces?

In the McCrone murder case, the jury, last Thursday, rendered a verdict of manslaughter. Billington swore that Haire, in a fight with McCrone, killed him, and that they afterwards threw the body into the canal. Haire had a small army of witnesses in court to prove that neither he nor Billington were there, but the jury, after a seven hours' deliberation, decided that they were. Haire has been given forty days to file a bill of exceptions and Billington has given bail in $1,500 to appear for trial at next term of court, his mother going his security.

FIZZLED.-For several weeks we have been led to-believe that the St. Joseph Valley narrow guage railroad would be extended south from Buchanan to South Bend, and north from Berrien Springs to St. Joseph, and last week we announced that the contracts were all made to prosecute the work. This was the case, but one very important matter had not been completed, viz: the papers had not been signed and the legal transfers made. On the terms of this last act is where the final hitch came which knocked the whole business into smitherines. Morday, the parties who were to do the work found they could not come to terms with the mortgagees of the road, and left in disgust. We are informed that they were telegraphed to return, but now decline having any further business connection with the company. It may be safely said the proposed extension has fizzled.

MONDAY a letter was received by Postmaster Alexander, from Pleasant Ridge, Ala., intended for N. H. Merrill, now of Sedan, Kan., written by Elder N. B. Jones, who says that he was a soldier in the Confederate army under Forrest, conveying the information that while looking over some old books found in his house, on the 16th inst., he came across a Testament, upon the fly-leaf of which was written "N. H. Merrill, Buchanan, Mich. Presented by his mother, Maria Merrill." He now wants to return it to its owner, if alive. We are sure Norris will be glad to hear from the gentleman, and to have his mother's gift returned to him. It will also bring back to memory the associations of the times that tried men. Mr. Merrill entered the service July 22, 1862, as Seargent in Co.K, 25th Michigan Infantry; was commissioned Second Lieutenant June 1, 1864, and on July 28, 1864, he was wounded at the battle of Atlanta, Ga., leaving his left arm on the field. For this disability he was discharged from the service Nov. 4, 1864. Now, aftermore than twenty years, the little present of his mother is found by his former enemy in arms, and though it is of no intrinsic value-he wishes to return it to its rightful owner.

The Arcade Clothing House,

Among the Seminoles intemperance and theft are nearly abolished, they say, "because they strike at the root of the matter." A man arrested for theft receives, the first time, fifty lashes; the second, 100 lashes, and is marked for life by having one car cut off. The third offence costs his life. As Indian laws are promptly and surely executed, the first or second punishment, generally, effectually cures kleptoman a. For intemperance justice is equally summary. The Indian, excited by liquor, is a noisy fellow, and his whoops in variably attract attention to the vender of the poison. A company has been organized among them called the Light Horsemen. As soon as unusual yelling resounds from any particular locality, down sweep the Light Horsemen, who seize the whisky-keg, pour its contents on the ground, compel the owner to pay $4 a gallon for all it originally contained, and leave a slight souvenir of their visit in the shape of 100 lashes.

Jackson's Power of Acting. [Washington Cor. Cleveland Lea ter.] Andrew Jackson was a consummate actor, and much of his anger, which was the terror of office seekers, was feigned. Senator Hugh L. White, of Tennessee, once told me that he was in Washington during the trouble as to the rechartering of the United States bank, which, it will be remembered, was located at Philadelphia. The friends of the bank held a meeting at Philadelphia, and appointed a commission to go to Washington and to remonstrate with the president about his course. Senator White was with the president when the delegation arrived. He received them graciously enough at first and permitted them to make their plea. This they did in the strongest terms, telling him he was ruining the country, and that if he persisted the grass would grow in the business streets of Philadelphia and the country would go to the dogs generally.

As they thus proceeded Jackson's face began to cloud and his brows to knit. When they had finished he rose and went for them in the roughest style, pretending to take some of their remarks as insulting, and swearing, by the eternal, he would not submit to it "In a few minutes," said Judge White, "he had driven them terrified from the room, and as the last man left he turned to me with a laugh and said, 'That was an easy riddance, wasn't it, judge?' and commenced to talk of other matters. The fact of it was, he was not angry at all, but he had used this method to get rid of people with whom he did not wish to be bored."

Where Blackburn Met His Baby. [Congressman Blackburn, of Kentucky.] Four days before I went to the front with my regiment we had a little girl baby. She is now grown, and you always see her with me at any social gathering. Well, in our army the furloughs came very rarely. When we got into line there was no great chance for a man to get home. It was about three years afterward that a few of us were one night going down the Mississippi on a river steamer. I had been sick and was returning to my command, but pretty well broken up even then. As for money, we did not have any, and the night was hot as I laid down on the deck, my throat almost parched with Pretty soon a little girl came along with a big glass of lemonade. I tell you it looked good to me. She saw me eyeing it, stopped a minute, looked doubtfully at me, and finally came up to my side. "You looked as if you wanted something to drink," she said, and offered me the glass. It wasn't the square thing to do, but I took it and handed it back to her empty. It was like nectar to me. Then I thanked the little creature and sent her away. Soon after, just like every child, she came back, leading her mother to see the poor soldier. By Jupiter, it was my wife, and the girl was the baby whom I had last seen as a baby but just born. You can imagine the reunion. They were with my brother's family, and happened to be going down the river. That was the only time during the four years' fighting that I saw my wife and baby, and under these circumstances what man would ever forget it?

American Inventions. An English journal gives credit to Americans for at least fifteen inventions and discoveries which, it says, have been adopted all over the world First, the cotton-gin; second the plan-ing-machine; third, the mower and reaper; fourth, the rotary printing press; fifth, navigation by steam; sixth, the hot-air or caloric engine; seventh, the sewing machine; eight, the Indiarubber (vulcanite process) industry; ninth, the machine manufacture of horse shoes; tenth, the sand-blast for carving; eleventh, the gauge lathe; twelfth, the grain-elevator; thirteenth, artificial ice manufacture on a large scale; fourteenth, the electro-magnet and its practical application; fifteenth, the composing machine for printers. Several Things.

A Chicago paper enumerates these things which every man can do better than anyone else: Poke a fire, put on his hat, edit a newspaper, tell a storyafter another man has commenced itand examine a railway time table.

Philadelphia Ledger: The prevailing disposition is to trust too much to legislative remedies for moral shortcomings.

ABOUT LAUGHTER.

Many Different Varieties-Commercial Value of a Good Laugh. [Chicago Tribune.] A laugh may convey all manner of sentiments—joy, scorn, or anger; it may be the most musical or most discordant of sounds, the most delightful or the most horrible which can fall upon our ears. Contrast the happy laughter of merry children with the gibbering cry of the maniac, or the hoarse laugh of a defiant criminal; the musical ripple of cultivated mirth with the roars of a ripsy crowd at a fair. A really musical laugh is, perhaps, rarer than a really musical voice. The giggle, the snigger, the half-choked laugh are common enough; but how seldom do we hear that melodious sound, the laugh in its perfection. It should not be shrill, nor too loud, nor too long. It should not bear any louble meaning, any hidden sarcasm in its mirth. It should not be so boisterous as to exhaust the laughter and deafen the listeners. Peg Woffington is said to have been celebrated for the music of her laughter on the stage—a most difficult accomplishment, for nothing (except. perhaps, a sneeze) is harder to counterfeit than a laugh. There are many varieties of laughs. There is the musical, cultivated, and extremely rare one, pleasant to listen to as a chime of bells. There is the glad, if somewhat shrill, merriment of children, the happiness of which condones its noise. There is the loud guffaw of the vulgar, and the laughter which appears likely to tear the laugher in pieces, causing him to wipe his eyes after the explosion is over. There is the laugh of embarrassment, when a shy person at a loss what to say next, "remarks to he," as Artemus Ward describes it. There is the schoolgirl's giggle; and the schoolhov's snigger, as he reflects on some recently-perpetrated, but still ecollected, piece of mischief. There

s the chuckle of the successful man. All these bear some family resemblance to each other; they all, in their legree, express sensations of pleasure. There are darker descriptions of laughter. There are laughs more cutting than the bitterest speeches, more alarming than the cruelest threats. Satirical laughter is most offensive. A laugh can convey contempt which words would fail to express.

Is any one proof against being annoyed by ridicule? Even a dog is sensible when he is laughed at, and resents the impertinence. Some animals are indeed quite as sensitive to derision as human beings. The laughter of the underbred, which finds open amusenent in the minor troubles of their neighbors—say the ridicule lavished on sea-sick arrivals at a pier, or on hapless foreigners in an altercation with a cabman, or an old gentleman who falls lown a slide—also ranks among "laughs

Then there is the laugh of incredulity. When Tom goes to his rich old uncle, full of glowing descriptions of the perfections of the lady to whom he is engaged, or of the appointment which he expects to obtain, does the old gentleman damp his nephew's ar-dor by a long harangue? No, he only gives a dry laugh; and Tom's hopes of check fall rapidly.

Too rare laughers are as unpopular as too ready ones. A teller of good stories never forgives the man who does not laugh at his jokes. Many persons have made their fortunes by laughing at judicious moments; applanding some poor jest, or becoming convulsed with mirth at a dull pun. To be duly appreciative of his patron's wit was an important part of the duty of a hanger-on. With what ready laughter are a schoolmaster's witticisms received by his class!

There is a story of a dramatic author, whose play had been accepted, being requested to make sundry alterations to suit the taste of the actors. Among other changes the manager suggested that "a laugh" should be inroduced in the conclusion of a speech of an out going performer; "it would give him a better exit." The author pleaded that to admit this alteration would spoil the whole dialogue, but the manager was urgent still. "Think it over and do what you can. B----'s position in the theatre demands it!" When laughs are thus prized it is not wonderful that persons who rarely use their risible muscles are unpopular. Economical Theology.

[Texas Siftings.] The season for raising corn was not a very good one last year, in and about Austin, on account of the drouth. Several members of the Austin Blue Light l'abernacle called on their pastor, Rev. Whangdoodle Baxter, to pray for rain, he having neglected to do so. Whangdoodle received the delegation gra-ciously. They stated that rain had been prayed for in most of the prominent churches of the white folks, and they thought that he also should urge the necessity of immediate showers, as the corn was almost too far gone to raise more than half a crop.
"You all says dat de white, piscopal bishop and de res' ob de preachers prayed for rain?" quoried Whang-"Dey has done did hit," was the re-

"Fool niggahs!" exclaimed Whangdoodle indignantly, "what's de sense ob my prayin' for rain too den? Ef de white folks gets rain, won't you get it too, widout my prayin' for hit?

Vacation Advice.

[Chicago Tribune.]
Last week, when about to break up for the holidays, Mr. Spurgeon dismissed his young men with a caution. That is not good for students. Come back, as some one puts it, with your hearts and manners uncracked. Walk in the fields like Isaac, by all means, and meditate, but don't lift up your eyes for Rebecca. She will come soon enough."

Dr. Talmage: A man is no better than the picture he loves to look at. If your eyes are not pure your heart cannot be. One can guess the character of a man by the kind of pictorial he purchases.

Helen Wilmans: A man's wrongs are his rights until he accumulates enough spirit to resent them.

Shakespearean Slang.

["Hermit" in Troy Times.] The power of Shakespeare over the public is shown by the extent to which his phrases, and even his slang, has become incorporated into our language. In this point, indeed, he is unequaled. Among these is "bag and baggage," "dead as a door nail," "proud of one's humility," "tell the truth and shame the devil," "hit or miss," "love is blind," "selling for a song," "wide world," "cut copies," "fast and loose," "unconsidered trifles," "westward ho," "familiarity lyseds contempt," "notely 'familiarity breeds contempt," "patching up excuses," "misery makes strange bedfellows," "to boot" (in a trade), "short and long of it," "comb your head with a three-legged stool," "danchead with a three-legged stool," "dancing attendance," "getting even" (revenge), "birds of a feather," "that's flat," "tag-rag," "Greek to me" (unintelligible), "send one packing," "as the day is long," "packing a jury," "mother wit," "kill with kindness." "mum" (for silence), "ill-wind that blows no good," "wild-goose chase." "geography." "lug-"wild-goose chase," "scare-crow," 'lug-gage," "row of pins" (as a mark of value), "viva voce," "give and take," "sold" (in the way of a joke), "give the devil his due," "your cake is dough."

These expressions have come under my notice, and of course there must be many others of equal familiarity. The girl who playfully calls some youth "a milksop" is also unconsciously quoting Shakespeare, and even the "loggerhead" is of the same origin. "Extem pore" is first found in Shakespeare, and so are "almanacs." 'The "elm and vine' (as a figure) may also be mentioned. Shakespeare is the first author that speaks of "the man in the moon," or mentions the potato, or uses the term 'eyesore," for annoyance. Another often quoted utterance may here be mentioned, simply because it is generally misunderstood: "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," which is supposed to express the power of sympathy, whereas it solely referred to the widespread operation of selfishness. Gen. Grant's Missouri Farm.

[St. Louis Spectator.] One of the possessions of the Grant family, which will now probably go to pay their debts, is their old Dent farm near St. Louis. It is about ten miles from the city, perhaps fifteen, on the Carondelet branch of the Missouri Pacific railroad. It was left to Mrs. Grant by her father, and is now held probably in her individual name. It was there where Mrs. Grant was raised, and it was from there that Gen. Grant used to haul wood to St. Louis. The place now looks well worn and somewhat dilapidated, though it has an immense barn, built some vears ago when Gen. Grant purchased a number of fine horses and left them there. It was his intention at one time to turn the old Dent homestead into an extensive stock farm, but he soon got tired of the experiment and had a sale whereat he let go all his fine horses. I was there last spring and the once splendid farm was only a reminder of what it had been. The only family residence where (en. and Mrs. Grant had lived for a number of years was almost ready to tamble down from age and neglect, and all that was left to remind one of Gen. Grant's abortive venture in stock-raising were the magnificent but empty barn, and a vagrant broken-down mule that minced the grass lonely enough in a slovenly-looking pasture. Mrs. Grant has always retained a warm affection for her family homestead, and when she and the gen eral were in St. Lou's the last time they hired Mr. Jesse Arnot's best pair of horses and drove out to spend the day there.

Humorists Sad and Sober. [Chicago News.] In a recent interview with a reporter of The New York Mail and Express Mr. Joshu. Billings reiterates the popular notion that "humorists are the saddest and soberest of fellows." Then he goes on to say that Mark Twain does not know how to laugh, and Nasby never laughed in his life. Bah! Mark Twain does his share of laughing, and don't you forget it. It isn't fair to judge Mark Twain or Nasby or any other professional humorist when he is on dress parade, for a professional humorist knows very well that when he is on dress parade he looks so. But in their private lives you will find these humorists as sociable and merry as As for Nasby, he is notoriously a social man-he revels in a good story and in a good joke, and his laugh is as boisterous as a peal of August thunder. Burdette is as frisky and chirruppy as a cricket, and Bailey, of Danbury, is eminently a social gentleman. People are apt to get an erroneous impression of these people by seeing them on the lecture platform, when they are re-peating the same funny things they have repeated for seasons after seasons and at which other folks laugh, but which have become old chestnuts to them. Gravity of countenance is the which makes the humorous ecturer's wit more ralatable to the average audience, and having discovered this great truth, the humorists utilize it for all it is worth.

[Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Henry Leffman, a chemical expert, lectured in Philadelphia a few evenings ago to a semi-professional audience on what he called Euthanasia, or the propriety of putting certain useless individuals comfortably out of the way. His idea was thus expressed:
"The evolution of humanity to a higher form cannot be accomplished without some method of preserving and propagating the best of the species. Had we, as human beings, with all our present powers, been placed on this world in association with a race as much above us in capacity and power as we are above the lower animals, a system of selection would have been applied which in a few hundred generations would have produced a much better humanity.' Having laid these foundations, the lecturer asked to what extent the law might control life"in cases where to the certainty of a fatal disease is added intense physical misery," and in the cases of the birth of monstrosities and idiots.

The proprietor of this celebrated medi-cine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PER-MANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long stand-ing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole fami-lies have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usu-ally this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. MY OWN GIRL.

[Frederick Langbridge.] ifrederick Langbridge.]
Only ten dollars—no more sir—
The wages I weekly touch,
For labor, steady and sore, sir,
It isn't a deal too much;
Your money has wings in the city,
And vanishes left and right,
But I hand it all to Kitty
As sure as Saturday night.

> We live in a reeking court, sir. And praying for me so sweet. Bless her, my own, my wee, She's better than gold to me!

I must be honest and simple,

I must be manly and true, Or how could I pinch her dimple, Or gaze in her frank eyes blue? I feel, not anger, but pity,
When workmates go to the bad;
I say, "They've never a Kitty—
They'd all keep square if they had." Bless her, my own, my wee, She's better than gold to me!

Ah, the day we stood at the altar. Modest, and white, and still, And forth from her lips did falter The beautiful, low, "I will." Our home has been bright and pretty As ever a poor man's may, And my soft little dove, my Kitty, Shall nest in my heart for aye.

Bless her, my own, my wee, She's better than gold to me! Earthquakes and Luminous Paint.

[Iron.] The connection between earthquakes and luminous paint would hardly be apparent to anyone without explanation. It nevertheless exists, and the recent earthquakes in our own country have served to remind us of its exist ence. As a matter of fact, large consignments of this paint are sent to those countries where earthquakes are preva-lent. The use to which it is put invests it with the utmost importance just for the few critical moments of the shock. In the Philippine islands, where earthquakes are not uncommon, small metallic plates coated with luminous paint are so placed about the premises, that at the first warning the inmate; are quickly guided to the door, and thus to the street.

In Manila it is laid on in patches about the bedrooms and staircases, serving as guides for the door handles and the stairs, night lights being considered as especially dangerous, as likely to set fire to the falling house, and thus to roast the inmates in their own homes. It follows that those who live in districts likely to le visited by earthquakes will do well to adopt this plan, and to burn no flame lights at night, especially in the case of gas, the pipes for which might be broken asunder, and the gas escape and take fire. The gas should be turned off at the main nightly, and luminous labels be so placed as to indicate the door-handles and other guides to the main point of egress, which would enable the residents to find their way out of their houses in the dark before the walls perchance buried them. It will be remembered that at Ischia there was just sufficient time between the first shock of the earthquake and the downfall of the Grand hotel to permit those who acted promptly to save their lives. Garden of Eden Rocks.

[Cor. Cincinnati Times-Star.]

Sin e the days of the "forty acres and a mule" dodge, if a month has passed away without some ridiculous fraud being practice I upon the colored people here, your correspondent fails to re-member it. The latest and most absurd was brought to light to day, when a colored man, with his eyes dancing with delight came in to show me a trees are that he had just bought in the shape of "a rock from the Garden of

It looked like a small piece of slate, was highly perfumed with musk and packed in a small pasteboard box. He had bought it from a white woman, who told him she was from the Garden of Eden, and was the only living agent for the sale of the rocks. She had thousands of them put up in similar paper boxes, and sold them through the country at 25 cents each. She has sold several hundred in Columbia, S. C. The Times-Star correspondent tried to buy the colored man's rock, but he resolutely refused ten times its price. A big revival is in progress among the colored Methodists of this city, and the aforesaid white woman is reaping a rich harvest in the sale of her "Garden of Eden ro ks" among the ignorant religious enthusiasts.

His Wife Invented a Crazy Awning.

[New York Sun.] When a Ninth avenue painter came out into the sunshine a day or two ago, and let down the awning before his show windows, scores of people gathered about and fixed their eyes admiringly on the awning. It was made of patch-work silk, and the oddly shaped bits of silken co'or were mingled artistically and pleasingly after the style of crazy quilts.

"It's a success," said the painter jubilantly. "The popular fancy just now is for crazy quilts. That's a crazy awning—the only one in the city. It's hit the public fancy, my wife's happy, and I'm getting lots of custom by it. Plantation Philosophy.

[Every Other Saturday.]

Scott's biographer thus de cribes Charlo te Margaret Carpenter, a ter-terwa d Lady Scott. Without the features of a regular beauty, she was rich in personal attractions: "A form that was fas moned as light as a fay's;" a complexion of the cleare tand I ght est olive; eyes large, deep set and dazzling, of the finest Italian brown, and a profusion of si ken tres e, black as the raven's wing-her address hovering between the reserve of a pretty young Inglishwoman who has not mingled largely in general society, and a certain natural archness and gayety that suited well with the accompaniment of a French accent. A lovelier vision, as all who remember her in the bloom of her days have assured me, could hardly have been imagined. It was late in the summer of 1797 that Scott met, and became engaged to, Miss Carpenter. The marriage took place in December of that year. In a letter to a friend, Scott thus describes his fiancee. "Of her personal accomplishments I shall only say that she possesses very good sense, with uncommon good temper, which I have seen put to most severe trials. * may give you a hint that is no romance in her there composition, and that though born in France, she has the sentiments and manners of an Englishwoman, and does not like to be thought otherwise. A very slight tinge in her pronunciation is all which reveals the foreigner. * * She is not a beauty, by any means, but her person and face are very engaging. She is a brunette-her manand educated a Frotestant of the Church of England. Here is a characteristic letter from the lady herself, written but a few days before that "graceful love letter" printed in Every Other Saturday of March 1.

sist in asking me to write, and that by return of post. O, you really are quite out of your senses. I should not have indulged you in that whim of yours, had you not given me that hint that my silence gives an air of mystery. I have no reason that can detain me in acquainting you that my father and mother were French, of the name of Charpentier. He had a place under government; their residence was at Lyons, where you would find on inquiries that they lived in good repute and in very good style. I had the misfortune of losing my father before I could know the value of such a parent. At his death we were left to the care of Lord I ownshire, who was his very great friend; and very soon after I hal the affliction of losing my mother. Cur taking the name of Carpenter was on my brother's going to India, to prevent any little difficult es that might have occurred. I hope now you are pleased. Lord 1'. could have given you every information, as he has been acquainted with all my family. You say you almost love him; but until your almost becomes a quite, I cannot love you. Fefore I conclude this famous epistle, I will give you a little hint-that is, not to put so many musts in your letters. It is beginning rather too soon; and an ther thing is that I take the liberty not to mind them much, but I expect you to mind me. You must take care of yourself; you must think of me, and believe me yours sincerely. C. C."

HOW FORTUNE CAME.

An Aceldent Which Gave a Young Doctor Fame and Fortune. (Chambers' Journal.) Years will often elapse before a doc-

On the other hand, a single fortunate care may bring patients by the sc re About twenty years ago, a young doctor who had been e tablished three years in Lon lon without making an incone, lost heart and determined to emigrate to Australia. He sold his small honse and furniture, paid his passage money, and a week before his ship was to sail went into the country to say good-bye to his parents. Having to hange trains at a junction, he was waiting on the platform, when a groom in a smart livery galloped up to the station, and calling excitedly to the porter, handed him a telegraphic message for transmissi n. From some remarks exchanged letween the two men, the young doctor understood that the duke of ____, a member of the cabinet, had tallen dangerously ill, and that an eminent physician in 1 ondon was being telegrapled for. The groom added that he had ridden to the house of three local doctors, who had all been absent, and that "her grace was in a terrible

The young do tor saw his oppor-unity and at once seized it. "I am a ne.lical man," he said to the groom, and I will go to the hall to o er my ssistance until another doctor arrives. The groom was evidently attached to nis master, for he said: "Jump on my iorse, sir, and ride straight down the road for about four miles; you can't miss the hall; any one will tell you where it is." The doctor went, was gratefully received by the duchess, and happened to be just in time to step a mistake in treatment of the patient, which might have proved fatal if con-inuel for a few hours longer. The luke was suffering from typhoid fe er; from town he declared that the young loctor's management of the case had been perfect. The result of this was that the latter was requested to remain at the hall to take charge of the patient, and his name figured on the bulletins which were issued during the next f rtnight, and were printed in all the daily newspapers of the kingdom. Such an advertisement is always the making of a me ical man, especially when his patient recovers, as the duke did. Cur penniless friend received a ice of 500 guineas, took a house at West End, and from that time to this has been at the head of one of the largest

Any time during the war, after the beginning of 1833, it would have been hard to find a regiment in the field numbering its full complement of 1,000 men. There were many having a strength of not more than 350 or 400, particularly on the Confe lerate side. În various severe encounters regiments were decimated, and in some cases lost half their strength, but it was rarely that a body was so completely wiped out that there was nothing to rally on. At the battle of Pleasant Hills, La., a Texas cavalry regiment, numbering 348 men, were seen forming for a charge against a Federal brigade of infantry. The latter had good cover and were fresh. The cavalry had to dash across a field to reach the line, and before they came the commander of the brigade passed along behind his two lines and ordered the men to hold their

Ingenuity can sometimes chain luck at its cartwheel in supreme triumph. To wit, I know a young attorney who two years ago lit his cigar with a diploma from the best law school in the country, and said he would give anybody $5 to tell him where to settle for practice. No one came along to assume that responsibility, and he resorted to blind luck. Tying his hand-kerchief over his eyes, he stood up before a map of the United States and declared he would go to the place where his pencil fell. With three or four spiral sweeps he made a jab at the What place do you suppose it map. What place do you suppose it was? I shan t tell; but it was a new Minnesota town, and he cleared $1,800 last year, which is by no means bad to

Recently we were shown a curiosity in the shape of a quilt. It is called the "Grandmother Bowers Album Quilt." It was gotten up as a family record of the Bowers family, beginning at Polly Bowers, the mother of Job Bowers, and quilted just after the war. It gives a complete list of the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren up to the time it was quilted. The squares are cut to represent trees. The first tree has thirteen limbs, with a flower at the top of each limb, and a child's name in each flower. And so on to the fourth generation. The total number at the time the quilt was finished was fire until the word was given. Each pair were instructed to fire at one cavalryman-or, rather, one at the man and the other at the horse. The cavalry made the charge in one line, but it was so much shorter than the front of the brigade that three fires could be concentrated. The Confederates came forward with a dash and a yell, keeping pretty even front until they were within 100 feet of the line, when all the muskets rang out together. One volley was enough. That regiment was so nearly blotted off the face of the earth that only four of its members returned to the Confederate lines. Over 200 horses were killed outright, and at least 100 wounded. There were not ten wounded men to pick up. Every Fed-eral had a dead aim and a close target. A Young Attorney's Luck.
