The Case Cure

It is a fact that remedies almost without number, already contest the claim to cure all the fills that afflict suffering humanity. Thousands have found them powerless to work a cure for them. No diseases have so bailled all attempts at permanent relief as have she bailled all attempts at permanent relief as have sheumatism and Neuralria. Along succession of disapprointments has made their arounzed victims despair of the possibility of cure. For centuries they have been considered beyond the power of mentical skill to cure. And yet we say both can be cured, and that Athlorhonos will do the business. The best proof that it can do it is that it has done it.

Rev. S. R. Dennen, D.D., pastor Third Congregational Church, New Haven, Conn. Rheumatism had kept him from the pulpit four or five months at a time. He says he had suffered all that one could, and live. He took his first does of ATHLOPHOROS on Friday; Sunday he was in his pulpit; Monday he was the had suffered all that one could, and live. He took his first does of ATHLOPHOROS on Friday; Sunday he was in his pulpit; Monday he was well, and has remained so since. Rev. William P. Corbit, D.D., pastor

George St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn., was laid up for two months with Inflammatory Rheumatism, suffering most excruciating torture. ATHLOPHOROS cured him, and he believes it to be infallible. H. S. Chandler, of the N. Y. "Independent," says Athlophonos cured him of Rheuma-tism from which he had suffered for a year and a half. Rev. W. B. Evans, Washington, D. C., says: "I consider its work almost in the light of a miracle. It is a most wonderful medicine. It ought to be spread throughout the land."

The great question is, Will it cure me? We believe it will. Is it worth trying? You must decide. If you cannot get ATHLOTHORDS of your drugget, we will send it express raid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed. ATHLOPHOROS CO., 112 WALL ST., NEW YORK. BY EUGENE J. HALL. I'm a bachelor still, I have fared very ill In the hands of the ladies I've met, But my heart is so kind that I've made up my mind Their treatment to try and forget. For 'tis jolly to be an old fellow like me, With none but myself to delight; With no one to scold, if I catch a bad cold By staying out late in the night.

was first very fond of a beautiful blonde, Who was seven years older than I. I tried to propose, but she turned up her nos And I felt that I wanted to die. She said I was wild, I was only a child, My sighs with her laughter she drowned

And at only sixteen I was crushed like a bean When it goes through a mill to be ground. The next girl I met was a charming brunette Who loved me, she said, "more than life." But my wages were low, and I had to say "No! When she asked me to make her my wife. So she married a shoe-dealer, rich as a Jew; All the comforts of life she enjoys.

She is one of the "lights" who declaim "wo men's rights," And the mother of seven bad boys. My next love affair with a girl with red hair Was a serious matter to me. When I asked her to wed me she solemnly

"I have promised another's to be."

Each word like a dart pierced my passionate heart, All my future looked cloudy and dim. She married her choice, and I live to rejoice-(Her temper is tested on him). My friendship one day in a platonic way

With a pretty young widow began. She dazzled my eyes and I thought her a prize Till she married a medical man But it's jolly to be an old fellow like me, With no one to scold if I catch a had cold

By staying out late in the night.

A GHOST STORY

"I am going to be married, my dear. I can see the tears in your pretty eyes as you say to Harry, Poor Sibyl! she can never be as happy as we are.' Of course I cannot. No woman can who does not marry her first love, while her past is without regret, and her future without shadow. But I am going to marry what is more than first love—perfection. Absolutely he has not a fault, and the wonder of wonders is that he should desire the society through life of one who is so full of faults as I am. He is clever, rich, amiable, good-looking, thirty-two. respected of all men, and (until within the past week) praised of all women. Can you wonder that mamma, who has been a little anxious about me this last year or so, is as happy as a queen, and that my acquaintances are loud in their congratulations. But then, as they say, 'Siblyn Van Eyck has always been a lucky girl.' You and I, my Kate, might differ with them as to that, only it is not worth while such a very odd and commonplace mishap. Indeed, I am not without a realizing sense of my mercies myself, for that a young woman facing her thirtieth brthday so nearly as I do, and who has played fast and loose with such good cards as kindly Fate has hitherto thrust into her hands- that such a young woman should become Mrs. Brian Chester is truly a wonderful favor of fortune. It is not the first time that you have seen his name in my letters, and I dare say that with your usual sagacity you have been suspicious of what might come to pass! Behold me at last on the eve of marriage, figuratively that is, for we are not to be married until June, and this is only January, but it seems very near to me. Shall I whisper something to you, my dear Kate, so low that not even Harry shall hear it? (I know you keep my secrets even from him). I respect Brian Chester, I admire him, I am proud of his prefererce, and I feel safer and more at rest with him than I ever did in my lifeyet, oh, Kate! Kate! it is not such a love as yours for Harry in the days of your love-making, nor like mine forthe knight who woord and rode away. Is it because I am twenty-eight, and such a dreadful flirt, as people say, or because Mr. Chester's affection for me is so very cheerful and matter of fact? He is evidently incapable of jealousy, and evinces a beautiful faith in me, which my past has scarcely justified. I ought to be immensely flattered, but am not, for that perfect love which casteth out fear is divine, and far above poor, passionate, doubting humanity. Do not, however, imagine me so feolish as not to know that I am more nearly happy than I have been for years, and that I shall be a very contented woman as Mrs. Brian Chester. Kiss your small Violet for me, and give my love to Harry, I can trust him, whatever his criticism may be, not to say, as Bob Lisle did when Mary Vincy was married last month, 'Another old landmark gone.' Always your loving SIBYL. With a faint smile at Mr. Lisle's very uncivil remark, Miss Van Eyck addressed her letter, and leaving her writing table, seats herself in a low arm chair near the fire.

"I will give to him to post," she thinks, as she listlessly takes up the evening paper. For a second or two she glances indifferently over it, and then she reads earnestly, while her face softens, her eyes fill, and two heavy tears fail on the paper and she drops it on her lap Only a couple of verses, with no beauty or power beyond their truth, and yet they can send her thoughts back over eight years—such a long, long time out of one's youth!—and make her heart ache with pity for the difference between the woman of twenty-eight who is to marry Brian Chester and the girl of twenty who loved so foolishly and so tenderly that the ghost of a handsome, false face can come between her and her future husband even now. He wraps me round with his riches, He wraps me round with his riches, He covers meny with his care

And his love is the love of a manhood
Whose life is a living prayer.
I have blighted my woman's affections,
I have vowed my all in all.
And the flowers of daily contentment.
Renew their lives ere they fall.

That yet, like an instrument precious
That playeth an olden tune,
My heart, in the midst of its blessings,
Goes back to a day in June—
To a day, when beneath the branches,
I stood by the silent stream,
And saw in its rosom an image,
As one sees a face in a dream.

Sibyl Van Eyck is a young woman usually very appreciative of the advantage of becoming surroundings, but just now she is quite unconscious that her fair head and slender figure in its pale blue trailing dress make a picture ever pleasing to a man's eyes as she lies back in a crimson chair in the soft, warm glow of the fire. Her thoughts have gone so far and so fast that she does not hear the door open and close, nor a man's quick footstep on the carpet. She had forgotten that she ought to be expecting Mr. Chester, until he seats himself beside her and takes calm possession of one of her hands.

ful flirt," and she puts the paper out of sight under the train of her dress.

"And if I had, sir?" she asked, lightly. "I dare say you forget me, often enough, for much more than five minutes.

"Never," he says, rather shortly; and then, atter an instant, "What were you crying for just now?" "Do not you know that we women cry for anything or nothing?"
"Not you; do not tell me unless you wish to do so." "I assure you I have no such intention," she says, gayly. "Does your lordship think that I shall make you my confessor?"

"Some day—yes," he answers quietly and looking not at her, but at the fire. Very quickly she lifts her eyes to his face, a very frank and pleasant face, with a look that shows its owner well content with the world and himself, but just now a little graver than its wont, and she wonders with a thrill of the same pity she had felt for herself whether he, too, in the years which lie behind him has missed something of life's completeness. "You and I are too old and worldly wise for that," she says, rather sadly.

"Old?—you child!" his eyes meeting hers with a smile half amused, half "I am aware that you have reached the awful age of twenty-eight, Miss Van Eyck, and that you have had enough experience of the world to make you wise, but for all that you are a child, and a child in some things you will remain as long as you live." "Ah! you do not know how much nicer I was ten years ago," she says, laughing nervously.

"If I have the bad taste to be content with you as you are, I do not see as it is of any consequence," he says, again taking her hand. "Besides, I do not "I wish," she begins wistfully, while tears stand in her eyes—"I wish that we had known each other then, and that I had never—never—" "Never fancied you cared for some one else," he breaks in abruptly. "Look here, dear-here in my eyes;" and he puts one arm about her, while he keeps her hand. "Tell me nothing yet. I am not a jealous man, nor afraid of ghosts, and it is not your past I want, but your present and your future."

When he is gone she stands before one of the long mirrors, smiling at herself rather defiantly. "You have found your master, Miss Van Eyck," she is thinking; "a tender and true master, but just a little too sure of himself."

When Brian Chester enters his rooms, the first thing he does, after lighting the gas, is to find the evening paper, and glancing hastily over it, to read with sure instinct two verses in its columns. "Very worldly-wise indeed, my poor little girl," he says to himself, as he lays it down with half a smile and half a sigh; "and a very shabby thing of

"If I were a jealous man (which, thank heaven, I am not), I should endure some exceedingly uncomfortable hours," says Mr. Chester, smiling placidly, as he takes possession of Sibyl for a waltz, some six weeks later, at one of the last parties before Lent; "for upon my word, these fellows seem to think I have no right whatever to more than a stray dance."

"Being a philosopher (which, thank neaven, you are), I suppose it makes no difference to you," she answers as they waltz off.
"I admire their good taste, and am thankful for what I can get at present; also, I have some faint idea that Mrs. Chester will give up round dancing." Sibyl pauses abruptly, and moves "Take me away-out of the roomsomewhere," she murmurs. Very much bewildered, he obeys, and presently finds a seat for her in a small, almost deserted room. "You are tired," he says, tenderly.

"Shall I get you a glass of wine?"

"No, no; stay with me. It is he," she says, looking up piteously in his face, which at those very enigmatical words grow rather pale. "Who?-the ghost?" he says, unsteadily. "Mr. Devereux. I have not seen h.m. since I-since I-Oh, what will you

To add to his anxiety, during the four days he is in Boston he does not receive even so much as a line from her, though see had promised, half laughingly, to write every day. The result of all of which is that, after having been so absent-minded as to cause his business friends much amazement, he returns to New York two days earlier than he had intended, leaving his affairs very much as he had found them. An hour after his arrival he is walking up the familiar street on which the Van Eycks live, with a great deal of outward cheerful-

Then he starts as if he had been shot, for ascending the steps of the Van Eycks' house with a confident manner of one who does not come for the first time, is Mr. Devereux. Very still stands Mr. Chester-very still and pale for a man who is "not jealous nor afraid of ghosts"-until Mr. Devereux has rung and is admitted.

He walks rapidly down to the end of the block, and returns slowly, with his eyes on the Van Eycks' door; but Devereux' visit bids fair to be a lengthy one, and he has time to repeat his manævre many times, to the great interest of a couple of school-girls, who, from an opposite drawing-room window, are speculating excitedly as to what "Miss Van Eyck's lover" can be about. It is very fatiguing for a man to pace up and down a block for an hour, and yet, when that time had elapsed, Brian Chester's face had grown oddly worn and haggard looking. God pity us all! We can most of us remember some such hour, whose sixty minutes held an eternity of suspense, but let those of us render thanksgiving all our days who feared in that hour only death, not faithless-ness for our heart's beloved. It is nearly six when the Van Eycks' door opens and closes again on Mr. Devereux, who walks quietly down the street in an opposite direction from Chester's, but the latter scarcely glances at the receding figure as he springs up the steps.

"Miss Van Eyek is in the drawingroom," the servant tells him, and he passes in Outside it was nearly dark, and here it is quite so, except when the fire makes a blaze of light; but he sees her at once, crouched in the corner of a sofa by the chimney and weeping-ah! weeping as even women given to tears weep only once or twice in their lives. At the sight of that drooping figure, and the sound of those strangled sobs, the strong heart of Brian Chester turns faint and sick, for he knows so well, with such wonderful dreary conviction, just what she had done, and what he must do now. He casts one farewell look upon the familiar room where he had been so happy, and then his eyes returned to the woman he

Brian Chester. At the frightened compassion in her eyes he glances suddenly in the mirror over the chimney, and stares at himself with the dead wonder men feel when they are brought face to face with the change an hour's agony can work in them. "I am a fool," he says presently, with a miserable laugh, and dropping into the nearest chair, he draws his hands from hers and covers his face. For an instant she is silent, and then the dispair in every line of the bent

"Dear," she whispers, kneeling beside him, "surely I, who am to be your wife, may share your troubles, andcomfort you!" and with a rush of tenderness that sweeps her old doubts and fears away forever, she tries to draw his head against her shoulder. But he springs to his feet, with a flush on his haggard face. "For heaven's sake do not make it harder for me to give you up!" he gasps. "Give me up?" she repeats, raising too, and trembling very much. "You never wrote me"-he begins passionately.

"Because I would rather tell you than write," she interrupts, quickly. But he goes on bitterly: "I saw that man leave the house after he had been here an hour, and I find you breaking your heart for him. What have I done that you should think I would accept such a sacrifice? Do you think I want your life without your love?" He pauses, with a struggle of self-command that seems to have so utterly deserted him, while she stands silent with down-bent head and clasped hands. "I see it all," he says, presently in a very low voice whose forced steadiness it takes all his resolute will to maintain. "You have loved only him always, and you send him away to-day that you might keep your faith to me, like the brave true woman that you are, but he will be easy to recall, so—so God bless you!"—and he turns rather blindly toward the door.

But she stands swiftly before him with outstretched hands and tearful, shining eyes. "Oh, Brian, I am no heroine, only a foolish woman to whom God is very good. Mr. Devereux will never again be even a ghost to me. And you—do

An Editor's House and Wife.

* * I noticed in Chicago the castle of Storey, the editor of the Times, who is off in an asylum, they say, somewhere east. As I was riding out in the south park yesterday I saw this marble house standing up within a few rods of the park, and I said: "What institution is that?" It had high towers running up five stories and was apparently 200 feet square. "That is no institution," said my Chicago friend. 'It is Storey's house. He probably got the ground in pursuance of a job to put through his park, and his mind being already weak he started to build, and with the tenacity of his whole character he is determined to finish the house. It is said that the profits of the Chicago Times, which are again good, are mainly put into the mansion."
Said I: "What in the name of God is it good for after it is done?" "Why," said my friend, "it is good for nothing at all. Considering its history, nobody who could afford it would live in it: it is not fit for an institution." As we returned into Chicago my attention was called to an old lady hardly thirty-

The Longest Talk Yet. The feat of talking over 1,200 miles of wire connecting two telephones, with no perceptible loss of power by induction, has been performed at Cincinnati. A telephone was placed in the operating room of the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph company and another in the cellar. The instruments were first connected with wires to and from Chillicothe, nearly 200 miles, when the conversation was heard distinctly, though carried on in a tone not distinguishable a few feet from the instrument. A like line was then formed to Grafton, West Virginia, 600 miles, with the same result, and then to Baltimore, 1,200, with no perceptible difference in the distinctness with which the conversation was heard. There was absolutely no apparent loss by induction, though 14 telegraph wires alongside were in full operation. No sound of an instrument could be heard. The instrument used was the new Hop-

The bear remained pawing about in the bean patch, McConth fired. His wife was looking on from the door. The bear and McCouth both fell, the bear in its tracks, and the farmer some feet back of where he had stood. Neither farmer nor bear made any effort to rise. Mrs. McCouth ran out to her husband. Blood was streaming from his nose, and he was unconscious. She brought him to by dashing water in his face. The bear was dead, shot through the lungs. The Flight of Time and Its Results.

Washington Irving to be realized, and had an inhabitant of this sphere composed himself for the renowned Rip Van Winkle nap some twenty-five or thirty years ago, truly, upon awakening to-day, would be imagine himself in another world advanced far beyond his comprehension. A retrospection of the past ages, based, of course, upon the records and evidence extant, in comparison with the past half century, render the improvement of the latter almost miraculous. The arts, sciences, general intelligence, and other advantages to mankind, have advanced with the rapidity of the mushroom, but with the stability of the pyramids. Probably the most beneficial development has been that of the railroad system. One does not have to go back to the boyhood days of the oldest inhabitant to see the vast changes wrought through the instrumentality of the latter, as many are yet comparatively young that well remember the status of affairs innovated by the introduction of the steam horse. At that time, when removed from water transportation, the turnpikes were the great thoroughfares -the principal medium of communication between the different parts of the country. The latter were certainly a great advance upon previous ner of their construction were, doubtless, considered the limit of human efforts in that direction. They served their turn well, opened up the inland, and still, after many years of use, render valuable service. It is now diffi-cult to comprehend how, even with the use of tumpikes, it was possible to transact business of large dimensions. The slow, plodding freight team, the coaches with their limited accommodations and speed of ten or less miles per hour, surely retarded commercial traffic and almost completely prevented a pleasure trip. How different it is today. The immense railway system covers the country like the web of a spider. Time and distance are annihilated. Thousands of cars with unlimited capacity transport the products of the cities into the country and the agricultural products into the cities Elegant trains convey the army of travelers in every conceivable direction, at almost incredible speed. At the very commencement of the railroad era one was started from Chicago. and, following the old Buffalo Trail, slowly but surely built toward the Great West. Directly through the Heart of the Continent it went, throwing out branches to tap the rich agricultural sections, opening up and developing the country it traversed, until to-day it has five thousand miles of steel track, and extends from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis in the East direct to Denver in the West. Not built for speculation, nor with monopolistic ideas, it has ever consulted the best wishes of its patrons, and has always, therefore, received their hearty enport. Every in the year palatial trains, equipped with the very latest facilities for eating, sleeping, smoking and lounging, move over its perfect road-bed between Chicago and Denver, Chicago and Omaha, Chicago and Kansas City, and Karsas City and Denver, without change of cars, and with direct connection from St. Louis and Peoria. The principal cities and towns in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Colcrado are situated on the lines of this now great corporation. It is, in fact, the great highway through and between the important head centers of the West. Its phenomenal success has been achieved through the perfect system that pervades everything it undertakes. Its representations are facts and are carried out in every particular. Realizing this, the large organizations of Knights Templar and Grand Army of the Republic, journeying to San Francisco and Denver in 1883, together with Religious, Civic, Military and

Chicago has 700,000 inhabitants, an increase of 45,000 in the last year.

The summer trotting meeting of the Chicago Driving Park will be held July 4 to 12.

Hon. William Williams, familiarly known as Billy Williams, has been nominated for Congress by acclamation by the Republicans of the thirteenth Indiana district, the one next south of this. The nomination is one that will be hard to beat.

There is a bare possibility that Congress may adjourn Saturday. The Democratic members are anxious to get away from Washington to attend the convention. There are some difference of opinions between the two Houses on some of the appropriation bills that an adjournment at that time is very doubtful.

Harper Brothers are sending a circular to those of their subscribers who have discontinued taking Harper's Weekly on account of the affinity of that paper with the Democracy, apologizing for the action of the paper, but the effect of the circular is to increase the disgust of the subscribers.

The delegates to the Democratic National convention are gathering at Chicago at a rapid rate, and getting ready for the contest of next week. The outlook now is that of Cleveland against the field, with Butler tearing around at a pretty lively rate in "the field." Ben's groom, Col. Plympton, is on the ground and will make his boom appear as large as possible.

Great preparations are being made at Minneapolis for the national encampment of the soldiers and sailors, to be held July 22 to 24. The Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad will carry all soldiers who can be identified, and their wives, from Chicago and return for $12,50 the round trip, good to return in twenty days, over the same or a different route.

The prospect of Fitz John Porter getting back into the army and his traitorous record cleared has received another backset in form of a veto by President Arthur. The matter was thoroughly discussed in the cabinet, and there were but two members who opposed the veto. The bill was passed over the veto, by the House, in a vote of 168 to 78, but the Senate will not do it, and Mr. Porter will stay where he belongs, in private life.

During the month of June, which was the last of the fiscal year, there was a reduction of the public debt amounting to $9,218,256, and for the year $101,040,971. The remaining debt less the cash in treasury is $1,450,050,-235, which at this rate will require fourteen years to lequidate. A call for $10,000,000 matured Monday, and was paid. This appears in the debt in the June statement, so that the actual debt reduction was about $112,000,000, for the year. The amount of gold certificates outstanding is $71,000,000, and of silver certificates $96,420,000, an increase of $16,000,000 of both kinds during the month of June, and in the same time $20,000,000 of national bank circulation have been withdrawn.

The Democratic platforms in Connecticut, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Nevada, California, Louisiana, and Ohio favor a tariff for revenue sufficient to meet the demands of the government, so levied as to protect and foster American industries, and ask for the repeal of internal revenue taxgreat portion of these are in the list of doubtful States makes the situation the more interesting.

Over $2,500,000 of $1 and $2 bills have just been issued from the Bureau of Printing and Engraving.

The New York Sun is very solicitous about the platform to be made at Chicago next week. The Sun cares nothing for the right or wrong of the question but if the platform is British even by implication, it will be fatal. It must be distinctly and plainly American, or Blaine wins. The phraseology, the precise form of words, is of little importance, but the principle of so adjusting duties on imports as to put the American laborer and producer fully in a situation to compete with the foreign laborer and producer must be clearly and indisputably set forth, or the game is up at the begining, and playing it out will be only a matter of ceremony. The Sun has discovered that the people do not want any British free trade, and is fearful that the rest of the Democratic party has not discovered it as soon.

Another murder case came to light in Berrien county last week. Wm. Emory, of Benton Harbor, went to the house of Alexander Ketchum, living about eight miles from that place, called for Ketchum, and when he appeared at the door opened fire on him with a revolver, two shots taking effect in his corpus, and may prove fatal. Emery thought Ketchum was too well acquainted with his wife. Emery is now in Berrien jail awaiting trial.

THERE was a regular meeting of the Common Council held last Friday evening, but as there is a small difference of opinion between the publishers and the council about the price to be paid for the publication of the proceedings, they will not be published until the dispute is settled. The price formerly paid for the publication was $1 per meeting, which was reduced to 50 cents, by the council. We have now asked that the old price be restored, but care but little whether it is or not as that amount barely covers cost of type set-

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed for passengers from this place to Chicago via. the Narrow Gauge railroad, and river and lake boats, May Graham and City of St. Joseph. Coupon tickets may be had including transfer at Berrien Springs, and the usual baggage, for $1.50, thus saving $1.10 over the Michigan Central fare, direct connections will be made with the train that leaves Buchanar at 2 o'clock each afternoon excepting Saturday, when no boats will run. Supper will be furnished on the steamer May Graham for 25 cents, and the ticket will include berth on the City of St. Joseph.

THE Sunday Schools of this place will give an excursion to Michigan City on the 23d Mst. The fare has been placed at the low price of 70 cents years of age, which will include admission to the State prison for all Sunday school children. The party will go on the Kalamazoo accommodation and return in the evening on the same train. Sunday schools along the line are invited to accompany the excur-

Harvey will put in a few weeks visiting in the west before deciding upon any future occupation.

In the Era's account of the work of the Board of Supervisors appears the following:

"The bills of N. A. Hamilton, G. F. Edwards and O. W. Coolidge, for legal services rendered in behalf of the prosecution in the case of Thomas Haire, lately convicted of manslaughter, were referred to a special civil claims committee, and such committee recommended that the several claims be allowed at $290.00, $175.00 and $70.00. respectively. After considerable discussion the bills were so allowed. As originally presented, such claims were in the amounts of $394.00, $222.00 and

YE editor and wife spent the greater part of last week in attending the meeting of the State Press Association at Bay City, which was held Tuesday and Wednesday, and ended up in a banquet, prepared by the Fraser House in the highest style. Wednesday afternoon the association started for an excursion to Marquette over the Michigan Central and the Macinac and Marquette railroads. Our part of the excursion ended in a day at Macinac Island and Point St. Ignace, two of the most quaint old places in Michigan. St. Ignace being built along the beach has the reputation of being six inches wide and 4% miles long. On this question there is a dispute. We heard one of the natives claim that the town is thirteen inches wide. On Macinac Island we put in the time visiting Fort Macinac, the government garrison, kept there to defend the nation's rights at the straits. Old Fort Holmes is an old earth work fortification that saw active service in 1812, in the dispute between our people and our British friends. It is now a broken ruin, interesting only in its history. The Island contains a number of natural curiosies. ties. In the evening the ferry boat landed us at Macinac City, and during the night an elegant sleeper over the Grand Rapids and Indiana brought us to Kalamazoo, where, by the kindness of Mr. Eaton, of the Kalamazoo publishing company, we passed a pleasant hour riding about the beautiful city of Kalamazoo, to return by the Michigan Central mail, tired out and thoroughly disgusted with pleasure seeking in hot. dusty weather. While in Bay City we had the pleasure of visiting the Mc-Graw & Co's salt blocks, the largest in the Saginaw Valley, and of seeing for the first time how one saw mill manages to change 250,000 feet of logs into building lumber for a day's work. During our short trip we failed to find more prosperous appearance and the crops were in better condition than in our little corner in Southwestern Michigan, nor a place more inviting as a

SALMON L. ESTES, a citizen of this township for nearly thirty years, died at his home in this place, Sunday, June 29. Following is a short sketch of his life read at the funeral on Tuesday, by Rev. C. G. Thomas:

Brother S. L. Estes was born in Columbia county, N. Y., Nov. 13, 1828. After a severe illness of two and a half weeks, fell asleep in Jesus, at his own home, in Buchanan, surrounded by his weeping family, his pastor, and a large circle of friends and relatives, on Sunday, June 29, about ten minutes before five o'clock r. M., aged 55 years, 7 months and 16 days.

Brother Estes was the oldest of six children, all boys, who, with their mother, preceded him to the Better Land. Of his father's family, his aged father, who has for a long time been a beloved member of his own household, now remains.

About 28 years ago Brother Estes came to this township, (his father and family preceding him by about four years), and 191/2 years ago he settled in Buchanan, continuing his residence therein until the day of his death. Before coming to Buchanan he was superintendent in a large cotton factory in Massachusetts, and after settling in Buchanan he embarked in the business of merchandising, where, as a business man, he made many warm friends, by his straightforward dealing and kind and obliging manner. Of him I think it could be truthfully said, he was "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord;" and with him serving the Lord was as much a business as merchandising. Brother Estes was twice married.

First, in March, 1857, he was joined in marriage to Miss Almeda Cotton, with whom he lived until her decease. Oct. 22, 1871. The fruit of this marriage was three children, one dying in infancy, and two remaining, Annie and Willie, who feel very keenly the great loss they sustain in the death of their father.

October 30, 1872, Brother Estes was again married to Miss Emma J. Nash. for adults and 50 cents for all under 15 of Ohio. This Divinely ordered union was one in which two kindred spirits were joined, continuing in harmonious and unbroken relations, until the silver cord was loosed and the golden bowl broken, leaving this dear wife, their children and their aged grandfather to go as mourners about our streets.

Brother Estes was doubtless a Christian from his birth, and when he was fifteen years of age he made a public profession of faith in Christ, and expressed a desire to identify himself with the M. E. church, and from thence forward he was a faithful and efficient member of the same, and although he was a very modest and retiring man, he never shrank from any duty imposed upon him by God, his own conscience, or the church, and so during all of his Christian life he was a work er and an efficient office bearer in the church of his choice. As an indication of his modesty and his high appreciation of salvation through Christ, he said, during his last illness, to his wife, "Let the funeral be at home, and a quiet one, free from personal eulogy," and then, as though desirous of expressing his high appreciation of Christ and our Holy Religion, he quoted 1st John, 1:9, "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." And so while calling our attention away from himself he was anxious that we should be pointed to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.

In March, 1870, Brother Estes had his first stroke of paralysis, resulting in a protracted illness, from which he in a large measure finally recovered, so that he was able to prosecute his business with his usual vigor. In October, 1872, he had a run of fever, leaving him very weak, without seemingly increasing his paralytic symptoms, but in the summer of 1873, while in Chicago buying goods, after a very hard day's work, he suffered from another shock of his old disease, and from that time on (using his own language) he had to use a walking stick to get about with. November 4, 1881, he had a fall in his own house, (lost his balance while trying to close a door), from which he never recovered, and from that time he was both an invalid and a cripple, having lost the entire use of his legs and feet; but although utterly dependent upon his devoted wife and family for locomotion, his was a cheerful and happy life. His body was weak and diseased, his outward man gradually perishing, but his mental faculties had never been keener or more active than now, and from personal observation. (for we were very intimate), I am satisfied that few men in health developed their mental and spiritual faculties more rapidly than did our invalid brother. The mental powers and the inward man were renewed day by day, A noble man, a kind and affection ate husband and father, a true friend and a devoted and patient Christian has ceased from his labors, has entered into rest, and his works do follow him.

The second charge is that I have unsuccessfully sought to draw nourishment from public office. This has refference, no doubt, to the fact that last spring my name was placed on the Republican township ticket for the office of Township Clerk, and owing to the sin of being "nothing but a boy," I was defeated by some thirty votes. If this is dishonorable, then may my form be ever concealed from public gaze by a cloak of like disgrace.

The remnant of Co. A. 6th Michigan boys in blue, when they assemble around their next camp fire, can best tell you why that father never recurned. A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively and has had his many years of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in his opinions and reasonable in his charges. Those who are afflicted are invited to call, investigate and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing to do so. Address all letters to F. B. BREWER, M. D., Lock Box 350, CHICAGO, IILL.

old gentleman forgot his shiny silk hat and his elaborate gold watch chain, and drifted back somewhere in the past, when life was young, when the burden was heavy and ambition strong. He held the pail between his well-clad knees, and taking up the slab of beef in both hands began to eat like a halfstarved Indian. A chunk of bread of home-made stability came next and followed the boiled beef. Then an egg

"This is something like, this is," said the portly old gentleman, in glee, as he shucked off the shell and laid bare the greenish-yellow color of the solid yolk.
"That's the way to boil an egg!"
Two cold boiled potatoes, soggy with much cooking, went the way of the other things. Then the home-made mince pie was poised for a moment in air. It disappeared, and the pail was empty.

"Look a-here, you old duffer, whose dinner have you been eating?" demanded the big, heavy voice of a laboring man, who, at that moment have in sight, from behind the hogshead. The amiable but portly old gentle-man struggled to his feet. "Yours, I suppose," he answered calmly, flecking the crumbs from his coat with a white silk handkerchief. "Why, do you know," he continued, as the laboring man made ready to explode with wrath, "d'ye know I haven't had su h a genuine home-made dinner since I swung the pick and shovel on the first section of the Union Pacific railroad years ago. There! Don't swear! It's all right. Come up to my house on Pierrepont street and my cook shall give you my dinner. Fair exchange, you know. It's an even chance whether you get the gout or I get the dyspepsia -- a mere toss up, I might say. Come along."

with great alacrity.

As long ago as the days of the Greeks and Romans a slight, elancee figure was admired, and stoutness looked upon as a deformity. Martial ridiculed fat women, and Ovid put large waists in the first rank of his reme lies against love. Several means were tried then, as now, not only to restrain an expanding figure, but to enhance the beauty of a very slight one. But they were of a different kind from those with which we are familiar. Bandages were worn, which consisted of the strophium, the cloth worn round the bosom; the tenta, a similar band below, and the zona, or waist-belt. When bandages failed, those who valued the beauty of their figure had recourse to a remedy pre scribed by Seranus Sammonicus. They enveloped their busts with garlands of ivy, which were thrown on the fire as soon as withdrawn, and afterward rubbed all the upper part of their figures either with goose-fat mixed with warm milk, or with the egg of a partridge. Men were as vain as the women, if we are to believe Aristophanes and other writers. The great comic dramatist mocked his contemporary, Cinecias, for wearing busks of linden-wood, and Capitiolinus, in his biography of the Emperor Anthony, mentions that he also had recourse to them to compress his swelling figure. Testimony is con-flicting, however. Some contend that the ancients were veritable corsets. arguing that when Homer, in describing Juno's toilet when she wished to captivate Jupiter, speaks of the two girdles worn around her waist—the one bordered with gold fringe, the other borrowed from Venus—he was really describing a Greek corset; and that the egide or cuirass of Minerva, which Virgil describes, is to be interpreted in the same manner. But this view is surely mistaken, for no monument of antiquity, no artistic work, no evidence gleaned from other sources, point to the use of stiff, unyielding whalebone cor-

A Wily Toastmaster.

[Philadelphia Press.] Not long since Mr. J. Russell Lowell was present at a London dinner at which he did not expect to speak, and hence was not prepared. Toward the end of the feast, however, the obsequious toastmaster approached him and put into his hands the usual slip of paper, which, in nine cases out of ten, provokes immediate indisposition. In real or feigned horror, the American minister exclaimed: "What! am I to speak? Why on earth didn't you give me notice?"

"Bless you," replied the toastmaster. "we never do: if we was to we should have a gent talking all night."

GEA. ZACH. TAYLOR.

An Old Mexican Campaigner's Recollections of Rough and Ready. [Cor. Fort Worth (Tex.) Gozette.]

When our command joined the army Gen. Taylor was the hero of the day. The recent battles which he had fought and gained made him famous throughout the land. We were prepared to see a warrior with "gold lace and plune," of noble carriage and fierce countenance. Our astonishment can be imagined when we beheld a plain old farmer, with not the first military insignia about him, wearing a widebrim Mexican sombrero and ordinary citizen's clothes. There was not a subordinate around his headquarters that was not better dressed. Verily, his name, "Rough and Ready," was appropriate. He was rather short in stature for his size and apparent weight, with a face that indicated stern decision and untiring energy. His features were not handsome, but by no means repulsive. A pleasant expression seemed to dwell there when he was off duty. His face gave no evidences of cultivation. Shaggy eyebrows, rather a prominent nose, and round face: if any landmarks of intelligence were ever there, the rough camp life the old soldier had led for so many years had he had occasion to ride to town once in Your correspondent is not advised as to what were the religious preferences of Gen. Taylor. He had fallen into the habit so common in the army, and pointedly emphasized his remarks as occasion required. He had none of that bombast about him that even some of his lowest subordinates manifested. In social conversation with his officers clumsy rider, mounting and dismounting his horse like an old farmer only accustomed to horseback exercise when he seemed to forget his rank, and oftent mes had a kind word for the poor private. Cn one occasion we had to cross one of those swift-running mountain streams, the water of which was over waist deep, and a sick and weaklylooking soldier was standing on the bank, I suppose meditating whether be should take the venture or not. Gen. Taylor rode by and saw the situation, assisted the poor soldier up behind him and carried him over the water. I saw that, and heard that soldier long after the war brag that he had "role behind the president." (en. Taylor was always in the thickest of the battle, and seemed to be as destitute of fear as a rock. He rode a milk-white horse-Old Whitey-which seemed as clumsy as his master, and from long association seemed to have adopted some of his peculiarities. Gen. Taylor rode Old Whitey throughout tle battles of Monterey and Buena Vi ta. He was dressed very plainly; wore a common soft hat and an old faded cassimere coat, which his old soldiers informed us he had worn for many years. This coat receive 1 its first wound at Buena Vista, where two musket balls, one about three inches below the other, passed through both lapels. The writer, though with Gen. Taylor's command for nearly a year, never saw him dressed in full uniform, except on the occasion of the departure of the remains of our regiment for home. We had struck our tents, packed our knapsacks, and the last act of our departure from Walnut Springs was taking leave of our old chief. were formed in line, and he came out in our front dressed in regulation uniform. cap-a-pie. [Cor. Inter Ocean.] The Bungalow is quite roomy, though, of course, only one story in height. The drawing-room is twenty-five feet high and forty-eight feetlong. There are no windows, except such as are embodied in the glass set into the double doors, and a few lofty openings filled with small strined-glass transoms. The walls are of brick, plastered within and without. The white always rubs off, and nowhere in the Orient have I found papered or frescoed walls.

The archways from room to room are supplied with screens on rings and poles. The floors are covered with straw or rope matting, the almost universal carpet. The pictures, books, etc, are the only things that look natural. Every morning there are expeditions throughout the house in quest of the white ant. Despite the fact that the building is well constructed, it is a common thing to discover a great patch of plaster adhering to the clean, white wall, which has been deposited there by the tiny pests during the night. You carefully clear the mass away, and find that all this has been brought to the surface through a holesmaller than the finest knitting needle.

Perhaps they will work for months without giving any trace of their presence, accomplishing a great deal in an incredibly short space of time. At length your house collapses, and you discover the extent of the unseen ravages.

"A humorist, my son, is no' the punster, as you may have been led to suppose. he is a man of light and, may hap eccentric, letters, who in opposition to the philosophers of gloom, does not think that the supreme duty of the human family is to mope around as though its last friend had been buried. He believes in the philosophy of light instead of shadows, and the smile which he creates is far better than the sigh of the man who has been taught to believe that I fe is not worth living."

Tyrol and Switzerland. [Alfred E. Lee in The Current.]

A mile or so from Munster, toward Mals, the road crosses the Austrian boundary and enters Switzerland. Instantly a striking change takes place. The road changes from a rough, primitive bridle-path to a broad, smooth, solid highway the moment the boundary is passed. On the Tyrol side the villages are miserably filthy; monster dung-heaps are piled under the win-dows, and great pools of mire stand in the streets. To aggravate, if possible, this disgusting aspect of village life, unsightly crucifixes are set up amid the pig-sties and manure-heaps. The road-side representations of the cru ifixion are generally as rude and horrible as they are common in the Tyrol, but in this particular region extra touches of clumsy art render them more than usually repulsive. On the cross are hung not only the writhing body, be-spattered with blood, but the hammer, the nails, the whips used in the scourge ing, the dice with which the seamless garment was raffled away, and all other accompaniments that can intensify the historical brutality of the spectacle. Passing to the west side of the boundary, one escapes these horrible sights immediately, and thereat heaves a great sigh of relief. Not another crucifix appears. More significant still, the fields are better cultivated, the houses better built, and the people better dressed and more intelligent looking. In the villages, instead of filthy garbage heaps and dreadful crucifixes, are seen clean, well-paved streets, and dwellings nicely painted, with flowers set in the windows, where dainty white curtains are eloquent of tidy housekeep-

Anti-Horse Torture.

[Chicago Herald.] There is an invention spoken of which it is thought may abolish the bit. It is called the carrago, cr anti-horse torture. It is composed of a steel band placed over the front bone of the horse's nose, and to this appliance the reins are attached. The inventor claims for this substitute for the bit that it gives complete control to the driver over the horse, without inflicting the least discomfort or torture on the animal itself. It has been tried with satisfactory results.

Coleridge: Advice is like snow; the softer it falls the longer it dwells upon and the deeper it sinks into the mind.

A Very Steady Pulse. [Chicago Journal.] L. D. Chevalley, a native of Switzer land, aged 66, when recently on board a steamboat on the lake of Geneva, engaged to indicate to the crowd around him the lapse of a quarter of an hour, or as many minutes or seconds as any one chose to name, and, further, to indi cate by the voice the moment the hand passed over the quarter-minutes or half minutes, or any other subdivision stipulated. This he did without mistake in the midst of a diversified conversation. He acquired by imitation and patience a movement which neither thought nor labor nor anything can stop. It is similar to that of a pendulum, which at each motion of going and returning gives him the space of three minute, and these he adds to others continuously. A Chinese Notion. The Boys' Fault. [Chicago Times.]

A veteran of Wall street says it is remarkable how many young men there are in the street. Go into some of the largest banks and banking houses and you will find responsible positions filled by striplings hardly showing the down of adolescence on their cheeks. So it is at the stock board and o her exchanges. The old fellow, who says he has no predjudices against young men, adds: "The great financial business of New York is done by an army of bumptious boys. Is it strange that we have constant failures, plunders, de-linquencies, and dishonors? It is not strange; but it is strange that nothing is learned by bitter experience; that there is no attempt at reform. If you observe the bulk of the failures in that quarter you will find them occasioned by younger members of the firms, who have tried to improve on the fathers' methods, and who scout conservatism and caution as old-fogyish." England's Hunting Season.

[Frank I. Jervis in The Current.] No sooner does the welcome item in the yearly calendar inform the world of Britain that the season for the legal slaughtering of game has commenced than politics stagnate, the oracles of the law slumber, business becomes a bore, and from the crowded metropolis a general stampede begins. Every feudal castle, mansion, manor house, county seat and hunting lodge become scenes of life and jollity. He is the richest and most coveted nobleman who has the best stocked preserve, and the simple country gentleman who is a good man in the field, who can beat a stubble field, raise a covey of birds and use a double barrel right and left with unerring aim, stands on a higher pinnacle than the most subtle intellect, the brightest imagination or the most cop ous flow of eloquence.

Uncle Ezek's Moral Proverbs.

[The Century.] The devil never was known to play any kind of a game, except for keeps. H who forgives, and doesn't forget, is trying to settle with the Lord for 50 cents on the dollar. The man who has nothing but honesty to recommend him is sure of a reward hereafter, but he can't get a job here on earth.

Men will swear by their religion, will fight for it, will be martyrs for it, will persecute others for it, will do anything and all things for it, except ob serve it themselves.

Largest in the World.

[Chicago Herald.] The Luke Voorhees cattle range of Wyoming is the largest in the world, no doubt. It comprises 1,000,000 acres of land, 40,000 of which are inclosed with a barbed wire fence, and has a water frontage of thirty miles. The range will freely accommodate 75,000 cattle. It has now 15,000 head.

THE RIVER'S SONG. [Sarah Doudney, in Sunday Magazine.] The voice of the river is sweet and strong, It sings to the rushes an old, old song.

The wind is fickle, and varies its tone, Sometimes a whisper and sometimes a moan. The leaves and the branches rustle and sway,

Changing their music ten times a day: And the voice of man is a voice of change, Mirthful and passionate, loving and strange. But be the day cloudy, or brief, or long. The river will sing you the same old song. 'Tis a song of gladness, and rest and hope, Of a brighter life, and a wider scope;

Of narrowing channels and wild rocks past, And the broad blue seas with its peace at last. "OLD CURIOSITY SHOP."

The Last of a Rookery Immortalized by the Great Novelist. [London News.]

"I'm gettin' heartily sick on't!" exclaimed the lady of the house, a genial, pleasant soul, with humor in her eye, to our representative, when he called upon her to ask permission to explore 14 Portsmouth street. And not without reason, indeed, for Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop", and the street where it stands, are constantly crowded with visitors and sightseers. "And one well dressed person," said my hostess, with a sniff of contempt, "asked me if he might take a brick away with him as a relic! 'I will smooth it down and it shall be an heirloom in my family forever.' A lunatic, I call him. And who knows but he beats his wife?" But this gentleman, brimming over with sentiment, walked of with a brick under his coat, nevertheless.

Many artists have visited the spot lately, for it is to be torn down, and many sketches from every point of the compass have been taken. Monday, in the fort space of half an hour, a photographer blocked up Sheffield street with his camera, three reporters were busy taken notes, and two other gentlemen were hard at work sketching the ruin, much to the amusement of the odd fish who constitute the "neighborhood." Even during the few minutes I spent in the upper regions of No. 14, one lady came up the creaking steps, peered in, apologized for the intrusion, viewed the chaos, remarked that it was a pity, and descended. "I come from Boston," I heard her murmur. It may be said, en parenthese, that a roaring trade is being done in pictures of the exterior, which may be had for "2d. plain" and "4d. colored," Miss Anderson is a constant visitor (so I was told), and insists upon drinking a dish of tea in the parlor when the parlor is once more cozy and rejuvenated. "A charming young lady, and so affable."

"The Old Curiosity Shop" stands in the southwest corner of Lincoln's-innfields, an loccupies an angle of Portsmonth stre t, one window looking northwest, the other two facing Sheffield street. The red tiles and the overhanging roof have a quaint, old-fashioned air about them, and afford a pleasant relief from the hideous yellow plaster on which is painted in great vulgar letters the name with which it has been endowed, "Immortalized by Dickens," and just below, in unholy contrast, "H. "God Bless the Baby."

[Cueyenne (Wy. T.) S n.] A big man and a smaller one went into Mr. Harrington's store last night and asked to look at some clothing. Mr. Harrington himself waited upon the visitors and was showing then various lines of goods when the door leading to his residence in the rear of the store opened and in came on the run a baby daughter of the Harrington family. The little one came in hurrying to escape her nother, and fell over a box. Mr. Harrington left the customer and went to the rescue of the baby. After the little one was quieted and placed on the foor he resumed his business, but in a minute she fell over another box and apparently hurt herself. He left the customer and again looked after the child.

At this the man turned to his companion and said: "Let's go out of here. i ain t looking for a nursery."

The proprietor heard the remark and was not slow to respond. He said that he had lived fifty-two years and done twenty years of business, and had had 20,000 customers, but he had never had but two Harrington babies, and this was the only one left. He could get along without the customer and the sale of a suit of clothes to him, but he couldn't get along without the Harring-ton baby, and he didn't care how soon the customer "skipped." The man who was looking at the proprietor with a mild astonishment at first, when the story was finished had his handkerchief out, was wiping his eyes, and reaching his hand out to Mr. hair naton exclaimed: "Partner, God bless the baby." He couldn't do too much, and it is needless to say they parted as friends.

The Rhyme. [Philadelphia Call.] Interviewer-I should like, Mr. Whitman, to have your theory of "Poetry, sir, is the soul of thought the upward heaving of divine aspira-

Some of the Customs of Our Eathers -Various Changes. The Fan Francisco Chronicle not s some of the changes that have occurred within half a century in the subjoined paragraphs:—Family cooking was better than at present. Our mothers and grandmothers "took a hand" in it. Bread was made at home. Coffee was freshly ground every moining for breakfast. The grinding of the family coffee mill was a familiar sound of the early n orning, long ere the child: en were up. Foreign help had le s sway in the kitchen than now, and European hands did not ma'e a botch of such purely American dishes as pumpkin pie, codfish cakes, pork and beans, corn bread, buck wheat cakes, and succotash. People then did not live as long, nor was the average health as good as it is to-day; they are more meat, more grease, more hot bread, more heavy dishes, drank more at meals and afterward chewed more tobacco. Dyspeptics and consumptives were more common; disease and premature death were devoutly laid at the Deity's door and alluded to as "dispensations of Providence."

Tombstones had larger epitaphs and more verbosity engraved upon them.

Business letters were more voluminous and formal than now, and written in a precise, round hand. Isolated rural settlements contained a greater proportion of lunatics. paralytics and victims of St. Vitus dance, than they do tc-lay.

The railroad had not strung places together, and there were fewer hospitals for special diseases, hence most of their cases were kept at home. The diet was more surcharged with

Between the Sacred Forms of India and of Christendom. M. D. Conway in San Francisco Chronicle. l

What is now required is that there should be a free and scholarly study of ana'ogies between the sacred forms of India and those of Christendom. I have before me twenty-five cacred pictures gathered from the print shops of Calcutta, a uong which are some startlingly similar forms. The goldess of learning, with her Greek robe and pile of books, resemble some medieval personification of grammar. One goldess has beside her an owl, Mahadev, bearing Sati on his shoulder. A giant, with flowing beard and hair, staff in Land, toiling between high and rugged cliffs, is a fair image of bt. hristopher. Jagadhatri, the universal nurse, seated on her lion, recalls

Jaumastami, flying with the newborn Krishna into the wilderness to escape King Kausa, is especially notable for the babe's head, beautifully and exquisitely haloed as any in early stalian conceptions. In another the ch ld's fo ter-moster, Yasoda, is standing beside the infant I rishna at play, h s head halced and surmounted by three feather shared into a perfect cross. The e are pictures that seem to just fy Weber's belief in some connection letween the sacred traditions of Ar shna and Christ. Here is a very Christ-like Siva, with rays emanating from his head of flowing locks and beard, with Gauri also listening like a Mary at his feet. The most striking picture of all represents Yasoda with the two holy children—Krishna being nearer to her, while his brother, staff in hand leans affectionately toward him, like a 1.ttle St. John. Near by are seen a herd of cows and sheep at pasture.

On the curtain of one of the Hindu theaters I saw a picture, apparently of Adam and Eve. It was in a Parsee theatre, and would, therefore, represent the old Persian legend of the first par-ents of mankind, Meschia and Meschiane. It is a singular fact that in some cases these sacred personages are pictured very fair and generally with different complexions from those of the present Oriental races. The houris of the Mohammedan paradise are so called, not, as is generally supposed, because they are dark or dark-eyed, but because they are fair. Those who have the curiosity to follow up these suggestions may find an analogy in the Adamu and Sarku, who seem to represent the light and dark races of the Babylonian cylinders. Adam is the immemorial name of the first man in India as well as in Europe. Disabled Dr. Dio.

[New York Letter.] This man looked robust until he got near you. Then you saw that he had not much besides his size left of former brawn and muscle. His face was pale where it had been ruddy, his eyes were dull where they had been bright, and his gait was unsteady where it had been stable. For many years he had been a teacher in the science of long and strong life. I need only mention the name of Dio Lewis to bring to your mind one of the most widely-known radicals in the field of health's contest with disease. He was one of those full-blooded, vital men who have no kindly consideration for persons of less aggressive physique. He liked to sleep in a polar cyclone produced by open win lows in his bedrcom, and to take plunges into the icy whirlpool of his bathtub.

Not content with having filled hundreds of books with his guidance to health, he lately started a magazine to further disseminate his views. He had devoted a year before this to camp life on the Pacific coast, and had come back with a tremendous load of astonishing new theories and revised old ones. But the answer to his very positive assertion as to how he was going to live to be a centenarian, has suddenly come in a complete physical breakdown. He is compelled to stop all mental work, and to retire to a farm in New Jersey for ble package upon its receipt that the secretary was not possessed of sufficient moral courage to untie the tape that bound it. "It is not written in the style to suit the theatre," he replied, handing back the manuscript. "It is not bad, but it is deficient in interest." At this juncture the young man smiled, and, untying the roll, he displayed some quires of blank paper! Thus convicted, the secretary shook hands with the aspirant, invited him to dinner, and shortly afterward assisted him to a successful debut at the Odeon, Another author once waited upon the popular manager of a London theatre inquiring the result of the perusal of his manuscript; whereupon the other, having forgotten all about it, carefully opened a large drawer, exhibiting a heterogeneous mass of documents, and exclaimed: "There! help yourself. I don't know exactly which is yours; but you may take any one of them you like!"
