FORTUNE-TELLING.

Well, mebby you will-but I doubt it.

"Who is she?" asked Christine Cameron of her cousin, little Mrs. DeWint, as the two walked down the breezy notel piazza. "That sweet faced girl?"-following the direction of Miss Cameron's eyes—
"it is Jeanie Ross. Isn't her face a picture? Poor little girl!"

"Why poor?" "Because she is a hopeless cripple," answered Mrs. DeWint briefly. "Spine disease. I believe." 🛧 Christine's looked the sympathy that her tongue did not utter, as Mrs. De-

Wint continued. "She is the dearest little thing—so sweet and patient—so full of quiet helpfulness. Why she manages to do something for everyone who comesnear her, and never seems conscious. that she is doing in the least unusual." "You grow enthusiastic, Nell."

"So will you when you know her. There is a flower like grace about her that is perfectly irresistible. Come over, and let me introduce you." "Oh, I forgot to tell you that she is a firm believer in Palmistry and has the gift of second sight. If she offers to tell your fortune let her do it. "Miss Jeanie," she said, bending over the low reclining chair. "I have brought my cousin to see you, and you must like her very much, for Christine Cameron is the very dearest cousin I have in all the world." Then I am certainly glad she has come," holding out a white hand in cordial greeting, "and I hope you mean to stay a long time, Miss Cameron?" "That I can hardly tell," answered Christine, "but there is every reason.

Jeanie spoke on, unconscious of the exchange of looks. "You will travel," said she, "and will ee many strange lands and countries." "Would that I could believe it!" exclamed Christine. "It is the desire of my heart."

"Yes, you may believe it. And you will be rich—will have almost more money than you know what to do with. It is to be left to you and will come

"On, what happiness!" sighed Miss Cameron with an affection of belief. "You will have trouble, though; you will be threatened by a loss of your eyesight, but with care it may be averted. You are to be married soon." "I have yet to meet him." If Miss Cameron's laughter was a trifle strain-

Christine felt her cousin's eyes scanning her face, but a marble statute would not have been less responsive. "Will you give me the other hand?" said Jeanie, "now bend the wrist forward a little-so! The creases that are made indicate the number of years -the deep ones, fifteen, the little ones, ten. You will not live to be over

It was a laughing speech, and Jeanie looked up with an answering smile.
"You know him then?" she was about to ask, when Mrs. Ross appeared on the scene motherly and anxious. "Jeanie, my dear, don't you think you had better come into the house? This breeze from the sea is growing almost too fresh." "Thank you for my fortune," said there is no turning away; but what use is there in talking of a thing that can't be helped?" "No use, I suppose. But it was a strange thing, wasn't it?"

You have probably told her that I painted that picture that hangs in your room, and that I am musical. You have a way of talking about me, you know.

"But I have not to her." Mrs. De-

Wint protested, "and after all, it is not that nonsense we are thinking ofeither one of us. How entirely in earnest she was when she said, "No, it cannot be—yes—no it is a relative."
"Why do you talk of it, Nell?" cried Cristine with sudden irritation. You know as well as I do, how that foolish quarrel parted us. It was my fault, for Will did not understand, and I was too proud to explain; and now that he is engaged to Mazie Barringer, there is no possibitity-no hope-for any future. "It was not your fault," said Nell. "Own brother of mine as he is, and dearly as I love him, I say that. He ought to have understood, or not understanding should have trusted. And the cap sheaf of his offenses was engaging himself to that silly Barringer girl. Chris, I tell you there is something queer about that. I don't believe he is weak enough to do such a thing from pique and I know he could have loved her."

"Suppose we don't discuss it any longer, my dear. Let us turn our attention to what fortune I am to inherit. Is it to come from my rich uncle in India, or from my great aunt out West. And when we travel where shall we go? A walking trip through Norway and Sweden, or a tour to the mountains in the moon?"

"Nell, I think we might try Kam-schatka by way of variety," returned Mrs. DeWint with inimitable gravity. "In the meantime, however, it occurs to me that I have some letters to write, so I must leave you to your own devices. Will you stay here or go to your room?"

"To my room." Chris felt hardly in the mood to exchange airy nothings with the throng of idlers who had gathered on the piazza. As she opened the door of No. 31, her cousin having passed on to the room beyond a stream of light from the corridor discovered two letters lying on the bureau.

To light her own lamp, to lock herself in, where there were no eyes to watch, was the work of a moment. One letter bore a California postmark, one from New York, and both had been forwarded to her at the seaside.

"What can it mean?" she thought, holding the western letter in her hand, longing yet fearing to open it. "Why should Will write me?"

At last the seal was broken. "Does it not strike you as the hight idiocy," the letter began, abruptly, "for us to keep up this farce any longer? For my part, I feel that I have acted like a fool, and I want your sanction in making a confession; or rather I wish to tell you that I mean to write at once and explain the situation. You know that I really never loved any other woman, so you can understand that this complication is horrible to me. Neither am I sure that it is best for you. Had not we better be honest, both of us, and trust to the power of

"Oh, Will, Will, why should life go wrong with us-why could not we be

It did not last long. The paroxysm of grief was conquered almost as soon as it arose. Presently came the recollection of the other letter. It was a bulky epistle, directed by an unfamiliar hand. She opened it with languid interest, to find—a second letter in which every line and curve was familiar, and a tiny enclosure. "MY DEAR MISS CAMERON," so ran the note, "I find that I have received a letter intended for you. I cannot understand how the mistake occurred, unless you have the letter belonging to the envelope that bears my name. I have read just enough of this to gather its purport. I cannot help fearing that he has not done himself injustice, for fear of seeming to throw the blame upon me. Yet I think you will not need my testimony to assure you of his

"DEAR CHRIS: You loved me once upon a time, nor was it so long ago that I need fear your throwing this aside unread. I have no right to offer you an explanation, but I take it because of one supreme fact, my love for you. You remember how we parted last winter. I was a fool not to trust you through all and everything. Indeed, I did trust down to the bottom of my heart; but I was proud and hot tempered, and so I lost my chance. You heard the report of my engage ment to Mazie Barringer, and it was out of my power then to deny it, so I have had to bear the bitterness of feeling what your thought of me must be Let me tell you what the truth of that report was. Mazie loves Tom Nelson, but her father has taken as nureasonable prejudice against him as he has a liking for me. My mood was reckless enough to help Tom out of his difficulty in any fashion he suggested; and his plan was this: for to pay Mazie attention enough to justify the report of an engagement, and then, when I went away his letters were enclosed in envelopes and addressed to me. It was a silly scheme, and I was a fool to enter into it: but I can bear my folly no longer. Chris, dear, you must krow how I love you-surely you will not retuse to let me come to you? About the 1st of July a Chicago fruitbuyer went over to St. Joseph, on the Michigan shore, to view the peach crop prospects, and he found one orchard-owner who was feeling so very

Startled for a moment, I turned my chair and beheld on the window-sill a little tree-frog gravely looking at me. His skin—of an exquisite pale applegreen color—shone in the lamp-light. Fearful that I might frighten him away, I sat motionless in the chair, watching him intently. Presently he gave another little whistle, as clear and sharp as a bird-note. He was evidently making up his mind that I was to be trusted (a confidence not misplaced). and soon he gave an easy spring and was on the desk before me. I hardly dared to breathe, lest he should be alarmed. He looked at me carefully for a few minutes; and then, hopping under the lamp, he began a slaughter of the insect creation, such as I never before witnessed. He captured in a flash any careless fly or moth that came near him, declining to touch the dead ones that had cremated themselves.

For Sundays, this is invariably black throughout, and yet does not look funereal. The dress is plain bombazine or alpaca, a shawl folded square, and over the head a large silk handkerchief, which must be put on with great exactness and care to make just so many folds at the sides, with a huge knot under the chin; while the point at the back hangs below the neck and generally has one or more narwhal wishes to play it finds anothinitials neatly worked in colors ("crossstitched") in the corner. Sensible Advice. The following sensible advice appeared in a communication from Portland. Mich., to the Evening News, Monday:

"The Prohibitionists, writing from Saranac, with a great show of indignation, says the Prohibitionists of Ionia county will not be caught by the submission plank in the Republican platform, alleging as one reason the failure of Republicans in the last Legislature to submit. Just how much reason Prohibitionists of Ionia have for complaint may be realized when it is remembered that every Republican representative from said county voted for submission. And the same may be said of every district in the state except those in the Upper Peninsula, the Saginaw valley, Detroit and Grand Rapids. Yet instead of working with 200 or more speakers in these portions of the state to elect men who are in their opinion, they select for their operations such parts as Ionia county, whose legislative representaion, solid republican, has for several years voted exactly as they, the Prohibitionists, desired. Wisdom would seem to dictate in those portions of the United States where Repuplicans or Democrats were nearly a unit in favoring prohibition, or submission, the Prohibitionists should not create divisions by organizing a third party movement. This is the advice of Neal Dow, so far as the country at large is concerned, but it would seem equally applicable to a

For Prohibitionists.

Michael J. Fanning recently wrote to Robert E. Frazer, both of Jackson, an open letter, which he caused to be published in the Jackson Democratic paper. The prominence of these two men should give their utterances some weight, and we consequently copy below the two letters:

MR. FANNING'S LETTER.

"DEAR SIR:-You are recognized by many as a leader in the temperance work of this State. You have been honored on at least two different occasions by being called upon to preside over the deliberations of the representative temperance men and women of this State, in State convention assembled. I, with many others, have willingly followed your leadership, and would gladly continue to do so, could we be convinced that we would thereby advance the interests of the cause, which I believe is as dear to you as to any of us. Those of us in this State who believe that the best interests of this State demands the legal suppression of the liquor traffic are divided as regards the best method by which this desirable prohibition may be secured—some of us think it can be best secured through the agency of a political party organized for that purpose-of this class I am one. Others think we can serve the cause of prohibition best by throwing the weight of our influence with and for the Republican partyof this class you are the most conspicuous representative in this State. It is to you, as such a representative, and not personally, this letter is addressed. I am interested in uniting the temper-Ben. Butler is a great friend of the | ance people of this State in one line of | question for the whole people, and to work, and it is this interest that leads me to make the following proposition: "I will work from now till election day for the success of the Republican party, if you will show me how any person, who says he believes in prohibition, can vote the Republican ticket

[Mr. Fanning then quotes the "Raster" plank in the Republican national this fall without telling a lie."

platform of 1872, and implies that this plank was a direct blow at prohibition.] "The Republican national convention of 1884 renews allegiance to this plank, not only in word, but in deed. The words renewing this allegiance are found in the platform. The deed, renewing this allegiance, was done when they so shabbily treated the representatives of National Women's Christian Temperance Union. When they snickered and sneered at the petition presented by the devoted mothers and wives of this country, who appeared before them in the interest of God and home and native land.' If these are facts, and I challenge denial, then should I, or you, or any other person, who says he believes in prohibition, vote this fall for Messrs. Blaine and Logan, we would, by our votes, say to the world: 'We approve of the action of the party, which these men represent, in its declaration against all socalled "temperance" (prohibitory) and Sunday laws. We hold with that party, "that the right to drank what one pleases," "and the right to look upon the day on which Christians have their prayer meetings as any other day," are too sacred for governmental interference.' In other words, we say with our tongues, 'prohibition is right, and we believe in it'—and we say by our ballots, 'prohibition is wrong, and we don't believe in it.' This looks to me very much as though no man who believes prohibition is right can vote the Republican ticket this fall without telling a lie, either with his tongue or ballot. Now, as yourself, and a few other men, for whom I have great respect, occupy a position which will force you this fall to either vote the Prohibition ticket, or with your ballot, give the lie to your tongue, (as it seems to me), I would be much obliged to you if you would enable me to retain my respect for such persons—by showing how a man who believes in prohibition can vote the Republican ticket this fall without lying—either with tongue or MR. FRAZER'S REPLY.

To this letter Mr. Frazer made the following answer: DEAR SIR:-You address me to-day an open letter which you cause to be published in the Democratic paper of this city. You style me the most conspicuous representative in this State of those temperance men who think the cause of prohibition can be best

I do not claim that the Republican party has ever in national convention declared for prohibition, or that it is committed to that doctrine in this State. All I claim is that it is freely committed to the principle that the people of Michigan have a right to say what the constitution shall contain on that subject, and they ought to be allowed to speak; that it declares its bedoing so it did all that any temperance organization I ever represented de-

To make this question a national isesent state of public feeling would in my opinion bury the party which advocated it and retard the cause of temperance for many years. I know your people have no toleration for the temperance men who differ from them. Yet we must retain our honest views and stand your condemnation. When the States show themselves able to solve this perplexing question with the full power in their hands, it will be solved for the

There are other questions than tem perance before this nation to-day; ques tions affecting commercial welfare. and striking directly at the rights of the American workingman. On these questions I am in hearty sympathy with the Republican party, and against the Democratic party; and the ideas of one or the other of these parties must prevail in the coming election. If I should cast my vote for St. John I would not only throw my vote away, but afford aid and comfort to the Democratic party, which I will not willingly do, knowing that it is the foe of temperance and that it antagonizes my belief on other subjects. Shall the Republican or Democratic party rule this nation for the next four years? That's the issue. How shall I vote? How ought I to yote? Shall I cast my vote. to help make Cleveland President, or shall I vote for Blaine? It is an easy question for me to answer. Because I cannot have all I want, shall I refuse what is offered me notwithstanding the fact I desire it, or shall I kill the giver so that I can have forced upon me what I abhor? I know that you argue by destroying Republicanism you have a short road to prohibition. When you have killed the Republican party the Democratic party rules—not you nor your ideas; and when that party gives you prohibition wickedness will have departed from the land. I have seen the time when I hoped to bring all men to my views of reforming the world. I have more recently concluded to postpone indefinitely the I am opposed to the Prohibition party for these reasons: 1. Its speakers, journals and leaders declare to promote the cause of temperance the Republican party must die. believe that it is the Democratic party which ought to die, and that when the Republican party dies all hope of temperance dies with it.

2. I believe the Prohibition party, as a party, never succeeded in doing anything for temperance, and that whenever temperance has succeeded in getting to the front it has been brought about by Republican agencies.

3. The Prohibition party operates simply as an aid and supporter of the Democratic party. It strikes its heavy blows at the Republicans and says little against the Democrats. The open letters of its adherents are published in Democratic papers, and the Demo-crats publish them because they believe that it helps the Democrats and harms the Republicans. The Democratic papers urge them on to shake the trees, and the Democratic party picks up the nuts. The Prohibition party appeals to the Republicans to desert their party and, while not avowedy doing so, really helps the Democrats. I shall never knowingly, directly or indirectly, feed and strengthen a fee for the purpose of making it strong enough to strangle me. This I must do if I vote for St. John and thus help bring the Democrats into power.

4. I oppose the Prohibition party because its leaders and journals false ly charge the Republican party with ypocrasy in asking to have the constitutional amendment submitted to the people. This it did at the very outset before any facts could have been known on which to base an opinion. They charge the Republican State Committee with requesting speakers in its employ to ignore the submission plank. This charge I know to be false. They charge the speakers with not advocating that plank. To many of the speakers this charge was unjust. I made as many speeches as any one in that cam paign and never failed to advocate it, and others did the same, and this a them the Republican party are willing to leave it. The Republican party can speak its views only through its platform. It can no more control the action of individual legislators than it can control the tides. They will do as their immediate constituents demand. Convert the constituents and the legislators will all be right and not before.

I stand as I have stood for years, a temperance man, doing my best in my own way according to the sight given me, to rid the world of a great evil. I suppose you addressed your letter to me because I am a Republican. Doesn't it strike you that it might be fair to write an open letter to the Democrats and Greenbackers? Suppose you write to Gov. Begole and ask him how he can, as a Prohibitionist and Woman Suffragist, enter into an alliance, offensive and defensive, with the Democrats, who despise him and his principles, but who are just now using him for purposes of their own. Now, in justice, he being a candidate for office, should be interrogated as well as I, who am not a candidate. Had you not better write to some leading Democratic statesman and ask him how in the light of the sumptuary plank in the Democratic Chicago platform, and the non-temperance utterances in Cleveland's letter, he can conscientiously vote for such an old Prohibition fanatic as Gov. Begole?

You are, no doubt, doing your duty as you understand it. You cannot elect St. John. You will undoubtedly help to strengthen the chances for Cleveland. I am against Cleveland and the Democratic party. I am go ing to try and help defeat them. My way of doing it is to vote for Blaine, Logan and Alger, and I propose to do my level best to help them get there. R. E. FRAZER. Yours.

In the Michigan legislature of 1883

there were 61 Republicans in the house and 19 in the senate; making a total of 80. Of this number 60, or 75 per cent, voted for the submission of a prohibitory amendment. There were 25 Demograts in the house and 7 in the senate. Of these five voted for submission, or less than 15 per cent. Of the Greenback members of the house and senate 75 per cent. voted in favor of submission. And yet John Russell,

JACKSON, Aug. 23, 1884.

D. P Sagendorph, Sam F. Dickie & Co., declare there is no difference between the Republican and Democratic parties; and that Republicans could have submitted that amendment but did not wish to. It would have taken twothirds of 132, or SS votes to have done so, or eight more than they possessed. Because the Republican members did not vote solidly for submission the third party prohibitionists say: "down with the Republican party, and up with the whisky Democracy which we know will vote almost to a man against submission." The inconsistency and pigheadedness of the political prohibitionist can be seen in the following illustration: In this Lansing district the Republican party without doubt will nominate a man for representative in the legislature who will work and vote for the submission of a prohibitory amendment The Democracy will renominate a man who will work early and late against such submission. Despite the condition of things the prohibitionists will nominate a candidate with a full knowledge that nine out of every ten votes cast for him will come from the Republican ranks, and be given indirectly to the Democratic candidate. THE COMING METAL.

Discovery of a Cheap Process for Making Aluminum-The Revolution It Is Likely to Work n Many Manufactures. Aluminum, with one exception, is the nost abundant metal known. The maerial, alumina or clay, from which it is produced is not confined to any locality or country. It is found everywhere. It is more than half a century since the eminent German chemist, the late Friederich Wohler, who for fifty years was Professor of Medicine and Director of the Chemical Institute at Gottingen discovered aluminum and that it could be produced from common clay and from alum, and still it is among the least familiar of metals. Its usual price s $20 per pound and until the past year it has only been known as "aluminum gold." After many experiments extending over a series of years, its manufac-ture was abandoned except in one instance, to the French, who only produced it in inconsiderable quantities. After more than thirty years' labor and at a cost of more than £250,000, the eminent English chemist and metallurg st, James Webster, has discovered a met'od of making aluminum by burning or roasting alum, instead of making it in the old and tedious way by precipitation. By the new process it takes only one twenty-fourth of the time required by the old method and costs less than one-tenth as much. Instead ofproducing the alumina powder by the old and slow method of precipitation, Mr. Webster burns the alum with pitch in a calcin ng or roasting furnace, prepared expressly for this purpose, the product being a great ash or powder, in appearance much like the ashes of cinders from an engine furnace. This gray powder, according to all scientific authorities, is no more or less than burnt alum. By another process this ash is converted into another product, which contains from $4 to 95 per cent. of the alumina, having left behind it several bi-products, which nearly pay the cost of working. The alumina thus produced is better than that by the old method of precipitation, in that it is much finer in texture and almost entirely free from silica. The discoverer has been producing 200 pounds of alumina per week for more than a year, the value of which is £4,000 or £208,000 per annum, the result of which has been that at the present time a manufactory which covers more than one-half an acre is kept busy, night and day, with orders ready for more than fifteen months' work. present output is twenty tons of aluminum metal per week. From the results already obtained by the aluminum bronze factory (near Birmingham, England,) it is plainly evident that in very short time this almost new and peculiar metal, which never oxidizes or corrodes, and which never tarnishes under any circumstances, to which can be given the color of gold, silver, bronze or purple, and which differs from all other metals in that it is never produced direct from ore, but only by a long and elaborate process, must become an important factor in the manufacture of jewelry; and not only so, but that almost every article made from metal, from the screw-propeller or anchor of the largest steamship down to the tiniest tenspoon, must be manufactured from it, or its alloy or bronze. The chief value of aluminum, at present, is in tempering or giving strength and a surface or body to alloys, bronzes, or metals, so that they will not corrode. To copper, tin, or zinc it gives such properties as can be obtained by no other means, softening their nature while i creasing their real hardness and strength, and enabling them to silver, preserving them from corrosion and rendering them more ductile and refined, and giving them a surface and body that withstands the chemical action of the elements. As a result of this new process of making aluminum, all plated goods, nickel or silver, watch cases, cups, saucers, spoons, knives, forks, gun and pistol barrels, pistol handles, gun, harness, carriage and saddle ornaments made of brass, nickel, German silver, bronze or silver, must give way to those made of aluminum or bismuth bronze. Piano-forte wires made from it will vibrate ten seconds longer than the best now in use. The tensile strengt's of aluminum or bismuth bronze being the same, only in the latter 1-1800th part of bismuth is added, had been proved, by repeated tests, to bear a strain of forty-two tons to the square inch, or fourteen tons more than gun metal, and twelve tons more than the best bessemer steel. Whenever and wherever there is need of a metal, and one is demanded that cannot crystallize or corrode under any circumstances, a metal that combines great strength and flexibility, it is plain that aluminum must be used. In the tests already mod with propeller screws, blad s, and l hearings, and heavy artillery . from aluminum or bismath bro...., as against those made from the best gun metal, the ship builders decided in favor of the former, as the strength was so much greater and the weight so much less, being only one-fourth as great.—Springfield Republican.

How to Disappoint a Balky Horse. Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel: A Leo-minster farmer broke his horse of a "balky" freak in a very quiet and, as he claims, not a cruel manner. Senator Foote's Wig.

A Washington Post writer tells of the following incident which occurred when Hale, of Hew Hampshire, and Foote, of Mississippi, were in the Senate: Foote was baldheaded, with a venerable fringe of snowy white hair running around the base of the shining dome of his skull. One day he startled the Senate by walking in with a deadblack curly wig covering his head. Hale arose at once "to a question of the highest privilege." He said, in explanation, that the Senate was too familiar with the venerable and distinguished features of the Senator from Mississippi to be for an instant deseived by the impudent and audacious inter oper who, upon the basis of a mere facial resemblance to Mr. Foote, had introduced himself into the Senate and into the very seat of the venerable ' said de, amid great laughter, "at this youthful impostor," and then, with a characteristic flourish of satirical suggestion, the New Hampshire Senator moved the appointment of a special committee to investigate the case. When he concluded, Foote turned very coolly toward Hale, and, lifting his black wig from his head, said; "Do you recognize me now? Do you think it is necessary to have a special Hale withdrew his moA Thames Fisherman.

The True Wife. Ottentimes I have seen a tall ship glide by against the tide as if drawn by some invisible bowline, with a hundred strong arms pulling it. Her sails were unfilled, her streamers were drooping, she had neither side-wheel nor stern wheel; still she moved on stately, in serene triumph, as with her own life. But I knew that on the other side of the ship, hidden beneath the great bulk that swam so majestically, there was a little toilsome steam-tug, with a heart of fire and arms of iron, that was tugging it bravely on; and I knew if the little steam-tug untwined her arm, and left the ship, it would wallow and roll about and drift hither and thither, and go off with the refluent tide, no man knows whither. And so I have known more than one genius, high-decked, full-freighted, idle-sailed, gay-pennoned, that but for the bare, toiling arms, and brave, warm-beating heart of the faithful little wife that nestles close to him, so that no wind or wave could part them, would have gone down with the stream, and have been heard of no more.—O. National Republican Platform. National Republican Platform.

The Republicans of the United States, in National Convention assembled, renew their allegiance to the principles upon which they have triumphed in six successive Presidential elections, and congratulate the American people on the attainment of so many results in legislature and administration by which the Republican party has, after saving the Union, done so much to render its institutions just, equal and benificent, the sateguard of liberty and the embodiment of the best abought and highest purposes of our citizens.

The Republican party has gained its strength by quick and faithful response to the demands of the people for the freedom and the equality of all men, for a united Nation, assuring the rights of all citizens, for the elevation of labor, and for honest currency, for purity in egislation and for integrity and zens, for the elevation of labor, and for honest currency, for purity in legislation and for integrity and accountability in all departments of the government, and it accepts anew the duty of leading in the work of progress and reform. We lament the death of 'President Garfield, whose sound statesmanship, long conspictions in Congress, gave promise of a strong and successful Administration, a promise fully realized during the short period of his office as President of the United States. His distinguished success in war and peace had endeared him to the hearts of the American people. In the Administration of President Arthur we recognize a wise, conservative and patriotic policy under which the country has been blessed with remarkable prosperity, and we believe his eminent services are entitled to and will receive the hearty approval of every citizen.

remarkable prosperity, and we believe his eminent services are entitled to and will receive the hearty approval of every citizen.

It is the first duty of a good government to promote the interests of its own people. The largest diversity of industry is most productive of general prosperity and of the comfort and independence of the people. We therefore demand that the imposition of duties on foreign imports shall be made not "for revenue only," but that in raising the requisite revenues for the Government, such duties shall be so levied as to afford security to our diversified industries, and protection to the rights and wages of the laborer, to the end that active and intelligent labor, as well as capital, may have its just reward, and the laboring man his full share in the national prosperity.

Against the so-called economic system of the Democratic party, which would degrade our labor to the foreign standard, we enter our earnest protest. The Democratic party has failed completely to relieve the people of the burden of unnecessary taxation by a wise reduction of the surplus.

The Republican party favors itself to correct the inequalities of the tariff, and to reduce the surplus, not by the vicious and indiscriminate process of horizontal reduction, but by such methods as will relieve the taxpayer without injuring the labor or the great productive interests of the country,

We reer guize the importance of sheephusbandry in the United States, the serious depression which it is now experiencing and the danger threatening its future prosperity, and we, therefore, respect the demands of the representatives of this important agricultural interest, for a readjustment of duty upon foreign wool, in order that such industry shall have full and adequate protection.

We have always recommended the best money known to the civilized world, and we urge that efforts should be made to unite all commercial nations in the establishment of an international standard which shall fix for all the relative value of gold and silver nations in the establishment of an international standard which shall fix for all the relative value of gold and silver coinage.

The regulation of commerce with foreign nations and between the states is one of the most important prerogatives of the general government, and the Republican party distinctly announces its purpose to support such legislation as will fully and efficiently carry out the constitutional power of Congress over Inter-state commerce. The principle of the public regulation of railway corporations is a wise and salutary one for the protection of all classes of the people, and we favor legislation that shall prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges for transportation and that shall secure to the people and the railways alike the fair and equal protection of the laws.

We favor the establishment of a national burean of labor, the enforcement of the eight-hour law, a wise and judicions system of general education by adequate appropriation from the national revenues wherever the same is needed. We believe that everywhere the protection to a citizen by American birth must be secured to citizens by American adoption, and we favor the settlement of national differences by international arbitration.

The Republican party, having its birth in a hatred of slave labor, and a desire that I men may be truly free and equal, is unalterably opposed to placing our working men in competition with any form of servile labor, whether at home or abroad. In this spirit we denounce the importation of contract labor, whether from Europe or Asia, as an offense against the spirit of American institutions, and we pledge ourselves to sustain the present law restricting Chinese immigration and to provide such further legislation as is necessary to carry out its purposes.

Reform of the CivilService anspiciously begun until Republican administration should be completed by the further extension of the reformed system already established by law, to all the grades of the service to which it is applicable. The spirit and purpose of the reform should be observed in all executive appointments, and all laws at variance with the objects of existing reformed legislation should be repealed, to the end that the daugers to free institutions which lurk in the power of official patronage may be wisely and effectively avoided. of official patronage may be wisely and effectively avoided.

The public lands are a heritage of the people of the United States, and should be reserved as far as possible for small holdings by actual settlers. We are opposed to the acquisition of large tracts of these lands by corporations or individuals, especially where such holdings are in the hands of non-residents, aliens, and will endeavor to obtain such legislation as will tend to correct this evil. We demand of Congress the speedy forfeiture of all land grants which have lapsed by reason of non-compliance with acts of incorporation in all cases where there has been no attempt in good faith to perform the condition of such grants.

The grateful thanks of the American people are due to the Union soldiers and sailors of the late war, and the Republican party stands pledged to provide suitable pensions for all who were disabled and for the widows and orphans of those who died in the war. The Republican party also pledges itself to the repeal of the limitation contained in the arrears act of 1879, so that all invalid soldiers shall share atike and their pensions begin with the date of disability or discharge, and not with the date of the application.

The Republican party favors a policy which shall shall share alike and their pensions begin with the date of disability or discharge, and not with the date of disability or discharge, and not with the date of the application.

The Republican party favors a policy which shall keep us from entangling alliances with foreign nations, and which gives us the right to expect that foreign nations shall refrain from meddling in American aflairs—the policy which seeks peace and can trade with all powers, but especially with those of the Western Hemisphere.

We demand the restoration of our navy to its old-time strength and efficiency, that it may, in any sea, protect the rights of American citizens and the interests of American commerce; and we call upon Congress to remove the burdens under which American shipping has been depressed, so that it may again be true that we have a commerce which leaves no sea unexplored, and a navy which takes no law from superior force.

Resolved, That appointments by the President to offices in the Territories should be made from the bonn-fide citizens and residents of the Territories wherein they are to serve.

Resolved, That it is the duty of Congress to enect such laws as shall promptly and effectually suppress the system of polygainy within our territory, and divorce the political from the ecclesiastical power of the so-called Mormon Church, and that the law so enacted should be rigidly enforced by the civil authorities if possible, and by the military if need be.

by the civil atthorities it possible, and by the military if need be.

The people of the United States, in their organized capacity, constitute a Nation and not a mere confederacy of States. The national Government is supreme within the sphere of its national duty, but the States have reserved rights which should be faithfully maintained. Each should be gnarded with jealous care, so that the harmony of our system of Government may be preserved and the tem of Government may be preserved and the Union kept inviolate. The perpetuity of our institutions rests upon the maintenance of a free ballot, and honest count and correct return. We denounce the fraud and violence practiced by the Democracy in Southern States, by which the will of the voter is defeated, as dangerons to the preservation of free institutions, and we solemnly arraign the Democratic party as being the guilty recipient of the fruits of such fraud and violence. We extend to the Republicans of the Sonth, regardless of their former party affiliations, our cordial sympathy, and pledge to them our most earnest efforts to promote the passage of such legislation as will secure to eyery citizen, of whatever race and color, the full and complete recognition, possession and exercise of all civil and political fit cases. L. P. ALEXANDER, P. M.

On their way home from the reunion Thursday night, W. S. Wells and B. D. Harper, of this place, took a vote of the train, between Battle Creek and Kalamazoo, with the following result: Blaine, 526; Cleveland, 65; Butler, 44; St. John, 26, and about 40 who were undecided or would not make known their preference.

ABOUT fifty persons went to Gano's grove, between this place and Niles, Tuesday for a picnic party. They were taken from town to the river by A. J. Crandall's team, and up the river by the steamer Nettie-June. Fare, 25 cents the round trip. Of course they had a good time,

THE Prohibition convention held in Lansing honored Berrien county with the second place on the ticket, in the person of Alonzo Sherwood, as candidate for Lieutenant Governor. The duty of that officer is to preside over the deliberations of the State Senater and he becomes Governor of the State in case of the death of that officer.

Mr. WM. A. ALDRICH went last week to St. Joseph to be inspected, and returned with a paper granting him the privilege of acting as first engineer on any steamboat of not over 100 tons any boat. The best grade that can be given on first application.

G. W. DONALDSON'S three great united conglomeration of mammoth aggregations of monstrosities, curiosities, artistic and stupendous consolidations of shows, will exhibit in this place on Saturday, Sept. 6. You can see all of this great and grand entertainment for the small sum of twenty-live cents.

NEXT Monday evening there will be a private entertainment in the high school room. At least similar meetings have heretofore been of a private character. Only a select few are expected call upon you personally and you must not be offended if you do not get invited, but conclude at once that you are not wanted. The entertainment will consist of the election of new members of the school board and such other business as may arise pertaining to the village schools. Don't go unless you receive a special invitation.

JOHN ALEXANDER went yesterday to Ann Arbor to enter the Ann Arbor High School, with the expectation of stepping from that school into the University, next year. John goes with a full knowledge of what is before him, and if he does not succeed it will be owing to some misfortune.

THE narrow gauge engine has been receiving an overhauling during the present week, preparatory to putting in full time at construction work. That piece of property has been nearly ready to move so many times that people fail to raise a very great amount of enthusiasm over any prospects until they see the dirt fly.

THE Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will give a festival in Redden Bros' new store room, Wednesday evening, Sept. 3, the proceeds to apply on pastor's salary. All friends of the church are cordially invited to be present. Supper from 5 to 8 o'clock. Ice cream and cake will be served during the evening.

THE remains of Miss Jessie Carnahan, of Summit, Ill., cousin of Mrs. S. Whitman, were brought to this place for burial, arriving Monday evening. The funeral services were held from the house Tuesday afternoon. Miss Carnahan was a young lady of great worth, and will be remembered by many as having visited often with Mrs. Whitman.

The hose company's entertainment on last Tuesday evening was a success. financially, and those who attended seemed to enjoy themselves hugely. The boys feel especially indebted to new building, and to the Buchanan Cornet Band for gratuitous music furnished. Their treasury is replenished to the extent of about $23.

THE State Fair will be held in Kalamazoo Sept. 15-19. The Michigan Central Company will transport stock or other articles for exhibition, to and from the fair free of charge. Freight will be charged on the passage to Kalamazoo, but upon the return the money will be refunded upon presentation of a certificate of the fair Association that the article was exhibited.

TLE soldier boys who went to the reunion do not appear to be very highly elated over the manner in which they were fed. Some of them are so particular as to want some cleanliness observed about their cooking, at least so much as to rinsing their potatoes before boiling, and the general impression is that although there was a larger crowd it was not more of a success as a pleasant reunion than the one held in

A LARGE crowd headed by the Buchanan band gathered at the depot Friday afternoon, to greet Gen. Logan mail, speaking a few words to the crowd while the train stopped for the exchange of passengers. As the time was very short his had the same characteristic. He had made stops at the leading stations between Battle Creek and Michigan City. He stayed over night in Michigan City, and finished his journey to Chicago Saturday.

AT the 39th annual conference of the U.B. Church, held near South Whittley, Ind., on the 20 inst., the following appointments for this District were made:

J. R. Brown, P. E. John Simons, Berrien Circuit.

A. G. Johnson, Buchanan. C. W. Pattee, Sodus. C. A. Brigham, Bangor. G. W. Sickafoose, Marcellus.

J. L. Parks, Vandalia Mission.

ARTHUR G, PRUYNE was arrested by Constable Evans, Saturday, for forging an order on H. I. Cauffman, on which he had procured a suit of clothes of Weaver & Co. He was brought before Esquire Dick, Monday, for examination, plead guilty, and was held in $500 bonds to appear for trial at the circuit court, in default of which he is

THE friends of Forest Leonard, whose death by drowning in Barron Lake was chronicled in these columns ast week, worked with untiring zeal in search for his body, by the aid of drags and divers from Michigan City, Detroit and Toledo, until Sunday noon, when the body arose to the surface, and has been removed to the home of the parents of the deceased, at Piqua Ohio, for interment,

Mr. A. J. CAROTHERS has bought the grounds adjoining Hudson Lake, and will erect buildings suitable for the accommodation of pleasure seekers, and expects to have his little steamer Nettie-June doing service on that beautiful sheet of water next season. There are very few more beautiful lakes in burden, and as first-class assistant on the country than Hudson, and there is no good reason why this enterprise not prove a successful-one.

> THRESHING. - While the Kauffman & Rough thresher was at work on the Madison Miller farm, near the Dunker church, on Wednesday of last week, fire from the engine caught in one of the stacks and almost in a flash the entire yard was enveloped in flames, and entirely destroyed, with the barn and corn house, with their contents, including about 45 tons of hay, a lot of farming tools, a carriage, cutter, a crib of corn and other valuables, to the value of not far from $3,500. The stacks, ten in numder, were built in two rows so that in order to thresh the first the machine was set so as to bring the engine within four feet of the stack at the other end of the yard, and the strong wind blowing directly towards the stacks made the circumstances almost favorable to the disas-

THERE will be a Prohibition convention held at Berrien Springs September 5, for the purpose of nominating a county ticket.

Ar the reunion held at Battle Creek, last week, the 9th Michigan Infantry held a regimental reunion. Several members now living in Berrien county attended. Col. W. W. Duffield, of Detroit, was elected President for the ensuing year, Prof. H. C. Rankin Vice President, and Wm. F. Hurlbutt, of Buchanan, Secretary and Treasurer. An invitation was received from Fowlerville Post for the next reunion to be held there, under the auspices of that Post, which was accepted. Time, the latter part of August, 1885.

Mr. and Mrs. Richmond have been residents of this place about one year, moving here from Jackson, during which time Mr. Richmond has been employed by Rough Bros' Wagon Works, and they have succeeded in building a large circle of friends. Mrs. Richmond leaves two children and a husband to mourn her loss. Her remains were taken to the home of her parents, in Hudson, Lenawee county, for interment.

> THE Berrien Springs Era of last week was a fair sample of a Republican paper, run and operated by a crowd of Democrats. Although the owner is a Republican, he takes no part in its management, and allows the paper to appear filled with a tirade of abuse of the county ticket composed of men, against whom not one word could properly be said, except through spite, at not being allowed to manage the make-up of the ticket. It should be remembered that Wm. Hurly, the defeated candidate for County Clerk is one of the leading lights in that office which probably accounts for this display of spleen.

THE Prohibitionists at their convention at Berrien Springs last Friday called on Rev. Mr. Brewster, who was present as a spectator, for remarks : expecting no doubt, an indorsement of their work. Though one of the young secretaries insisted upon only a fiveminutes' speech, the old gentleman gave them more than they bargained for. He told them he had no faith in the work they were attempting, that most of the more prominent temperance workers, all of whom are opposed to the Prohibition party in its methods of work, and that if this party succeeded in defeating the Republican party, which was all it could accomplish, it would retard the work of temperance everywhere, and cripple for twenty years to come the advance of the cause which has been secured only by

LONDON'S GAMBLING CLUBS. The Laws a Bead Letter-How the

Clubs Are Conducted. [London Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.] Theoretically, London as a city is free from the pest of gambling-houses. So at least the police would tell you, and so at least the metropolitan magistrates profess to believe. As a matter of fact, London is fairly honeycombed with gambling-houses, although these temples where the votaries of Dame Fortune are wont to assemble are very different places from the bar-rooms of New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. Of all forms of gambling, betting on horse-racing finds most favor with the average Englishman.

Tattersalls, at Albert Gate, is the head center of the betting world. It is hardly a club in the ordinary sense of the word, as the ostensible purpose for which the place was established was for the sale of thoroughbred stock, hunters, hacks and carriage-horses. For 100 years or more, I should say, the Tattersalls, from sire to son, have carried on the business of disposing of horses here by auction, and for many years this es-tablishment in its own particular line has been the finest in the world. On the premises at Tattersalls is a large and well-appointed subscription-room, of which all the leading members of the turf, both owners and professional bookmakers, are members.

Members of the Jockey club, and of White's, Brooks', Boodles', Guards' and the Travelers' club are eligible for membership, without being balloted for, but individuals who do not happen to be on the relief these spiritements as tablish. the roll of these aristocratic establishments are only eligible for membership when their finances are known to be in a flourishing condition, and when their morale and standing on the turf are beyond cavil or question. Noblemen or gentlemen, owners of race-horses, or identified with the sport of racing, have little or no difficulty in gaining admis sion, so long as they have never failed to meet their debts of honor on the turf, but the professional operator or book-maker must serve a long apprenticeship to his calling, and be pronounced on al hands financially sound by his brothren of the book and pencil, before he can gain admission into this charmed circle. Here every Monday afternoon a large gathering takes place, and just as the prices of stocks and shares are ruled by the current quotations in Wall street, so the market status of horses engaged for coming races is fixed—that is to say, if three to one be taken about a horse winning any coming race, at Tattersalls on a Monday afternoon, that price is published in all the papers and is the guide for transactions between the public and the bookmakers all over the country the next day. Of course, Tattersalls, in as far as a subscription-room is concerned, is neither more nor less than a gamblinghouse conducted on a colossal scale. Every member of the room, however, is a man of honor, and all transactions are conducted on this basis. When a bet is made, no matter how large it may be, the backer is never called upon to stake, and hence as no money changes hands, I believe that as the law at present stands it would be impossible to maintain any action that might be commenced with the view of breaking up this place, on the ground that it was maintained purely for gambling purposes.

It is nothing uncommon for a horse to be backed at Tattersalls in one afternoon to win $500,000, and no doubt on many occasions this sum has been doubled with regard to the chance of a single animal. It is only fair to say that as regards the professional element, by which I mean the gambler or book-maker, there are far less defaulters in proportion to the number of members than there are among the stock-brokers and robbers on the London stock exchange. Next to Tattersalls, in point of importance as a betting resort, stands the Victoria club, in Wellington street, Strand. This is again used for no other purpose besides gambling on horse-racing during the summer, but during the winter months, when there is no flatracing to bet upon, and the frost often interferes with the sports of steeplechasing and hurdle-racing, speculation also goes on, on the game of billiards. Although many members of the Victoria club also belong to Tattersalls, the standing of the members is not nearly so high as that maintained at Albert Gate. Still none but responsible men are permitted to become members, but the professional element here largely prevails and the upper crust of the turf is but sparsely represented.

A step lower in the racing world is the Albert club, an unpretentious establishment in a court off Fleet street, and here the more respectable members of the smaller fry of professional betters, with large numbers of business men and tradesmen, make up the membership. Of the minor clubs devoted to betting, perhaps only the Beaufort, in Rathbone place, is worth naming as really holding any sort of standing in the racing world. In addition to the clubs I have menmentioned, there are possibly 100 rooms in different parts of London dignified by the name of clubs and conducted in such a manner that, although betting progresses from midday until midnight therein, the police have no power to interfere because in a humble way they are conducted on exactly the same lines with regard to membership and election as the first- lass clubs at the west end. Most, if not all, of these places are proprietary and the entrance fee is merely nominal, rarely exceeding $5 annually. Very Depressing.

[The Argonaut.]

Frederick Van Slyck is a young New York litterateur, belonging to one of the wealthiest families on Fifth avenue. He has written quite a number of poems, which he has inserted in the local papers by paying for them at advertising rates. He attended a social gathering not long since, to which a cynical old cuss named Timble had been invited. Timble despises Van Slyck. During the evening Van Slyck put on a heap of style. and, among other things, he said very ostentatiously that he was born on the very day that Washington Irving died. "Both of which occurrences," responded old Timble, "have had a very depressing effect on American literature.

THE ABSURDITIES OF FASHION. How Foreign Ladies Follow the

Will-o'-the-Wisp. [Fashion Journal.]

"Do you think American ladies dress as fashionably as their French and English sisters?"

La Princesse was stitching away for dear life; her needle described wonderful evolutions through the air; her line of snowy white thread grew beautifully less in an incredibly short space of time.

"Fashion is an absurd, intangible will-o'-the wisp," answered La Princesse, so vehemently that her broken, but delightful English failed her, and she had to seek reinforcement from her native Parisian. "English and French ladies follow this will-o'-the wisp blindly. American ladies don't. They're too original. They don't run in a herd after some silly style that can never suit them. Tiens!"

La Princesse ran her needle into her little white thumb in her enthusiasm.

Her listener was obliged to stanch the flow of blood.

"I don't believe what you say about the Europeans," said he who listened, indignantly. He knew nothing of the cause of fashion—only its effects.

"Petit idiot!" exclaimed the lady angrily; "listen, and I'll give you a many examples as you can require. Mme. de Pompadour once had an ugly pimple on her chin. She was vexed, and at last, in despair, pasted a piece of black plaster over the offending spot. Result: All the ladies of the court appeared the following week with pieces of plaster on their faces. A fashion was established, and it was kept up a long time. The same lady, as I suppose you know, was exceedingly diminutive in stature. To remedy this defect she invented high-heeled boots. They were unknown before her time. Result: The ladies of the court took to high-heeled boots, and another fashion had birth. "Tm nearly convinced."

"O, but I've not finished yet. Marie Antoinette had enormous quantities of hair. She didn't know what to do with it. She was waiting for a barber one day with the intention of being shorn, and had piled up her hair in a negligo manner when she suddenly found that this style of headdress set off her small features to advantage. Result: Monstrously high coiffures came into fashion, and were worn for a very long time. Anne of Austria had exquisitely formed arms. Result: Short sleeves came into

"He! he! he!" chuckled La Princesse. 'I'm coming to Albion. The princess of Wales is the unfortunate possessor of a limp. No, sir, not a chic little amble, but an ugly, unprepossessing limp. Well, would you believe it! Some time ago a large number of ladies had one heel of their shoe made lower than the other. Result: The 'Alexandria limp' became the height of fashion. The Grecian bend' was another result of this unfortunate defect. Well, this same noble lady has some slight deformity in the neck which prevents her wearing dresses cut low. Result: The fashion, which still rages among English ladies, for bodices reaching almost to the ears, which fashion is much ridiculed among the Parisians. I must say it is a case of the pot calling the kettle black."

Prolonging Life.

[Chambers' Journal.] It was during the darkness of the middle ages, ripe with fanaticism and superstition, that the most absurd ideas f witchcraft, horoscopes, chiromancy, and empirical panaceas for the pro longation of life first became dissemin-The philosopher's stone and elixir of life were then vaunted by the

Foremost among the prolongers of life we find Paracelsus, an alchemist of great renown, and a man of considerable attainments. He claimed to have discovered the elixir of life. So great was his influence that even the learned Erasmus did not disdain to consult him. Patients and | pupils flocked around him from every quarter of Europe. Notwithstanding his famous "stone of immortality," he died at the age of 50. His vaulted elixir was a kind of sulphur similar to compound sulphuric ether. Nevertheless, to the researches of Paracelsus we are indebted for our primary knowledge of mercury, which he was the first to use as a medicine.

About this epoch Leonard Thurneys-ser attained world-wide celebrity as an astrologer and nativity caster. He was a physician, printer, book-seller and horoscopist all in one. He professed that, by the aid of astrology, he could not only predict future events, but likewise prolong life. He published yearly an astrological calendar, describing the nature of the forthcoming year and its chief events. His calendar and other quackeries enabled him to amass the sum of 1,000 florins. He declared that every man lay under the influence of a certain star, by which his destiny was ruled. On a certaining from what planet a person's misfortunes or sickness proceeded, he advised his patient to remove his residence within the control of n more propitious luminary. In short, to escape from the influence of a malignant to a more friendly satellite was the basis of his theory.

A Gambler's View of His Trade. [Philadelphia Press.] Now, doesn't it stand to reason that the beautifully furnished club-house, the high rent of the house, the free lunchs, dinners and suppers always laid out in a decent place, the wages of the dealers, the cost of the elegant instruments, the chips, the cards, the commissions to the the tips to the police and a lo of other things, all have to come out of the pockets of the flats that play? Just Now do you suppose the men as run the banks want to be a society for the object of providing fortunes at short notice to bums, dudes, dry goods clerks and newspaper reporters? Not much! Look at the chances the bankers have to take. They are always liable to be hauled up before the justice and fined or imprisoned, not to mention the confiscation of their stock in trade. No, sir; I don't know six men who make a certain income at it, and only one man who may be called rich, and that's Daly. of [Boston Globe.] Freddy —— is a young man well known about town. He travels largely on his shape and family, and his credit is not of the best. He took his best girl out to drive the other afternoon, and as the shadows began to lengthen drew rein at a well-known road house. Alighting he ushered his fair companion into the parlor and then sought the land-

"I want," he said, "a nice little dinner for two as you can get up; an' I'll have a bottle of Mumm's with it. I'm Freddy ____. I'll be out next week and settle for it." "I guess, Mr. Freddy ---," said the proprietor, after a moment's reflection, "that you'd better have your dinner when you come out next week. Don't you think so?" And Freddy thought that perhaps it would be better, after all, and guessed he would have his horse brought round to the door.

Carlyle on Cuticie. [New York Letter to Hartford Courant.] A new story of Carlyle is affoat in London. One evening the sage of Chelsea was talking of books in a small but somewhat miscellaneous company, when a young nobleman -an Oxford student -announced that he didn't care much for works that expressed merely the au-thor's theories and opinions, to which Carlyle replied: "Young sir, once upon a time there was a man in France whose name was Rousseau, and he wrote a book which was filled with theories and opinions. And the young nobility and fops of the period said the book was wind. But, young sir, it is an incident of history that their skins went to bind the second edition of that book."

HEALTHFUL, BUT HAS DRAWBACKS Why Life in the Rockies Even Now I

Not Conducive to Longevity. [New York Sun.]
"Yes," said Col. Richards to a Sun reporter, "the Rocky mountain region is healthy beyond doubt, and yet I have not seen centenarians around there in any numbers worth speaking of. A good many causes operate against longevity. The vast extent of country ying between Cheyenne and Promontory Point, from east to west, and between the Northern and Southern Pa-cific railroads, is not inhabited by people famous for their quiet habits. Desperadoes, forgers, cutthroats, and rogues of every description, from Europe and the eastern states, have found refuge in the Rocky mountain country. No extradition law is recognized there, and the sheriff who should attempt to serve a writ in some parts of that region ought either to have his life heavily insured or to be pretty certain of his chances in the other world. Yes, army deserters abound out there; they take the uniform and rifle with them, and exhibit themselves with the greatest nonchalance. I have seen a railroad section worked by the boys in blue as I passed in a train with the paymaster on the Union Pacific railroad, and they did not seem at all disturbed by the presence of officers.

"It is not an uncommon thing to find a camp composed of doctors, lawyers, journalists, and men of good education generally who have fled from the cities. Some of them turn honest and steady, too, after a while. Civilization comes along and builds cities, and they become mayors and that sort of thing. It is the easiest thing in the world to build a city. A saloon is the nucleus. All enterprising citizens dig a hole in a bank, in which he places a barrel of whiskey received powerful Chevenne or the nearest frontier city. This he retails at twenty-five cents a drink, making 1,000 profit. If not removed before barrel is sold, he constructs a shanty of canvas and boards on the old site, to which he gives the name of El Dorado, or maybe Golden Slope. A gambling saloon springs up beside him, and if he is lucky enough to kill the proprietor he amalgamates the two industries. If the proprietor kills him, the result is the same—consolida-tion. Perhaps you have heard the story of the man who tapped the first comer's barrel, and was discovered only when a customer grumbled at 25 cents a drink and said the gentleman on the other side was selling at fifteen. No. 1 looked over the bank and saw that, sure enough, an interloper had inserted a faucet in his barrel and was running opposition. But he did not shoot; he took him into partnership, and now both of them are in office-one a judge, and the other sheriff of the county. "But all the men in the Rockies are not desperadoes or shady characters. Some of them are prisoners, and al though the jail is large, they are prisoners all the same, for they cannot get away. They are men who went there to work on railroads or in mines, and cannot procure money or summon energy enough to enable them to leave. They are feeble of character and unsteady of purpose. Now and then one manages to beat his way on trains from place to place, but it would take him half a lifetime to get to Chicago in that manner. There are things even the fiercest desperado may not do with impunity. He must not be found stealing from a comrade, for instance, or assuming moral airs. Neither is it necessary to walk about all the time like a moving arsenal, though I must say it is often mighty convenient. The Indians keep down the population considerably. You read in story books how one white man held a host of redskins at bay and escaped ultimately, but the fact is Indians do not allow people to escape, once they have them in their possession and for one Indian whose bones whiten the plains there are ten Caucasians. On the whole, it is safer and more comforte able to dream away one's existence even in a place like New York, with all its risks from cholera and falling houses than to live in the Rockies even in 1884.

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES. The proprietor of this celebrated medi-cine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

Faded Male Beauties.

TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER TO-DAY! [London World.] The faded Adonis of 50 has found the unusual heats of the season this year tell upon him severely. Until the middle of June he bore up bravely; but the two or three weeks of warmth and sunshine which then supervened were too much, and he sighs for Buxton or pants for Homburg. It may be that if he takes sedulous care of himself he will for several seasons remain fairly per-sonable; but just now he does as unwisely in showing himself in his club or in the park in the gaudy glare of the day, as mature matrons, whose complexions are indebted even more to art than nature, do in failing to seek subducd lights, or in lingering at festive gatherings till the last saraband has been danced in the hall.

Twenty years ago the male beauty, who is to-day in a state of temporary prostration, was a remarkably handsome man. His way with women was what novelists call caressing. His conversa-tion was made up of insipidities, but they were uttered in a tone which was deferential and winning. Scarcely a trace of these attributes remains. The slayer of hearts has not acquired the mellow dignity which age ought to bring; he has only substituted for his old charm of talk and manner a feeble ness and incoherence which are suggestive of incipient paralysis. Something of its pristine shape is retained by the figure, thanks to the cunning arrangements of the man millinery of the period. But the young exquisite has not blossomed into the old buck. The constitutional indisposition or ability to accept the doom of years has generated an air of nerveless vacillation—as of one who cannot brace himself to take the plunge, and stands pitiably shivering on the brink of age without being able to retreat to the pleasant swards of youth. An attitude, physical in its origin, has become moral in its effects.

It is painful and ludicrous to witness the convulsive efforts, which seem to have a touch of epilepsy in them, made by the faded male beauty to assume his old place in society and to ply his vanished arts. No one would grudge him the sort of success that occasionally waits upon his efforts. He induces a widow of quality to accompany him to the altar, or he imposes upon the credulity of the proprietress of a less experienced heart. The relics of heavy swelldom have their marketable value, and it is lucky for the gentleman to whom they constitute their sole capital

[The Judge.] "Now, let me see if I understand this presidential election in Chicago," said a blushing bride at Niagara to her spouse, as they gazed at the Niagara falls, after they had enriched the hackman for life: "Blaine and Cleveland were chosen, were they not, my deary pet?" "They were nominated at Chicago, my sweety sweet—not elected."
"When will they be elected, my angel

"Only one of them will be elected,

"Then why were they both nominated at Chicago, my petty pet?" "You see, my dear, one is a Democrat and the other is a Republican.' "Then what is the use of having two men nominated at Chicago if they can't both be elected? I know there are always two men on the ticket. There were Tilden and Hendricks and Hayes and Wheeler. Pa told me so." "Yes; but you must understand that there is a vice president." "Oh, my darling of darlings!" ex-claimed the bride, reproaching herself for her doubts; "I see it all now. Cleveland is to be president and Mr. Blaine

[Exchange.]
A Providence, R. I., lady went into a market one day recently and called for corned beef. The market-man took the stone for holding the meat down in the brine from the barrel, and laying out two or three pieces of beef for her examination, turned to wait upon another customer. While he was thus engaged her eye fell upon the stone that the market-man had taken from the barrel, and

Died —, 1849, Aged 8 months. The beef in the barrel had no further attraction for her, and with a remark that expressed to the market-man the horror she felt at the use to which the stone was applied, she left the store. As she went out he remarked: "I don't generally keep that on beef; it belongs n the pork-barrel."

The Same Everywhere. [Chronicle "Undertones."] I suppose something of the working of civilization should be noticed in children. But it is not. The children of all periods, all classes, all races, betray the same original tastes. Their amusements have varied but little; they have everywhere a tendency to play ball, to break things, to tease one another, to make mid-pies and revel in sand, to tear their clothes, and there has been, so far as records go, no time or place in the history of the world when they have behaved any differently from what they do to-day. It would seem that human nature is a simple thing enough as it has been created, and civilization is merely a lot of complications produced by men.

A More Appropriate Name. [New York Sun.] "Will you have some of the dessert, Mr. Dumley?" inquired the landlady.

Dumley politely allowed that he "Do you know," he remarked, as he gazed at the very narrow little piece of whortleberry pie which was sent him, "that I would hardly call this a dessert." "No, what would you call it?" she de versity of Pennsylvania.

[Philadelphia Record.]
Interesting experiments in instantaneous photography are being made by Edward Muybridge at the university of Pennsylvania. A space on the college grounds has been set apart with a high board fence surrounding three sides of the inclosure; the fence has been painted a bright white. On the fourth side there is a shed covered with black material, while the ground is covered with an inch of coal dust. This is the background and directly opposite is a little structure, with an open front, con-taining twelve cameras. Saturday the enses were covered with double rubber shutters, and each was held in place by a latch. Each of these latches was con-

the closing of an electric circuit would liberate the shutters and for the thousandth part of a second permit light to shine into the camera. A splendidly-developed young student, a member of the university crew, stripped to the skin, was photographed in various attitudes. He took his position in front of the row of cameras. At a signal he seized a bucket of water; raised it in the air and tossed away the contents. The instant he moved, Mr. Muybridge touched an electric button. A series of sharp clicks sounded as in rapid succession the shutters of each camera were freed. As the last click sounded the water was falling to the ground, and twice photographs had been taken of the young man representation. taken of the young man, representing twelve phases of the movements through which his body went while lifting the

of a nude female model. Instead of a row of cameras exposed in succession six cameras were concentrated upon the model's figure-one in front, one behind, and four others so as to give side views at different angles—and all were exposed simultaneously for a fraction of the second during which she was making the specified movement. Mr. Muybridge's experiments are under the supervision of a committee of the university faculty, composed of Provost Pepper, Professor Harrison Allen, Dr. Leidy, Professor George F. Barker, Professor Marks, Professor Huidekeper of the veterinary department, Professor Aikens of the academy of fine arts, and

Dr. Dercum.

Photographs will be taken to show the consecutive phases of motion of selected men and women while performing muscular exercises and different mechanical operations, as carpentry and blacksmithing; the movements of persons suffering from palsy and diseases of the joints, showing exactly how the gait is affected, and analyzing accurately the abnormal action of the muscles; the movements of horses, dogs, and other animals at different rates of speed; the aerial locomotion of birds on the wing, and the methods of propulsion of marine mammals, aquatic birds and fish.

The Secret of Breeding Race-Horses. [Bell's Life.]

While the purchasers of Lord Falmouth's mares must be thinking of what they must do in the future, it may not be amiss to say a few words respecting the great success that has attended the Cornish nobleman as a breeder of blood stock. It is admitted on all sides that his success in this department has been unrivalled, and that even the achievements of Sir Joseph Hawley and Mr. Merry cannot be compared efforts of the noble lord during the period he has devoted to the rearing of race-horses. It is my purpose to say something on the theory practised by Lord Falmouth, which perhaps explains more than anything his unexampled

The late Dr. Shorthouse always demanded as a sine qua non in the production of a really first-class racer that the stout and really excellent blood should preponderate on the side of the dam, and for a stud-horse vice versa, . e., that the stouter blood should be on the sire's side. On this principle has Lord Falmouth acted, and by means of this principle all his greatest successes may be explained. The tap-roots of the now scattered Mereworth stud are Silverhair, Hurricane, and Queen Bertha, and all three were racers of some merit. These marcs, it should be noticed, were very stoutly bred, and their stout blood largely predominated on the dam's side, and this is a desideratum in a brood mare, although a great drawback and preventive of success in a sire. I have no space in the present article, but will some time endeavor to show that where male members of a certain family have been great failures at the stud, as in the cases of King Tom, Stockwell, Rataplan, Melbourne, Orlando, etc., whose sons were mostly conspicuous failures, their daughters were, on the contrary, great successes. On the other hand, the sons of Newminster, as a rule, did very well at the stud, but very few of his daughters produced animals of any merit. Excellence of blood is maintained in the female line for a considerable length of time, and to this is due the except which has attended is due the success which has attended Lord Falmouth as a breeder.

What the Fans Whisper.

[Boston Times.]
Young girls fan themselves rapidly in church, as if to say: "I'll catch him,
I'll catch him, I'll catch him," while matrons are more calm about it, and teach their fans to softly murmur: "I've -got-him, I've-got-him, I've-got-' while fans in the hands of wid ows tell the sad story as plainly as possible: "I'-v-e l-o-s-t h-i-m, I'-v-e l-o-s-t h-i-m, I'-v-e l-o-s-t h-i-m."

How It Struck Little Johnny. [New York Graphic.]
A little boy asked his father the other day, after some Boston people had left, "if Boston people were born grown up."

THE FALL OF THE ALAMO.

A Brief Sketch of the Infamous Mexican Massacre. The annals of war furnish no bloodier picture than is recorded of the fall of the Alamo, on the 6th of March, 1836. The monument that marks the ground that drank the blood of those heroes tells the story when it says: "Thermopylæ had her messengers of death; the Alamo had none." The last one of the garrison went down under the violence of the Mexicans. Col. Bowie, who was sick in bed at the fall of the fort, fired from his bed until his last shot was gone and he had a wall of dead about him; the Mexicans dared not approach, but shot him from a window, and as the enemy came to his bed, nerving himself for a last effort, the dying Bowie plunged the deadly knife which bears his name to the vitals of the nearest foe, and expired. The gallant Col. Travis fell mortally wounded, but was able on the approach of the foc to sit up. A Mexican officer attempted to cut off his head with a saber. Travis, with a death gasp, drew his sword, which he plunged into the body of his antagonist, both dying at the same mo-

Gen. Castrillon took Col. Crockett who stood alone in an angle of the fort the barrel of his own shattered gun in his right hand, in his left his huge bowie-knife, dripping blood. There was a fearful gash across his head, and at his feet a cordon of nearly twenty formen, dead and dying. His captor, who was brave and not cruel, took his silvery-haired prisoner to Santa Anna, who flew into a rage, and at his com-mand a file of soldiers shot down the dauntless Crockett. Santa Anna had given the most imperative orders that no prisoners should be taken. A few days afterwards Col. Fannin was induced by the most solemn promises on the part of Santa Anna to surrender his little band of beleagured men into the hands of the Alamo butchers, and, as a result, on March 23, 412 Texans were led out at Goliad and shot down like dogs. It was through such deadly scenes as these that a republic was born.

John A. Sutter's Grave. ["Gath's" Pennsylvania Letter.] From Lancaster I rode across the country to Lititz, which has grown in the intervening years to be a rather handsome place, with some nice summer cottages. There was a picnic of deaf and dumb people at the Limestone spring, on the edge of the town. I saw the tomb of John A. Sutter in the corner of the old Moravian graveyard, the columb in that inclosure much high only tomb in that inclosure much bigger than a page of letter paper.

Sutter was a native of Baden, who came out to California by way of the Sandwich islands, and on his ground they discovered gold while digging a mill-race. The discovery rather broke the old man up, leading him to restless hopes, and the rush of miners ate up his cattle and tramped over his fields. When I saw him at Washington years ago he was a systematic lobbyist there for a pension or claim for having let loose this gold on the globe. No single event in the modern world has so changed the destinies of the globe as the discovery of gold in California. It dispersed the races of Europe and, incidentally, those of Asia and brought them into new fields, face to face. It perhaps saved the earth from some kind of revolution and rendered it possible for scientific banking, such as our government has tried, to be adopted. Old Sutter, who also loved his grog, retired to Lititz to educate his grandchildren and live cheap, after the German style. There he heard the trombones play in the Moravian cupola when people died, and one day the trombones rang out when he did not listen, for he, too, was lying stiff and cold; the gold of life glistened in him no more.
