Is your fuel pile in good condition?

As usual it rained election day.

The rink is nearly ready for the rollers.

BENTON HARBOR has a lively polo club.

The returns so far as received go to show that some one is badly beaten.

The campaign orator has folded his tent and will be heard no more for two years at least.

The trees are rapidly losing their foliage and putting on the appearance of dreary winter.

The muskrat is being accused of preparing for a hard winter. Does he understand his business?

HARVEY C. SHERWOOD the wonderfully popular farmer candidate, ran ahead of his ticket nineteen votes in his own township on a total vote of 508.

The State Teacher's Institute for Cass county will be held at Dowagiac, commencing November 10, and continuing during the week.

MR. WILLIAM MARTIN left Dayton Tuesday evening for his farm, near Kirwin, Kansas. He was in Michigan just long enough to vote a clean Republican ticket.

The organizing of dancing clubs for the amusement season is now quite popular about the State. The brick makers have thus far taken the lead in this place this season.

It is unanimously requested that Perry Fox write once more to Ben Butler and ask him to run again in the spring. He gets up a better speed at that more congenial season.

CHURCHILL & SMITH have their preparation for grinding feed, corn, either shelled or with the cob, or mixed feed, completed and are ready for business in that line on short notice.

THERE are three papers published in this county having a combined circulation of less than one-half that of the Record, and it requires 1,020 Records to supply the demand on ordinary occasions.

SCENCER & BARNES have shut down their factory for the purpose of putting in a new boiler, the old one having been discovered to be unsafe with the pressure of steam necessary to do their work.

THE smile that was on John Mansfield's face with a cigar stub in the center of it, when he first heard that Cleveland had carried New York, Tuesday evening was better than a dime museum.

ABOUT two inches of snow fell in this place Tuesday night that made a rather cool fall on the atmosphere yesterday. It was as a whole a cool day. Especially for Republicans in this part of the country.

MRS. J. P. BIRNS received a telegram yesterday from Kansas announcing the death, by consumption, of her cousin, Mr. Douglas Fields, formerly a resident of Southern Portage Prairie. Mr. Fields will be remembered by a number hereabouts.

THE teachers of the ward school desire to thank the parties who left such a generous supply of cabbage heads on their desks, on Hallowe'en, and hope the gift did not contain any covert meaning. They think of laying in a store of sauer kraut for winter use, and they would be willing to share with the generous donors.

THERE is considerable satisfaction in the acknowledgment yesterday, by prominent "Prohibitionists" yesterday, that if they have succeeded in smashing the Republican party they are satisfied. That is the remark we have been kindly making in their behalf all through the campaign.

THE Bertrand township Sunday School Association will hold its fifth Institute at the Evangelical church on the Reserve, Sunday afternoon and evening, Nov. 9, 1884. Sunday school workers and all interested friends are invited to attend.

D. LOTHROP & Co., Boston, are in the field with as fine a display of reading matter for the young as any American publishing house. Wide-Awake certainly takes the lead in good sense and pleasant to the amusement and instruction of those of ten years and upwards to old age. Subscriptions taken at this office.

BUCHANAN.—The election in this township resulted in the heaviest vote ever polled in Buchanan, being 119 more than in 1880 or 1882, the vote being the same in each of those years. Although the weather was uncomfortable in a high degree nearly a full vote was out. The work about the polls was earnestly done by both parties. There was a little bluster and noise as is ever known at the polls in Buchanan, but few of either party who are competent to vote being allowed to remain away from the polls.

We return our sincere thanks to the friends who sent us the election returns, to be found in our columns today. It is not only a great favor to us personally, but also to all our readers. We regret our inability to give complete returns, for which we had made arrangements—but some of our friends failed to respond with the blanks sent them.

MR. J. F. LEWIS MEYER, principal of the Lafayette school in South Bend, and Miss Mary L. Rough were married at the residence of the bride's cousin, Mr. Geo. H. Rough, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, Rev. E. L. Kiplinger, of Northwestern College, at Naperville, Ill., officiating. The new family is now happily settled in their new home in South Bend.

It was a happy crowd of 900 or more who received dispatches in Kinyon's hall, Tuesday evening. The hilarity depended greatly upon the character of the news, which at one moment made the age chills run up the backs of the Republicans while the Democrats were on the tops of the seats trying to split their throats—and the next moment would change the aspect of the room. On the whole, the Democrats made somewhat the most noise.

L. P. ALEXANDER, P. M.

The battle is over and the dead and wounded cared for. You need hold your nose no longer. The stench and filth of the quadrennial quarrel has now settled, and will smell no more for four years. The country may now stop talking politics and give some attention to business. You may now have the money you won. It is then your duty to go to the fellow you called a liar and ask his forgiveness. Having done that, you may hunt up the chap who called you the same familiar name and thump his proboscis, if you are the largest. Having settled all your differences you may return to your work, abandoned three or four months ago, conclude that your neighbor is as good as he was last year at this time, and make your business move along just as if you had concluded that the country were to exist in peace and safety forever.

DAYTON is unfortunate enough to possess a number of young citizens who ought to be transported either to Iowa or Jackson. They have, for the past year or more, been making a regular established business of petty pilfering that is an unbearable nuisance and annoyance to nearly the entire surrounding community. People who owned bees would find their honey "capped" removed and carried off; chickens were stolen; cellars and out-houses were raided and small articles stolen; loose property destroyed, and numerous other depredations of a like character committed. The gang were finally detected by Mr. D. Salisbury, and he imposed upon them the awful punishment of making them confess to their parents. They confessed, but the chicken-stealing grows no less, and the light they make of their punishment, is to such an extent that it may yet lead some unmolested citizen of that village to arise to his duty and place the young gentry where they belong. The sooner that kind of criminals are brought to justice, the better for the community at large.

[St. Joseph Republican.]

A horse belonging to a farmer, whose name we could not learn, ran away last Saturday, and while going down the steep hill leading to the layou bridge broke his leg in one of the numerous holes with which that piece of roadway abounds. The horse had to be killed, and as he was a valuable animal, the village of St. Joseph will have to shell out about $150 from its not overburdened treasury.

[Berrien Springs Journal.]

THE Board of Supervisors adjourned to the 1st of January. Before adjourning the following business was transacted. The county committee on motion of Mr. Drew was authorized to make repairs and improvements about the front of the court house. The total amount of state, county, and township taxes assessed on Orontok township was $8,700.84, being $475.91 less than last year. The amount assessed on Berrien township was $7,229.82, being $710.00 less than last year. The amount assessed on Pipestone township was $5,461.08, being $507.76 less than last year.

A telephone message received at this office at 2:30 this afternoon says that the Republicans in New York concede the state to Cleveland by 700. China has at last succumbed to the inevitable, and has granted a charter to an English syndicate for the construction of a system of rail routes to traverse the empire. The United States Government has at last gained a marked victory over polygamous Mormonism in Utah, by the conviction of Rud Clawson, of violation of the government laws by indulging in too many wives. One of his wives, who had been spirited away to prevent her from testifying, was captured and allowed to tell her story, when she acknowledged that she was only half a wife. Clawson was found guilty, and a request for a new trial has been made. Whether the second trial be granted or not, it is considered a great victory to find a Utah jury that dare convict a Mormon who is plainly proven guilty.

Saturday afternoon Deputy United States Marshal David D. Marshall created a decided sensation by appearing in the office of Commissioner John Graves, accompanied by a woman even larger than the Commissioner himself. She was dressed in the most elaborate manner imaginable, and on her head nodded a bushel of ostrich plumes of a dozen different hues. Her name was Mrs. Schaeffer, and she had accompanied the officer from Ann Arbor to answer to a charge of selling liquor without a special license. She was the first victim of the Citizens' League of the University City, and a University City professor, who is one of the officers of the league, came along to see that the prosecution was properly attended to.

The prisoner acted very cool about the proceeding, and said that she was being persecuted by some who were no better than she was. She admitted on the examination that she kept a house of ill-repute, but denied that she sold whisky as charged. The examination was postponed for two weeks to enable the defendant to get her witnesses. The authorities at Ann Arbor have been trying for a number of months to collect evidence to convict the woman. —Free Press.

Physiology of Smoking.

There are three points to consider—first, the local effects of the vapor from the burning leaves; second, the immediately contingent effects of tobacco; and third, its remote or secondary effects. Each of these would call for a special study in an exhaustive investigation of the subject. We cannot, on the present occasion, do more than suggest the line of inquiry to be pursued. As regards the local effects, it is especially desirable to be observed, that there can be no question that the influence exerted on the mucous membrane of the lips, mouth, tongue, palate, epiglottis, larynx, and fauces, by smoking, is important. It is first directed to the hyperemia of the membrane itself; next comes excitation of the nervous filaments distributed throughout the region, with direct irritation of the mucous, and reflex stimulation of the glands. In consequence of this last mentioned set of effects, we get either increased secretion or very prompt emptying of the salivary glands, and either waste of the saliva, or the passage of that fluid into the stomach—probably at the time empty. The saliva is, moreover, to some extent impregnated with the oil derived from the s of the tobacco. It is easy to see how local disturbances, such as epithelial growths, inorganic or malignant irritations and the like, may be induced by smoking; how the nervous centers connected with the various nerves distributed to the mouth, tongue, and face may be affected; how the salivary glands may be overstimulated and exhausted, and how the stomach may be disordered. The passage of salivary fluid into an empty stomach may help to appease the appetite, but it can scarcely improve the digestion. Other local effects might be mentioned, but they will suggest themselves. Then come the immediately contingent effects of smoking. These may be either stimulating, sedative or toxic, as the quantity of the nicotine actually introduced into the system—a very difficult point to settle—varies, or the idiosyncrasy of the smoker may determine. The sum of the investigations that have been made in connection with this phase of the subject would seem to show that nothing short of direct experimentation in an individual case can supply the requisite data for determining how the smoking of tobacco is likely to affect an individual.

And the deduction which may be hastily drawn from a few experiments made to be qualified by further consideration that the susceptibility of the organism for influence of tobacco smoking varies in a very special degree with those changes of state to which all systems, and especially those of the class of persons, who require or desire the use of tobacco, are subject. One man can smoke with the best results when he is hot; another when he is cold; one needs to have full stomach, while another enjoys his smoke most in the early morning, or when he is hungry; one will take his pipe or cigar when he has to think; another must be idle to profit by it, and so on. With every change of mood, nerve-state, and condition of health, the susceptibility to tobacco varies. It is useless to try to lay down any precise law as regards its action. The use of the "weed" in every case experiments, and its immediately contingent effects are incapable of prediction.

As a rule, however, we believe they are, in the moderate use of tobacco, according to individual taste, good instead of evil; but the patient rather than the doctor is the judge of results, and it is policy on the part of the latter to refrain from dogmatizing on the subject in any special case. The remote or secondary effects of tobacco smoking are certainly not cumulative. There is not a particle of evidence which can be legitimately pressed into the services of the assumption—sometimes recklessly made, and unscientifically made—that they are so. A man may exhaust the strength of his nervous system, and thus lower its tone, or he may impair his digestion by habitual excess in smoking, but these results are in no sense cumulative, nor has the agent by which they have been produced been cumulative in its energy. The disastrous effects of tobacco smoking—when it must be used, or when the tobacco is too strong—are those of persistence in the use of an injurious article, not a piling up of its effects.

This is especially indicated by the state of the case in individual smokers to whom the foregoing applies. A depressed state of the vessels while the smoking continues, and for a short time after a pipe, but the effect generally passes off, I mean the use of the weed, and the disturbance of digestion produced by excess in tobacco smoking, and with its other "evil" consequences, a Texas man 90 years of age lately died from the anguish caused by cutting a third set of teeth.
